Colored taffeta adorned with velvet spots is one of the newest things of the day. It is especially handsome made up into long directoire coats worn over plain silk skirts of the same shade. An immense quantity of material is used in the construction of the up to date skirt.

The attractive girdle in the cut is of satin ribbon with shower ends. The wrinkled piece for the waist is of wide sash ribbon. The girdle fastens in the back with three choux. Graduated ends of two inch ribbon finished at the ends with tassels hang down the back.

FORECASTS OF FASHION.

Shirt Waist Hints—Separate Waists Button in the Back.

A pretty new shirt waist model is made up in deep cream satin. It has a small yoke and deep cuffs of lace. A welcome change from the too often employed tucks is the rows of shirring which appear on the sleeves and waist of this model. Instead of the usual plait down the center of the waist a line of shirring is substituted. In the lines of stitching are caught loops of gold ribbon. Over the shoulders is a band of shirring ending in bowknots of gold ribbon. The sleeves have a wide puff and a deep lace cuff. The back of the waist is laid in two inverted box plaits.

Chiffon cloth makes a dressy, becoming little separate waist when it exactly matches the skirt worn with it.

Most of the smart separate waists button in the back and have three-quarter or elbow sleeves.

There is a craze abroad among some smart women for dark colored jackets worn with a gay skirt. A black or dark colored redingote looks very well in the afternoon over a colored dress, but for morning wear the skirt of one color and a coat of another seem to shorten the figure and do away with the idea of harmony in coloring which is a great feature of the winter fashions.

Exquisitely dainty are the opera bags of suede. These little bags are rivaling the reticules of brocaded silk and satin. They are fitted with every toilet requisite.

Hand mirrors in French gray silver are very modish decorated with a monogram in copper.

To be quite up to date my lady must have the top of her dressing table of heavy plate glass. Doilies of lace and linen are placed under the toilet articles.

The stunning evening frock seen in the cut is of black chiffon velvet. Part of the skirt, bolero and tiny puffed sleeves are of velvet. The petticoat front and waist trimmings are of white gauze and lace. Bunches of morning glories embroidered in colors adorn the skirt.

FOOTWEAR MODES.

Dainty Little Boots and Slippers For My Lady's Pretty Feet.

Boots for street wear have narrower toes and lower heels. The broad last has given way to one more pointed and becoming.

A new shoe has a curved sole. This eccentricity is called by the trade the "crazy last." There is an upward curve from the instep to the toe that raises the sole a little. This innovation makes the shoe very springy and comfortable for walking.

The very latest idea is to have the top of the boot match the gown. When ordering a shoe a piece of the gown material is given the bootmaker to incorporate into dainty footgear.

Women are wearing heavy Oxford ties this winter, and over them go very swagger looking "spats" for warmth and as a protection against dust.

Bluchers—shoes without seams over the insteps—are particularly comfortable for women with high insteps.

Tan shoes of light weight Russian calf are being worn with some of the smart brown costumes of the season.

The smart little slippers illustrated are of embroidered suede. They are built somewhat on sandal lines, laced up the center and tied just below the ankle in a natty bow.

THE UNTIDY WOMAN.

She Is the Curse of All Around Her, Whether She Is Single or Married.

Of all the unwomanly women the untidy woman is the worst. Woman has been likened to a flower and her influence over men's lives to its perfume, but I defy you to find anything to compare with the untidy woman except the straggling weed which ruins the effect of a whole front yard of fresh green grass.

Put the untidy woman in a neatly arranged room, and in five minutes watch the transformation. The window shade will be awry and the curtains will be pulled apart. Scraps of paper will decorate the carpet. One of her gloves will occupy an easy chair, while the other will repose on the mantel. A burned match will be seen on the floor or more likely on the polished surface of some choice desk or table. A book will be sprawling face downward, crumpling all its leaves, and the cushions of the divan will be all crushed into a little heap.

The untidy woman's idea of fixing a room is on a par with her other notions. If you look under the sofa you will find half of the scraps there, and what is left will be discovered tucked away behind the radiator or the bookcase.

She is always very "stylish." When ruchings are in vogue she would rather die than venture in the street without one, but the same ruche will do for weeks, although it shows the results of too close an acquaintance with the floor or wherever she has thrown it.

And Even the Skirt.

When skirts are tight around the hips hers is the tightest of all, even if it does gape in the back. Her train is the longest and gathers and holds the most dirt. It would never occur to her to sew a binding or mend a frayed place. No; when the skirt is "worn" enough she merely throws it aside.

The untidy woman is the one exception to an almost universal feminine fault—she never worries.

No, indeed! She sits in a negligee none too clean, with hair none too tidy, reading a yellow backed novel, while the room riots in wildest disorder. The maid vainly begs her presence in the kitchen, and the children pull down the flowerpots, rummage in her work basket or fall downstairs, according to their own sweet fancy.

ARCHED EFFECTS.

They Add Much to the Beauty of a Large Room or Hall.

In the picture we have a very artistic hall taken from an English home. The woodwork is weathered oak, and the beautifully designed pillows support a balcony hung with tapestry, the railing of which is ornamented with deer heads.

Beyond the arched effect under the balcony there are a rather ornate fireplace and a carved cabinet for books and curios. The large table in the foreground bears writing utensils of brass. The chairs are upholstered in reddish tapestry and red leather.

The rugs are of a dull oriental red. Palms and potted plants add much to the cheerfulness of the room.

YOUNG MAN'S GAY LIFE AS A GIRL

ATTENDS BALLS IN BEWITCHING FEMININE ATTIRE.

FOOLED WOMEN AND MEN.

Consternation Among the Former Because of Secrets Divulged—Men Who Made Love Are Sheepish.

Pittsburg.—"Miss H. V. Ramsey," for a long time the most graceful waltzer, and who appeared to be one of the most decorous maidens at public balls, was discovered to be a young man, 20 years of age, masquerading in female attire. He deceived police officials, dancing masters and the numerous young men who have taken him home and whispered soft nothings in his ear, besides hundreds of women who met him at the various ballrooms and dancing academies. His discovery resulted in a riot on the south side, and he was saved from disfigurement by a woman who was a school friend of his.

Attired as a woman "Miss Ramsey" bought his skirts in one of the most prominent downtown department stores, securing his high-heeled French shoes by saying he wanted them for a masquerade; terrified a Wylie avenue hairdresser into making a wig of Titian hue that fitted him and was fined $10 or 30 days to the workhouse as a suspicious character. Some time later this anomaly had the assurance to ask the magistrate to lend him the money with which to pay the fine.

"Miss Ramsey" attended a ball in a south side hall. There he was discovered to be William Henry McIntosh, aged 20, of Thirty-fourth and Carson streets, although when arrested by Police Lieut. Werner he gave the name of Patrick McIntosh. He was attired in a waist, which he smilingly acknowledged he himself had made, and a hat he had trimmed.

August Kreil, who conducts dances on the south side, refused to believe his eyes when confronted with McIntosh at the south side police station.

"She, or he, or it," he stammered confusedly, "was the best dancer and the most decorous woman I ever had on the floor."

McIntosh declared he donned female garb simply for the fun that was in it. According to his mother, who appeared at the hearing, he frequently had been expostulated with by her for donning his disguise and coming home at a late hour escorted by fashionable young men. He admits it was also known to several young men in the neighborhood of Thirty-fourth street that he was going about in disguise, and that they often gave his "escorts" the laugh.

McIntosh naively admitted that for two years he had been donning female attire three or four times a week in daytime and at balls and that he had been kissed and hugged by most of the gallants who attend dances without them finding him out. He said few ever suspected him until some one told on him. The women mobbed him, trying to scratch out his eyes, but a girl friend, who attended the Wickersham school with him and who knew that he was not a girl, threw her arms around his neck and saved him from the clamoring women.

When arranged for a hearing Magistrate Vichstain began to condole with the fine-looking young woman brought before him, and an onlooker audibly remarked that there was something strange when she was brought from the men's department. It took the lifting of the wig and explanations to convince the magistrate and the audience. "Miss Ramsey" was a small girl, apparently, with a mass of dark red hair tied with a large blue ribbon. The waist and skirt were dark and the shoes, she smilingly remarkerd, were "the smallest size, of course." Except the policeman, most of the people in the courtroom believed that a young woman was being sentenced.

McIntosh has neither brothers nor sisters, and says that his love for female at*tire came naturally to him.* He states that the first time he tried it was the first "open" celebration of Hallowe'en in Pittsburg, and that he carried it on from that time, taking the disguise more and more frequently. He admits attending many dancing schools and open balls in Pittsburg and Alleghany, going to ice cream parlors and taking trolley rides in the last two years, and says he did it for the pleasure of the dancing.

How he acquired his female art of putting hairpins in his wig, putting a stray strand into place, holding pins in his teeth, getting into a skirt in the proper fashion and many other things he will not say.

"It just comes naturally," he smiles.

He declares he never used rouge for his complexion, and, in fact, nothing except cream and powder. He has a handsome, effeminate face, with fine eyes and eyelashes and fine teeth. He claims to have been a stenographer for the Pullman company once, and also for a store in Sixth street.

Dressed in his female masquerade McIntosh was suddenly confronted by 18 South side young woman who knew him as "Miss Ramsey" at balls. When his *wig was removed and the erstwhile dan*cers realized that the "girl" who had been their confidant was a man there was a scene that was ludicrous in the extreme. As the news was bruited abroad that "Miss Ramsey," the belle of many ballrooms, was a young man there was the utmost consternation in dancing circles.

McIntosh seemed not the least perturbed, but rather flattered, at the attention he created. Crowds tried to obtain permission to see him, but these Inspector Bernard McStay refused to gratify.

McIntosh was such a curiosity at the South Side police station that he was several times requested to change his clothes from those of a man to those of a woman. When he complained that he had been given nothing to eat good meals were furnished him on several occasions, but he refused to touch them. Then he got mad, and, as it happened, he was wearing his female attire when the fit struck him. The result was that he refused to change his apparel at the request of the officials, and all night long sat in his cell garbed as a comely young woman.

When the patrol wagon was called in the morning to take McIntosh to jail he was still dressed as a woman, although he refused to wear the bedraggled hat he had on at the ball. Instead he perched his man's fedora jauntily on his curls and set out in that rather rakish fashion. On the way he was the observed of all the other prisoners. When he reached the jail he was somewhat nervous, blink*ing his eyes and wringing his hands* nervously, so that when Warden Lewis first saw him he did not suspect the trickery being practiced on him. The warden said:

"The deception was so complete at first I thought it was a nervous woman, but after I had ordered the prisoner to be taken to the matron's side of the jail I had an inspiration and ran in. The matron had just started to meet the prisoner and in a commanding voice, as if I knew all about it, I ordered the prisoner to 'take off that wig.' To even my surprise, the prisoner did, disclosing the close-cropped hair of a young man. The matron even while I was ordering the prisoner to take off the hair was asking the victim if it was 'Mrs.' or 'Miss' McIntosh. I did not think that the prisoner was a proper person to put in jail, and so refused to take him from the officers who brought him from the South side."

SURGEONS' BALL IS A GREWSOME ORGY.

Horrors of the Dissecting Room and Operating Table Depicted with Grotesque Surgical Wit.

Paris.—The annual ball of the house surgeons of Paris hospitals was this year more grewsome than ever before, being so morbid, in fact, that many of its details are utterly indescribable. It was a saturnalia of grimy, grotesque surgical wit, in which all the horrors of the dissecting-room and the operating table were caricatured, and the latest discoveries in bacteriology impersonated.

The parade of cars representing the several hospitals was led by a procession representing Dr. Piot, submerged in a mass of terrifying microbes. Andral hospital showed Prof. Metchnikoff ladling out curdled milk as the specific for eternal youth. Lariboisiere represented the most famous doctors of Paris, each bearing emblems vividly depicting his specialty. The Enfantes Malades sent a procession of horrible deformities.

The prize, however, was won by Necker hospital with a float entitled "Entente Cardiaque," which might have been inspired by the shade of Baudelaire. In it a lord mayor's banquet and its awful consequences were shown in close proximity to Petronius Arbiter opening his veins on a bed of roses, while an allegorized pleasure was suddenly transformed into death. Bishops and cardinals, celebrating a most unorthodox "purple mass," broke into chants for the dead, and the whole ghastly spectacle was of a character to give heart disease to any but those with strong nerves.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

CHICAGO NOT PROUD OF HER COURTHOUSE.

ASKING NEW STRUCTURE.

The Present Edifice Neither Architecturally Pleasing Nor Convenient—Notoriously Unhealthful—Some Events of Recent Happening.

CHICAGO.—In the heart of the city stands that ornate structure sometimes styled the city hall, sometimes alluded to as the court house; and either term is right, for the building is used for both town and county affairs, one front is city hall, the other county building. But it is a question how much longer that ambitious piece of architecture is to remain standing, how much longer it is to come upon one as one rounds the corner at La Salle or Clark street. The gigantic edifice, for all its massiveness, lacks a stability, and an agitation to do away with it is abroad. The county board at a meeting held lately adopted resolutions providing for the appointment of a commission of ten to prepare plans for razing this dilapidated landmark and replacing it with a modern building, constructed on artistic lines. That it was lacking in comfort and conveniences, was unsanitary and inadequate, has long been known; and now it threatens to fall to pieces.

A recent fire in the paint room on the fourth story did considerable damage to the building, and called attention to the signs of decrepitude noticeable here and there about it. In the courtrooms great cracks have appeared, the plaster looks as though it might fall any moment on the august heads below. In the lofty, gloomy corridors, pillars lean dangerously, walls are bulged and warped. Signs of decay are not wanting on the exterior; the soft limestone of which the county part is built is disintegrating and, in cracking and crumbling away, portions fall to the street below, a grave danger to passers-by. The county board say to repair it now would be sinking money in a salted gold mine.

The south entrance has had to be sealed up, streets and sidewalks roped off, marking a zone of particular danger. The structure is as ugly as it is unsafe. As shelter for the millions of dollars' worth of records under its roof the recent fire indicated its unfitness. For many weighty reasons it is best the building be condemned.

The Newsboy's Attack.

WE LAUGHED joyously over the story of the Chicago newsboy, this urchin, like his class in general, woefully uninformed in regard to the wares he so loudly called; the lad boarded an elevated train and, going through the train, cried at the top of his lungs: "Extra! Extra! All about the scandal in the city hall. Fifty lives lost!"

Perhaps, after all, the waif was not so far off, for numbers of lives have been sacrificed to the rococo structure that spreads over the space bounded by Washington, Clark, Randolph and La Salle streets. It is positively affirmed that workers in the building have had their lives shortened because of the conditions obtaining there, conditions unequalled in any tenement house in the city. Light and air struggle ineffectually to enter the rooms, the deep window ledges are traps for germ-laden dust, which is widely scattered through the vault-like rooms. The offices are so congested, there is so much overcrowding, sanitary rules cannot be heeded.

Scandal there was connected with the county building when it was under construction, a political scandal that not infrequently attends a big job of this sort. It was erected in the years between 1878 and 1885, and cost $4,400,000. The pile consists of a county hall fronting on Clark street, a city hall on La Salle. The two are connected by a many-storied rotunda. As originally planned, a great dome was to rise in the center, and give dignity to the whole, but the plan was not carried out, thereby greatly detract*ing from the effect. Local limestone* was used for the county side, the soft stone lacking durability, and its whiteness very rapidly changed to dinginess by Chicago smoke and soot. For the city hall a harder and darker limestone was employed, but soon the whole mass wore the same grime coat. One must acknowledge there is an impressiveness in the great mass, but it is not a noble impressiveness; rather the topping sort, due partly to the fact that the building is too near the street.

IT WAS built about 25 years ago, when ideals dealt with bigness and show; great staircases, high ceilings, pillars and "trimmings." In this day of admiration of the solid and simple, of advance in sanitary requirements, the ornate, damp, dingy place seems hopelessly unlovely, a breeding spot for disease. One writing of it as kindly as he dare, says: "The grandeur is the ostentation of an era now forgotten in architecture. Comfort and exclusiveness have supplanted stately ceilings, Corinthian columns and long, elaborate, but tiring staircases. These magnificent 35-foot columns keep out light, give a solemn look to justice, and send men groping about the hallways." Another describes with his gloves off: "Twenty-five years ago, when the twin buildings, the county building and the city hall, were completed, little was known of architecture, compared with the modern knowledge. The structure never was a work of art."

It is a very difficult matter to heat the rooms, it costs enormously to try to keep the place clean, and the waste of hall space makes much ground to travel over takes up space that should have been utilized for office room. There seems no dissenting voice in regard to urgency of need for a new building.

It has been proposed that there be two distinct buildings, and that each be given sufficient space to allow of a setting of green lawn, the structure to set well back from the street. Mayor Harrison thinks it should not be on the office-building order, but should have an individuality of its own, stand as one of the artistic features of the city. The mayor, judges, President Brundage of the county board, county and city officials generally, are enthusiastic over a new building; plans of various sorts are proposed.

Courthouse Square.

JUST where stand the buildings under present criticism has stood, for many years, the Cook county court house. The first one was a wooden cottage. Next came a stone building, and this was occupied jointly by city and county officials. At the time of its construction little or nothing was known of Illinois stone, and the material for the new building was brought in from Lockport N. Y. From time to time additions were made to the second court house; a story put on, then wings of large size, the whole finally a conglomerate structure of no great attractiveness of appearance. When the fire came, a portion of it, the eastern wing, escaped destruction, and for awhile was used for public purposes. Along with the main body of the building there fell in the fire the large fire bell, whose place had been on top of the center building; and from the molten mass of the bell were made souvenirs in the shape of small fire bells, which souvenirs one occasionally sees to-day on the watch chains of old residents.

The first courthouse, built in 1835, was used for all kinds of public gatherings meetings, lectures and entertainments. The second courthouse, the stone edifice, was completed in 1853. There are still living men and women that can tell stories of the brilliant speeches made in that first cottage building. That building was as much a part of Chicago's history as the Kinzie House, Mark Beaubien's tavern, Fort Dearborn, the first schoolhouse and the first church.

Speaking of historic relics, anti-fire days, the settler period, reminds us that Chicago fosters an interest in things old as well as eagerly strives after attainment of the new. The Chicago Histori*cal society, the pioneer association* keep alive pride in the city's early struggles and successes.

What Has Been Going on Recently.

THERE is now with us in the city Madame Breshkovsy, the agent of the Russian revolutionary propaganda. This woman of many years and many sorrows is gathering about her folk of widely different walks in life, widely differing degrees of culture. Now she addresses an audience of excited foreigners over on the West side, now talks to guests invited to a private home down near the Lake Shore drive. She is heard in the Auditorium, speaking in company with Jane Addams, Rabbi Hirsch and Jenkin Lloyd Jones. At one of the meetings there was organized a branch of the American Society of Friends of Russian Freedom, with Jane Addams as first vice president, Judge Brown, of the Cook county appellate court, as president.

A most interesting personality that of Madame Breshkovsky. At 61, still heart and soul afire with zeal for the revolutionary cause in Russia. At the Chicago meeting on the West side she was greeted with the wildest enthusiasm, hundreds pressed forward to touch the hand of this "Russian Joan of Arc." Hundreds without, who clamored to gain admission to the hall to hear her speak, she addressed at an improvised out-door meeting. And at the Auditorium assembly, an audience of 3,000 people rose in their seats to give her greeting.

A few days ago there was held at Hull House a memorial meeting in honor of the late Mrs. Lloyd, wife of the late Henry Demorest Lloyd, lifelong student of sociological questions. Mrs. Lloyd, sympathizer and aid to her husband in his work, led a life altruistic to a degree; and the gathering at Hull House was an appreciation of this unusual woman.

The dance hall evil is still claiming attention, and, brought forward by this subject, the Greek fruit stores are coming in for their share of condemnation; are said, with their pianola music and opportunities for "treats" to serve as a temptation and pitfall. The city fathers seem to have tasks sufficient to keep them employed.

YOUTH IN THE CITY

RECREATION IS A NEED THAT MUST BE CONSIDERED.

CHICAGO IS IN PERPLEXITY

There Come to Polite Ears Unsavory Reports of Dance Halls—Some Contrasts in the Big Town.

CHICAGO—Our English cousins are accused of taking their pleasures sadly, and we Americans have been likewise ridiculed. But, alas and alackaday for the lads and lassies that take their pleasures madly.

The Chicago papers, the civil authorities and, mildly, the public, have been concerned recently with what they call the dance-hall evil. Without doubt, it comes in the nature of a shock to people generally. Average persons with average feelings of humanity, have been wont to look on these dances attended by the servant-girl class with a mixture of amusement and approval; amusement that the ball should have such a strong attraction that a girl who has been on her feet all day should care to be on her feet all night; approval, that those whose portion is one of so much drudgery should be able to find some merry, lightsome amusement.

And now investigation is spoiling this pleasant, innocent picture.

The harmless dance we held in imagination we are told, is an orgy. The attendants in these affairs as a rule are mere youngsters, boys and girls that a hard fate has sent into the world at too early an age; sent out for the bread and butter struggle, and left unprotected, adrift, in the other struggle—the grasping after pleasure, happiness, whatever be the name for that human necessity apart from the labor one.

The pursuit of this evanescent thing buoys up the servant girl over her pots, the shop-girl in the long hours of her service, the factory-worker in her toil, the laundry-girl in her heavy task. It is natural, sane, wholesome, the desire; but the reality looms up very different from the dream to which the above adjectives belong. Why is it? Is it that there is a lack in our social system, a failure to recognize the recreations needs of the working-girl, or is it that we in our narrow bounds do not approve of mirth and dance for her, would consign her to Browning clubs and classical music? Perhaps what we await is a bishop that will open a really social, truly respectable dance hall.

The Occasional Open Tragedy.

WHEN we come to think of it, we have overheard now and then a servant-girl characterize a fellow worker in this phrase: "Oh, she goes to the all-night dances;" but to our ignorant ears this scorn had appeared a bit of narrowness, a bit of Phariseeism. May not the speaker have known better than the one on a different level the true inwardness of these routs? If we had had an inkling we (at least so we trust) would not have greeted with such smiling indifference Hilda's or Olga's dishevelled appearance on "the morning after."

What started the belated interest of Chicago in the character of these places of amusement was the recent suicide at one of them of a young girl. It was at one of the semipublic dances that are given in various quarters of the city Saturday nights the desperate act occurred, and the circumstances attending it are bringing to light the fact that these af*fairs pay no heed to the ordinance in re*gard to midnight closing, selling liquor to minors, and other restrictions aimed at the upholding of decency and order.

The girl's companions had noticed that she looked pale and seemed rather apart from the general merriment all during the evening, and it had been observed she kept watching the door as though expecting some one that failed to come. She stayed through the long hours of the revel—these things begin late, after the dishes are all done, the grime of the week removed—then, apparently giving up all hope that some promise to her was to be kept, at three o'clock she went to the dressing room and swallowed enough carbolic acid to put an end to her troubles.

A humble tragedy, but significant.

Now the Moralizers Have the Floor.

OF COURSE this has furnished the pulpits with a theme. And, what was bound to happen, some of the preachers have brought to the fore not only the dance hall of low degree, but also the Charity Ball of exclusive renown. Moralizing [illegible] easy. [illegible] draw [illegible] the [illegible] ours do not seem to have a great [illegible] common. The former [illegible] halls! Close the halls!" and, "The real test of charity comes when the giver is not on dress parade. The spirit which prompted the charity dance was one of pride rather than of compassion." We admit the command may be wise, the statement have a quantum of truth, and yet the gist of the matter seems something different, something like this:

Youth craves, whether dwell he and she on the Lake Shore Drive or over on Canal street, mirth, hilarity, a chance to rebound from routine. And youth, whether for good or ill, is going to get it. The average person finds small cause to censure the little child whose ebullition of spirit is expressed in hop and skip; the colt that feels its oats; the dog released from the confinement of house and capering in its freedom. Animal spirits, and not to be suppressed—at least so the psychologist and the physiologist tell us.

The weary, the blase, cannot always find recreation in such sober joys as reading, concerts, lectures; they are too tired, they require diversion, must forget for awhile the conditions that have brought them to the extreme weariness, "lose themselves." And some agreeable physicial exercise is a reasonable, wholesome means of banishing the fatigue; be it dancing, riding, bicycling, rowing, skating, some means of employing that wonderful energy of youth.

What substitute for the low dance hall can be offered? A perplexed town, you see.

Exclusive Days and Public.

NOW that we are speaking of contrasts of the big town, it may not be out of place to offer impressions of two days at the Art Institute; impressions gathered when society was honoring an exhibition, observations taken during the nooning hour of one of the free days. Mention of this may come in specially well now, as there is just drawing to a close an important and very interesting loan exhibition of portraits.

The Chicago Art Institute, by the way, is a much visited institution; 700,000 persons visit it annually, twice as many as are reported at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts in that length of time. The visitors are of all classes, all ages; I was about to say, of all colors. For this thing is noticeable on the free days, always a sprinkling of negroes in the crowds strolling through the galleries. And what surprises one farther is the proportion of people whose appearance would suggest a life given over to dealing with the bare necessaries, who here seem to get real enjoyment in contemplation of works of art.

On the private days, too, one sees variety. There are usually a goodly number of out-of-town folk taking advantage of a day in the city to "do" the institute; always a group of art students observing pictures, and commenting in passing; a burly man here and there, looking big amongst the petticoats, in a busy life stealing a moment for indulgence in what mayhap was a thwarted taste; grandmas with a desire to improve; granddames, patrons of art and the support of struggling artists. These latter move about as though they knew a thing or two, eye the exhibition with critical poise of the head, judging eye. We wonder if their verdict is of as real worth as that of the young people over the way, the earnest art students?

Engaged in the Social Act.

HONESTY is the best policy, and also cordiality. The sledge-hammer methods, the suspicious attitude, today are not to the fore in commercial life. And Chicago is demonstrating this at present.

The Commercial association has just opened headquarters in the Great Northern building, the rooms to be used as a rendezvous for out-of-town traders and merchants. Here the out-of-town folk can enjoy club comforts and club advantages, enjoy intercourse with men representative of the great progressive town they have come to visit. And the Commercial association has for its object more than mere hospitality; it is evincing intense interest in further*ing Chicago's good, in bringing* to notice Chicago's accomplishments. The "Chicago spirit" is hastening a wonderful Lake Shore boulevard, planning for civic beauty, striving for fair laws, preaching the practical value of art.

The ladies, too, have introduced a new social feature in the city's life; so English, you know. We have just opened our first tea shop, a belated copy of London and New York mode. But, though a little slow, we are quite content with the result, have as pretty and attractive a place in which to spend a leisure hour as one need wish. Our tea shop is quiet and charming, prettily situated on Michigan boulevard, looking out on this smooth driveway and on the waters of the lake beyond. It is decorated in the "old English out-of-door style," the paper on the walls shows lattice work, green on white, there are border panels of leafy loveliness, the woodwork is white, the chairs and tables are of wicker; all airy, dainty, just the sort of thing in which to take a five o'clock.

The ladies are generous, and admit men to this restful spot. But they do not allow the men to bring along cigar or pipe. The tea shop is essentially feminine.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Heston, Michigan's crack half back for the past four seasons, and unanimously given one of the positions behind the line by both eastern and western critics in their All-American lineups, has signed a contract to coach the Drake college football eleven next fall. Heston's salary is fixed at $1,250. His work will last during the football season only. The salary paid him by Drake is the largest ever earned by a Michigan athlete upon his first venture into the coaching business. Heston had flattering offers from other prominent schools. As Drake will probably play against Michigan next fall, Heston will be the first one of Yost's proteges to put against a Michigan eleven an opponent trained in Yost's style.

Heston.

A short time ago it was announced that Heston would succeed "Bummy" Booth, at Nebraska, but this was later denied. Booth has announced that he has retired from the coaching profession and will hereafter devote all of his time to the practice of law. Booth has been practicing law in New York city for the past three years. During this time he has given his time to acquiring knowledge of the practical side of the profession and in acquiring a big acquaintance. In the falls he had devoted three months to coaching football at Nebraska. When Booth visited in Chicago on his way west last October, he discussed the value of a football career to the young man who intends to enter a profession or any vocation which demands a close and large acquaintance with business men. Booth declared that he believed that his football experiences at Princeton had practically made a professional career easy for him in New York city. In discussing this matter he said: "We all know that a large acquaintance is absolutely necessary to the professional man. I have been practicing law, or rather been running the bluff, for three years. Fully half of that time I have spent making acquaintances. Nearly every night I go to some club or to a public place where men of influence congregate, and meet men. This has been very easy for me, because I have had easy access to the society of good, influential men. And this has been almost entirely due to the fact that I was at one time a prominent football player at Princeton. Everybody has heard of me, it seems, and this fact alone is better than an introduction. Somehow people love a hero, and every football player on a big team is more or less of a hero in the minds of all college-bred people at least. I got more than my share in football. Now I find it easy to meet men, and my success has been such that my business has grown until I can no longer afford to coach football three months in the year. My law business demands all of my time."

The fascination of bowling seems to have a strong attraction for baseball players, and some of the best-known ball players of the country are among the most expert tossers of the lignum vitae. Capt. Anson, the veteran Chicago manager and player, was the first prominent ball player to become identified with the bowling game, and is proprietor of a large establishment in Chicago. He is vice president of the American Bowling congress, and at the last tournament he captained the team that won the national championship. Herman Long, for many years the king of shortstops, is another diamond star who is interested in the game, and is manager of a set of alleys in Chicago. Will Terry, the old bowling pitcher off whom the late Delehanty made four home runs and a single in one day, is also a bowler and has a bowling establishment in Milwaukee. Among the eastern baseball men, President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn Baseball club, is the most conspicuous patron of the game. John McGraw, the clever little manager of the New York Nationals, conducted a bowling establishment in Baltimore for a number of years. Frank Brill, who some 12 years ago played with Detroit, is the manager of a bowling establishment in Chicago. Brill is a bowler of considerable prominence and an ex-national champion. Al Selbach is another baseball player who has made a record for himself on the alleys. He toured the country a few years ago with the All-American bowling trio.

A. C. Anson.

E. R. Thomas, of Buffalo, made 15 miles in 9½ minutes in his 90-horse power car, an average of 37 seconds, on the beach at Daytona, Fla., the other day. This is an unprecedented showing, sustaining for ten miles the rate of the best unofficial mile ever made on the beach.

James Devine, a prominent lawyer of Syracuse, N. Y., is dead. Nineteen years ago Devine was famous as a ball player and athlete, and he is credited with pitching for the Syracuse Stars in the game, July 5, 1885, when the easterners defeated Chicago 5 to 0, allowing Chicago only five hits.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Feb. 16, 1905.

Yes, fond reader, Smoot and Hoch are two different individuals.

Cleveland man paid $500 for a single kiss. We would rather buy an automobile.

"Honesty is the best policy." Still "Pittsburg Phil" left a cold million and a half.

Rev. Dr. MacArthur declares that the devil rules Tammany. Not very kind of him to speak that way of Charley Murphy.

Bill in Legislature aims to give Trenton better lights. A little light on some things going on in that city won't do any harm.

If the people hammer those anti-saloon limits Councilmen much longer, it is gravely feared that they will be driven to drink.

"Crash in Subway!" dear reader, did not refer to an accident on Belmont's underground road; only a bottle broken in Bishop Potter's tavern.

Judging from the number of sermons on the subject reproduced in our exchanges we are inclined to believe that Lincoln's Birthday has been celebrated recently.

Dispatch from Rome says that many of the paintings bought by J. P. Morgan in Europe are bogus. Pass the hat; it would be a shame to send him to the poor house.

Governor Pennypacker says that he believes the devil is an editor.—Bucks County Gazette.

And another somebody has said that "politics is worse than hell."

If matters continue as they are, the city had better purchase one of those Vacuum Cleaner Company's air brooms. It would be just the thing to place in the ceiling of the Common Council chamber.

Because he is the silent partner in an express business, which is said to violate the Sherman anti-trust law, a Battle Creek, Mich., man wants Tom Platt ousted from the United States Senate. The Michigan man is an anarchist. If we were to fire every Senator who is connected with some fat corporation which violates the anti-trust law, we would have nothing left in the halls of Congress but a few poor and honest men.

By George!
George Williams, murdered man,
George H. Wood, the suspect,
George Bird, suspect's lawyer,
George E. Whitten, suspect's father-in-law,
George Bowers, preached funeral sermon,
George Demier's Hotel, where inquest was held,
George Totten, detective working up the case,
George Cruse, farm hand who heard the two men quarreling.

Timely warning is given by the authorities to property owners and tenants to obey the letter of the ordinance providing for covering icy pavements with ashes, sawdust or sand. It would be natural to suppose that no notice would be necessary inasmuch as human life is endangered by slippery footwalks, but the condition of the pavements throughout the city today show that few residents have much regard for the safety of pedestrians. The fact that a number of persons have been injured by falling on icy pavements seems to have had no effect whatever on those who are derelict. Chief Kiely's instructions to enforce this ordinance we hope will be followed by good results.

Mayor Wyckoff, of Dunellen, needlessly exerts himself when he takes the trouble to deny that there is any sentiment in that borough favorable to its annexation to this city. There is no more agitation for such a scheme there than there is here and we have yet to learn of any intelligent person advocating such a consolidation. Despite his alleged statement, the people of this city have not got the annexation fever and there is no reason to believe that they will be afflicted in that way for some time to come at least. When the subject is given a moment's thought one can realize how absurd the proposition is so far as Plainfield is concerned. It would mean that the underground sewage system would have to be extended through Dunellen and the building of a storm sewer through its business section. There are a hundred and one items of expense which Plainfield would incur if such a thing should come to pass and the advantages to be obtained would be very small. Mayor Wyckoff need not be alarmed by newspaper fakes. Plainfield is not coveting Dunellen.

AMUSEMENTS.

Francis Wilson is in his third week in the great laughing success "Cousin Billy" at the Criterion Theatre. Even in his palmiest comic opera days he never delighted his audiences more than he does now in this rattling comedy. May Robson and Edward Abeles are prominent in the cast of "Cousin Billy" and help to make it an effectual cure for dull care, wrinkles and all other undesirable things.

"Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" has scored a success, which gives Augustus Thomas three comedy triumphs in as many consecutive seasons. First "The Earl of Pawtucket," next "The Other Girl" and now the charming and exceedingly amusing set of complications which he has devised in Mrs. Leffingwell's misplaced boots. An immensely strong cast, prominent in which are Fay Davis, Margaret Illington, Jessie Busley, William Courtenay, Vincent Serrano, Ernest Lawford and J. H. Barnes, gives it splendid interpretation and prevents none of its fun values to escape. Matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturday at the Savoy.

Carlotta, "The Marvel," still thrills the big audiences at Mr. Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre with her death-defying plunge on a bicycle. She will remain at that house for three weeks longer, and no one should fail to see this demure young woman accomplish her remarkable feat. The name of "Carlotta" has already become a household word in New York and vicinity, and no one should miss seeing this really wonderful accomplishment. The stock company located at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre, owing to its unparalleled success from the opening performance, is now a fixture. Only the most recent Broadway successes are being presented at this, the most beautiful of all the Proctor playhouses, and with the exceptionally strong organization which Mr. Proctor has gathered together, it is easily understood why they have launched into the tide of popularity so quickly. Another notable addition is about to be made to the company in the person of William Ingersoll, as leading man. His magnetic personality and excellent work are happily remembered by all the patrons of Mr. Proctor's 125th Street Theatre, where he was specially engaged for a number of weeks this season.

BUCKLE UNDER FIRE OF THE STATE PRESS

NEWARK NEWS HITS PLAINFIELD'S MAYOR FOR HIS SPEECH.

The Newark News says editorially: "Plainfield is an overwhelmingly Republican city, except when its political leaders cannot control the Union Co. Republican convention; then it is Democratic. Plainfield has a Republican Mayor and a Republican Council. It is the highest license city in New Jersey, its fee being $1,000 a year. It licenses just so many saloons and no more, requires them all to close at 11 p. m., and is even now considering an ordinance providing that no saloons shall exist outside of a certain limited district. The Republican Mayor went before the Republican Council to oppose his ordinance, and in his address he made some remarks that are very peculiar, under all the circumstances. He is quoted as saying: 'I have drank with all of you, but some of the new members, and we all know that no business brings human nature together so much as saloons.' And further: 'I used to vote for temperance once, but I see things different now,' and 'I have to go to saloons to meet men.' This distinguished man's name is Buckle, and a buckle without a tongue, as everybody knows, is a useless thing. But it is manifest from the remarks quoted that a buckle's tongue can be used for some strange purposes in municipal government. Notwithstanding the Mayor's stirring remarks, the Council passed the saloon district ordinance on its second reading. Possibly had the voters of Plainfield known just what kind of a Buckle they were electing, they might have strapped him down to private life. Yet he's a Republican in high standing, and Plainfield is a Republican city."

Is Wood a Moral Coward?

According to despatches sent out by the Somerville correspondent, there is grave doubt in the minds of the Somerset county authorities that George Wood will ever be executed for the murder of George Williams. A most searching investigation has shown that Wood has a clean record and the more they inquire the more they believe the crime was committed in a fit of temporary insanity. Among those most intimately acquainted with Wood's characteristics, the theory of accidental shooting is most readily accepted, believing him to be a moral coward and that he ran away after Williams expired.

TWO DESTRUCTIVE FIRES

One House Totally Destroyed; Second Badly Damaged.

TOTAL LOSS IS $2,700

West End Building Catches From Workmen's Stove—East End Residence From a Heater.

One partially completed new house in the West End totally destroyed and another in the East End badly damaged, is the aftermath of two conflagrations which kept the local fire department busy Friday night an early next morning. The total damage will reach $2,700, of which $1,200 is placed on the West End structure and $1,500 on the house and furniture in the East End.

The first blaze broke out in a house not quite finished being built for Mrs. Walter Wyckoff on Bergen street, a new thoroughfare between McDowell street and Clinton avenue, 200 feet north of West Fourth street. Workmen had left a stove burning in the lower part of the building and it is presumed sparks from this were responsible for the destruction. The house was well off by itself and when the flames were first noticed they were pouring out of every side. An alarm was sent in from box 49 but the department could do nothing as the nearest hydrant was over 2,000 feet away and the trucks did not carry that much hose. Chief Doane instructed the men to haul away all the nearby lumber and also pull the burned portions over until the last spark died down.

The alarm for the second blaze was turned in from box 52 at 5:50 the next morning, the home of Richard Yetman, colored, at 616 East Third street, having caught fire from a heater in the cellar.

The department had no trouble in reaching the scene quickly but was greatly retarded in getting water, through the hydrants being covered with snow, one in particular on East Third street having been completely lost to view through a mound that had been piled above it.

Yetman discovered the flames but he had barely time in which to get his family out before they had mounted to the roof through a false work in the center of the house. The firemen worked hard and managed to save the structure from complete ruin despite the start it had upon them.

At one time Chief Doane narrowly escaped serious injury by falling through the first floor half-way to the cellar. He was seen to disappear by Assistant Chief Jennings, who sprang to his rescue, only to go through himself. Both managed to scramble out though badly shaken up and Jennings received a severe burn on the right arm.

Yetman is at a loss to understand how the fire gained such a start as he had been down in the cellar but twenty minutes before he detected smoke and everything seemed to be all right. His home was filled with furniture and bric-a-brac and he places the loss on the latter at $500. This and the damage to the house will be met by insurance.

EACH VOTE COST UNION COUNTY $5

BUT SPECIAL ELECTION WILL NOT INCREASE TAX RATE.

County Collector E. M. Wood, in speaking of the cost of the special election in Union County for the purpose of filling the position in the House of Assembly made vacant by the death of George H. Embree, held last week, declared that the cost would be not less than $7,000. At the meeting of the County Board of Elections held in the courthouse last week it was shown that the total vote in the county was only 1,271, which would bring the cost of each ballot cast up to a little over $5.

Asked whether the cost of the election would bring the tax rate in the county up, he replied that he did not think it would, as the cost of election would be taken from the emergency fund or from some other source, but he believed that it might have the effect of cutting down some of the appropriations for the next year.

In the City Court.

The following cases were disposed of in the city court Saturday: William Trottner, of New York, for peddling without a license, sentence suspended; Daniel Nugent and Patrick Corrigan, charged with damaging a new house, sentence suspended; George Mitchell, colored, charged by his wife with disorderly conduct, adjourned one week.

Patents Granted Plainfielders.

Patents have been granted to U. B. Crane, of West Front street, for an apparatus for loading trucks, and to F. E. Kinsman, of Sherman avenue, for a stringer support for electric third rails.

OSHKOSH CHARITY BALL

Club's Benefit for Muhlenberg Hospital in May.

CHILDREN'S HOME GIFT

Organization Plans to be Permanent—Dance After Easter.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Oshkosh Club was held at the Casino, last Friday, when it was decided to make the organization a permanent one. At the same time all the affairs in connection with the recent show given at the Casino were closed up. Announcement was made that $250 of the net profits from the entertainment will be given to the Children's Home for the furnishing fund, and the balance will be kept in the club treasury for the present.

It was also decided to give a Charity Ball during May for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. This will be an elaborate affair. A number of minor events will also be arranged, including a dance which will be given after Easter.

The club has had a most successful season and the members are very anxious to continue the organization, giving entertainments from time to time.

Joseph M. Shellabarger, Harry Hall, George Ring, Harry Lovell, Harry McGee and Charles J. Fisk comprise the officers. They will have full charge of the club's affairs.

ARCHITECT NAMED FOR TRUST CO. BUILDING

GEORGE K. THOMPSON, OF NEW YORK, TO DESIGN STRUCTURE.

George Kramer Thompson, of New York, has been selected by The Plainfield Trust Company, as the architect for its handsome new bank building which will shortly be erected at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, which site was purchased a few months ago from the Randolph estate. While the plans have not yet been altogether decided upon, the new building promises to be one of the finest in New Jersey and will equal many to be found in New York, architecturally and as to convenience for the banking business.

The new building will occupy a good frontage on Park avenue and will extend back to include the late George W. Force property. There will also be provided a driveway to the institution from Second street. The building will be one story in height and will be occupied solely by The Plainfield Trust Company.

Mr Thompson has had a wide and varied experience as an architect and stands high in his profession. Some of his work is found in the Empire Building, the Manhattan Life Insurance Company Building and Manhattan Savings Institution, of New York, and judging by these structures, it is predicted that the trust company's building will be an ornament to the city and one worthy of the progressive institution that it is to house.

FREE SEEDS.

Federal Government Allots 600,000 Packages to Jersey.

New Jersey will shortly receive 600,000 packages of vegetable seeds, which will be sent out by the Senators and Congressmen and Representative Fowler as well as Senator Kean will see that their constituents in Union County, which is the home of both, are remembered. It is the annual gift of Uncle Sam to the constituents of the national Representatives, and it means lots of work for the secretaries. These 600,000 packages of seeds are put up in packets containing five packages, so that the number of packages actually distributed is 120,000, or 12,000 to each Senator and Congressman.

Some of the farmers receiving a single packet containing five different varieties do not view the distribution complacently, as it is "only a drop in the bucket," when they have twenty or thirty acres to seed down.

Vice Chancellor Bergen's Work.

Vice-Chancellor James J. Bergen has just completed the work of his first full term as a member of the Court of Chancery and it has been noted in connection with this fact that the vice-chancellor in his first term's work lived up to the standard of his predecessor, who is now a member of the Supreme Court, Justice Reed, by rendering opinions in almost twice as many cases as any other vice-chancellor.

Mrs. Sterling Hurt.

While returning home from church on Sunday, Mrs. William H. Sterling, of 829 First place, fell on the ice and fractured her arm in two places. She was assisted to her home and Dr. G. W. Endicott was summoned. He set the bones and the patient is now doing well.

BASKET BALL TEAMS DINED

Trophies Presented at Celebration Last Night.

SOME GOOD SPEECHES

Talks by Rev. E. V. Stevenson, Dr. Norman Probasco, Lindsay Best and J. W. Gavett.

Concluding a scholastic basketball season which was in every respect the most successful ever conducted here, a dinner was given to the members of both the Interscholastic and Juvenile leagues by the Women's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A., at the association Friday. The affair was characterized both by the fact that the silver cups were presented to the winning teams at the conclusion of the dinner and by the fact that after dinner speeches appropriate to the occasion were made by prominent men.

The room was prettily decorated in the various school colors. Plainfield High School, North Plainfield High School, Leal's School and Whittier School were represented at the dinner by their first and second teams, the juniors of the Y. M. C. A. being also in attendance.

Joseph W. Gavett, president of the Y. M. C. A., presided at the meeting, and at the conclusion of the dinner, in a well worded speech, presented the cups, offered by Moraller & Son and another firm, to the winning teams, Leal's and Whittier schools. The cups were accepted by Charles Chapman, captain of Leal's School team, and by William Briggs, of the Whittier combination. Following the appropriate speeches in acceptance, Mr. Gavett introduced Linday Best, of the Plainfield High School faculty, who spoke on the subject of "Educational Effects of Athletics." It was an interesting address, in which the speaker emphasized particularly the meaning of true sport in its highest sense as an incentive to honesty, fairness, and self-control.

Mr. Best was followed by Dr. Norman Probasco, who, in an instructive talk, pictured "Athletics from a Physician's Point of View." Dr. Probasco pointed out the scientific reason for the pursuit of vigorous, healthy exercise, and referred to the effects of an existence in which exercise is extinct. "If a young man neglects to use his surplus energy in athletic exercise, this energy will show itself in the pursuit of habits which waste rather than build up," the speaker said.

Summing up the words of the two previous speakers, and combining in a strong and impressive speech, the best thoughts presented, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson made the concluding address, on the subject "The Moral Effect of Athletics."

Mr. Stevenson said in part: "I take particular pleasure in speaking on this subject because it is one in which I am personally interested. It is when a man learns to combine the spiritual and the physical, and to treat the body as the temple of the soul, that he becomes a strong, healthy man, morally, physically and intellectually. Diogenes went through the world looking for men with a lantern; our Major, as he says, goes after men in a saloon; but we find the true man in he the who has combined the development of his moral and physical qualities, and in the pursuit of healthy, pure habits, has made a fit habitation for a healthy, pure soul."

Rid of Fake Forecasts.

With the passage of the agricultural appropriation bill in Congress the day of promiscuous weather forecasting will have passed. A provision is contained in the bill making this act a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. This provision will rid Atlantic City, Cape May and other big summer resorts on the Atlantic coast of a nuisance which has not only proven disagreeable but costly to business interests of those places.

Woman Suffragist to Speak.

Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, of Elizabeth, the first woman ordained to the ministry will address the Equal Sufferage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield at a meeting to be held at Truell Inn on Monday afternoon, February 27. Mrs. Minola Graham Sexton, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs will speak before the association on Monday afternoon, March 27.

Architect Board's Report.

The second annual report of the New Jersey State Board of Architects, which treats of the work done by the board during 1904, has just been issued and makes interesting reading for persons connected in any way with the profession. Up to the time the annual report was prepared 665 architects had taken out New Jersey licenses. Newark leads, with 95 registered architects, Plainfield has 6 and Westfield 3.

Resolutions of Condolence.

WHEREAS, The Rev. James H. Parks, D. D., was a charter member of the Board of Trustees of the Scotch Plains Public Library, filling the position, at the time of his decease, of Secretary of its Executive Committee, and it is therefore fitting that appropriate mention should be made of his death.

Resolved, That the Trustees share in the general sorrow of the community over the loss it has sustained. Although the health of our friend had been failing for some time his death came as a shock to the people of the village which he had chosen as his home.

Taking an active part in the organization of the Library Dr. Parks continued to be its true friend and earnest advocate. In season and out of season the library of which he was proud, never failed to receive his unstinted commendation, and few of our members did more to advance its interests. He delighted in its progress and in the measure of success it has attained. It was largely through his efforts that we came into possession of the books which formerly belonged to the earlier Scotch Plains Library. He was insistent that we should be allowed to include these books among our valued treasures, furnishing as they do proof of the desire for culture which has always been a characteristic of our village. The Baptist parsonage had for years given shelter to these books, but he urged that the place for them was our rooms. We owe also to his friendly advice the gift made by Judge Cleaver of a full set of Harper's Magazine.

Even after his health had failed Dr. Parks continued to be a regular, indeed almost unfailing, attendant at the meetings of the Board, and was also a frequent and observant visitor at our rooms.

We shall greatly miss his sunny and genial presence, his wise, broad and liberal counsel, and we feel that his place upon our Board will not easily be filled.

Resolved, That we extend to his widow our earnest sympathy in her affliction, not forgetting in doing so the unfailing trust which our departed friend rested upon Divine Providence, and his constant reminder that our Heavenly Father does not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men.

Resolved further, That the secretary be instructed to spread these resolutions upon the minutes and to forward copies to Mrs. Parks and to the Plainfield newspapers.

William Jones, of Essex street, is detained at home by illness.

CHARITY AID MEETINGS

Address to be Made in Plainfield and Four Other Cities.

JUVENILE COURT HERE

Measure in Legislature to Create Special Court in This City and Elizabeth—State Aid Work.

Probably no organization in any State has been so persistently and uncompromisingly active in the pursuit of its ideals in the matter of reform measures affecting the wards of the State of all classes, as the New Jersey State Charities Aid Association and much interest is taken in its proceedings here. Every field for advantageous effort is being thoroughly worked to the financial benefit of every department and institution affected, and the moral as well as physical advancemen of the inmates.

A special committee of the State Charities Aid Association is now preparing a circular for general distribution, calling the attention of the public to five meetings to be held between now and May 1, and soliciting its aid. The meetings will be held in this city, Newark, Elizabeth, Trenton and Camden. Specialists in different lines of reformatory work will deliver the addresses. Two have already been selected, the Hon. S. J. Barrows, a noted penologist and secretary of the New York Prison Reform Association, and Alexander Johnson, secretary of the National Conference of Charities and Correction.

Two of the more immediately important lines of endeavor under consideration at present are presented in some detail in two bills recently prepared for discussion and final passage at the present session of the Legislature. One of these is a bill already presented by Assemblyman Lehlbach, of Essex. According to the provisions of this bill, judges of police courts in this city and Elizabeth will have the power to hold a special session, or juvenile court, once a week for the trial of cases in which the defendants are under the age of sixteen years. The advantages of such courts have already been fully proven in other municipalities. Cases that have heretofore been continued for adjudication in the higher courts, can be disposed of by the police court judge without loss of time, thereby saving to the county large sums of money annually.

One of the chief benefits will be the complete separation of young delinquents from older and more hardened offenders and the dangers of moral debasement which generally result from such association. The bill has been carefully prepared, and as it is backed by powerful influences there is little or no doubt of its speedy enactment as a law.

Another bill which provides for the appoint of a State parole officer and which was outlined by the Rev. A. F. Fish, Catholic chaplain of the State Prison at Trenton, at a recent meeting of a special committee of the association held at the residence of Mrs. Williamson on North Broad street, Elizabeth, will be presented with some slight alterations. This bill, it is expected, will also be passed with little if any opposition. The idea of its advocates is thoroughly to systematize the work of caring for paroled prisoners so that they can be kept in a wholesome and uplifting environment and employment until their rehabilitation is complete. The parole officer, an important part of whose duty it will be to keep track of all paroled prisoners, will act under the warden of the State Prison, and be at the command of the Board of Pardons. At present, it is claimed, there is really no system and the paroled prisoner, without proper aid and kindly surveillance, frequently loses all the beneficial results a parole should bring to him.

A plan that the Governor has set forth in a bill prepared by Senator Bradley, of Camden, providing for the appointment of a State commissioner of charities, has the approval of the State Charities Aid Association, who look upon it as a step in the right direction. Under the provisions of this bill, the commissioner will be nominated by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. His term of office will be three years, or until his successor is appointed, and his salary $3,000 per year. It shall be his duty to inspect all such charitable and corrective institutions of the State as in any way receive funds from the State treasury. He will also have the power, and it will be his duty to see, at least once a year, all the State wards in private institutions. He will keep a record of all his investigations and report to the Governor. He will be given further power to appoint two assistants or inspectors to look into propositions for new buildings or additions to existing ones, to determine whether there is need of them, and he shall summon the superintendents, medical directors, commandants and keepers of State institutions to meet as an advisory board quarterly to discuss matters of a charitable, penal or reformatory nature.

WOOD BROUGHT TO JERSEY

Man Accused of Murder Now in Somerville Jail.

HIS WIFE IS EVICTED

Alleged Slayer of Grocer Williams Will Not Come to Trial Before the April Term of Court.

In the company of County Detective George H. Totten, who has had the case in hand since the first alarm was sent out, George H. Wood, accused of murdering Grocer George Williams on the Coontown road, Februray 2, was removed from the Tombs prison, New York, to the county jail at Somerville, Saturday afternoon. The transfer followed Governor Higgins' authorization of his extradition, the papers having been signed early in the week. It was known only by a few just what time the removal would be made and his arrival in Somerville was unexpected by the residents. He was recognized, however, by many old friends as he was led through the streets.

He was examined in a private room by Prosecutor Griggs, who then turned him over to the custody of Depuy Sheriff Anderson. It was said at the court house that he would not be brought to trial until the April term of court, but that in the meantime he will be allowed the freedom of the corridor and the privileges usually accorded other prisoners. His counsel, Codington & Swackhamer and George H. Bird, of this city, have been in communication with him and they are now preparing the line of defense.

The same train which took Wood to Somerville, brought his wife from New York to this city on her way to the Pollack farm, near Mount Horeb, where she is to make her home. The couple had been in arrears for rent before the crime was committed and Mrs. Wood was evicted from her apartments last Friday. She placed her furniture in storage and decided to leave the metropolis as soon as her husband was taken away. On reaching this city with her youngest child, she was met at the North Avenue station by Fred Linnerts, Mrs. Pollack's hired man, who drove her at once to the farm.

"Ever since Mr. Wood and I were married," said Mrs. Wood to a reporter, "we have had a hard struggle to get along, but we were very happy. This terrible misfortune has come just at a time when I had hoped that better, happier days were coming, for my husband had made arrangements to start in business for himself again, with every prospect of success.

"Now, I don't know which way to turn, for I am practically penniless, and my relatives are too poor to help me. My grandmother, Mrs. Pollack, of Mt. Horeb, is going to take my eldest child Hazel, and my uncle, E. S. Pollack, of 2343 Old Broadway, will take my boy.

"My namesake, little Viola, I must keep with me, for she is only two months old.

"I don't know what I shall do, or where I may go, for without money one has few friends. With the expenses of my husband's trial coming on, I don't know where to turn."

The diagram of the station and restaurant where Wood says he was drugged, which he drew from memory in the Tombs, was shown to a Pennsylvania Railroad official yesterday. He positively identified it as Monmouth Junction. Mrs. Wood hopes this may aid in finding the mysterious "Mack."

Election Law Unconstitutional?

The counsel for the indicted election officers in New Brunswick has begun certiorari proceedings. The certiorari application is based upon the claim that the election law of the State is unconstitutional, in that it provides for boards of election composed of four members, two from each of the two dominant parties, thus debarring other parties.

Success of Former Plainfielder.

Following four years of hospital work and private practice in New York, Dr. Fred Wilbur Cornwell, formerly of this city, will practice medicine at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. He is spending the winter months with a patient at St. Augustine, Fla. Dr. Cornwell is a Plainfield High School graduate.

Young People's Concert.

The second anniversary concert under the auspices of the Young People's Association, of the Swedish Pilgrim church, was held on Saturday night and comprised vocal and instrumental music by members of the regular choir. In addition there was an address by Rev. O. Neilson, of New York.

To Celebrate Battle.

Former Mayor P. J. Ryan, chairman of the citizens' committee, to arrange for the 125th anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown, at Elizabeth, has appointed the following committee-at-large: Hon. Edward S. Coyne, John F. Kenah, General J. Madison Drake, Charles F. Mueller and D. F. Hennessey.

RELIGIOUS REVIVAL WAVE

Meetings Held Nightly in Northern End of Somerset.

FARMERS' SERVICES

Neighbors Who Have Been Enemies for Years Become Friends Again—Many Are Converted.

A religious revival has swept over Watchung and that section of Somerset county, including Warrenville, Coontown, Mt. Horeb and other nearby places. Such a revival has not been known in years and persons who never attended a religious meeting are now taking a prominent part in these gatherings.

Several farmers who have held grudges against each other for years have settled differences and now joining in the movement to spread the interest in these cottage prayer meetings. Those who are leaders in conducting these meetings say that they never remember a time when such deep religious interest was shown. All attribute the commencement of the revival to the death of George Williams.

In the meetings that have been held at the various farm-houses, those who have not spoken to each other for several years, have voluntarily approached one another and asked forgiveness.

Among the leaders in the revival is Rev. George Bowers, who conducted the funeral services of George Williams, and his remarks at that time are said to have been fruitful in awakening the interest of the residents in that section. Mr. Bowers has been invited to attend the meetings now being held and it is believed that they may be continued during the rest of the winter. At nearly every meeting some one professes conversion and this lends an additional interest to the religious work.

ARCHDEACON MANN AT GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

PREACHES SPECIAL SERMON TO THE MEN'S CLUB.

Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, deacon of Newark and rector of Grace church, Orange, preached the sermon at the special service for the Men's Club, of Grace church, in that edifice Sunday, his subject being the growing proportion of people who do not help in the spread of the Kingdom. Members of several other church clubs were among the congregation. Rev. Dr. Mann referred to the time when Christ's popularity was at its height and when by reason of the fact that he declined to be crowned king of Judea, his friends were turning from him. "It was," the speaker said, "a hard time for the Disciples, who felt as much as the rest of the Gallileans the glory of the promised Messiah, and who with their friends, many of whom were more learned than they, were disappointed at Christ's refusal of the Kingdom. It was a test, and a hard one for the Disciples, and it was at this time that their Master addressed these words to them: 'Will ye too go away?' "

Rev. Dr. Mann declared that in his opinion the Christian church at the present time is facing just such a situation as the one which confronted the Disciples. The number of church members are becoming a minority, and even the steadfast Christians, the Disciples, find themselves growing careless and deliberating as to the value of religion. "It is for us," Dr. Mann said, "who are facing just such an undeniable decline, to consider the three causes which Peter said binded himself to Christ. In the first place, Peter said that Christ brought with him 'the words of eternal life.' Secondly, without Him, he could look to no leader. The divinity of Christ was to him a stronger bond than either of the others.

Won the Pie.

Under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department, twenty members of the department contested in a shuffle board tournament for a pie at the association rooms Saturday afternoon. The games were interesting. The prize was won by Martin Denlinger. After the tournament a social was enjoyed, and refreshments were served.

Senior Class Play.

Miss Hallock and Miss Bradley, of the North Plainfield High School faculty, have been appointed a committee to choose a play and select the cast for the annual class day production of the seniors at N. P. H. S. to be given commencement week.

Principals' Prepare a Syllabus.

I. W. Travell, of the City High school, and other state principals, met at New Brunswick, Saturday, and prepared a syllabus to be presented to the New Jersey State High Teachers' Association for adoption.

THE TYPICAL AMERICAN

Abraham Lincoln So Classed by Dr. W. C. Snodgrass.

HIS EXCELLENT TRAITS

Valuable Collection of Lincolnia Displayed at Service in First M. E. Church.

"Lincoln, the Typical American," was the subject of an able discourse delivered by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass at the First M. E. church, Sunday morning. Additional interest was shown in the service by the display of many valuable portraits of Abraham Lincoln, belonging to a collection owned by Judd Stewart, of North Plainfield, which is considered one of the best in the world. These portraits, large and small, occupied positions of prominence about the platform and on the walls of the edifice, while several proclamations and addresses by the President were also shown.

Dr. Snodgrass said that he considered Lincoln the typical American, although he would not forget Washington. The latter was wealthy, while Lincoln was born poor and never possessed a great deal of the world's goods. The preacher referred to his simple habits, his strong purpose of character as shown in his determination to always do that which was morally and legally right, and his strong religious belief. He spoke of the early life, his entrance into politics, his election to the Legislature, Congress and the Presidency, noting incidents of peculiar interest in each step of his career as he made his own way to the highest position in the gift of the American people.

The pastor also dwelt upon the exciting times of slavery days and when Lincoln by his proclamation set the negroes free, referring to his great tender heart full of smypathy for those in need. Yet while he had a tender heart, he was always strong in mind and could not be swerved from his opinion if he thought it was right and for the best. In a word Dr. Snodgrass believed that Lincoln came the nearest to being the typical American and one whose example could be followed safely by the boys and young men of this country.

While he was not thoroughly conversant upon men of letters and science and was not in the strict sense of the word a polished man, Dr. Snodgrass said that he possessed other traits and characteristics which counted for great things in the time for which he was chosen to lead the American people, and he never failed in an obligation or neglected to keep a promise.

During his discourse, Dr. Snodgrass took occasion to refer to the valuable portraits of Lincoln displayed, and stated that there was probably not a finer collection of Lincolniana anywhere, with the possible exception of two.

During the service the choir rendered music of a patriotic character, appropriate to the occasion.

LINCOLN LIKE MOSES.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, gave a sermon Sunday morning appropriate to Lincoln's Birthday. He compared the President with Moses, and showed how in many respects their lives were similar. They both had their struggles, yet Moses was not permitted to enter the Promised Land, neither was Lincoln allowed to enjoy the benefits of his work, after many years of struggle.

"We know of Lincoln's faults," continued Dr. Chambliss, "but we do not know of the faults of Moses, though he probably had them. There are thousands of people in the South today who have the same admiration for Lincoln that those of the North do, yet they fought against the great principle he advanced."

AMUSEMENTS.

Edward Terry, the noted English actor, is drawing big audiences at the Princess and his popularity as a Broadway attraction has not showed the least signs of any wane. He appears in "The Passport" this week and in addition to the regular evening performances there will be a matinee Thursday. Jeff DeAngelis is at the Lyric in "Fantana," which has received the commendation of the critics and is proving a profitable venture. Evenings at 8:15. The Casino is closed on account of the disastrous fire which partially destroyed the building.

After you have inspected the attractive stock of goods at Hill & Shupp's dry goods store, you will be convinced of the wisdom of trading there. Every department is filled with real values and as for the display of new spring goods you will find it hard to exceed as to the quality or price. In the housefurnishing goods' department you will always find useful articles at low prices.

CHAPEL 15 YEARS OLD

Anniversary Services at Wilson Memorial on Sunday.

DR. CHAMBLISS TO SPEAK

Special Music by the Choir of the First Presbyterian Church—Meeting at 2:30.

The fifteenth anniversary of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung, will be appropriately observed on Sunday afternoon, when there will be a special programme, including an address by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and music by the choir from the First Presbyterian church. The services will be held at 2:30 o'clock and it is expected that many persons from this city as well as from other places near Watchung will attend.

It was about fifty years ago that the Washingtonville Sunday-school Association was organized and for a long time religious meetings and sessions of the Sunday-school were held in an old school-house. E. L. Bonny, of the borough, was for several years the superintendent of the school, resigning the position three years ago. He was succeeded by Miss Nettie Beeching, who also teaches a large Bible class.

It was while Mr. Bonny was superintendent that he interested Former Mayor John F. Wilson in the work and in memory of his wife, who was a prominent and active member of the First Baptist church, he gave most of the money with which to erect the handsome chapel fifteen years ago Oscar S. Teal, formerly of this city, was the architect, under whose direction the chapel was built.

GALLIA POSTOFFICE CLOSED BY GOVERNMENT

RURAL DELIVERY COVERS THAT SECTION—ANOTHER PETITION IS FILED.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has received notice from Washington that the postoffice at Gallia will be discontinued commencing yesterday, and in the future the rural free delivery carrier, Nelson Petersen, will cover that territory.

In connection with this service the residents in the vicinity of Berkeley Heights, Union Village and Gillette are preparing a petition in which they will ask the postal authorities to give them a rural free delivery service. In case the petition is granted the territory would be covered from the Scotch Plains postoffice. Those interested in the matter have thus far secured the signatures of about one hundred families and it is considered one of the best routes in this part of the State.

There is now a petition in Washington from other residents in the vicinity of Mt. Horeb, and it is said that still other residents are preparing a petition to take in additional territory in Somerset county. The people living in that section, noting the success of the present route in operation, are very anxious to have the system extended and favorable action is expected.

AGED DUNELLENITE SUCCUMBS TO GRIP

WILLIAM STEWART STEVENS DIES AT AGE OF EIGHTY-FOUR.

William Stewart Stevens, one of the oldest and best known residents of Dunellen, died at his home on Front street, that borough, Friday. He was in his eighty-fourth year and had succumbed to the effects of an aggravated attack of grip. Dunellen had been his home for more than forty years and he was widely known in Plainfield through his business interests. The coal and lumber yard property at Front street and Washington avenue conducted by Garretson & Gray belonged to his wife, who died a year ago, and was maintained by him for many years.

Their Kindness Appreciated.

While the local firemen were busy at the Yetman fire on East Third street, Saturday morning, they were aided to renewed efforts by cups of hot coffee thoughtfully prepared for them by Mrs. J. W. Brown and Mrs. Walker, who live nearby. It was greatly appreciated by the department, especially the members who were deprived of breakfast. Acts of this kind are common at fires in all nearby cities but in Plainfield is is seldom done.

Police to Exercise.

The members of the police department, who are to have physical training at the Y. M. C. A., has been assigned lockers by Physical Director Henckel, and will begin class work at once. They will be on the floor three nights a week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

GARBAGE TAX BILL READY

Measure Giving Plainfield the Right to Raise Revenue.

FOR SANITARY PURPOSES

When House Passes It, Mr. Cross Will Present Proposed Law in the Senate—Its Provisions.

J. Stephen Higham, chairman of the Councilmanic committee on public affairs, has succeeded in having a bill drafted and sent to the Legislature intended to give Plainfield the right to raise by taxation, money for the operation of a municipal garbage plant. The city has the right to purchase such a plant and maintain it, but no authority is given by the ordinances or laws to raise money to operate the same by levying a tax the same as for the maintenance of other departments. Mr. Higham sent the measure to Assemblyman Coyne and secured his assurance that he would do all in his power towards the passage of it in the Assembly and Senator Cross will be asked to give it his attention.

If Plainfield is given the right to levy a tax for the operation of the garbage plant, the cost to each property-owner will be comparatively small, approximately estimated at $2 per year. On this basis it is realized that it is impossible for any family to have its garbage removed for that amount during the year, and besides under the proposed system the work would be done in a sanitary and up-to-date method. The Board of Health has considered the question of the collection and disposal of garbage and conservatively estimates that $6,000 a year will cover the cost of carrying on his work.

Of course, it is realized that it will require a considerable sum to place the newly-purchased plant in good condition so that it will burn the garbage properly, but with the proposed changes it is believed that the plant will do all that may be required of it.

The Board of Health hopes that favorable legislative action may be secured early so that the garbage plant on be improved and put in operation before warm weather arrives. Those who favor the scheme see no obstacles in the way of adopting the proposed system, except the authority to levy a tax for the operation of the plant, and this being secured it is believed that the Common Council will give its sanction and approval and thus the system in operation. Mr. Fisk, president of the Board of Health, has put forth every effort toward the improvement and he feels assured that it will soon be adopted.

The Board of Health has presented the committee from the Common Council with statistics showing the practibility of the municipal system and the committee is strongly inclined to favor it as being an economical and desirable system for the city.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY MEET.

Quarterly Meeting of Y. M. C. A. Society Addressed by Miss Chapman.

Miss Carolin B. Chapman, of Montclair, an experienced worker in Y. M. C. A. auxiliary societies, was the speaker at the meeting of the local organization Monday afternoon, the subject being "Opportunities for the Auxiliary." Previous to the address, a short business meeting was held. Eight new members were received by the society, which is already the largest, yet the youngest in the State.

Miss Chapman told of the work which other and older auxiliary societies are conducting, and complimented the local organization upon its work. The auxiliary movement, she said, has only been in operation for a little over ten years, and in the two years of its existence, the Plainfield society has accomplished in many respects more than the original organizations.

Farmer-Orator's Fall.

Just as he was about to descend the cellar stairs at his home for the purpose of fixing his furnace on Sunday, James E. Martine, of Cedar Brook Farm, stumbled over a pair of rubbers and was pitched headfirst the full length of the stairs, striking his head on the cement cellar bottom. An ugly bruise and cut over the left eye, together with a sprained wrist and hand comprised the injuries.

NEW AUTOMOBILE LAW

Features of Proposed Amendments to Scovell Act.

RIGID REGULATIONS

Police Will be Able to Make Arrests Without Warrants—Punishment for Fictitious Numbers.

Plainfield automobilists are much interested in the proposed amendments to the Scovell automobile law, which are now before the New Jersey Legislature for action.

Section two of the act entitled "An act defining motor vehicles and providing for the registration of the same and uniform rules regulating the use and speed thereof," is amended so as to read as follows:

"Every resident of this State who is the owner of a motor vehicle and every non-resident owner whose motor vehicle shall be driven in this State shall file in the office of the Secretary of State a declaration duly verified that such owner is competent to drive the motor vehicle for which application for license is made, and a written statement containing the name and address of such owner, together with a brief description of the character of such motor vehicle, including the name of the maker and the manufacturer's number of the motor vehicle, if number there be, and the rated horsepower of the motor vehicle, and shall pay to the Secretary of State an annual registration fee of $5 for each motor vehicle; the Secretary of State shall issue for each motor vehicle so registered a certificate, stating that such motor vehicle is registered in accordance with this section, and shall cause the name of such owner with his address, the number of his certificate and a description of such motor vehicle, or motor vehicles, to be entered in alphabetical order of the owners' names in a book to be kept for such purpose; this section shall not apply to manufacturers or dealers in this State of motor vehicles, except as to vehicles kept by such manufacturer or such dealer for private use or hire."

Section three is amended so as to provide that no license number except that issued by the State of New Jersey shall be carried on machines, and another amendment provides that any owner displaying a fictitious number shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment for not more than thirty days.

It is provided in an amendment to section nine that any person driving an automobile on public highways in a race or on a bet or wager shall be subject to a fine of not more than $50 or imprisonment for not more than ten days.

An important proposed amendment is that which provides that any constable or police officer may arrest persons charged with violation of the automobile act without warrant. The last amendment provides for the amount of fine which shall be inflicted for violations of the various sections of the proposed statute.

TRINITY TO OBSERVE 25TH ANNIVERSARY

MARCH 26 FIXED AS THE DATE FOR THE CELEBRATION.

Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, the former pastor, will be present on Sunday night, March 26, and address the members and congregation of Trinity Reformed church on the occasion of their twenty-fifth anniversary. In the morning there will be a special musical programme and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, will preach an historical sermon.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school will be addressed by the different superintendents, E. R. Anthony, George L. VanEmburgh and F. E. Smith and any others who can be reached.

Wednesday, March 29, is the proper date for the celebration, but inasmuch as Dr. Raymond could not be present except on March 26, the date was moved ahead three days to suit Dr. Raymond's convenience. Wednesday night, March 29, will probably be a congregational meeting at which representatives from the different auxiliaries of the church will tell what each society has accomplished in the past quarter century.

The committee having the anniversary in charge has not completed their programme, but the two days above mentioned will be observed as stated.

New Organist and Choir.

Beginning April 1, J. Edmund Skiff will be the organist and choirmaster at the First M. E. church, succeeding Miss Jessie Utter, who has held this position for ten years. She will continue as organist of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, contralto at the First Presbyterian church, will be a member of the new choir.

JOHN TEN EYCK DEAD AT FOUR SCORE YEARS

SUCCUMBS TO STROKE OF PARALYSIS SUFFERED LAST AUGUST.

John TenEyck, aged eighty years, and one of the best known citizens, died Wednesday night, Feb. 8, at his home, 121 Watchung avenue. His death was the result of paralysis which he suffered last August.

Mr. TenEyck was the son of Jeremiah TenEyck, and was born at Samptown, Piscataway Township, where his father was for many years a farmer. He learned the tailoring trade with William Dunn, of this city. Afterward he went to DeWitt, Iowa, where he combined farming with carrying the mail and being a Justice of the Peace. He returned to Plainfield about twenty-five years ago and has continued to live here ever since. Shortly after his return he was a bookkeeper for his brother, Israel D. TenEyck, while he conducted a meat market. Later he again engaged in the tailoring business, which he continued until last August. He has lived on Watchung avenue about seventeen years. His first wife died a number of years ago and he afterward married Miss Mary Boll, who now survives him. He was a member of the First Baptist church, having united by letter from the Samptown Baptist church.

He leaves besides a widow, a brother, Israel D. TenEyck, superintendent of the Industrial Home; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Alice TenEyck, and two granddaughters, the Misses Grace and Bessie TenEyck, of East Fifth street, and a nephew, Jeremiah F. TenEyck, of South Plainfield.

The funeral services were held from the late home, 121 Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and were in charge of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church. The interment was in the cemetery at Samptown.

NO LICENSE FOR GOFF IS MINISTERS' WISH

BIG REMONSTRANCE TO BE PRESENTED TO COMMON COUNCIL.

Notwithstanding the proposed action of the Common Council to adopt an ordinance to restrict the saloon district by an amendment offered by Councilman Tyler, the "reformers" in the Fourth ward are progressing steadily in getting signatures to the numerous petitions which will be presented to the Common Council as a remonstrance against the granting of a license to John J. Goff for his hotel on West Front street. There are about a dozen petitions being circulated by the temperance people in that ward, under the direction of the movement started by Rev. L. B. Howard, Rev. George Mooney and Rev. Robert Walker, representing Hope chapel, Monroe Avenue church and the Church of the Heavenly Rest respectively.

It will be necessary to have a special meeting to adopt the restricting ordinance finally, and as there is to be an adjourned meeting on Monday night, February 27, it is not known just now how Mr. Tyler proposes to have a special session. He will have to secure the special meeting this month in order to accomplish his purpose, that of cutting out all new applicants outside the prescribed district.

DEPOT SUBWAY.

Underground Passage to be Built at the Netherwood Station Within a Short Time.

To protect passengers who approach the station from the north side, New Jersey Central officials have taken steps to build a subway at the Netherwood depot. Surveyors have been taking the necessary measurements during the last few days and the actual work is to commence within a short time.

This will make all of Plainfield's four stations equipped with a tunnel under the tracks or a passageway around under bridges as is done at Clinton avenue and Grant avenue. The fences erected between the tracks prohibits passengers crossing them and it also keeps them from alighting on the wrong side.

Bible Society Meets.

According to a custom observed every ten years, the Middlesex County Bible Society met at Perth Amboy, Thursday, and made plans to canvass the county to ascertain the homes in which there are no copies of the Bible. Local chairmen were named and they will organize the pastors and religious workers at once. Rev. S. K. Doolittle will have charge of the work in Dunellen.

A CURE FOR DESERTERS.

Gen. Chaffee Recommends Disfranchisement for Men Who Unlawfully Quit the Army.

Washington.—Complete disfranchisement for all army deserters, unless a lawful discharge is earned by subsequent service, is the recommendation of Lieut. Gen. Chaffee in his annual report. It is the general's opinion that if the states would pass such a law desertions in the army would become less frequent. On this subject Gen. Chaffee says:

"If all the states and territories should by law withhold from deserters exercise of the right to vote at national, state and municipal elections, unless the act of desertion be atoned for by lawful discharge subsequently earned by service, it seems probable that the most healthful remedy practicable would be applied to the evil and that the result would be surprisingly great. The majority of deserters would return to the colors at their own expense and serve out their unexpired enlistment contracts in order to receive a lawful discharge, which would reestablish their civil status."

GEN. ADNA R. CHAFFEE.
He Would Disfranchise Every Deserter from the Army.

Gen. Chaffee says that inquiry of men in guard houses on his tour of inspection elicited no special reason for desertion, the general reply being that army life was not what had been anticipated. He believes the adoption of his suggestion would relieve military prisons of two-thirds of their occupants.

"While I fail to find anything in the administrative action of company officers," says Gen. Chaffee, "to account for the large number of desertions, I believe it to be a fact that much inexperience, as now, in command of companies affects this subject somewhat. Character, habits, aptitude, differ widely among men upon entering the army, and it is the skill of the experienced officer, with his intelligent sympathy, his counsel and admonition, rather than mechanical enforcement of the articles of war, that best harmonize these varying elements and secure contentment of young soldiers in companies and the service.

"The government provides liberally in the matter of clothing and food, and constructs splendid barracks, fitted with all modern appliances for health and comfort. At no post is the fatigue duty excessive—generally speaking it is light—and, all in all, the soldier is getting everything that under the laws could in reason be asked.

"For many years the numerous desertions from the army have deeply interested the department, and seemingly every possible effort has been made to discover an administrative cause. No serious fault exists not inherent in man himself; therefore it is not susceptible of military control and correction.

"Trial, conviction and punishment by dishonorable discharge and confinement for one, two or three years of the few deserters who are apprehended or surrender themselves have, in my opinion, but slight influence as a restraining force on the service generally."

HOME FOR ROYAL COUPLE.

Babelsberg Castle to Be Wedding Gift to German Crown Prince from His Father.

Berlin.—The crown prince will after his marriage take up his summer residence at Babelsberg castle, the former summer residence of Kaiser Wilhelm I., which has not been inhabited since his death, and was used only for the court balls given in honor of the king and queen of Italy when visiting the German court. The kaiser, a few days ago, when walking with the crown prince and his fiancee through Babelsberg park informed the crown prince that the castle, after being put in order, will be habitable in 1906. Several enlargements have been found necessary. A new wing with a dining hall for 150 persons and new stalls for about 50 horses are projected.

Company Refused Payment.

A thrifty housekeeper in Birmingham, England, forgot about a joint of meat she had placed in the oven, and it was burnt to a cinder. She claimed compensation of an insurance company, stating that the loss was caused by fire.

TEPEE OF BIRCH BARK.

It Is Fast Disappearing from the Northern Woods as a Place of Indian Habitation.

Augusta, Me.—Although the Indian is fast disappearing from this country, which only a few years since, as time goes, he possessed in its entirety, recent examples of his handicraft are still met with.

New England has numerous Indians, and in Maine their canoes, and occasionally their tepees, can be seen, made in the same fashion as when the red man lived in the forest and paddled the lakes and streams unmolested.

A BIRCH BARK TEPEE.
They Are Fast Disappearing from the Northern Woods.

Both the canoe and the tepee are becoming rare, however, for the canvas canoe of to-day is more durable than the Indian's birch bark craft, while the tepee is no longer used by the Indian as a place of habitation.

In the north woods the skill of the Indian builder is still expressed, however, in tepees made for white cottagers and campers. Indeed, the white guides can now make a tepee as skillfully as an Indian, and not a few of the tepees seen in the woods are built by white men.

At Rangeley lakes a number of the camps of summer residents have tepees made of birch bark on their grounds. The one pictured here is near the camp of a well-known Portland manufacturer. It represents the best style of the Maine Indian in the construction of this kind of dwelling.

Under almost any conditions of weather it would make a habitation in the woods by no means uncomfortable, and a man might even spend a northern winter in it without suffering.

OLD ONE-HORSE SHAY.

One in Massachusetts That Is Now Nearly a Century Old and a Curiosity.

Boston.—The old one-horse shay, known as the Thompson chaise, having been in the possession of that well-known Kennebunkport family for almost a century, is now the property of Dr. John S. Mason, of Boston.

Dr. Mason, who is an admirer of antiques, would not part with it for any money. It is in perfect condition, and is seen daily on the streets of Saco and Biddeford whenever its owner is at his old home in Saco.

The chaise was bought almost 100 years ago by Capt. Robert Smith, of Kennebunkport, and at that time was the finest carriage made. Shortly after it came into the possession of Capt. Benjamin F. Thompson, of the same town. The latter was in the nineties when he died. The vehicle, with wheels as large and heavy as those of a dumpcart, later passed into the possession of Postmaster Stackpole, and then was bought by Dr. Mason.

Insect's Gigantic Meal.

No very recent estimates of the loss arising from the ravages of insects have been made save a general statement of the boll weevil's work, but some of the older estimates are here given. Twenty-five years ago B. D. Walsh, the entomologist of Illinois, estimated the loss from this source at from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 per annum. Fitch, the entomologist from New York, estimated the damage to the wheat crop in this state in the year 1854 by the wheat midge at $15,000,000. The loss to wheat and corn on account of the cinchbug in the state of Illinois alone in 1867 was estimated at $73,000,000. The loss occasioned in 1874 to corn, vegetables and other crops by the Rocky mountain locust in the states of Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri was estimated by Riley from carefully collected data at $100,000,000. The ravages in the principal cotton states of the cotton worm have amounted to a loss of about $30,000,000 in years of abundance.

Criminal Statistics.

A French professor has been inquiring into the comparative criminality of the professions. He finds that the convictions for every [illegible] of each are as follows: Lawyers, [illegible]; artists, 25; doctors, 23; [illegible] teachers, [illegible]; teachers, 7; Catholic clergy [illegible]. What have the poor journalists done?

SOME DOMESTIC CONCERNS

Items of Information Intended for the Lightening of Household Duties.

New bread may be cut as easily as stale if the knife be heated in hot water.

Milk kept in a shallow basin will remain sweet for a longer time than if kept in a deep jug.

If a tablespoonful of paraffin be added to the pail of hot water used for washing tiles, it will both cleanse and brighten them.

Before weighing molasses dredge the scale well with flour, for this will prevent the treacle from sticking, and it may be poured off without waste.

To wash a corset remove the steels, then lay the corset on a table or board and scrub with a stiff brush, using a lather made of white soap. Rinse beneath a tap with cold water, pull straight, and allow to dry.

Alum water will restore most faded colors. Brush the faded article thoroughly free from dust, cover it with a layer of castile soap, rinse in clear water; then in alum water, and the color will usually be much brighter than before.

Even when there is cream in the coffee, the stain of it may be removed from silk and other delicate fabrics by brushing the spot with pure glycerin. The glycerin must then be rinsed out in lukewarm water and the spot pressed in the wrong side with a warm iron.

Any cold whitefish may be made into an acceptable entree by being treated a la Newburg. A little white wine, in which cloves and allspice have been steeped, may be added just before the sauce is poured over the fish. It should then simmer till warmed without being boiled.

Poisonous compounds cannot be used to destroy flies without danger, but the following mixture is both efficacious and safe: Thoroughly mix together one teaspoonful of black pepper, two teaspoonfuls of moist sugar and two tablespoonfuls of cream. Place a little of this in a saucer where flies abound. It is a good plan also to wash the inside window panes with a weak solution of carbolic acid, for this will prevent flies settling on them.

To clean black walnut furniture, first rub it all over with a piece of old flannel dipped in paraffin. Then, with another piece of flannel or a soft rag, rub it dry, and apply a polish made of equal parts of turentine, linseed oil and vinegar. These ingredients must be thoroughly shaken together before the compound is used. Rub the mixture well into the article to be cleaned, then leave it for a short time, and finally polish it with a dry cloth.

NECKLACES OF THE SEASON

Form of Jewelry That Is Decidedly to the Fore Among the Fashionables.

The oriental stones are worn a great deal. There are topazes from Korea, emeralds from the Caucasus, lapus lazuli from Japan and the many odd yellow stones which come from the east. Great strings of pierced yellow stones are mounted upon chains of gold and wound around the neck of the summer girl.

It is decidedly a necklace season and pearl collars are worn, in the day time, with neckless gowns and diamond studded gold bands with the Dutch necks of the afternoon toilettes, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

But the woman who wants a collar, and who cannot obtain either a diamond one or a collar of pearls, can take heart, for there is an exceedingly pretty makeshift for her. She can wear a band of velvet around her throat and, upon this band of velvet, she can wear strings of yellow stones—beads, really they might be called—except that they are of irregular size and shape, and so look very much richer than strings of beads commonly look.

The making of these necklaces is a fine art. It requires strings and strings of fine elastic, of just the length to encircle the throat. And, after these are strung with their burden of odd stones, the whole must be mounted upon a clasp which is set at the back of the neck.

These semi-precious necklaces sell for big prices in the stores; but the woman of taste can gather her store and stock of beads and make them for herself. The key to the whole is the preservation of color. There should be more yellow than anything else and the faint yellow tinge should prevail throughout the whole.

Pickled Plums.

For eight pounds of fruit take four pounds of granulated sugar, one quart of vinegar, one ounce of cinnamon and one of cloves; scald the vinegar, sugar and spices together; skim and pour boiling hot over the fruit and let it stand three days; pour off the syrup scald and skim and pour over again, and continue this process every three days until they have been scalded three times. The plums should be pricked with a needle before dropping into the syrup to prevent the bursting of the skin.—Washington Star.

Pineapple Lemonade.

Pare, eye and grate a large ripe pineapple. Add the strained juice of four lemons and a syrup made by boiling together for five minutes four cupfuls of sugar and two of water. When cold add one quart of water. Strain and ice.—Washington Star.

Shortcake Hint.

Raspberry shortcake is as good as the time-honored strawberry shortcake, the fruit blending perfectly with cream. Raspberry-and-currant shortcake is also very nice.—N. Y. Post.

ROBERT HUMPSTON WEDS MISS IDA TALLAMY

DUNELLEN MAN MARRIED TO PLAINFIELD GIRL.

Miss Ida Tallamy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tallamy, of 1140 West Front street, and Robert Humpston, of Dunellen, were married at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday, Feb. 8, at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of eighty guests from Trenton, Somerville, Raritan, Dunellen, Orange, Elizabeth, New York, Manasquan and this city, including many from the choir of the First Baptist church, of which the bride is a member. Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace church, performed the ceremony.

The home was attractively decorated with smilax, cut flowers and carnations. In the parlor, where the ceremony was performed there was a floral arch, with a number of white floral bells suspended from the chandelier to the arch and around which was banked ferns, palms and smilax. The same color scheme was carried out in the dining room.

The bride's gown was of satin finish crepe de chine, over white taffeta, trimmed with silk embroidered chiffon and draped with sprays of orange blossoms. She also wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried white bridal roses and smilax.

She was attended by Miss May Marsh, of Scotch Plains, who was gowned in white silk mull, trimmed with chiffon and she carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Etta Raybert and Miss May Mulford, who wore gowns of green silk, trimmed with all-over lace, and carried white carnations and ferns. The best man was William J. Tallamy, brother of the bride.

The Lohengrin Wedding March was played by Howard Case, organist at the First Baptist church, while the bridal party, entered the parlor, and during the ceremony he rendered appropriate selections.

Following the ceremony congratulations were offered and supper was served, and at 8 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Humpston left the city for a wedding trip to Washington, Old Point Comfort and other points of interest. Upon their return they will reside temporarily with the bride's parents. In the spring Mr. Humpston will begin the erection of a new home on Dunellen avenue and upon its completion he and his bride will live there.

The bride received a large collection of handsome and useful gifts. In the exchange of gifts among the bridal party, the bride received from the groom a diamond and pearl pendant and to the best man he gave a Masonic pin set with pearls, while the ushers, Fred Tallamy and John T Sutphen, received pearl stick pins. The bride gave her maid-of-honor and the bridesmaids pearl brooches.

The bride is quite prominent in musical circles, and besides being a soprano in the choir of the First Baptist church, she has taken part in several entertainments here. The groom is also interested in music and is organist at the Presbyterian church, Dunellen. He is employed as a pattern-maker at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works.

Detailed Returns.

The official count shows that the 1,207 of the 1,271 votes cast at the special Assembly election were for Randolph Perkins, the only nominee, as follows: Elizabeth, 471; Plainfield, 174; Rahway, 86; Summit, 14; Westfield, 198; Cranford township, 40; Union township, 23; Clark township, 9; Fanwood township, 16; Linden township, 9; New Providence township, 8; New Providence borough, 18; Springfield township, 41; Fanwood borough, 7; Garwood borough, 7; Linden borough, 8; Mountainside borough, 9; Roselle borough, 6; Roselle Park borough, 2.

Will Settle Williams' Estate.

Mrs. George Williams, of Watchung, has applied to Surrogate DeMond, of Somerset county, for letters of administration on her husband's estate, naming herself as administratrix. Mrs. Williams will continue the grocery business at Watchung and has placed her brother in charge. Yesterday she received $250 from the Gallia Council of Juniors and $1,000 from an insurance company, the amount of policies held by the murdered grocer.

SCHOOL FOR NEW MARKET

Decided at Meeting to Again Submit $20,000 Proposition.

OTHER PETITIONS

Kerwin Asks for Building for Rock Avenue—One Also for Lincoln Maybe.

Applying to sixty-eight voters for favorable endorsement and from that number receiving sixty-five signatures for the plan, it was decided to re-submit the old proposition for a $20,000 school house at New Market, at the public meeting Thursday afternoon, when the general sentiment seemed strongly in favor of the original petition which was voted down. There were some dissenting voices, but the advocates of the proposition won out. The public meeting was held in the Rogers' building. Those who spoke in favor of the new school at a cost of $20,000 were C. E. Kelley, Arthur Tappen, David F. Kline and others. The meeting was presided over by William Dayton, while William D. Nichols, principal of the New Market school, acted as secretary. The meeting was attended by several South Plainfield men, who expressed themselves in favor of the High School for New Market, and said they would be willing to send their children, if such a school including twelve grades should be erected. They expressed the opinion of the majority of the residents of South Plainfield.

A petition was received from Lawrence Kerwin, for the erection of a $5,000 building near Rock avenue, while M. A. Gallagher petitioned for a $2,500 building to be put up in the vicinity of Lincoln Park. The latter desires a two room school house to accommodate thirty-five and a possible forty-seven pupils. Both petitions were laid over to be acted upon by the Board.

In presenting the above petition, it was announced that should they be granted, the $20,000 school proposition would receive the sanction of the petitioners. The Board will act upon the petitions within a short time, and those who are furthering the project feel confident that at a second vote the public will not reject the $20,000 High School. It is also thought that in all probability the two small school petitions will be granted.

DON'T WANT SALOON NEAR THEIR STORES

STRONGLY OBJECT TO LICENSE FOR 136 PARK AVENUE.

Many property owners and merchants on Park avenue, between Second and Front streets, will send a strong remonstrance to the Common Council at the adjourned meeting to be held Monday night, Feb. 27, protesting against the granting of a license to Charles Schans for 136 Park avenue, the store now occupied by Marcus Silbert. They will present the argument that with the erection of new buildings on Park avenue and the absence of a saloon on the southwesterly side of the thoroughfare, it will permit women and children and others to walk on that side without being obliged to meet crowds that sometimes ock out of drinking places, and it will also enhance the value of the property not to allow a licensed place in that block.

Mr. Schans is represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and City Judge Wm. N. Runyon in his efforts to secure a license for the new place.

Another objection made to the granting of the license will be that within a short distance of the place applied for there are eight saloons, including that of Mr. Schans, and the number is considered sufficient for al purposes.

In addition to the remonstrance of the Park avenue merchants it is expected that merchants on Front street will also enter a protest. In the opinion of some of those who are in a position to know the trend of affairs, there is expressed some doubt as to whether this license will be granted.

Lawyers Will Separate.

Charles Q. Dolliver, Esq., and N. Douglas Drake, Esq., who have law offices together in the Vanderbeek building, have decided to make a change April 1. Mr. Dolliver will lease offices in W. R. Codington's new building on Second street, near Park avenue, while Mr. Drake will take the office on the North avenue side of the Vanderbeek building directly over the Daily Press business office.

Golf and Tennis Contests.

The Plainfield Country Club is another one of the New Jersey golf organizations that is to begin holding open tournaments this season. The members have voted to hold an open tournament for women affiliated with the Metropolitan Golf Association clubs during May, and also offer the courts to the East Jersey Tennis Association for one of its tournaments.

LOVE OLD COURT HOUSE

Chancellor McGill's Words as to the Landmark.

BUILT ABOUT 1780

Ample Room for Erection of Somerset's New Building Without Destroying Old One.

Strong opposition to the destruction of the old Somerset County court house, which the Board of Freeholders, at their Wednesday meeting, virtually decided to tear down to make way for a modern structure, has developed in Somerville. Chancellor McGill once said, according to tradition, that the building was one of the finest of the old style court houses in the State. The lovers of beauty and fine art in Somerville believe the chancellor meant what he said, and they are up in arms over the idea of making kindling wood of a fine old pile. The building was erected in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

When the Freeholders hold their final meeting the court house matter the objectors to the razing of the old house will be represented.

One of the citizens who is most earnest in the effort to prevent what he and many others regard as vandalism, is H. T. Tompkins, a broker, whose home is in this city, but whose place of business is at 129 Front street, New York.

"It is a vast pity," said Mr. Tompkins, "that this old building should go.

"The old court house was built somewhere about 1780 or 1782, I believe. It is somewhat on the architectural lines of the old Greek temples—massive columns in front, the entrance reached by a broad flight of wide, brownstone steps. It stands high above the ground and is set well back from the street in a grove of superb old trees. There is a simple dignity of artistic effect which is only too rare in our rural public buildings nowadays. It seems simply pitiable to think of substituting for this refining and beautiful picture in our old village street one of these glaring, harsh monstrocities which have supplanted so many of our old court houses in New Jersey counties.

"There is no doubt the old court house is inconvenient within and ill-arranged to meet modern conditions. But that could be easily obviated. And if it is necessary to build a new court house the old one need not be destroyed or its site pre-empted. There is plenty of room for the new court house in the rear of the old one, and it could be there built in such a way as not to clash in any manner with the architectural effect of the old structure as see from the street. The old building as it stands could be turned to good use. The surrogate's and other offices could be put in it and the little brick building now used for county office overflow done away with."

"BILLY" REDMOND WANTS LOCAL BAND CONCERTS

HAS MADE GENEROUS OFFER TO BEN LA VERE TO SECURE THE FUNDS.

At the solicitation of "Billy" Redmond, the well known vocalist who has appeared in Plainfiedld on numerous occasions, Ben LaVere, of band fame, is making arrangements to conduct a vaudeville show in the Casino for the benefit of summer concerts. It had not been his intention to take the matter in hand but the offer made by Mr. Redmond is an exceptionally liberal one and could hardly be refused. He has offered to provide the entire bill, for two nights if necessary, the only expense to Mr. LaVere, being the railroad fares of the artists. The latter will be the best obtainable and the entertainment, if given, will be on a level with any of its kind yet seen in the city. Mr. LaVere has arranged for a meeting to be held in the Borough Council chambers tonight when the plan will be discussed.

The residents of both the city and borough have enjoyed the concerts in the past few years, but the lack of financial support has always made it difficult for Leader LaVere to arrange the series. Last season the greater part of the funds was secured by giving a minstrel show and a fair in Saengerbund Hall but it entailed a great deal of work on the part of a few. "Billy" Redmond sang at the minstrel show and also appeared at the concerts and he became so interested that his offer to Mr. LaVere came when he heard that no arrangements were being made for this season.

Another R. F. D.

The postal authorities have established a rural free delivery service at the Millington postoffice. The route takes in Logansville, Long Hill and New Vernon and Arthur C. Faulkner, of Pleasant Plains, is the carrier.

POLICE AGREEABLE TO PHYSICAL TRAINING

WHAT THE NEW RULE MEANS TO THE PATROLMEN.

According to the concensus of opinion among many of the regular members of the police department, the men are inclined to welcome the opportunity for physical exercise at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, so long as it does not interfere with the time they should have for rest and recreation. Of course, the new rule which will be included in the discipline of the department, will be more advantageous for the day men than those on duty at night, for they will not have to cut out any of their hours for sleep to go to the gymnasium three times a week.

With the night men it will mean that they must get up a little earlier than at present to take the hour's exercise, and in case they have to appear at court in the morning against a prisoner, it will also mean that they will not be able to get to bed as early in the morning. As it is they claim that when they have to go to court it is frequently 10 o'clock or later before they can reach their homes.

When this proposition was originally placed before the men they were told that they would be required to visit the gymnasium six times a week. To this plan there was almost united opposition for they believed that it would take too much of their time. When Councilman Tyler learned this he fixed upon three times a week and this was more generally approved. The two or three votes against the new rule were cast by the older men of the force who felt that they would be unable to meet the requirements. It is not expected, however, that these men will go through the same course of exercise as the younger members and no doubt leniency in this direction will be shown. Another objection to the new order was that the men are not now allowed any time off, similar to the firemen, who get one day off in ten. The policemen believe that such a rule should be adopted for them.

According to the present rule the policemen work every day from 7 o'clock at night to 7 o'clock the next morning, while the day men put in the same number of hours. The policemen are hoping that the new police board will rearrange the shifts in someway so that they may be equally favored with the firemen as to time off.

TRIANGLE BOWLING CLUB OPENS UP THE PINS IN PRACTICE GAME.

The game with Saengerbund team having been arranged for a week later, the Triangle Bowling Club devoted the evening to a practice game on their alleys at the Fanwood Club Friday, in which excellent scores were rolled. May Establish Juvenile Court.

Through a recent bill passed by Legislature, police judges in Elizabeth and Plainfield will have the power to hold special sessions, or juvenile court, once a week, for the trial of cases in which the age of the defendants is below sixteen. The State Charities Organization is now looking into the matter and results are expected within a short time.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 19.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Glorifying God in our home.—Eph. vi, 1-9.

Our duty to God embraces every form of life. It consists not only in the personal duties which we owe to Him nor in those owed to His church, but includes the duties to the state, to society and to the home. Nor are the least important duties of religion those concerned with the home. Indeed, the very opposite is true. The home life is perhaps the most influential and important of all forms of associated life. More time is spent in the home. The relations sustained are the most intimate. The results produced are the most lasting. To glorify God in the home is therefore a most important Christian duty.

The Bible places strong emphasis upon the religious duties of the home. In the Old Testament the duties of parents to children are enforced, and the duty of children to parents is set forth in one of the commandments of the Decalogue. In the New Testament Paul lays emphasis upon the same duties, especially in his letter to the Ephesians. And in this emphasis he includes all embraced in the home life in their various relations, husbands and wives (chapter v, 22-29), children and parents, servants and masters. The duties in the home are reciprocal. To each are owed obligations, and upon each important duties devolve. The remembrance of these facts should encourage all to the performance of their various duties. Before we can claim the rights belonging to us we should strive to perform the duties that devolve upon us. Indeed, if all would faithfully perform their duties the rights belonging to each one in the home would accompany such performance, and this can best be done by making our home life a religious life. Paul sets forth this religious phase. Obedience to parents is to be "in the Lord." Children are not only not to be provoked to wrath, but brought up "in the fear and admonition of the Lord." Servants are to serve "as unto Christ" and masters to deal justly with their servants, knowing that they have a Master in heaven with whom there is no respect of persons. Home duties are thus all made to center around Christ, and in doing service unto Him we glorify and honor God.

God instituted the home. It is a symbol of heaven, the eternal abode of God's people. The dearest ties on earth are the home ties; the fondest names and titles are the ones used there—father, mother, husband, son, daughter. Let us, therefore, more and more consecrate the home life to God in Jesus Christ. Let us make each home a "bethel" where God delights to dwell. The family altar should be erected. All duties should be performed and rights granted as unto the Lord. God will thus be glorified, and our own lives and the lives of those nearest and dearest to us will be made increasingly better and happier.

Finland's President.

Some of our readers know Dr. Clark's amazement at his discovery on his first visit to Finland that the Christian Endeavor society had gone ahead of him and that where he expected to be obliged to do pioneer work there were already several societies, and there was a splendid prospect for the growth of the movement. Finnish Endeavorers keep the English words "Christian Endeavor," with no attempt at translation. "A week ago," Mr. Saxback wrote us not long since, "we had our first real union meeting in Ekenas. Thirteen societies, with an aggregate of a little more than 400 members, were reported, all in connection with the Free Church of Finland. We hope that the movement will soon reach the state church and all the other denominations of Christians." At this meeting Mr. Saxback was elected president of the Finland Christian Endeavor union.—Amos R. Wells in Christian Endeavor World.

Increase Campaign Notes.

Here are some of the latest figures of growth in the Christian Endeavor movement:

Twenty-five states have gained 10 per cent.

Seven states have gained 20 per cent.

Missouri has gained 30 per cent.

Indian Territory, Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico have gained 40 per cent.

The Hawaiian Islands have gained 116 per cent.

Eight states have gained 100 new societies.

Pennsylvania has gained 200 new societies, and New York has gained 300 new societies. Ohio's gain is 586 new societies, leading all other states of the Union.

The total increase of new societies during the campaign thus far is 4,659. The campaign began in November, 1902.

The International Christian Endeavor convention of 1906 is to be held in Calcutta, India, the first week of November, 1906.

CHARTREUSE MONKS

A LITTLE OF THE STORY OF THE CARTHUSIANS.

Exiled from France, the Order Is Now Firmly Established in Italy and the Liqueur Being Made in Spain.

The monks of La Grande Chartreuse are most widely known as manufacturers of the far-famed Chartreuse liqueurs. They belong to the Carthusian order, an order of great austerity and industry. It was more than eight centuries ago the founder, St. Bruno, established the body in France, in what was then the wilderness of the Grand Chartreuse, and, with short interruptions, his order has continued to dwell there in severe monastic life. But now France has turned them out, bag and baggage, and elsewhere must they seek retreat for the contemplative life—and a favorable locality for the manufacture of wine that has been the source of their large wealth. It is said the profit from the sale of their liqueurs has been $2,000,000 a year, half of which the pope required them to surrender towards the support of the French national college and various French institutions in Rome. It is doubtful if they again will be able to amass riches as easily as in the past, for now the French government, in addition to expelling them from their long established territory, enters the field as a competitor, it already having begun the manufacture and sale of the liqueur in Chartreuse. But the monks are making their famous wine at Tarragona, Spain, and adding to their old mark a special label which declares that the product comes from the original manufacturers, from the holders of the real secret of the making of the cordial.

The Carthusians are the only monks belonging to a great order that has not had to be reformed; they seem in some mysterious way to escape the pitfalls into which so many of their brethren slipped. Mrs. Jameson thus describes the appearance of the men of this order: "Their spare diet, their rigorous seclusion and their habits of labor, give them an emaciated look, a pale quietude, in which, however, there is no feebleness, no appearance of ill-health or squalor; I never saw a Carthusian monk that did not look like a gentleman."

They are brothers of silence, allowed to speak to one another of a Sunday afternoon, on certain feast days, and during a weekly walk taken outside the convent walls. The Carthusian dwells "in a solitude within a solitude," each having his own little cell and garden; the cell contains a workroom and a sleeping-room, and in the latter the solitary eats and performs his devotions. On Sunday they assemble at a common table. They assemble in the choir three times on ordinary days —in the morning for a sung mass, for vespers, and at 11 o'clock for matins. The night office with the monks in their long white robes raising slow chanting praise, is singularly solemn and impressive; a scene even a careless observer will not soon forget.

A MONK'S CELL.

The costume affected by this order consists of a tunic with sleeves, over which is a long white garment, and a hood, either hanging down the back or else worn on the head; on the rare occasions when they travel, a hat and cape are donned. They wear no linen.

Though the exiled Chartreuse monks are to make their wine, for awhile at least, in Spain, the order has been established in a new home near Pisa, Italy, in beautiful Abbey of Farneta, bought some time ago by them at a cost of $500,000. Attached to the Abis is a large tract of ground, which it is considered will be sufficient support to the institution. Here have already come together over 300 monks, who, after the edict of exile from France, were temporarily dispersed to monasteries in France, Spain, Switzerland and Italy.

KATE WARING

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 19: "Glorifying God In Our Home"—Eph. vi, 1-9.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

How much we hear in these days about home life, the training of children and the vexing servant question! We seem to take it for granted that these matters all are new and never were thought of in the days of long ago. Yet here is a man writing less than 2,000 years since, and doing it in such an eminently common sense way that no one since has been able to improve on his counsel. To be sure, he never had any children of his own to bring up, and we have come to think that no one is really competent to give advice in the management of the young unless they have had the experience of fathering or mothering some of their own.

But if you will hear what he has to say and compare it with what fathers and mothers the world over have said and done you will be convinced that he knows what he is talking about, and also knows how to talk about it unusually well. He has seen considerable family life, and has detected its seamy side. He understands folks and their needs. He does not use many words, but have you ever found any one who has said more on this subject in the same number of words?

We have mothers' clubs and mothers' meetings and conferences and conventions without number, and doubtless they all accomplish some good in some sort of way, yet a person does sometimes think that if all the mothers and fathers and children and servants would read over these few lines written by Paul at least every Sunday, and then try to put them in practice between Sundays, there would be more apparent improvement in the condition of family life than seems to be secured in the way we are now going on.

Some years past it was quite the proper thing to have a lot of Scripture mottoes and texts framed and hung on the walls of the various rooms of the house. That was good as far as it went. It would be an excellent device for every child in every home to have this command printed and hung in the sleeping room where the eyes will rest on it the first thing when they open in the morning: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord." "Honor thy father and mother."

If this cannot be had in shape to hang up for the eyes to read, it should at least be taught so thoroughly that it will be the first thought in the morning and the last one at night that opens and closes the doors of the mind to the things of the world and life. "Obey" and "Honor." That takes it all in. All the essentials of childhood morality and religion are compressed into those two words. The child that does that "in the Lord" is in the kingdom. And the strongest probability is that child will abide in the house of the Lord forever.

Here is the prolific source of much of the evil of the times. Our young people do not learn obedience, or, at least, do not learn it as soon as they should and where they should. It should be learned in the home. The first lesson should begin with life or possibly some time before. There should never be a time when disobedience can occur in the home without stopping the whole machinery of the household until it is corrected.

"In the Lord." That is the key to the whole of the lesson. The child must obey because of the relation in which every member of the family stands to God. This is God's family, and His laws are to govern it. Each is related to every other member in just the way he is because God has so ordered it in His providence. Father is to do the fathering and mother the mothering, and no one can fill these places but they. The children have the right to parental care and guidance and affection. But to do their part rightly parents must have reverence and obedience from the children. If this is withheld, all is wrecked.

In like manner the duty of parents and servants is clearly set forth.

If fathers and mothers, servants and employers would carefully study this advice and follow it strictly, there would soon be a great change apparent in family life for the better. Try it yourself.

Making Us Like Himself.

I called to see a lady both of whose arms were broken in an accident. "Every day the doctor comes and works my fingers and hands and arms to make them limber, and, oh, how it hurts!" said the lady. And then pretty soon she said, "There is no doctor like him, so gentle and skillful." You see she knew the pain he gave her was for her own good. So it is that we, God's children, look to Him and love Him because He is developing us and making us like Himself.—Floyd W. Tomkins, D. D.

Come and Go.

There is a mighty go in the gospel as well as come. It is come, go. Go preach and heal, go home to thy friends, go into the highways, go into all the world. Many Christians do not obey; many churches have no blessing because they do not go.—B. F. Jacobs.

Three Words of Strength.

There are three lessons I would write,
Three words, as with a burning pen,
In tracings of eternal light,
Upon the hearts of men.

Have Hope. Though clouds environ round
And gladness hides her face in scorn,
Put off the shadow from thy brow;
No night but hath its morn.

Have Faith. Where'er thy bark is driven—
The calm's disport, the tempest's mirth—
Know this: God rules the hosts of heaven,
The inhabitants of the earth.

Have love, love not alone for one,
But man, as man, thy brother call,
And scatter, like a circling sun,
Thy charities on all.

—Schiller.

SALVATION ARMY ASKS FOR NEW HEADQUARTERS

PROPOSE TO ERECT $7,000 BUILDING ON EAST SECOND STREET.

Having been seriously hindered in their work by the lack of adequate rooms, the Salvation Army proposes to purchase a lot and erect a substantial brick building on East Second street, between Park and Watchung avenues, at a cost of $7,000, as told in The Daily Press. The site adjoins the fire department headquarters on the Watchung avenue side. The building will be suitable for public meetings on the ground floor, and for officers' apartments above.

It is the purpose of the Salvation Army to erect a neat and respectable building capable of seating at least 300 people, the structure to be known as the Consul Booth-Tucker Memorial building. It is in memory of Mrs. Booth Tucker, who spent her life in Salvation Army work, and was killed in a wreck while travelling in the interest of the Salvation Army.

It is hoped that the building will be ready for occupancy by May 1. Letters have been sent to the friends of the Salvation Army requesting contributions for the proposed building, explaining the situation of the society, and stating the plans for the new building.

RATE BILL FAULTY

Senator Reed Shows Governor how North Plainfield Would Suffer by the Law.

GOVERNOR CONVINCED

Conference in Trenton Will Result in Radical Change in the Hilliery Bill Now in the Senate.

Former President of the State Senate Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, had a conference with Governor E. S. Stokes at Trenton Thursday in which he pointed out the great harm the uniform maximum tax rate bill will work in North Plainfield as well as other municipalities provided it becomes a law in its present shape. Senator Hilliery has introduced a bill in the State Senate which fixes $1.50 as the maximum tax rate. Governor Stokes's figure was $1.70. There appears good reason to believe that the Hilliery measure, which has the Governor's sanction, will become a law, but the chief executive has been convinced of the dangers of the measure in its present form, and some radical changes will be made.

The present tax rate in North Plainfield is $2.46 per thousand. Of this amount ninety cents is for special school tax fixed arbitrarily by the district school meeting and sixty cents is for county tax, fixed by the county authorities. The county and special school taxes alone, consequently, foot up to $1.50, which is all the proposed law would allow. And it can be seen that there is nothing left for State school or for borough tax.

If this bill goes through the Legislature and is signed by the Governor some steps will have to be taken to amend the present school law which gives the district school meeting arbitrary power to fix its own tax assessments or in other words the appropriation needed to run the schools. Otherwise it would be possible for the school district to vote a sum so large that the special school tax rate alone would amount to $1.50 on the $100. Even if all taxable property were assessed at full value, as the school tax must all be paid over to the school authorities before the municipality can use a dollar, the result would be disastrous.

In Plainfield the Hilliery law would not work so much harm for the appropriations for schools are under the control of the Common Council and there would be little or no conflict in fixing the total amount of taxes that it would not exceed $1.50. It is quite likely that Governor Stokes will consult with those having the Hilliery bill in tow as to the grave feature which former Senator Reed has pointed out.

Hunt Club Chase Off.

On account of the deep snow the weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club did not take place Saturday, though the members met at the jumps and after a brief gallop, joined in practising their horses. There was about eight members out, and a pleasant afternoon was spent in spite of the disappointment of not being able to ride after the hounds. The crust on the snow was not strong enough to hold the dogs, and it was to deep for the horses.

Enjoyed a Sleigh Ride.

A sleighride to Westfield was had by a number of young people living in the vicinity of Westervelt and Fairview avenues, Friday night, the start being made from the home of Jacob Beckman, of Fairview avenue, in two large box sleighs. Upon the return the crowd went to the home of Mr. Beckman, where a dance was held until a late hour.

MINISTERS' VIEWS ON TYLER ORDINANCE

In view of the widespread comment on the action of the Common Council on February 6, in adopting on first and second readings an amendment to the liquor ordinance to license inns and taverns, which provides for a saloon district, confined to the business section of the city, it has been thought appropriate to secure the opinions of the local ministers, who are largely identified and interested in the city's welfare. The majority of the opinions secured favor a proper restriction of the saloon and welcome the movement to keep it out of the residential parts of the city. Here are some of the opinions obtained:

REV. ARTHUR S. PECK—St. Stephen's church—"I recognize that there has got to be a legitimate use of everything, and until something better than the saloon is offered, such as coffee-houses or clubs where men can congregate, the saloon will continue to be the mecca for men. It is not solely for drink that men go to the saloons. They like the sociability of others and when they reach the saloon and find drink and refreshment there they are induced to partake. I would favor a public house or some similar institution in my district where my men and myself could go without being obliged to go to the city to seek the social features offered there in saloons. I am inclined to blame the clergy and the leaders of the government more than the men."

REV. A. C. NICKERSON—All Souls' church—"I have always been opposed to the saloon and its influence and in the name of morality and civilization every effort should be made to restrict it not only from the residential district, but the business section as well. All my life I have seen the harmfulness of the saloon and the drink habit and anything that can be done to reduce the influence of the saloon to a minimum should be welcomed."

REV. E. VICARS STEVENSON—Grace church—"I was greatly interested in the remarks of Mayor Buckle, as I admire frankness of speech. I favor Councilman Tyler's scheme, believing it is one that should commend itself to Plainfield. This community is peculiarly a residential one. There are plenty of saloons for all purposes, and there is no reason why they should be allowed to grow. The curse of the drink habit lies in the secretness with which it is carried on. I still believe that there are enough saloons here for the police to take care of."

REV. ERSKINE M. RODMAN—Rector emeritus Grace church—"It is much better to have some limits to the saloon district. We certainly do not want the saloon near factories where the temptation for men is so great. I favor keeping the saloon within bounds."

REV. DR. W. C. SNODGRASS—First M. E. church—"I am opposed entirely to the saloon. I would restrict it in every way practical and if possible I would put stone walls and iron bars around it."

REV. DR. J. A. CHAMBLISS—First Baptist church—"The saloon anywhere is a blot. Wherever it may be it defaces and degrades. If one section of the city—that within the proposed lines of restriction—is already hopelessly suffering such defacement and degradation, in the name of decency and goodness let that suffice. Like many others, my home is within the blotted section, and I would spare the homes that have so far escaped. I do not hold a man a devil because he uses drinks which, in excess will intoxicate, though I would pray him to abstain totally, but I do hold the saloon to be a curse whose power every good citizen ought to try to limit by every possible means. Its power must be limited in some measure if its location is restricted within narrow boundaries. Our Honorable Mayor does not take this view, and he has the right to differ, but I venture to say he lost his grip on himself the other day when he made certain remarks which grievously wounded a multitude of his friends."

REV. DR. A. H. LEWIS—Editor Sabbath Recorder—"It should be restricted by all means. As a citizen of Plainfield I am thoroughly ashamed of what the Mayor has said concerning the question. When the head of the city government takes such a stand as he does here I think that all should feel ashamed."

REV. DR. J. S. ZELIE—Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church—"I do not agree with Mayor Buckle. I feel that whatever is for the best interest of the city should be done and I believe that the saloon should be re*strained to a certain section*."

REV. DR. CORNELIUS SCHENCK—Trinity Reformed church—"Restrict the saloon more and more until you can entirely eliminate it. I believe the adoption of the ordinance is a step toward a desirable end."

REV. L. R. HOWARD—Hope chapel—"I do not consider the ordinance idea, but I think it is immediately practicable and fair. There may be some who like a saloon next door to their homes or across the street, but it is not great hardship even to them if it is further away. There are many others, especially of those not well-to-do, who cannot move away from a nuisance if the city permits it to be placed in their vicinity and in justice to them the ordinance should be passed."

Fanwood Township Report.

The annual township report is out and being distributed by Township Clerk Edward L. Hand. The report shows the township to be in a flourishing condition, the receipts during the year from all sources being $14,187.17, the disbursement $12,459.83, leaving a cash balance on hand February 1 of $1,727.34. This is one of the largest balances the township has had on hand in a number of years, and speaks well for those who are at the helm, in managing the township's finances and compelling corporations to pay for franchises granted that are of no material benefit to the town. The committee recommends that the following amount be raised at the next township election: Police, $200; fire department, $100; poor, $400; roads, $2,800; sidewalks, $250

Enjoyed Strawride.

Miss Marguerite Ostrom, of Carlton avenue, gave a strawride to about twenty of her friends Friday night. They went to Westfield. On the return of the party, refreshments were served and a general good time ensued.

Daughters of America Active.

Six candidates were initiated at the meeting of Martha Washington Council, No. 28, Daughters of America, Saturday night, and six new members were elected and one proposition received. A large delegation from Golden Rod Council, of New Brunswick, was present, including Deputy State Councilor Angie Walker, to witness the initiation. At the next meeting, Saturday night, February 25, the Council will hold an entertainment consisting of tableaux, recitations, vocal and instrumental music.

C. C. Black's Denial.

"I don't care what the newspapers say about me," said Charles C. Black, equal tax commissioner and late Democratic candidate for Governor, recently. "I have not reversed my position on the question of railroad taxation." Some of the newspapers throughout the State have detected what they thought were inconsistencies in Mr. Black's attitude at pres*ent and his attitude when he stumped* the State last fall as a candidate for Governor.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Michigan Nominations Made For Spring Elections at Grand Rapids.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 15.—The Republican state judicial convention here nominated the following ticket to be voted for at the coming spring election: Justice of supreme court, Joseph B. Moore, Lapeer, renominated; member of board of regents of University of Michigan, Arthur Hill, Saginaw, renominated, and Dr. W. H. Sawyer, Hillsdale; member of state board of education, W. J. McKone, Albion.

Diekeman of Holland, chairman of the Republican state committee, officiated as permanent chairman. The resolutions were very brief and commended the administration of President Roosevelt and the line of policy he mapped out in his message to congress, reaffirmed the platform of the last Republican state convention and commended the administration of Governor Fred M. Warner.

LURALIGHTER WON.

Cold Weather and Heavy Track at New Orleans.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 15.—The prize fight scheduled for last night between Monte Attell of San Francisco and Jimmy Walsh of Boston before the Commercial Athletic club was declared off by Chief of Police Kiely after a conference with Prosecuting Attorney Dal*ton, who took the view that the system* of selling a membership ticket to the club and then selling reserved seats to be used in connection with the membership ticket was against the law. Chief Kiely officially announced that the fight would not be permitted and instructed the police to see that his order was obeyed.

Racing at Crescent City Track.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 15.—With the exception of a six furlong handicap the Crescent City Jockey club card was made up of selling races. The heavy track upset many calculations, and only three favorites, Pawtucket, Laura Hunter and Merry Acrobat, won. Caithness, favorite in the first, was so badly interfered with at the start that she was forced out of the race. On the way to the post for the third race Metallic jumped the outer fence and ran away three furlongs. Isabella D., favorite in the last race, was fractious at the post and was practically left.

Position, King Thorpe and Azelina.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 15.—Ladies' day and perfect weather brought out the largest crowd of the season. Azelina went six furlongs in 1:13, winning easily from Dod Anderson and Mocorito in the fifth race. The winning favorites were Position, King Thorpe and Azelina. Durbar was a second choice and won easily in the sixth race. Caseador took the steeplechase by a head from Jim Bozeman. Revel fell in the fifth race, breaking her leg.

The Irish of America smashed the treaty with Great Britain. Another thousand pounds follows in a few days to aid in the work. God save Ireland."

Fishburn Got Five Year Sentence.

ROANOKE, Va., Feb. 15. — Judge Aiken of Danville has sentenced Charles R. Fishburn, the banker and broker convicted of killing Dr. Fred Lefew, to five years in the penitentiary. Fishburn stabbed Lefew to the heart in a difficulty. The jury found him guilty of manslaughter.

SYMPATHY FOR RUSSIANS

Mass-Meeting in Reform Hall Largely Attended.

SEVERAL SPEAKERS

The Czar's Oppression of the Workingmen Denounced in Speech and in Resolutions.

For the purpose of adding their voices to those protesting against the brutal treatment of the Russian workingmen by the Czar and his soldiers, Branch No. 84, of the Workingmen's Circle, conducted a mass meeting in Reform Hall Monday. The attendance numbered over 150 and was composed for the greater part of expatriated Russians but there were more than a few native born Americans who participated and who showed in several ways the deep feeling they possess for the downtrodden subjects of the despotic ruler. Resolutions of sympathy were passed and a collection of $30 was taken to be forwarded to the county fund for the families of those killed in the Cossack slaughter of January 22.

Members of the circle occupied seats on the platform as did also Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, and William Walker, of Newark, who was candidate for mayor of that city on the Socialist ticket in 1894 and 1896 and who was on the ticket again last fall for Assembly, polling 3,000 votes. The latter two, with Donato DiLanardo, of this city, were the principal speakers, a fourth address in German being made by A. Karpel, chairman of the circle, an office corresponding to president.

Mr. Howard was introduced by the chairman and talked for several minutes on the condition of affairs in Russia at the present time, laying stress on the fact that a nation half civilized and holding its people in what amounts to slavery, could not long endure. He compared the struggles of the subjects with those of the Colonists in America and said that the movement began last month is sure to spread until in the end right will prevail and darkness will be succeeded by light.

Though born in Canada, Mr. Walker has been for years a student of Russia and its political conditions and his portrayal of despotic methods employed by the Czar and his parasites, as he termed them, was as vivid as though he himself had passed through the harrowing experiences which thousands are undergoing daily.

"Comprising one-fifth the land area of the globe," said Mr. Walker, "the vastness of Russia can hardly be realised and neither can its despotism. Its government is nowhere to be duplicated—it is a relic of barbarism. In Russia there are simply two rules for everybody: 'you mustn't do this and you mustn't do that' is practically what they amount to. Millions of people in all walks of life have been sent to the Siberian mines just because it pleased the Czar and there has been no one to say him nay."

He described in detail the formation of the parade of workingmen on January 22 and how it was charged upon by the Cossacks as it was moving along toward the winter palace, unarmed and with no other intent than to seek an audience with the man who is supposed to represent them.

"One thousand of them were cut down," said the speaker, "but the cause and Father Gopon still live and Russia is going to change. The people don't object to the Czar but they object to his methods and right and truth and justice are soon to prevail."

Mr. Walker was followed by Donato DiLanardo, who gave an address in which he dwelt upon the conditions of the Russian workmen and called for the earnest support of all their sympathisers to do all they could to aid them in their struggle for betterment. Chairman Karpel's speech in German was along the same lines. It was expected that Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, Rev. George Mooney and former Assemblyman William Newcorn would also speak, but they were unable to attend.

Plainfielders at Daytona.

Among the Plainfielders at Daytona, Fla., are Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward White, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Stillman, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Compton, Miss Mary Compton, Miss Ida Rocap, Mrs. Robert Gorton, Miss Gorton and Orra S. Rogers. Mr. and Mrs. John Kirkner have left Daytona, after a visit there. Mr. and Mrs. John M. Whiton, of Central avenue, have booked rooms at the Drapland.

Funeral of John TenEyck.

The funeral services of John TenEyck were held from the late home, on Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church, were in charge. The interment took place in the cemetery at Samptown.

SCHOLASTIC BASE BALL

Prospects Bright for Good Games Next Season.

STRONG SCHEDULES

City Championship Series and Contests With Prep. Schools Being Arranged.

All three of the local schools will be represented on the diamond this spring, the Plainfield and North Plainfield High schools, and Leal's School. A series will be played to determine the city scholastic baseball championship, which was last year won by the Plainfield High School. In addition each team will have a strong schedule of games with out of town teams.

The Plainfield High School and Leal's will use Crescent Oval for their games, while the N. P. H. S. will play most of their games out of town. From the present outlook, the P. H. S. team bids fair to again run off with the championship. Only three of last year's players have left school, and in their places are Charles Burt, a pitcher and James Conway, a good in field man. The other candidates include temporary Captain H. G. Thompson, Craig, Smith, Collier, Davis, Bogart, Gavett, Banks, Brakeley and Russell. The management of the P. H. S. team is particularly well placed in the person of Howard Lapsley. He has secured several good games so far, and will undoubtedly prepare the best schedule offered to the public for some time.

At Leal's School, the nine will be headed by Edwin Daniel, captain, and Percy Chapman, manager. The latter is a capable man for the management and a strong inter-academic schedule will be the result. Though the school is weakened by the loss of three of its bet players, there are still possibilities for a good team, and new material may developed. Jewett, a former Worchester Academy man, will probably appear in the box, while he will be caught by Wills. Among the old stand-bys are Glenney, Wilcox, Daniels, Lyman and Howard, while of the new material, Reese, Dallas, Guteries and Manning are likely to be heard from.

At the borough High School, the baseball season promises to be the best in years. Not since the season of 1900 when Crite, the colored pitcher, was in the field, has the borough been well represented in scholastic baseball ranks. For 1905, a large number of candidate will put in an appearance, and there is good material in the bunch. Harry Woodland was recently elected temporary captain of the team, which has already begun practice in the cage. The manager of the team is Arthur VanArsdale, and he has already secured several games with out of town teams. Among the candidates are Mueck, Hand, VanArsdale, Ward, Kenney, Kipsey, Meiler, Fisher, Webster, L. Hamilton, R. Hamilton, Peacock, Woodland, Matthews, Mundy, Dunning, Doeringer, Pond, Jackson.

SWEDISH PASTOR'S CALL TO WOODSTOCK, CONN.

REV. L. T. LINDHOLM TO BE SUCCEEDED BY REV. THEO. ENGLUND.

Rev. L. T. Lindholm, who for nearly two years has been pastor of the Swedish Pilgrim church, has tendered his resignation to take effect May 1. He has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Swedish Congregational church, Woodstock, Conn., and will enter upon his new charge soon after May 1. The flock to which he goes is about twice the size of the Plainfield congregation, and it is for the purpose of entering a larger field of work that Mr. Lindholm makes the change.

The local church has extended a call to Rev. Theodore Englund, now pastor of the Swedish Pilgrim church at Perth Amboy, to succeed Mr. Lindholm and it is believed that he will accept. The church he is now pastor of is about the same size as the Plainfield church.

Mr. Lindholm received his preparation for the ministry in the Chicago Theological Seminary and his first charge was at Michigan City, Indiana. He afterwards was pastor of the Swedish church at Northeastern, Mass., and came from that church to Plainfield nearly two years ago. Since coming here he has received five calls to other churches, but refused them all until such time as he thought the local church was sufficiently well advanced to warrant his going away. He has done a good work here and has increased the membership considerably.

Teachers' Meeting Postponed.

The February meeting of the Union County Teachers' Association, which was announced for Saturday at Elizabeth, was postponed until Saturday next.

KING HITTER WILL KEELER

Old Star of Plainfield Crescents Who Has a Record.

GREATEST BATTER

In 1903 He Was a $10,000 Man—Now Owns Property in Brooklyn and Saves His Coin.

Willie Keeler, known as the man who, perhaps, has less enemies than any professional baseball player, who was one of the stars of the old Crescents in this city, was born in Brooklyn in 1873, at 376 Pulaski street, where he still resides. He began playing baseball around Prospect Park, and soon became noted among the youngsters of that section as a phenomenal batter and fielder. The first regular team to which he was attached was the Brooklyn Rivals, a famous amateur team, in 1888.

He next joined the Acmes, of Brooklyn. He went from this club to the Rahway Club, and thence to the Crescents, of this city. He moved from here to the Binghamtons, from which he went to the New York Nationals, but was released by it to Brooklyn because the managers feared a lefthander would not be of much use as a fielder. Brooklyn later let him go for the same reason, and he went back to Binghamton. He signed with Baltimore for 1897, and there his career as one of the country's greatest batsmen and most popular players began. Keeler established himself for all time that season by batting .432 and leading the entire league in hitting.

The following year, with Baltimore, he again led the league, hitting that season .481. Keeler, in eight years that he has been in fast company, since 1897, never hit below .300, and in this time batted next to the highest percentage ever made by a batsman in a champion season. His mark of .432, made in 1897, has been surpassed just once since 1876, Hugh Duffy, of Boston, in 1894, batted .498. The record was so great that it immediately won national fame for him and the name of Keeler was on every lip.

In 1899 he joined Brooklyn. He played there four seasons, batting .376 in 1899, .366 in 1900, .355 in 1901, .342 in 1902. The next year found him with the New York Americans at a figure said to be $10,000. This was in the war days, and he signed a two-year contract at that figure, or nearly that.

He batted .318 for the Yankees in 1903, his poorest year. In 1904 he came back strong again and hit at .348, being second to Lajoie in American League honors. Keeler has again been signed for 1905, at only a slightly reduced salary from the war-time price. Keeler is one of the players who saves his money and he already owns considerable real estate in Brooklyn.

ELOPING GIRL HOME AND IS REPENTANT

COACHMAN HUSBAND DESERTED BY MISS HOCKRIDGE.

Miss Mabel Hockridge, the former Plainfield girl, who on Friday, ran away from her home with her father's coachman, James Tone, was located by relatives and a detective Saturday, at Wittenberg, N. Y., in the Catskills. They had been married at Hurley, N. Y., by the Reformed church minister and had gone to the home of Tone's parents, a stuffy little cottage widely contrasting with her father's beautiful residence at St. Remy. The surroundings were of a character to disillusionize the girl and she readily consented to return home when asked. Tone was left behind and as yet has not offered to claim his bride.

The Hockridge family is widely known throughout Plainfield as until going to St. Remy about two years ago they had always resided here. Their last residence was on East Fifth street at the corner of Washington street. Miss Mabel attended the local schools.

Crowd Watches Chimney Tumble.

Alex Kane, who was given the chimney on French's mill, with the understanding that he would take it down and cart the bricks away, performed the difficult task on Saturday, between 9 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Five men were employed. The chimney was 6x8 feet at the bottom and 4x10 at the top. Nearly one thousand people watched the work.

Union's Washington Trip.

The Union County Republican committee has announced the arrangements for its trip to Washington to attend the inauguration. The party will leave here on March 3, after stopping at all stations in Union county along the Central Railroad. In the national capital the members of the party will be given a reception by Senator Kean.

SCHOOLS HOLD EXERCISES

In City and Borough Washington's Birthday is Observed.

THE PROGRAMMES

Birth of Father of His Country Commemorated in Appropriate Way by School Children.

Patriotic songs, interesting addresses and appropriate recitations marked the Washington and Lincoln celebrations at the public schools this morning. The rooms were decorated in flags and bunting for the occasion. In most of the primary grades the pupils took part in the programme of recitations and exercises. The exercises at the Bryant and Lincoln schools will be held on Friday evening, when the birthdays of both Washington and Lincoln will be observed.

At the Plainfield High School, two addresses constituted the main part of the programme, while singing was a feature of the exercises. Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' church, was the first speaker. He took for his subject "The Inspiration of Great Persons," referring particularly to the life of George Washington. He spoke of the feeling of strength and "Americanism" which is always experienced when the life of the first president is considered. "The good which a man like Washington accomplishes in his life is but a small part of the accomplishments which his memory and inspiration cause," said the speaker. Following Rev. Mr. Nickerson, Andrew M. Parker, a graduate of the school in 1874, was introduced, and made a few remarks with regard to the changes which have come about in the school since he was a pupil. The exercises were concluded by singing the school song, "The Red and Blue."

The exercises at the Washington school were extensive, the pupils taking an active part in the programme. The following are those who took part in the recitations, songs and patriotic exercises: Miss Annie Fisher, Walter Glaentzer, Charles Oreger, Howard Sweeney, Louis Cahill, Viola Caffett, Raymond Todd, Ida Freedman. The programme ended with an effective flag march, in which the entire school took part. There were nine selections by the school, and three readings.

At the Irving school, the programme opened by singing "America," and the following took part in the recitations: William Daniels, May Larlour, Katherine Parker, Theodore Martin, Millard McAfee, Edson Woodhull, Viola Rose, Valeria Cousins, Julia Regen, George Leighs, Bradford Williams, Edith Swartz, Frank Reed and William Murphy.

The exercises in the borough school were held at different periods, those of the high school department taking place in the morning and the primary grades this afternoon. At the former readings were given by Lawrence Milne and John Peacock and piano solos by Miss Alberta Waterbury and Miss Sadie Fountain. There were also patriotic songs.

At the primary exercises recitations were given by Ruth Weinberger, Percy Diehl, Leonora Fisk, Amanda Matthews, Laura Warnock, Charles Martin, Ellen Hovey, Hazel Hyatt, Roy Love, Elmer Johnson, Edmund Kenney, Elsa Hafner, Walter Thomas and Charles Tompkinson, also piano solos by Ellen Hovey, Elsa Schwed and Maude Martin. The entire school rendered songs appropriate to the occasion.

Necktie and Apron Social.

Under the auspices of the O'Reilly Dancing School a necktie and apron sociable will be held at Central Hall, North and Park avenues, Friday night, March 3. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Eugene O'Reilly, chairman; the Misses K. Stephenson, B. Hess, E. Howsell, M. Whalen, J. Smiddy and M. Casey. Music will be furnished by O'Reilly's orchestra.

Thos. Renison's Funeral.

The funeral services of Thomas Renison were held this morning at 11 o'clock from the parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, undertakers, in Park avenue, Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church, officiating. The interment was in the Methodist cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

Funeral of James Egan.

Funeral services over the body of James T. Egan were held this morning in St. Mary's church. The mass was said by Rev. Father Egan and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends. The interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

—Neuman Brothers will observe Washington's birthday and their store will be closed all day. Watch out for Thursday's specials.

COMPANY K'S FAIR STILL A DRAWING CARD

COMMENCEMENT OF THE SECOND WEEK SHOWS NO DECREASE IN ATTENDANCE.

Commencement of the second week showed no abatement in the popularity of Company K's fair, last night. The friends of the soldier boys were out in large numbers and the armory was again the scene of animation that was evident all last week. As a special feature, last night, the company gave an exhibition drill and it was an innovation to many of those present. Captain Martin was in charge and he was greatly pleased with the showing.

Tonight and tomorrow night the dancing will continue until 2 o'clock and for the remainder of the week there will be several specialties. Thursday night, Professor McMunn, the hypnotist, will give a demonstration and on Friday Colonel Collins will present the 100 per cent. medals won by the members.

MISS CRUIKSHANK WINS EQUESTRIAN HONORS

CAPTURES PRIZE IN JUMPING EVENT AT EAST ORANGE.

Miss Leila Cruikshank, an enthusiastic member of the Watchung Hunt Club, in a recent competition given by the East Orange Riding Club at East Orange, won second prize in the jumping contest. She was mounted on her favorite horse MacGregor, and took four feet, six inches. The competition was open to several clubs in the State, and there was a large representation from the Watchung Hunt Club. Though several other horses were entered by riders in the local club, Miss Cruikshank's mount was the only successful one, and in fact, the only one to achieve any creditable accomplishment. The first prize in the jumping event was won by a member of the East Orange Club

The Watchung Hunt Club was again disappointed in its plans for a chase on Saturday afternoon, though the members met at the jumps for practice and exercise. For over a month, the weather has given the members of the club no opportunity to follow the hounds, but it is hoped that after the long vacation, a slight thaw will permit the event to be held on Wednesday. The club has planned for an extensive holiday chase, and if possible the riders will meet in front of the Crescent Avenue church, at the corner of Crescent avenue and Seventh street at 10:30 o'clock.

Former State Senator Lewis A. Thompson and Miss Alice G. Anderson, daughter of A. G. Anderson, county clerk of Somerset County, were married last night at the residence of the bride's parents on East Cliff street, Somerville. Although some of the intimate friends of the couple knew of the approaching marriage, the event was generally a surprise. The groom is well-known throughout the State as a Republican politician. At one time he was president of the New Jersey Senate. The bride is well-known in Somerville, where she is a great favorite.

FORGED NAME TO CHECK

Young Colored Man Pleads Guilty to the Charge.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

James Springs Attempted to Get Money on Check he Signed in Name of Mrs. J. S. Zook.

James Springs, a young colored man who has been employed as cook at Truell Inn, was arraigned before Justice Huff, this morning, charged by Mrs. Justine S. Zook, a wealthy patron at the Inn, with forging her name to a check for $200 on the Indianapolis National Bank. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was held in $1,000 bail to await trial.

Springs contrived to steal a check book belonging to Mrs. Zook and wrote out a check for $200 made payable to James Baskitt, signing her name to it. It was a crude affair all through but Springs mailed the check to the Indianapolis bank with the request that the money be sent on to Baskitt at the Plainfield general delivery. The bank officials immediately sent check, letter and all to Mrs. Zook and she informed Chief Kiely.

Springs was suspected through the signature and when his room was searched, the missing check book was found. Papers were also discovered showing were he had practiced writing Mrs. Zook's name. The arrest followed but it was sometime before he acknowledged his guilt. Springs is about thirty years old and came to this city from Roselle.

WEST END GIRL SPURNED NEW YORKER'S ARDENT LOVE

CAME FROM METROPOLIS TO PRESS HIS SUIT AND THE COPS GOT HIM.

Unrequited love led to the appearance in the city court, this morning, of Frederick Schaub, a fiery young Swiss who made a special trip out from New York, last night, to pour his tale of love into the unwilling ears of a young woman who resides with a family on West Fifth street, near Grant avenue. Neither she nor her guardians would listen to his pleadings for a quiet tete-a'-tete with his supposed affinity and he stormed around the grounds in anything but the manner that ardent swains are supposed to do. He became such a nuisance that finally he was invited in and so filled with joy at the prospect of gaining the girl's consent to fly with him that he failed to notice that a policeman was summoned over the telephone.

All of Schaub's love-making tendencies had fled when he faced Judge Runyon but he insisted that though he had spent a night in a cell he was still "a gentleman" and if allowed to go he would hie himself to the metropolis and seek other fair damsels. He made several remarks in the course of his plea that led His Honor to think that he was still under the influence of the Fifth street magnet and while he suspended sentence, he instructed Officer McCarthy to see Schaub safely away on an east bound Jersey Central express train.

P. S. C. MAN ARRESTED

Legal Action to Prevent Borough Sts. Being Obstructed.

SWEEPER'S WORK

S. C. Southard, a Foreman, to Appear Before Recorder Doud To-Night—P. S. C. to Fight Case.

Determined to stop the practice of the street railway company in throwing ice and snow from its tracks so that it obstructs the roadway on either side, Chairman James K. Arnold, of the borough street committee, last night, ordered the arrest of S. C. Southard, foreman of the electric sweeper. He was taken from it as it came to a stop on the Somerset street switch by Marshal Emmons and was taken before Recorder Doud on a charge of obstructing the streets. The railway officials secured his release by depositing $20 and he will be given a hearing tonight.

Ever since the last big snow storm Somerset street has been in a bad condition through the manner in which the snow was piled up by the trolley company. The usual methods were employed to remove the huge drifts but just as soon as each side of the track was made passable, the sweeper would throw more ice and snow out on the cleared portion.

Yesterday afternoon, the trolley gang began clearing out ice from the center of the street and the sweeper coming along would throw it toward the curb. The borough scraper happened to be out putting the gutters in condition and the men put the ice back again. This continued for some time until Marshal Pope, acting under instructions, warned Southard, who was running the sweeper, that if he persisted in his action, he would be arrested. He stopped for the time being but came back again last night, with the revolving sweepers going at full speed and the scrapers out in front. The borough authorities were in waiting and as the machine came to a slow-down on the switch, Marshal Emmons arrested Southard at the lever. Two men who were with him were instructed to take the sweeper back to the West Fourth street barns.

Southard communicated with Division Superintendent Phillip Maguire and he and other officials were soon on the scene. It is said the Public Service will have its counsel on hand at the hearing tonight.

When Mayor Smalley was spoken to about the matter this noon he said that an attempt was being made to settle the matter amicably and that in all probability no hearing would be held. The borough ordinance covers the snow problem definitely, he said, but the last heavy storm had altered conditions and there is a possibility that an agreement will be reached in regard to meeting future exigencies.

FREEDOM CASTLE TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN EAGLES FOUR YEARS OLD ON MARCH 28.

Celebrating the fourth anniversary of its organization, Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, are planning for an entertainment and ladies' night on Tuesday night, February 28. The affair will take place at the rooms in the Babcock building. The programme for the occasion will consist largely of musical and literary numbers.

Though the entire order of the anniversary entertainment has not yet been decided upon, it is expected that the affair will be one of the most successful social functions which the lodge has ever conducted. It has been the custom of the members of Freedom Castle to reserve the anniversary date for the leading social attraction, and it is on that night that the ladies are admitted and entertained at the lodge rooms. Refreshments will be served during the evening. The affair is in charge of the following committee: Horace J. Martin, chairman; Wilbur Randolph, Richard Kenney, William Day and Edward Young.

FIFTEEN DOLLARS PER YEAR FOR FIREMEN

BILL FAVORING NON-PAID MEMBERS OF SMALL DEPTS. IN LEGISLATURE.

A bill to establish a compensation of $15 a year to firemen in every municipality in the State where firemen are not otherwise paid for their services was introduced in the Assembly last night by George H. Dalrymple, of Passaic. The bill, which calls attention to the fact that, according to the recent decision of the Court of Appeals the bill to exempt firemen from taxes on $500 worth of property is unconstitutional, was prepared by William A. Cotter, counsel for the State Firemen's Association, and it was considered by the executive committee of that organization on Wednesday night and passed upon.

Mr. Dalrymple is a member of the executive committee of the association and he was selected to present the bill.

PARISH PUBLICATIONS GROWING IN NUMBERS

HALF A DOZEN MONTHLY PAPERS INTERESTING LOCAL CONGREGATIONS.

As a means of keeping in touch with church work the "parish paper" issued monthly seems to be quite a success in this city. There are a half a dozen of these publications.

At the Church of the Holy Cross "The Messenger," is edited by Rev. William Montgmery Downey, the rector, who gathers from month to month many items of interest to his parishioners. Under the direction of Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector, and J. Paul Nolting, of Grace church, "The Pilot" appears once a month and is the most elaborate production of its kind. This is one of the older publications and has been very successful.

Among the latest church papers to make an appearance is "The Messenger," issued under the direction of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, by William D. Murray, editor. The policy of this paper is somewhat different from others in that advertisements are excluded. The support of the congregation is depended upon entirely to meet the expense and thus far this has been a success. Hope Memorial Chapel Mirror is one of the oldest papers. Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard, the pastor, is its editor. Rev. Arthur S. Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church, recently began the publication of "The Messenger," a little smaller than the other church papers, but just as bright and interesting.

Another feature in this line that has grown considerably during the past year or so is the weekly publication of bulletins giving from week to week the events of interest in the churches. This method has been decided an improvement over the old style method of having the minister announce from the pulpit, at the sacrifice of much time, the notices for the week.

JUNIORS IN COMEDY.

N. P. H. S. Pupils to Play "Mr. Bob," in March.

Rehearsals have begun for the North Plainfield High School junior class production of "Mr. Bob," a comedy in two acts, which will be given by the class in March in preparation for the reception to the senior class which is given annually in the nature of a farewell. The date for the production of "Mr. Bob" has not yet been decided upon, though it will be attempted to hold the affair early in March.

The cast in the comedy includes the following: John Peacock, Laurie Miller, Frank Webster, Marie Clark, Florence White, Mary Robley and Marion Overton. The play is full of fun, and is within the capabilities of an amateur cast. It is written by Rachel Baker, the author of several short comedy sketches. The members of the cast are being coached in the acting by the faculty.

Whatever proceeds of the play which exceed the expenses of the senior reception, will be devoted to the class treasury.

Senator Childs' "Blow-Out."

Senator S. S. Childs, of Somerset, has invited Governor Stokes and the members of the Senate to be present at a dinner to be given at the Hotel Astor, New York, Friday night. Following the dinner the guests will attend at performance at Fields' new theatre.

SCHOOL HOUSE PROBLEM

Piscataway Board Considered Rock Avenue Proposition.

NO ACTION TAKEN

Matter Laid Over Until March 20—Judge Runyon and William Jeffery Spoke for Petition.

The question of providing suitable and ample school accommodations for the children of Piscataway Township, was discussed at some length at a meeting of the township school board held at New Market, yesterday. The first proposition asking for a school-house in the vicinity of Rock avenue was considered and laid over to Monday, March 20.

In all three propositions have been presented and it was the first of these that the board considered. It was presented by Lawrence Kerwin and provides for the erection of a $5,000 building near Rock avenue. In support of the proposition remarks were made by City Judge William N. Runyon and William Jeffery, who appeared in behalf of the Investors' Realty Company, interested tax-payers. Judge Runyon made an earnest appeal showing the necessity for a new school-house to supplant the present unsanitary Maple Grove School building at Clinton avenue. His remarks had a tendency to harmonize the various factions.

Mr. Jeffery then stated on behalf of many property-owners and residents, whom he represented, that it would be agreeable to all concerned to have the new school erected in the vicinity of Rock avenue and Seventh street. This met the approval of those present and it was voted that the issuance of a call for the three proposed schools in the township be deferred until the meeting to be held Monday, March 20.

It was the original intention have the school building situated on Rushmore avenue near Fourth street, but the site on Rock avenue seems to meet with general approval. It now looks as though the perplexing school question will be solved by the erection of two or three smaller schools throughout the township, thus changing the present method of compelling the children to go long distances to the school at New Market. At the same time it is quite likely that a suitable building will be erected at New Market, to cost about $20,000. A third school building will be erected near Dewey Park to cost about $5,000.

BUSINESS MEN ACTIVE.

Have Good Schedule Ahead of Them—Team of Older Men Organized to Play Montclair.

The Business Men, of the Y. M. C. A., played a match with the basketball team known as the Triangles, of Rahway, last night at the local gymnasium. A strong schedule still awaits the Business Men. They will play Leal's School a rubber on next Monday, and games are arranged with the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. Business Men, the Passaic aggregation and the local first team.

A second team, composed of the older men in the Business Men's class, has been organized and will play its first match at Montclair on Thursday evening. A pleasant social is anticipated after the game. The team will be composed of the following: Rushmore, Garragus, Davis, VanDyke and Shaw.

In the City Court.

The following cases were disposed of in the city court yesterday morning: David McLarnon, drunkenness, sixty days straight; Charles Long, drunkenness, sentence suspended; James Gardner, recently suspected of incendiarism, drunkenness, sentenced to thirty days while Judge Vail can be apprised of his case; Dominicus V. Huff, charged by Mrs. Mary Kitchell with disorderly conduct, complaint dismissed.

To Organize Men's Club.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, there will be a meeting of the Men's Association of the Crescent Avenue church, for the purpose of forming a regular organization. After the completion of the organization an address will be given by Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, on "The Unity of the World." All the men of the congregation are invited to be present.

Heptasophs' Banquet.

—The Plainfield Dancing Academy, 330 West Front street, will hold a grand ball on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1905.

Notable Women

An Ideal Friendship Between Two Literary Ladies

Mrs. Kate Upson Clark, one of the most popular all round writers of her time, has not known a day's illness in a quarter of a century. She is fond of outdoor life, also of her own sex, who love her as she loves them. Mrs. Clark and the late Mrs. Margaret Welsh, widow of Philip Welsh, the humorist, were intimate friends for years. It was one of those occasional ideal friendships between women which make this a brighter, happier world. Both ladies had families to care for, both were busy writers, yet year after year after the day's work was done for each the two ladies trysted on a certain street and enjoyed a long, happy walk together "in the edge of the light," as Mrs. Clark says. When Margaret Welsh went out of this life Kate Upson Clark was disconsolate.

Mrs. Alec Tweedie.

This sprightly lady and gifted British author, who lately came to our country, is always welcome in the United States. Wherever she goes she is one of the livest and most interesting of women. She is an indefatigable traveler in out of the way spots of earth. Her first book was called "A Girl's Ride In Iceland!" Another is "A Winter Jaunt to Norway." Mrs. Tweedie at home is greatly interested in dairying and agriculture as vocations for her own sex. She has lately returned from a second trip to Mexico.

A Lady Baseball Scorer.

Something really new is the appointment of a woman as official scorer for a baseball team. The lady who occupies this unique post is Mrs. Jessie Reynolds of Columbia, S. C. The baseball team of which the manager, Mr. Earle, appointed her scorer is the pride of Columbia. Not the least pleasing feature of the matter is that a good salary attaches to the office. Mrs. Reynolds' husband is one of the leading players of the team. The Daily Columbia Record says of the lady, "Mrs. Reynolds knows the game from start to finish and can tell the difference between a long chance and a flagrant miss as well as the captain of the opposing team."

Pundita Ramabai.

That new woman of India, Pundita Ramabai, deplores the spread of the so called Hindoo philosophy among the women of America. She says if they really knew what it means they would spurn it as degrading and demoralizing. Ramabai certainly knows, for she studied it till she became a pundita. She next came to America and in Philadelphia acquired the learning freeborn American women are permitted to get. Then Miss Ramabai hastened back to her own land to help the hapless female sex there. To enable her better to do this she studied medicine in the United States. Her labors are especially among the despised, hopelessly outcast widows of India.

At Poona, India, the pundita maintains a school for girls, and in this school are 300 child widows. In India, the pundita tells us, there are about 70,000 child widows, some of them no more than four years old. A widow of any age in India is accursed, a social outcast so long as she lives. It is considered, indeed, that she has no business to be living still on earth when her husband may be needing her to cook for him and wait on him in heaven. The only decent, respectable thing for her to do under the circumstances is to die, so she can go and be the slave of her lord and master in heaven.

An Athletic Old Lady.

A notable woman is Mrs. Louise A Wright of Indianapolis, eighty years old last birthday, though if she herself did not tell it nobody would know. She acts and looks like a very spry and healthy woman of sixty. She owes her health and high spirits largely to outdoor life and exercise. Last autumn she spent three months in Kankakee, the noted hunting and fishing region. Mrs. Wright was an indefatigable angler in the Kankakee river and caught more fish than anybody else who tried the stream.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

New Organdies—A Smart Corset Cover—A Spring Golf Suit.

Lovely organdies are to be seen in the shops. Some of the patterns are exquisitely rose strewn with prim little buds and great nodding heads vying in beauty with each other.

Corset covers made entirely of rows of insertion alternating with bands of swiss embroidery are very new in the lingerie world. The covers are gathered into a beading of lace at the waist, through which wash ribbon is run and tied up on the shoulders with three inch wide ribbon bows.

A new golf suit for the spring is in tweed of a green and white mixture. The skirt is ankle length, made in a graceful circular cut. The jaunty short jacket is of plain green cloth, banded and blousing slightly over the waist in front. The revers of the coat are faced with the checked material of which the skirt is made. A white flannel shirt waist, turnover linen collar and silk tie complete the costume.

The picture shows a fancy ball dress representing a clover. The pointed bodice and skirt are composed of dull greenish white silk. The skirt has a ruche of silk at the bottom, and above it are applied cut out designs in silk of four leaf clovers. The chemisette is of white chiffon, the pointed Louis bodice being strapped with green ribbon and finished at the top with a clover design on one side and a cocarde of ribbon on the other. Panniers of figured green and white silk are fitted about the waist.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY LINGERIE.

Cashmere and Henrietta For Dancing School Frocks.

The present lingerie craze is for garments made of the softest, sheerest batiste, linen, French lawn and cambric. Beautiful hand stitchery is the chief trimming, though occasionally an entre deux of very fine lace is used.

Wash petticoats are very elaborate affairs just now and are serious rivals of the dainty silk skirts. There is a fancy for very fine white cambric skirts trimmed with endless frills of valenciennes lace. Buttonhole stitched ruffles ornamented further up the flounce with sprays of hand wrought dots and flowers are exquisitely dainty as a skirt trimming.

Corset covers made entirely of broderie anglaise are very new and pretty. These covers have a ruffle of some fine lace about the neck and armholes.

Many of the silk petticoats have deep yokes of stockinet. Skirts of this kind are particularly to be recommended to women with large hips.

Cashmeres and henriettas are materials being revived for young girls' dresses, especially in red and white.

The dresses are entirely sun ray plaited, waist, skirt and sleeves. There is no other trimming except a yoke of Irish crochet lace and a dainty silk sash.

Attractive little princess frocks for dancing school are made of soft silk shirred on cords about a yoke of lace and again shirred into a deep girdle at the waist.

The new bodice illustrated is of almond green surah silk. It is made in the modish shirred-across-the-figure fashion and fastens with old silver buttons. A shawl collar of silk is edged with lace. The puffed sleeves have a fall of lace under turned back cuffs. The chemisette is of lace inserted mull.

INDOOR FASHIONS.

Effective Creations Evolved From Beautiful Fabrics.

Until the arrival of Lent the social whirl makes novel gowns and handsome wraps as necessary as bread and butter. Right in the heart of winter street gowns have less importance than something extra fine and dainty for indoor wear. Theaters, concerts and grand opera all demand fine dressing, and so we naturally yield. Yet it is a pity that some one has not invented a new fabric, for now we are limited to silk, satin, velvet, lace and chiffon for evening attire, with here and there a crepe de chine robe or one made of the elegant and rich light colored broadcloth. But no one seems to wish to purchase immortality by producing a new material. Some one might grasp a few moonbeams and hang them on a spider web and leave the fabric thus made out all night to catch the dewdrops and possibly fix the shadow of the flowering vines over all. Would not that be worth living for? It would seem that scarcely anything else is left us.

We have as the great standbys, for this season anyhow, silks and velvets, with chiffon as the dessert, for, no matter what the combination of a gown, it is not complete this year unless there is chiffon somewhere. It is seen in ruches, in shirrings, and, in fact, in so many different fancies that I do not know the names of half of them. The result is that they lighten and ornament everything upon which they are placed. Skirts of dresses in the prettiest of the new house and reception gowns are divided, like the house we read of, against themselves by having thick rows of ruching of chiffon simulating double skirts and panels until one is in doubt as to the original plan.

For instance, one beautiful gown made on the general lines of a Watteau, though still having several points entirely different, had the gown proper made of a superb quality of pompadour silk in the delicate pink and blue of that old style, and the skirt was gathered very full over the hips and opened in front over a panel of cream colored taffeta. All along the edges of the pompadour portion there were ruches of chiffon also arranged to simulate two overskirts. The corsage to accompany this skirt should be snug to the figure and cut half low, with as much lace and chiffon as can possibly be made to hang on.

For many seasons it has been quite the proper style to have chiffon in quantities added to evening capes and other wraps. This has usually been applied in narrow ruffles superposed on the underside of the wrap, so that not until the corners are thrown open does all this elaborate trimming show, but the proud wearer takes great comfort in the knowledge that it is there.

For all ceremonious evening wear the long circular or the shorter military cape is preferred, and few new creations are offered with anything like sleeves. Some of the capes reach the hem of the dress, while others are but to the knees. Some are shirred to fit the shoulders and others are cut, as in the old days. The long cape in the illustration is of cream white broadcloth and is lined with pale blue chiffon over thin taffeta.

Short capes of all kinds of materials are shown and will soon take the place of the coats now worn. The capes are of all grades and materials, so that suits can be matched easily. Capes are very convenient and dressy, but they are not as warm as one might think.

Many ladies are at the present wearing their lives out picking over the new summer goods and wash stuffs that they may have them made up in Lent. These goods are rather held back by the dealers until the "regular customers" shall have made their choice, but one can say that among the patterns one sees exactly such designs as we find occasionally in some patchwork quilt made by our grandmothers. So it would appear that the dear old designs have been revived for us.

In wools for everyday wear the mohairs will easily take the precedence of everything. There is such a wide and long list of different designs, some striped, some with tiny woven figures, others in checks, that the number of designs seems limitless. They are produced in all colors and black, which, however, is the favorite. These have all been cravenetted, so they are waterproof. Eoliennes and many other transparent wools are offered and voiles of every description.

Feminine Snapshots

Are Women's Clubs on the Down Grade?

Now comes Mrs. Corinne S. Brown of Chicago and makes charge that the woman's club is losing ground; that it is taken up with tea and wafers and nice clothes to the exclusion of things useful and vital to human progress. This has been true, certainly, almost up to the last year, but now the woman's club is bursting the swaddling bands of infantile uselessness and coming into vigor of life as a world factor. I have been recently looking over the doings of club women in America and London for the past year, and really I never have seen so much hope for true progress among them as there is now. Child labor, city beautifying and sanitation, equal suffrage for their sex and the preservation of American forests and wild flowers are some of the causes in which our women's clubs the past year have been doing admirable work. In Philadelphia women have erected a club home large enough to house five feminine associations. Among these one is the very practical depository and exchange for women's work. Another is a kindergarten association that maintains a training school for its teachers; yet another is the Civic club, which is really educating itself in municipal matters. Now, isn't that practical usefulness?

With amazing rapidity women are learning the grand, rugged lesson of self dependence.

Recently some charitable women in New York heard of a family that was in want. They investigated and found in the so called home of the family a sickly woman who was the mother of nine children. The youngest of these was a girl baby six weeks old. During the six weeks of her life that baby had lived in a soap box filled with straw, only a piece of muslin keeping her tender skin from its sharp blades. How is that for nineteen centuries of civilization?

Let us love all mankind and keep our advice to ourselves till it is asked for. Eleanor Kirk remarks in her Idea, "If you want to do good, love every living creature, walk straight to the kingdom of heaven and mind your own business." But some women are so engaged in looking after other people's business that they never have time to attend to their own business.

A woman makes a very poor imitation man, especially when girl college students go in for hazing their sister students.

It really is beginning to dawn on a benighted world at last that the population of a country may be increased quite as well by a diminished death rate as by an increased birth rate.

The old maid and mother-in-law jokes have been worked overtime now many years. They have become at length so feeble that it is time to give them a good long rest.

"Women can't cook," cries Dr. Robert Ellis Thompson. Good! Women are quite ready to quit cooking and let the men have a try at it any day. Dr. Robert Ellis Thompson himself might, for instance, for the sake of setting a good example to his sex, enter the kitchen and begin frying, broiling, stewing and baking.

Did you ever observe a young woman in a street car chewing gum? Isn't she a sight?

Hon. Frank W. Higgins, the new governor of New York, is in favor of woman suffrage as an act of justice to the feminine sex.

It just makes me tired, that affectation of domesticity many so called professional women put on. If they love cooking and housekeeping so much better than a money getting life outside the home, why don't they do cooking and housekeeping? The field of household labor is a very wide one, the work well paid. Lately one of these women afflicted with the affectation of domesticity boasted to another lady thus: "I am the best cook in Penville." Thereupon the woman addressed looked the speaker over from head to foot and said to herself, "And I'd hate to eat your cooking." Of course every true woman performs perfectly such domestic duties as come her way, but to boast of it is like boasting of keeping one's skin clean.

The correct name for the trailing street skirt is tanglefoot.

The saddest part of being an inmate of a sultan's harem must be that not one among the whole assortment of wives can go to Paris and choose her own gowns. Lately the finance minister of the sultan of Morocco journeyed to Paris to execute the important state commission of buying clothes for his master's wives. In a great Paris shop the Moroccan finance minister sat hour after hour, and the handsome young saleswomen paraded before him, showing off robes and other garments. At length the minister bought seventy bath robes and fifty-six dressing gowns. Think of not being able to buy even one's own kimonos!

FRILLS AND FANCIES.

Petticoat Effects the Vogue For Summer Gowns.

The Louis petticoat effect gains in favor not only on evening frocks, but for street gowns.

Skirts are to be plainer. Indeed, some of the smartest models are entirely without decoration. Even the filmy summer dress skirts will be simpler in their outline, but the sheer materials, unless made with very full skirts, require all sorts of frills and flounces. Ribbon is to be used on these gowns lavishly, and little roses made of ribbon are a dainty trimming fashion is smiling upon for the summer gown.

The cotton goods are more mercerized than ever, and many of them are difficult to distinguish from silk.

There are cotton etamines that look exactly like wool, and in small checks a dress of this woolen material is most attractive.

Tartan plaids in cotton weaves have the silky finish and are particularly pretty for children's dresses. There are cottons difficult to distinguish from grenadine, with a dainty flowered design over their surface.

The swathed silk waist pictured is one of the latest Parisian models. The shawl collar is daintily trimmed with a fall of lace. The chemisette is of finely tucked mull embroidered down the front in a charming little design of flowers. The waist fastens at one side with handsome enameled buttons and smart little straps of the material. The elbow sleeves have a high cuff and a frill of lace.

WHAT WILL BE WORN.

Advance Millinery Notions—Timely Suggestions For Spring.

Braid will play a conspicuous part on the tailor made gowns of the early spring. The most popular braids will be the flat silk ones with a gold or silver thread running through them. A braid of the same color as the dress material is the smartest kind to use.

Very stunning are the plain black cloth skirts worn with taffeta or corded silk cutaway Louis XVI. coats. They often show a pretty brocade or light colored waistcoat softened with a lace cravat. Worn with a directoire or turban hat a costume of this kind is quite effective.

As usual at this time of the year, the toque made of violets, roses or orchids is in evidence, and a dainty little demiseason headgear it is too.

Some of the advanced straw models are made of a fabric called tagel. This is mixed with peau de soie and taffeta, forming a sort of plait.

There is a rumor in the millinery world that a good many flowers will be mixed with feathers. This combination sounds rather fussy, but when seen the mingling is quite chic.

WAIST OF MESSALINE.

There is still in the new millinery an inclination for the very high bandeau, tilting the hat well over the face or very much to one side.

Original and attractive is the bodice seen in the illustration. It is developed in a lovely shade of orchid messaline silk. The fullness comes from a group of plaits on each side of the fronts, and a similar arrangement is at the waist line. Fitted pieces of cloth a tone darker than the silk is disposed about the yoke of crochet lace. The strap ends of the cloth trimming are overlaid with braid, fastened with amethyst buttons. The sleeves are strapped and button trimmed.

MILLINERY ITEMS.

Spring Hats This Year Are More Attractive Than Ever.

The new spring hats are the prettiest seen for many a long day. Quaint picture affairs and poke bonnets of ye olden times are to be worn. There is one model christened the "Mistress Kitty Bellairs," an exact reproduction of the fascinating hat trimmed with nodding feathers worn by that bewitching little flirt in the play which bears her name.

A dainty poke is made of leghorn faced with a soft pink fluff of chiffon and trimmed with pink roses and long pink streamers that tie in a coquettish fashion at the left of the chin.

Lace hats of Irish crochet dyed to match the costume are to be popular. The trimming blends perfectly with the body color of the hat. The trimming is often a mass of blossoms, shading from lightest to the darkest tones in the hat.

A lovely opera bag is made with a quarter of a yard of moire silk cut into two square or oblong pieces. One piece is embroidered in a graceful design of flowers, or the monogram is worked in silk surrounded with an empire wreath. The wreath is very attractive embroidered in gold or silver bullion or in tiny beads of many colors.

A very useful and at the same time elegant opera bag is made of cloth of gold, with a monogram done in heavy gold bullion. The bag is lined with old gold satin and mounted in a metal frame of yellow gold.

The demiseason hat in the cut is of black malines draped in soft folds about the sharply upturned brim. Small white ostrich feathers surround the crown.

TOILET ACCESSORIES.

Ribbon Is a Prominent Dress Trimming—New Collar and Cuffs.

A new and dainty neck trimming is made of val lace. An inch wide piece of the lace is gathered on one edge of a half inch band of swiss. On the other edge of the band is a ruffle of half inch lace. Overlaying the swiss band is a beading through which is run black velvet ribbon.

Quite the latest cult in collar and cuff sets are those of lace embroidered in pompadour roses of ribbon. The collar is rather deep and develops into a tablike piece in front. The cuffs are built on the same lines.

Ribbon is playing a conspicuous part in the present modes. A suede belt, for instance, is made exceedingly swagger by forming the buckle of ribbon roses.

Some rather eccentric veils are shown edged with fur. Unless the fur is of the same shade as the "beautifier" itself the effect is not becoming.

A quantity of hand stitchery is employed on the newest frocks. So exquisitely combined is this work with lace and chiffon that it is hard to believe any but fairy fingers could produce it.

The spring gown seen in the cut is of mode voile. This material lends itself in the most graceful fashion to the gathered skirts and full bodices now worn. The skirt is gathered about a rounded yoke piped at the joining edge with brown velvet. At the knee are a bouillonne and ruffle of voile. The bodice hangs full from an indented yoke which opens in front surplice fashion. A fold of velvet brings out the exquisite little vest and collar of linen embroidery.

Among the Women

Female Extremists—The Shade Shows the Character—The Art of Contrast

Why does lovely woman rush to extremes? If she goes in for society, she has no time for anything else. If she loves animals, behold, she provides herself with a menagerie. If she goes in for woman's rights, she is more mannish than the men themselves. If she sighs for a career, people have to hear about nothing except that career morning, noon and night.

The other evening at a dinner a very charming woman came in wearing a black gown covered with what appeared to be royal decorations. Closer observation showed that they were whist trophies. There were ten of them, testifying to the lady's ability as a player and her devotion to the game.

"Yes, indeed," she gurgled on being questioned. "I play it in the morning before breakfast, all the forenoon before lunch and most of the afternoon till it's time to dress for dinner, and then I try to find congenial people for a nice evening game. I have a little arrangement of silk in which I keep my cards, and on the train there are sure to be enough people who play, so that I can make up a set. I recently had a most delightful journey and made several new friends in this manner, for we played nearly all the way from New York to Chicago." This indefatigable whist lover, by the way, is sixty-five years old!

A maiden lady from out of town who sat opposite felt somewhat left out of the conversation, and so she started out to tell what a fiend she was at fox hunting. "When you speak of playing all day, my dear," she remarked, with a little air of superiority, "I can't help remembering how we used to get up at 3 in the morning to go hunting and keep it up until long after dark. We would never think of going visiting without taking along, each of us, a pair of horses and a pair of dogs. In fact, we lived in our riding habits."

Colors and Character.

Have you ever noticed that the colors a woman wears are a pretty fair index to her disposition?

The lady of a colorless temperament delights in grays, dull blues and muddy shades of tan—in a word, those tones guaranteed to "go with everything" like the wearer. The imperious woman of warm imagination and vivid impulses dotes on crimson and reddish tones of every sort. The subtle woman mixes two or three odd shades in her costume in a way that you find bewitching. The very religiously inclined woman wears black and wears it soulfully.

Innocence has come to be associated with white and pale blue, and worldliness with pink and yellow, therefore the feminine actress who wishes to create either the one or the other impression robes herself accordingly.

There's more than dye that comes out of the dye pot!

Effective Feminine Diplomacy.

Nature often places a lovely flower in ugly surroundings in order to set off its beauty, and woman has learned her little lesson from nature. Observe the beauty making friend of the ugliest girl she knows and the clever woman accentuating intellect by comparison with her stupid sisters.

Here's a case in point. In a prominent woman's club recently the secretary, a very brilliant woman, was forced to resign on account of outside duties that could not be neglected. She was asked by the president to name some one who would be an able successor to her. Without a moment's hesitation she spoke warmly in favor of one of the least capable members of the club, a woman unable to write a single clever or even suitable line.

Why did she do it?

Watch the result. Every day she hears how her brilliancy is missed and that the club management will go to pieces if she does not return.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

THROUGH STATUARY HALL.

It Contains Effigies of Many of the Nation's Great Men—Grosvenor Fighting Tariff Revision—Other Capital Notes.

WASHINGTON.—Statuary hall in the capitol is growing more and more into a national Valhalla, where the effigies of great men of various states appear marble and bronze. The late Senator John J. Ingalls is the last to be represented in this group of illustrious men, a fine Italian marble statue of the wit, satirist and statesman having been dedicated a short time ago. Each state is entitled to place for two of its noted sons and when the complement is filled the old house of representatives, now known as Statuary hall, will resemble an art gallery.

It is now Illinois' turn to present another statue and this she will do by honoring the memory and history of one of her most noted daughters, Miss Frances E. Willard, the great temperance advocate. This will be the first statue of a woman to appear in the capitol, but Illinois is proud to honor the great character and work of Miss Willard, which have made the state famous. One of the finest statues in this collection is that of a Jesuit priest, Pere Marquette, whose memory the state of Wisconsin has honored with a beautiful Parian marble presentment of this noted discoverer, missionary, priest and historian. At first there was some narrow-minded opposition to the admission of a statue of a Catholic priest, but as Wisconsin had selected Father Marquette as her greatest representative the statue could not be excluded from the hall.

So far there are but 19 states represented in Statuary hall, and some of them by only one noted son. Some of the newer states are waiting to see what the future and their history may reveal before selecting the man or men who might best represent them in this group. There is an unwritten rule that the noted sons who are given a place in Statuary hall must be selected from those who are dead and gone. Some of the newer states may have to wait a good many years before they will have a list of dead statesmen to select from.

Long List of Statues.

SUPERINTENDENT of the Capitol Elliott Woods has prepared a list of the statues now in place. There is a plaster statue of George Washington that came from Virginia, but is not credited to that state. The other statues are: Roger Sherman and Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut; James Shields, of Illinois; O. P. Morton, Indiana; John J. Ingalls, Kansas; John Winthrop and Samuel Adams, Massachusetts; John Hanson and Charles Carroll, Maryland; William King, Maine; Lewis Cass, Michigan; Thomas H. Benton and F. P. Blair, Missouri; John Starke and Daniel Webster, New Hampshire; Richard Stockton and Phil Kearney, New Jersey; R. D. Livingston and George Clinton, New York; James A. Garfield and William Allen, Ohio; Robert Fulton and Peter J. Muhlenberg, Pennsylvania; Daniel Greene and Roger Williams, Rhode Island; Samuel Houston and Stephen Austin, Texas; J. Collamer and Ethan Allen, Vermont; John E. Kenna and F. H. Pierpont, West Virginia; Pere Marquette, Wisconsin.

Statuary hall is a great show place for visitors at the capitol and the guides have the history of the statues at their tongues' end. In addition to the marble statues this hall is celebrated as a whispering gallery and for oddities in acoustics. Persons on the opposite side of the big room, when standing on particular spots, can converse with each other in whispers, although the hall may be crowded. In another spot when a person is spoken to by another at a distance the sound of the speaker's voice seems to be over his head and in tremendous volume. The ceiling of this old hall was reconstructed two or three years ago and some of the peculiar echoes were destroyed, but enough remain to help the capitol guides earn their fees by amusing the visitors.

Historic Little Room.

JUST off from Statuary hall is the office of the clerk of the house, a small room that was used by the speaker of the house when that body met in this old hall. It was there that ex-President John Adams, at the time a member of the house, breathed his last, having been stricken while on the floor. In this room there is now a genial gentleman who has been clerk of the last, having been stricken while on the floor. In this room there is now a genial gentleman who has been clerk of the house for ten years, or ever since the republicans regained control in 1895. He is Maj. Alexander McDowell of Pennsylvania, and he is likely to hold that office as long as the republicans remain in power in the house if he wants to. He is extremely popular, as much on account of his ability as a raconteur as anything else, as he has a fund of amusing and timely stories always on tap.

Maj. McDowell is a veteran of the civil war, but is never heard to boast of his exploits during that trouble. He is much given to joking his old comrades about war experiences and is inclined to "queer" some of the tales they are prone to tell about the part they played in the army. He relates an incident that occurred not long ago at a Grand Army reunion, where one of the veterans held his hearers spellbound as he told of a miraculous experience he had had with a confederate bullet in one of the biggest battles of the civil war. This old soldier related how in the din of battle he distinctly heard whispered in his ear the warning, "I'll hit you, I'll hit you!" A moment after he was struck in the arm by a ball.

Maj. McDowell followed this soldier and declared that he, too, had had a similar experience. At the battle of Fredericksburg he, too, had distinctly heard that whispered warning, "I'll hit you, I'll hit you, I'll hit you!" "When I heard that whisper," declared the major, "I said to myself: 'I'll be derned if you do' and got behind a tree."

Grosvenor in Fighting Mood.

GENERAL Grosvenor, of Ohio, usually termed the "Santa Claus" of the house, on account of his venerable white beard, is a busy man these days in fighting tariff revision ideas. The general is a rock-ribbed protectionist and has little patience with any proposition to amend the present tariff laws. He says he wants a bill of particulars brought in to show wherein the present law works any injustice to the country. The other day he called at the white house and had a talk with President Roosevelt on the subject. Much as these two men differ in their tariff views, they are very warm friends and all their conferences are characterized by good nature.

The president asked Gen. Grosvenor if he had studied the tariff schedules and found any on which the duties could be lowered. The general said that he had found just one. In looking over the law he found that there was a duty of one dollar a ton on basic slag. He said he did not know what basic slag was until he looked it up and found that it was used as a fertilizer. As it is the policy to admit all fertilizers, anything calculated to increase the productiveness of the farmer's land free of cost, he thought this one dollar a ton duty might be taken off basic slag.

Gen. Grosvenor's other nickname in the house is "Old Figgers." He earned this by predicting very closely the majority the republicans would have in the Fifty-fourth congress when they came back into power. He followed this up with very close predictions of the states which Mr. McKinley carried in 1896 and again in 1900.

A Favorite Haunt.

THERE is an humble little restaurant on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, near Thirteenth street, which is a favorite resort for many of the old-timers in the house and senate. Occasionally these old fellows will introduce a new member to some of the attractive features of this place, but ordinarily the uninitiated congressman will pass the house with a look of contempt, as it is about as unattractive as any restaurant or saloon in the city. It is a low, two-storied brick house, wedged in between pawnshops, with old-fashioned small-paned windows, not over clean, and a step down from the pavement to the doorway. Few strangers recognize in this little dirty brick house the celebrated "Hancock's," of Washington.

The interior of this saloon or restaurant is as unattractive as the exterior. A little short wooden bar at one side, with an oyster counter at the other, and an extremely low-ceilinged, sawdusted, dark room do not appeal to esthetic tastes. Behind that bar, however, are some of the oldest and best liquors in Washington and the colored barkeeper is the son of the original dispenser of drinks whose secret decoctions tickled the palates of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and other great dead and gone statesmen. The same brand of whiskies, rum, wines and brandies are there to-day and Hancock punch and Hancock cocktails are enjoyed by a few of the senators and representatives, just as they were 50 years ago by their predecessors in the capitol.

In the kitchen of this little restaurant reigns a genuine old-time Virginia "mammy," with a bandana handkerchief tied around her head. The kitchen is faultlessly clean and out of it come the most appetizing and delicious dinners of fried chicken, terrapin, quail and other delicacies that were ever eaten in Washington or anywhere else. It has become the fad lately to have little dinner parties at Hancock's for a "fried chicken dinner."

PEAT AS NEW FUEL.

CHICAGO CONCERN READY TO MANUFACTURE IT.

Say They Will Sell It for What It Is Worth and Not What It Costs—Has Advantage Over Coal.

Chicago.—To the average mind the word "peat" suggests the crude huts of St. Patrick's land of bog, or Holland peasants trudging along green meadows in heavy wooden shoes. But Yankee ingenuity has dragged it from those ancient settings into the strong light of modern industrial utility, to act as guide to the common people, to lead them, in fact, from the coal barons' Egypt into a promised land, which shall be smokeless, sootless, sulphurless and cinderless. Yankee ingenuity has found a way to manufacture excellent coal out of Yankee peat, the new process being made practicable by certain patented machinery invented by a Chicago man, J. Campbell Morrison by name.

But whether the common people will be benefited financially thereby to any material extent is an open question, since the new process is owned by a corporation, and corporations are heartless things. The process is already a demonstrated success to the point that this new manufactured peat coal is being made every day in Chicago, and when put to use as a steam riser or for domestic fuel it answers all the requirements of the most perfect and economical sort of fuel. It has as great heat value as anthracite; it will burn as long, and it is a conspicuously good fuel in that it is actually smokeless.

Like all good things with a commercial value, however, the science of making coal out of waste prairie lands and marsh ground is not to be pushed as a philanthropy to give the people a rebate on their winter's coal bills, or to clean our city skies, although both may follow as incidental advantages. This new application of science to the creation of wealth was no sooner perfected than it was grabbed up by business men, who were quick to see wealth in it for themselves. These have formed a corporation, to become in the peat fuel industry just what Divine Right Baer and his fellow monopolists are in the anthracite trade. In short, the peat fuel business is to become a monopoly, as big as any other in the fuel field, those who are behind the new business declare, with calm confidence, and instead of one set of barons providing an antidote for the other, the people may be oppressed by both.

The new method is an original one, and simple, as all great things are simple.

MONSTER PEAT PRESS.
A Twenty-Five Ton Machine Now Operating in Chicago.

The ground is dug by machinery, conveyed by bucket chain to the plant, where it is dried in centrifugal machines, that whirl at the rate of 750 revolutions a minute, and automatically feed wet peat and discharge dried peat at the rate of 500 pounds every three minutes. The dried stuff is then chopped and conducted through a rotary drier and fed into a very powerful press, where under great pressure and with heat applied to the mold, it is pressed from soft, dry powder into a hard, dense block, much like coal. The peat is pressed through an open tube, instead of against a fixed resistance mold, and the only base is the movable base of other briquettes being pushed out ahead, which offer resistance by friction against the side of the mold. Yet that resistance gives a pressure of 30 tons to the square inch, and makes a briquette much more dense than could be secured by pressure in a fixed die. The surface is then seared, or glazed, to make it weatherproof.

And because this new plan has been worked out effectually and actually produces excellent smokeless coal, and will be able to furnish it in immense quantities at one dollar or less per ton, the people are to be asked to pay five dollars per ton for it, in order that trade may develop another giant monopoly and stockholders may wax fat on dividends.

But these peat makers seem to have the best of the argument, as the peat lands are all but worthless without their method, and the people need the fuel, and, as they say, "the people will have to come to us and pay whatever our fuel is worth in heat units—not respecting the cost to us of producing the fuel."

That they have the whip hand, and are aware of the fact, was made clear to a reporter who called upon the president of the corporation, Henry S. Bunting. The Illinois Peat Fuel company is the name under which the corporation operates.

Mr. Bunting made no attempt to conceal the fact that he was not philanthropically inclined. His candor on this point, in fact, was interesting from a psychological viewpoint, as he explained that the stockholders of his company had made him president, not with the idea of guarding the interests of the dear public, but "to make dividends for them." He proposed to fill his position with an eye singly and solely to that end.

RIVALS PETER THE GREAT.

Prince Khilkoff Goes to England to Learn, But Winds Up as Engineer in United States.

Prince Khilkoff, whom the czar has made one of the secretaries of state, is the head of an ancient house and in youth was regarded by his family as a crank and a dangerous one to boot. He had to undertake the management of the family estates at about the time that the serfs were being emancipated and his magnanimity toward his underlings did not please the rest of his family, so young Khilkoff went on a pilgrimage. He thought it would be good to follow the example of Peter the Great and go to England to learn. He went to Birkenhead and worked there as an ordinary artisan. News of great railway developments in America called him here and he came to the United States and worked right through the fitting and engine-building shops and learned to drive an engine. He returned home to perform a similar office at the time that the railways of Russia were beginning to boom. Employed first as an engineer, he was promoted to the control of locomotive works, was made head of a line and, pushing his way step by step, proved himself the ideal man for the post of minister of ways of communication.

NORWAY HOT AS CHICAGO.

Man in Open Car Tells Real Facts About Coolness of Northern Country.

"It's funny how people talk without knowing what they are talking about," said the man on the end seat of a Chicago open car. "Half an hour ago I heard a man saying he'd like to be in Norway just now to get cool."

"Well, isn't it cool there?" was asked.

"I was there just a year ago this time and in one day there were 16 cases of sunstroke in the town where I was stopping and that same night three prisoners in the lockup were bitten to death by mosquitoes. Ice was 20 cents a pound, with little to be had, and I walked two miles to buy a glassful of lemonade and then found it scalding hot. "No, sir-e-e. Don't you do any longing for Norway. You just eat a hearty boiled dinner, take two glasses of hot scotch and then get an end seat on a car and let her go Gallagher and keep your palm fan a-waving. This hotness is all imagination. You won't make more than one round trip before you'll want to get home and tumble into a feather bed and draw a pair of woolen blankets up to your ears."

AZTECS AS MEDICAL MEN.

Ancient Mexican Race Believed to Have Been Far Advanced in Healing Art.

The ancient Aztec race of Mexico was far advanced in the practice of medicine. The native Mexicans practiced massage, splints were used in the dressing of fractured bones, inflamed gums were lanced with obsidian knives, aching teeth were extracted, salt was used as an antiseptic, and ground obsidian as a dusting powder. Stiffness of the muscles and joints was treated by the sweat bath, wounds were sutured with human hair, the actual cautery was applied to the edges of wounds, and venom was drawn out of poisoned wounds by sucking, while bleeding was practiced in obstinate headaches. The hygiene of the teeth was well looked after, very hot food being avoided, as was the use of cold water after eating hot food. Wooden toothpicks, clean water, and powdered charcoal served for dentrifice. In short, the practice of medicine among these early Mexicans compares very favorably with that in vogue at the time of the landing of the pilgrim fathers.

Massachusetts Woman Pronounces Crowninshield as Guinsel and Man Nearly Faints.

"I have always rather prided myself on the accuracy of my pronunciation," said a salesman in a Chicago book store to an Inter Ocean reporter, "but a woman from Massachusetts who came in yesterday floored me flat. She said she wanted a book the name of which she had forgotten, but it was about an American who visited some people at a French chateau. This didn't give me any definite idea of what book she wanted.

"'You must have it,' she said. 'It's by a very prominent Washington woman. Her husband is in the navy. Her name is Grunsel, Mrs. Grunsel.'

"I could not for the life of me recall any Washington lady named Grunsel, so I asked the lady to write the name down and give me time to look it up. What on earth do you think she wrote? Why, Crowninshield. She told me, too, that it's an old Marblehead name, and that nobody up there ever calls Crowninshield anything but Grunsel."

Raises Farming to Science.

At Faringdon, Berkshire, England, farming has been raised to a science. Mr. George Adams, of the royal prize farm, Wadley house, farms some 4,000 acres, of which about half is arable and half pasture. He employes from 200 to 250 laborers, milks 500 cows daily, keeps about 40 Shire brood mares, a score of breeding sows, and from 3,000 to 4,000 laying hens, grows about 1,000 acres of grain, besides attending to other multifarious items in the ordinary course of farm practice. About 1,000 acres of meadow hay are harvested annually. All the work, cutting, carrying and ricking, is done by piecework.

MAN PASSED AS A WOMAN

For Twenty Years Christian Becker Wore Female Garb and Was Employed as Domestic.

Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Special.

For 20 years Christian Becker, said to be known to President Roosevelt and other noted people in the United States as Emma Becker, a cook, masqueraded as a woman. He was employed as a female cook in many of New York's rich families, and although he came in contact with corps of female servants, his disguise was never detected. Had it not been that Becker was taken ill in a New Rochelle restaurant and the police were called in to assist him to the hospital, he probably would have gone through life undetected. As it is, he will spend the next four months in the Kings county penitentiary for masquerading.

Sergt. Kelly was alone in the New Rochelle police station at midnight when a telephone message came in from a Main street restaurant stating that a woman had been taken ill and was dying. Kelly sent in a call for the ambulance, and then hurried down to the restaurant. When he arrived Becker, in an unconscious state, was at a table, resting his head on his hands. Kelly removed the supposed woman's veil and hat, and in doing so he also took off a wig. With the veil and wig off, the sergeant detected that the masqueraded woman had a strong beard.

"Come with me," said Sergt. Kelly, who escorted the female impersonator to the station house.

When arraigned before Judge Van Auken, in the court of special sessions, Becker said that he lived in East Fiftieth street, New York. Upon being asked what he had to say for himself, he made the following explanation:

"When I was a young man I had a tenor voice, and used to sing in the choir. The boys used to poke fun at me on account of my voice, and made life almost unbearable. Wherever I went the boys used to call me girls' names. I couldn't stand it any longer, so I decided to dress as a woman, and pass as such. That was 20 years ago. Since then I have been known as Emma Becker. Eighteen years ago I worked for President Roosevelt's family. I was employed as a female cook, and worked for them for a year without being detected."

Becker said that he worked for a number of prominent New York families, and always successfully passed himself off as a woman. He pleaded with Judge Van Auken for permission to return to New York.

When arrested Becker wore a black cloth skirt and waist, a black straw hat fastened down with a black veil, and black gloves. He also had on a pair of women's shoes. According to the prisoner's story, he always wore the same garb.

Judge Parker's Emblem of Heraldry Is Very Pretty, But He Makes No Use of It.

Esopus (N. Y.) Special.

Three stags and a chevron, charged with a trefoil slipped, forms the coat-of-arms of the house of Parker, of which the democratic candidate for the presidency is a direct descendant. For many generations the Parkers have been residents of Massachusetts. The judge makes no use of the beautiful coat-of-arms. It is not to be found upon his carriage, saddle or stationery. The fact that he possessed one was brought out by Miss Gertrude Parker, of Brooklyn, who wrote a letter to the judge, hoping to trace a connection between her family and that of the nominee. She described her family coat-of-arms, and the description, Judge Parker replied tallied with his emblem of heraldry. Thus the young woman established family relationship.

UNION OF TELEGRAPHERS.

Although a Comparatively Young Organization It Already Has Membership of 5,000.

Chicago Special.

The Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, which has removed its headquarters to Chicago during the past month, was organized at Washington, D. C., in March, 1903. It was formed through an amalgamation of the International Union of Commercial Telegraphers and the Order of Commercial Telegraphers, two rival bodies, which had been in the field for about six months before the consolidation took place.

The International union was formed in Chicago, in June, 1902, and was the first organization of commercial telegraphers in the field. It made good progress for a short time, and then there arose internal dissension, which resulted in the organization of the other order in Pittsburg, in December, 1902.

Both unions claimed to be the regular organization, but the latter was recognized by the American Federation of Labor and granted a charter. The A. F. of L. recommended, however, that both bodies should unite, and a conference was held between the officers of each at Washington, and the present organization was formed, with about 5,000 members. It at once secured a charter from the A. F. of L. under the new name, and a campaign of organization was started. At the present time there are 91 local unions in as many cities affiliated, and the membership is close to 10,000. S. J. Small is president of the union, and was formerly an Associated Press operator at Seattle, Wash. Wesley Russell is secretary-treasurer, and is a Chicagoan. He was formerly employed by the Western Union Telegraph company.

VERMONT'S NEW GOVERNOR

He Was Born and Reared on a Farm and Is Still Engaged in Rural Pursuits.

Walden (Vt.) Special.

Charles J. Bell, who was elected governor of Vermont recently, is a typical American. He was born on a farm, was raised on the farm and will continue to devote much time to his farming, though chosen to the highest position in the gift of the people of his home state.

Mr. Bell's farm is located just out of Walden. It was there he was born, in 1845, and it is there he still lives. His early education was that of the usual farm boy, but it was interrupted by the breaking out of the civil war, in which he enlisted, serving both in the infantry and cavalry. After his return to the farm he began a system of self education, and interested himself very much in the success of the fellow-farmers of his state. This led him into politics, and he was elected to the legislature of his state in 1882, and in 1894 to the state senate.

He was one of the railroad commissioners of his state in 1895 and 1896, and a member of the state board of agriculture from 1897 up to the present time, and for a number of years was secretary of the board. At the organization of the state grange in 1872 he was elected treasurer, which position he held for 23 years, until he was elected master, which office he has held for ten years, during which time, mainly through his personal efforts, the order has twice doubled.

Mr. Bell's farm is on the hills of Caledonia county, and its products are maple sugar, potatoes and hay, as well as dairying and sheep husbandry.

Remarkable Lake in Lapland.

A lake has been discovered on Kildin Island, Lapland, which contains fresh water on the top and salt water on the bottom. The lake rises and falls with the tide and is evidently connected with the sea by an underground channel.

OATH OF ANCIENT DOCTORS

Queer Ritual Prescribed by Hippocrates for Prospective Physicians—Swears by All Gods.

Hippocrates, the father of medicine, 2,000 years ago imposed upon all his students a remarkable oath. It runs as follows:

I swear by Apollo, the physician, by Aesculapius and by Hygeia, by Panacea and by all the gods and goddesses, that I will fulfill religiously according to the best of my ability, power and judgment, the solemn vow I now make: I will honor as my father the master who taught me the art of medicine; his children I will consider as my brothers and teach them my profession without fee or reward. I will admit to my lectures and discourses my own sons, my master's sons and those pupils who have taken the medical oath, but no one else. I will prescribe such medicines as may be best suited to the cases of my patients, according to the best of my judgment, and no temptation shall ever induce me to administer poison. I will religiously maintain the purity of my character and the honor of my art. I will not perform the operation of lithotomy, but leave it to those to whose calling it belongs. Into whatever house I enter I will enter it with the sole view of relieving the sick and conduct myself with propriety toward women of the family. If during my attendance I hear anything that should not be revealed I will keep it a profound secret. If I observe this oath may I have success in this life and may I obtain esteem after it; if I break it may the contrary be my lot.

LIVED IN MIRROR PALACE.

Prodigal Russian Who Squandered a Vast Fortune Is Sent to Insane Asylum.

From Tomsk comes a curious history of a modern Narcissus. His name is Vladimir Yevdokimoff, the son of one of the richest merchants in Russia. After spending millions of rubles in all sorts of foolish ways he retired to Tomsk with a considerable fortune in his hands. He bought a wooded hill in the neighborhood and on the summit of it built a glass palace. One of the largest of the rooms is a mirror hall, in which walls, roof and floor are formed only of mirrors. In the middle of this hall Yevdokimoff had a throne erected which revolved on a pivot like a piano stool. Here he would sit for hours, turning backward and forward and admiring himself in the mirrors. Gorgeous robes were in a neighboring room, and in the course of the day he would change his garments a score of times. His admiration of himself in the mirrors was sometimes varied by elaborate banquets, to which only women were invited, and which are said to have resembled the Thracian mysteries. They were attired as Bacchantes and he presided, crowned with roses. In five years he squandered 7,000,000 rubles and is now in an asylum for the insane.

EXPECTS STRANGE VISION.

Distinguished War Artist Has Queer Dream and Constantly Expects Its Fulfillment.

Friends of a distinguished war artist now in Manchuria are said to be taking an almost uncanny interest in his return from the scene of war. It rises out of a strange story told by the artist himself. Years before the artist began his long record of campaigns he was out walking along a quiet square in his native city when, looking down, he suddenly saw a pool of blood on the pavement. Instantly, the story goes, from the shock of the sight, he went off into a sort of trance. He was on a bleak plain, running for his life from three pursuing horsemen. He saw their faces, knew that his efforts to escape were hopeless and then a swift blade descended and cut off his head. After that he came to himself and resumed his walk, but he had always a conviction that this vision foreboded the manner of his death. Once during a campaign in the Soudan, when the British square was broken, he was pursued. It was with relief that he recognized that the mounted pursuers were not his men, the men of the vision. He wonders still when he will meet them.

TENANT BESTS LANDLORD.

Objects to Children So Renter Makes Out Lease in Name of Child, Reversing Conditions.

Landlords in Paris are becoming day by day more absurd in the restrictions they put on their tenants. Some will not allow a dog to be kept; others will not permit any pet whatever, and some even will not allow children to be in the house. A clever individual has just managed, however, to overcome this last objection. He had seen an apartment he liked and well knowing that the landlord objected to children, he said nothing of the existence of his only child, a boy of two years of age, but simply had the lease made out in the infant's name. When he came with his family to take possession the proprietor flew into a passion and objected most strongly to the baby.

"Pardon me," replied the astute diplomatist, "but it is my child and not myself who has hired the apartment. You have made no objection to his asking his parents to stay with him. So here we are!"

Made a Quiet Exit.

An Italian from Europe arrived in Jackson, a mining town of Amador county, California, the other day. He proceeded to try to make anarchists of some of the miners. A quiet meeting was held and a committee of citizens waited upon the newcomer and invited him to take a trip to San Francisco. He concluded to do so.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Feb. 23, 1905.

Hearst is doing his best to make the air in the House as blue as possible. In adorning his papers, however, he prefers yellow.

We congratulate the taxpayers and property-owners of North Plainfield that the term of Mayor Newton B. Smalley is extended until Jan. 1 next.

Exchange declares that the United States Constitution is concerned in a New Jersey tax case. Haven't heard much from that since one Parker went the way of defeat, but understand that it is still in a healthy condition notwithstanding that T. Roosevelt is in the White House.

The city authorities have notified the property owners that unless they sprinkle ashes, sand or saw dust on the icy sidewalks as the ordinance provides they will be compelled to pay a fine. Now wouldn't it be a good idea for the city itself to do the same thing with the cross walks?

Plainfield's Common Council will make a protest to the Legislature against the passage of the Dairymple excise bill. On the face of it, the proposed statute is nothing less than an attempt at political jobbery and will be the means of opening the door to all sorts of corruption in municipal affairs. We do not mean to say that Plainfield is going to be greatly damaged if the bill becomes a law but we do say that at some future time there is a strong possibility that the present excellent saloon regulation in this city will be destroyed. The proposed law takes away from the chosen representatives of the people the right to handle the saloon question directly and places that important function in the hands of three men to be appointed by the mayor. One can readily see how interested the State liquor dealers' gang would be in any mayoralty election. Under its workings there would be every opportunity for graft and corruption. Newark, Elizabeth and other cities have received unenviable advertisement through excise boards and Plainfield doesn't need any of that sort of publicity. The Common Council of a city is the proper body to deal with such matters, so vitally important to good government, and we hope that Assemblyman Dairymple's obnoxious bill will be turned down by the Legislature.

Rev. Adolph Roeder, the president of the New Jersey State Civic Association, in a communication to a Newark paper, makes a strong argument against the act abolishing spring elections, which was rushed through the Legislature and quickly signed by the Governor. In taking ground against the merging of local and general elections, he recites in full the letter addressed to the Legislature by the Arlington Good Government club and Governor some three years ago when an attempt was first made to bring about this change. After destroying the argument advanced that voters neglected the spring election and seemed to require the stimulus of a general election to take any interest, this letter states: "Another reason given for abolishing spring elections was to save their cost. There is no economy in any system the operation of which tends to install ignorant or corrupt men in public office. Bad government is sure to be expensive, and no safeguard against it should be sacrificed." J. Albert Stowe, in a communication to the Civic Federation, says: "I look upon this measure as vicious. It was pushed after the city elections had been transferred to November. Three years ago it got so far as to be favorably reported in the House, with every indication that it would pass. Just then we laid a copy of the above letter on every desk in the Legislature, mailing it to each member. Soon after the bill was killed and the papers said the Good Government Club was the cause. Clubbing all elections together is a politician's trick to prevent independent personal action in municipal elections. Independent action is the very reserve force of the army of progress. Had we not been free to use it in our town we would have been far worse off. This is an attempt to bind the voters to the party, to make municipal elections only a side show to those in which party is stronger than in local matters. It is a long step backward. In New York the constitution carefully keeps State and city elections a year apart. That is wise. The bill making city elections a part of the fall elections was engineered by two prominent party managers, who scarcely disguised their purpose to smother independence. I am amazed that the intelligent people of this State remained dumb while this bill was toboganned through the Legislature."

AMUSEMENTS.

The success of "Mrs. Temple's Telegram" at the Madison Square Theatre is the most pronounced that has come to any play this season. The cosy little theatre, which under the able management of W. N. Lawrence has regained in a single week all of its old time popularity, is crowded to the doors at every performance, and the merry farce with which the house was re-opened will undoubtedly run for many months to come. Seats are now selling four weeks in advance.

Majestic Theatre. Says The Sun: "No doubt the show will outlast the present season." The Press: "'Buster Brown' is just the sort of entertainment in which Young America revels, and his elders delight." The World: "'Tige,' the dog, is a prize winner; no ordinary mongrel 'purp' is 'Buster Brown's' at the Majestic." The Times: "It is an entertainment that is certain to appeal to the children and 'Tige' is warranted to cure a chronic case of blues." The Herald: "'Buster' and 'Tige' are stage winners. Cartoon comedy founded on the Herald's comic creation, scores a hit. Audience greatly amused by pranks of boy and his canine friend at the Majestic—Good dog to the fore."

The Hudson Theatre. The Herald describes "Strongheart" is "a good and strong American play," and Mr. Edeson's portrayal as "a remarkable bit of acting." "'Strongheart' a popular success," says The Times, and the Morning Telegram waxes enthusiastic in the following terms: "Mr. Edeson's Indian is a masterpiece—'Strongheart' a triumph for actor, playwright and producer—a mid-winter success to talk of and gloat over—American to the core—William C. DeMille and Robert Edeson are to be congratulated—they are responsible for something new under the theatrical sun." The Press is equally lauditory and refers to "Strongheart" as "altogether the most interesting play this season has disclosed—Edeson as an Indian plays the part to the life." The Evening World concludes its warm commendation with the lines "just the thing to make you feel life is worth living."

One of the most remarkable realistic stage settings ever seen in a musical comedy is said to be the deck of a ship shown in "Fantana," the piece which Jefferson DeAngelis, Adele Ritchie and Katie Barry are presenting at the Lyric. Vessels have long been common in performances of this sort, those in "Pinafore" and "The Little Tycoon" being notable examples, but the one at present in question is sufficiently extraordinary to have occasioned much comment. It is an exact reproduction of the forward deck of F. G. McLemore's yacht, "Orient," having been copied from a photograph. Every spar and ratline is in proper place. The ship is put together at the beginning of every engagement and never taken apart again until the conclusion of the run. Instead, it is hauled up to the roof of the theatre when not in use and hangs suspended there throughout the other two acts of "Fantana."

NATIONAL MATCH.

Government Will Appropriate $4,000 for Big Shoot at Sea Girt.

When the federal army appropriation bill comes up for consideration it will carry an item of $4,000, to provide for the expenses incident to the National match. As soon as the bill becomes a law the orders will be issued designating Sea Girt as the place for the holding of the National match.

The splendid facilities, both for camping and shooting, at Sea Girt had much to do with the selection of that place for the holding of the match there. Then the exceptionally courteous treatment the War Department and army officers have received from the hands of the Jerseymen, from the Governor and Inspector-general of rifle practice down to some of the subordinate officers in the National Guard was also a factor in the choice of Sea Girt. The New York National Guard officials had to admit that at the present time Creedmoor range was not in condition to handle the big crowd that it is expected will be in attendance at the match. However, Creedmoor will do a lot of work in two years, and will be in the field for the match at that time. It was expected that as the match was shot at Fort Riley, Kan., last year, it will go to some western rifle range a year from the approaching season.

Settled With P. S. C.

Through his counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Michael Marsilio, of Somerset street, has effected a settlement with the Public Service Corporation in a suit brought by him. He was thrown from a trolley car at Front street and Jefferson avenue on December 27 and received a severe scalp wound.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Florence Pullan and William Maghe, both of this city. The wedding will take place Friday evening, March 3.

LITERARY.

Everybody's Magazine for March comes out with a blow at the Beef Trust—timed to a nicety with the recent decision of the Supreme Court. Charles Edward Russell, one of the best known and most forceful of our writers, shows, in his second installment of "The Greatest Trust in the World," the source of the Trust in the refrigerator-car: "The Bandit of Commerce," as he calls it. He exposes in logical, virile style the system of mileage and icing charges by which the Beef Trust has driven every competitor from the commercial field. Mr. Russell's story is clear as crystal. The reader sees as through plate glass the marvelous workings of the greedy monopoly.

Aside from its usual assortment of bright short stories, the March number of Pearson's Magazine includes eight special articles, four of which are particularly timely. The most important of these is "The Poisons We Eat in Foods," by Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief of the Department of Chemistry, U. S. Bureau of Agriculture. In this article Dr. Wiley tells the results of the experiments carried on up to date with his famous volunteer "poison squad," the Government employes who are submitting to a diet of adulterated foods to enable science to determine the deleterious effects on the human system. "Galveston, the City Reclaimed," tells of the wonderful engineering feat which in four brief years has enabled the flood-ridden city to rise from wreck and ruin to a model town of beauty and municipal reform. "McClusky, New York's ex-Chief of Detectives," tells of the stirring incidents in the career of George McClusky, the pupil and successor of the famous Inspector Byrnes. "How Root Won the Six-Day Bicycle Race" is the inside story of how the recent endurance race in Madison Square Garden was won by a ruse.

"MATTIE" TO SIGN.

Plainfielder Will Pitch for the Giants Again Next Season.

Christie Mathewson, of this city, the latest Giant to come into the fold, and the fans can breathe easier. In a letter to Secretary Knowles the big twirler says: "You need have no fear about me not being in the club this season. I will be on deck on March 4 to start south on the spring training trip, and I hope to be able to make even a better showing this season than I have any time since I have been with the New Yorks. I have spent an enjoyable winter and am in the best of health. My spirits are even better, as I feel proud of being one of the members of the champion Giants, and will do my share to again land the pennant." Mathewson's signed contract has not been received, but his acceptance of the club's terms means that "Matty" will sign soon.

FAVOR DUFFIELD BILL

'Plains People See Chance for Better Liquor Regulation.

EVIL CONDITION NOW

Hope Power to Grant License is Given Township Committee As Bill Provides.

Assemblyman Duffield's bill proposing that the governing body of a village be given the right to grant all liquor licenses, has the hearty commendation of Scotch Plains residents because it will place the power with the Township Committee, where it was years ago. At the present time the licenses are granted by the Union County courts and the wishes of the majority of the village people have been frequently ignored when applications were being considered.

They believe that the committee can better treat with local conditions and also regulate the hours of closing as well as compelling the dealers to observe Sunday as it is done in Plainfield.

At the present time, Scotch Plains township has seventeen retail liquor places and a total of one to every 243 of its population, which includes women and children. During the recent crusade made by the Law and Order League, Rev. G. M. Shott showed by statistics that this proposition is greater than that of some of the most thickly settled portions on New York's East Side.

Every Sunday there are scores of visitors at Scotch Plains, most of them from Plainfield, and the anti-saloon element argues that once Assemblyman Duffield's bill becomes a law the influx will drop off and there will be less disorder in the village streets.

HIGHER SALARIES FOR THE STATE JUDICIARY

DUFFIELD'S BILL PROVIDES INCREASE FOR CHANCELLOR AND S.C. JUSTICES.

Assembly bill No. 158, introduced in the House by Mr. Duffield, the Republican leader, providing for an increase in the pay of the chancellor and justices of the Supreme Court, will, it is claimed, if enacted into law, add at least $25,000 a year to the cost of the State courts.

The bill provides that the chancellor and the justices of the Supreme Court shall receive the same per diem allowance while sitting in the Court of Errors and Appeals as is now paid to the lay judges. Last year the lay judges succeeded in putting through the Legislature a bill increasing their per diem allowance. They now receive $20 a day for every day they sit in the court and for every day they are engaged in writing opinions, as well as for every day they sit with the court of pardons. Formerly they received $10 a day for this service, and it is but a few years since they were allowed any compensation for the time spent in the preparation of opinions.

At the present time the chief justice and chancellor each receives $10,000 a year, while the associate justices each receive $9,000 a year. They are among the highest paid judiciary in the country.

The State reports show that the lay judges, under the legislation secured, received last year from $1,200 to $2,800 each extra from the State.

This shows that if the bill becomes a law the chancellor and justices would receive about $2,500 each, in addition to their present salaries, for their services in the court of errors and appeals.

The Duffield bill is said to have been framed by a committee of judges and it is expected that the lawyers in the Legislature will all support it. Last year the lay judges looked after the legislation personally.

FUNERAL OF JOHN LONG.

Many Attend Ceremony Over Body of Dr. Long's Brother.

The Long homestead in Washington Valley was filled Friday afternoon, when relatives and friends gathered while funeral services were held over the body of John B. Long. The officiating clergyman was Rev. H. D. Updyke, a retired minister, who was assisted by Rev. Mr. Walton, of the Methodist church at Mt. Horeb. Both spoke of the character of John Long, and of the many friends whom he has made during his life at Washington Valley.

The pall bearers were John Roberts, Jeremiah Codington, William Henry, Robert Thompson, George VanNest and Henry Wahl, all neighbors of Mr. Long. The body was brought to this city and placed in a vault at Hillside prior to interment in that cemetery.

Night Gang to be Restored.

Owing to a rush of orders, the Pond Tool Works night gang is to be restored next month. The firm is now securing the necessary machine hands.

NO TRIP FOR COMPANY K

Refused Permission to Attend the Inauguration.

ALL PLANS WERE MADE

Soldier Boys Much Disappointed—Had Intended to Pay Their Own Expenses.

Officially notified by Major-General Wanser that under the circumstances they would not be permitted to attend the presidential inauguration at Washington next month, as a military organization, the members of Company K are today at a loss to understand the action of the State military board. They had planned to make the trip at their own expense and were not prepared for the refusal as it has never been done before. The notice, which came to Captain Martin last night, practically sets aside all their arrangements though they may go anyway as civilians. Five other companies in different parts of the State have been similarly affected and it is understood they have abandoned their plans.

Permission to leave the State under arms has always been granted the militia companies by the Governor and Company K applied regularly to Governor Stokes after his inauguration, for the privilege of going to Washington. Captain Martin also wrote to the Capitol City and secured quarters for his men and a place in line in the inaugural parade. The application was referred by the Governor to the military board, which emphatically refused to grant the request on the ground that it did not want any of the New Jersey militia in Washington any longer than just to parade. If the companies were allowed to go, the board said, it would mean that they would want to remain a day or two at least.

The ruling was a great disappointment to the local company as the boys had been working unusually hard to secure the needed money and had been looking forward with great expectancy to the trip. The only New Jersey organization to be in the parade will be the First Regiment, of Newark, the State having appropriated $18,000 to bear the expense. The men will leave Newark Friday night, parade Saturday and start back home as soon as they have had supper.

It is said the board would permit them to go on condition that they would be attached to a Newark regiment and would be under military discipline all the time they are at Washington.

DR. GRENFELL TELLS OF HIS GREAT WORK

ADDRESS ON LIFE AMONG DEEP SEA FISHERMEN.

Labrador, its climatic conditions, and the habits and characteristics of its people, were vividly portrayed by Dr. Winfred T. Grenfell, of the National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, in his lecture at the Crescent Avenue chapel, Thursday night.

Dr. Grenfell began by telling of his relationship with the work among the fishermen and how it commenced. It was through a casual talk with Moody, the great evangelist, that Dr. Grenfell first conceived the idea and the ambition to enter into some active service. Since that time, he has been connected with the work for over twelve years, and most of his career as a physician and as a worker has been spent in the land of snow and ice.

The good which Dr. Grenfell has accomplished in this practically unknown field can only be realized when one has heard his description of the conditions which exist in Labrador and Newfoundland. Though oftentimes greatly in need of a physician, the Eskimos and their neighbors are almost entirely without medical aid save from Dr. Grenfell. In his hospital ships, cruising over the ice clod rivers during the summer, when the ice is breaking, and behind his dog teams in the winter, when navigation is impossible, he covers his field of practice every year, traversing over two thousand miles to bring comfort, prolong life, heal the lame and cure the blind. On the ruggy and most storm bound cliffs in Newfoundland, Dr. Grenfell's hospitals are situated where together with healing the body, the soul is cleansed.

Taking for his motto Christ's words, "Follow men, and I will make you fishers of men," Dr. Grenfell has cruised in the vicinity of every coast in the world inhabited by English speaking fishermen, and has for the greatest part of his life worked among these people, and amid the greatest perils.

TOLD OF PEKING SIEGE

Preacher Declared That Prayer Saved the Missionaries.

TRYING EXPERIENCES

Rev. Dr. F. D. Gainewell Addressed Large Congregation at Grace M. E. Church Sunday.

In Grace M. E. church, Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. F. D. Gainewell, for many years a missionary in China, related to a large congregation his personal experiences during the memorable siege of Peking. With many other Christian workers he spent seventy-six days in the city and the glimpses he gave of the trying ordeal conveyed to his hearers what must be suffered in order that the Gospel be spread.

The power or prayer was the main thought running through Dr. Gainewell's address and he expressed the belief that the uprising was a fulfillment of the prophecy contained in the second Psalm. The deliverance of the imperilled missionaries and their friends he ascribed to the invocations that went up from every part of the world.

To bear out his belief he told how on June 20, when United States Minister Conger received orders from the Chinese ministers to leave the city within twenty-four hours, prayers were everywhere being made for his safety and also for the missionaries whose lives were in danger. The Boxer uprising, he said, was started with the intention of expelling the Christians from the empire and to prevent the spread of the gospel, the Chinese officials being responsible for its beginning.

In the course of his address, Dr. Gainewell graphically described some of the dangers to which the missionaries were exposed during the siege after they had taken refuge in the British Legation and before the relief column arrived. The sight of the allied troops, representing eight countries, marching through the streets, he declared to be one of the most memorable he had ever witnessed.

Dr. Gainewell addressed the Sunday-school in the afternoon and on both occasions a collection for foreign missions was taken.

—R. H. Barnard, of Binghamton, N. Y., the successful baker at Woodhull & Martin's store, has concluded to take up his residence in the borough and on April 1, Mr. Barnard and wife, will reside at No. 3 Verdon avenue.

John Kenney, of East Second street, attended the funeral of his wife's cousin, John Cahill, of Elizabeth, yesterday morning.

IN HIS 100TH YEAR DANIEL M'CARTHY DIES

HAD NEVER BEEN ILL A DAY IN HIS LIFE.

Daniel McCarthy, one of the oldest and best known citizens, died from old age Sunday morning at his home, 422 West Sixth street. Although he was ninety-nine years old he was active until within a day or two of his death. He always took an exceptional interest in city affairs, and was a familiar figure in town. He had never been ill a day in his life.

Mr. McCarthy was born in Ballymore, County Cork, Ireland, and he came to this country with his family fifty-three years ago and settled in this city, where he continued to live until his death. He has lived in retirement for thirty-five years.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Annie O'Keefe, with whom he lived; three grandsons, Edward McCarthy, James and John O'Keefe, and four granddaughters, Mrs. Daniel Conrain, of Jersey City; the Misses Elizabeth and Helen O'Keefe and Mamie McCarthy, of this city.

Bitten by Mad Dog.

Ellen Matthews, of Dunellen, while playing with a small dog Saturday afternoon, was bitten by the animal. The dog afterward showed signs of being mad, and has caused considerable anxiety. Dr. Matthews, of Bound Brook, the injured girl's father, dressed the wound.

PLANS FOR ROCKVIEW HEIGHTS

Handsome Boulavard 100 Feet Wide and Beautiful Lake 1,500 Feet Long.

A NEW BRIDGE

Dwellings Similar to Those in Washington Park Are to be Erected—Property to be Restricted.

Preparations for starting the improvements in the West End of the borough and city are being made by H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer. During the past few days his men have been engaged in surveying West End avenue in the borough and city for the proposed boulevard to be laid out through the extensive property purchased by Charles W. McCutchen, W. J. Buttfield and Mayor N. B. Smalley, and as soon as the weather is favorable the actual work will commence. It is first proposed to lay out the boulevard from the bridge over Green brook to Stine's bridge, above W. J. Buttfield's residence. This boulevard will be opened and graded to a width of about one hundred feet, which will include sidewalks, ten feet wide on either side.

In the centre of the avenue there will be space left for trees and a grass plot and the whole distance will be lighted at night by incandescent lamps. There will be a roadway on each side.

The meadowland, formerly owned by the Cadmus estate, is also being surveyed for the lake to be established there. This will be about 1,500 feet long and 300 feet wide. In making this improvement it is proposed to straighten the course of the brook.

A matter of interest just now is whether Plainfield will extend this boulevard from the brook to Front street, thereby making it uniform the entire distance. The opinion seems to be that it will be, but in order to carry out the improvement it will be necessary to make changes in the property between these points if the full one hundred feet is followed. One thing is certain and that is there will be a new bridge over Green brook and it is quite likely that the small stream nearby, formerly a mill race, will be filled up as it is practically of no use.

Following the work of opening up the boulevard the large strip of land on either side will be put in shape for building operations, it being planned to erect a number of handsome dwellings which will form a settlement similar to that in Washington Park. The new site will be known as Rockview Heights, and owing to its proximity to the Grant Avenue station of the New Jersey Central it will be a desirable location for those seeking a quiet place to live. The property will be restricted to houses of a certain cost, and it is quite likely that the new owners of this property will also build several costly dwellings.

DEATH OF JOHN CASHMAN, JR.

A Former Plainfield Young Man Passes Away at Providence, R. I.

John Cashman, Jr., the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cashman, of Richmond street, died last week at his home in Providence, R. I., having moved from here only a month ago. He was taken ill with diphtheria which proved fatal in three days. He was twenty-two years old and was a machinist by trade, having worked at different times in local shops. A widow and two children survive him, the former having been Miss Egleston, of West Third street.

The interment was made at Providence, the funeral being attended by a number of Plainfield relatives and friends.

Averts Impending Calamity.

The people of North Plainfield must be exceedingly grateful for the passage of the anti-spring election bill. It will extend the term of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, and will prevent the calamity that has independed ever since he announced his determination not to run for office again. Perhaps by next fall he can be persuaded to change his mind.—Newark News.

An "Inaugural" Dance.

Invitations are being issued by the Criterion Club for an "inauguration" dance to be given in the Casino, March 2. This will be the second dance in the series arranged by the popular organization.

Fell From Scaffold.

Andrew Wilson, of the borough, fell off a scaffold at the plant of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company in Watchung, a few days ago, fracturing several ribs, and he is detained at his home in Mountain avenue.

MISS JESSIE MILLWARD TO APPEAR AT CASINO

WILL GIVE HER DELIGHTFUL PLAYLET, "THE QUEEN'S MESSENGER."

Through the efforts of Manager Mase Edwards, of the Casino, Plainfield amusement seekers will soon have the opportunity of seeing Miss Jesse Millward, one of the foremost dramatic stars of the day, on a local stage. An engagement has been effected with her manager, Robert Grau, of New York, whereby she will appear at the Casino on Saturday afternoon and evening, February 25, in her beautiful playlet, "The Queen's Messenger," which has been delighting metropolitan theatre-goers for the past year. She will be supported by an admirable company and the production will be complete in every way. Miss Millward is an English actress and was formerly with Sir Henry Irving and also with Charles Frohman's Empire Theatre Company.

Manager Edwards means to bring a series of high class productions to the Casino this season, the enlarged stage and new fire-proof scenery making it possible. The Millward production will also be assisted by a big vaudeville bill of well known artists. The seat sale will open at Armstrong's pharmacy tomorrow morning.

TWO STILL ALARMS.

North Ave Fire Had Been Smoldering Several Hours.

The presence of smoke in the hallway of the Buckle building all Saturday night led to Chief Jennings and Captain Townley, of the fire department, being called to investigate at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. They traced it to a mat at the foot of the stairway, the underside of which had been smoldering for several hours. It was evidently caused by someone throwing a match on the floor and might have resulted in a serious blaze but for its discovery.

Headquarters was notified at 9 Sunday night that the burner on a gas jet in the Grand Union Company's store on West Front street, had fallen off and that a sheet of flame was reaching up toward the ceiling. Assistant Chief Jennings went to the place but found that a citizen had gotten into the place and shut off the gas from the cellar.

Mr. Randolph's Gift.

At the session of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church Sunday afternoon, Charles W. McCutchen referred to the gift to the Sunday-school library by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph of five large volumes of sacred poems. The author is William Cleaver Wilkinson, professor at Rochester University, who was a member of the First Baptist church when a boy and a personal friend of Mr. Randolph.

Traffic Blocked by Wreck.

All four tracks on the New Jersey Central between Netherwood and Fanwood, were blocked for a little while Saturday night by a rear-end collision between two coal trains. Four coal cars of the large type, were wrecked, the coal and debris being scattered over the tracks. The wrecker from Elizabethport was summoned to the scene and in a short time traffic was resumed. The damage was slight.

CLARKSON CAN'T GET BAIL

Accused Letter-Carrier Admits Rifling Five Letters.

POKER AND RUM

Causes of Young Man's Downfall—Inspectors Investigating—Held in Jersey City.

Unable to furnish bail to the amount of $2,000, fixed by Commissioner Rowe, Frank Clarkson, the mail carrier who admitted rifling letters, is being held at Jersey City pending a hearing this week. Government inspectors are still in the city going over his route in order to learn just how far his pilfering has extended.

In his statement to Inspector Cortelyou and Chief Kiely, Saturday, Clarkson said that he had opened altogether five letters and the most he had gotten out of anyone was $40. To whom this belonged or whether it was going or coming out of the city the authorities would not say.

The inspectors have also been enquiring into Clarkson's conduct and they find that he has lost heavily at poker and also that of late he had been drinking heavily, although it was always while off duty and his superiors knew nothing of it.

WILSON MEMORIAL CHAPEL ANNIVESARY

REV. DR. CHAMBLISS AND E. L. BONNY TAKE PROMINENT PART.

The Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung, was filled with its members and many friends yesterday afternoon, when a service marking the fifteenth anniversary of its dedication was held. The sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. J. H. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, this city, who spoke from the text, "The Woman at the Well."

A brief history of the chapel was read by E. L. Bonny, who told how the congregation outgrew the old schoolhouse and how the members were devoting all their energies to raising money for a new building when Colonel John F. Wilson, of the borough, donated the funds. The edifice was named in memory of Colonel Wilson's wife.

Much of the chapel's success is accredited by the members to Miss Nettie Beeching, who has had charge of the primary department for a number of years, and Miss Jennie Coddington, who has taught different classes of girls in the Sunday-school since its inception.

Other numbers on the programme were violin solos by George Spier and solos and duetts by Miss Etta Raybert and Mrs. S. H. Tugwell, of the First Presbyterian church choir.

Y. M. C. A. MEN'S LEAGUE.

To Play Under Assumed Names—New Schedule Has Been Made Out.

Though the make up of the teams is practically the same, the league of basketball teams in the Y. M. C. A. men's class has reorganized and will commence over again this week. The teams have been given names, though they will be captained by the same persons. Physical Director Henckel has made up a schedule of play and the teams will meet in the future two nights a week, two games being played each evening.

The names of the teams are Monarchs, captained by Paul Collier; Orioles, captained by William Sebring; Yankees, captained by Arthur Aalnolm; and Triangles, captained by Stryker Hoagland. This is the schedule of coming games: February 23, Monarchs vs. Orioles, Yankees vs. Triangles; February 2, Monarchs vs. Yankees, Orioles vs. Triangles; March 7, Yankees vs. Orioles, Triangles vs. Monarchs; March 14, Monarchs vs. Yankees, Orioles vs. Triangles; March 28, Yankees vs. Orioles, Triangles vs. Monarchs.

Comedy at Casino.

"My Friend Hogan," presented at the Casino Saturday night, proved to be an amusing farce comedy and was enjoyed afternoon and evening by small audiences. The play abounds in comical situations and the music is a feature. Miss Taylor, commonly known as "Baby Taylor," and a one time resident of this city, was the main attraction. The girl is only ten years of age, and considering that fact is remarkable. She was enthusiastically applauded in her three songs. "Every country loves its flag," "Coax me" and "He was a sailor."

Injured by Fall on Ice.

Miss Ethel Titsworth, of West Fifth street, a senior at Smith College, fell on the ice at Northampton, Mass., a few days ago, injuring her back. It was decided to bring her here, and she is now under treatment at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, of West Fifth street.

JUDGESHIP FOR REED?

Friends of Former Senator Want Him Named in Place of Mr. Schenck.

TO ASK GOVERNOR

Declare His Appointment Will Put An End to Factional Warfare in Somerset County.

Friends of former State Senator Charles Arthur Reed, of North Plainfield, have launched a boom for him for Somerset county's judgeship, the term of the present incumbent, Lewis H. Schenck, of Neshanic, expiring in April. It is said that the appointment of Mr. Reed will solve the political tangle in the Republican party of the county and that the Smalley-Thompson factional warfare will be at an end. The power of appointing Judge Schenck's successor is vested in Governor Stokes, who is a warm personal friend of the former president of the State Senate.

Senator Reed is in the South for his health and in his absence his law partner, former Judge William A. Coddington, was seen. "I don't believe Senator Reed knows anything about this boom and I don't think he would accept the office if it were tendered him," was the reply of the genial lawyer in reply to a query regarding his partner's probable attitude on the subject. Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Senator Reed's close political and personal friend, said: "The Senator would make a first rate judge. He is learned in the law and would administer justice impartially. He's the best lawyer in the county and should make the best judge." Others, including Democrats and Republicans, when seen by a representative of The Daily Press spoke in favor of the boom for the North Plainfielder.

Plans had been made by friends of the Senator in North Plainfield, Somerville and other parts of the county to personally present Senator Reed's name to Governor Stokes on Saturday, but the delegation decided to postpone the visit. It is said that they are waiting for their candidate's consent. The Daily Press wired the Senator for his views but at the time of going to press his answer had not been received.

The judgeship of Somerset county is worth but $1,800 and this fact may influence the North Plainfielder against allowing his name to be considered.

It is reported that Col. Joseph T. Frelinghuysen, chairman of the Somerset County Republican Committee, favors the appointment of Senator Reed.

FORMER DRUNKARD TELLS OF CONVERSION

S. H. HADLEY, OF JERRY M'AULEY MISSION, SPEAKS AT Y. M. C. A.

S. H. Hadley, superintendent of the Old Jerry McAuley Mission in Water street, New York, was the speaker at the meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Sunday afternoon, and related to a large audience the experience of his conversion from a drunkard to a mission worker.

Mr. Hadley gave an accurate account of his conversion, and also told of the work accomplished by him since then in the mission in New York. It was through the Jerry McAuley Mission that Mr. Hadley first became converted, and it is there that he has since worked and aided in turning thousands of souls from darkness and drunkenness into salvation.

Features of the meeting were solos by Miss Mildred Till, of the Rock Concert Company, and instrumental selections by the Sagamore Musical Club.

LIQUOR CAUSED THREE CRIMES

TRIP THROUGH SWEDEN DESCRIBED BY A NATIVE

CHARLES HAGER GIVES INTERESTING LECTURE ON "PENINSULA COUNTRY."

Under the auspices of the Swedish Lutheran church, an interesting lecture was given Saturday night in the lodge rooms at the Coward building by Charles Hager, a native of Sweden, on the subject, "A Trip Through Sweden." The hall was well filled and the address delighted those who are interested in the "Peninsula Country."

Mr. Hager dwelt briefly upon the history of Sweden, referring to the fact that it is not as well known as many countries. He told something of the nature of the land, with its chain of mountains running through the middle, dividing it from Norway, and a series of stereopticon views, some of which he had secured with his own camera, was shown.

A portion of his lecture was taken up by a brief outline of the characteristics of the natives, and their habits and costumes. To most of the audience, this part of the lecture was familiar as many of Mr. Hager's countrymen were present.

WORKMAN RUN DOWN BY TRAVELING CRANE

BADLY INJURED IN ACCIDENT AT THE POND TOOL WORKS FOUNDRY.

Marte Bonne, an Italian living at 1034 West Third street, and employed as a laborer in the foundry at the Pond Machine Tool Works, had a narrow escape from being killed late Saturday afternoon. He was busy closing the windows in the top on the foundry, when the operater of the large electric crane started to run it back to its regular position for the night. It was not known that anyone was in the upper part of the building, until the shrieks and cries of the man were heard. The crane was stopped at once, but not quick enough to save Bonne.

The Italian was caught between the crane and the side of the building, resulting in a fracture of the left leg and the right ankle. He was caught in such a manner that it required several minutes to extricate him and it was necessary to take him through a window and lower him on the outside of the building, where the ambulance, which had been summoned, waited to take him to the hospital. While the Italian's condition is serious it is believed he will recover. Bonne is unmarried and has been employed at Pond's for a long time.

Somerville Consents!

The bill introduced in the Legislature giving boroughs power to regulate the licensed places within their borders to suit themselves ought to solve the difficulties in North Plainfield. The borough Council, under such a law, could pass an ordinance compelling the saloons to close as early as they see fit and place such other restrictions about the business as they desire. The licensing power would still be vested in the county court. We believe that this would be a proper power for all boroughs and towns to have and think it should be extended to all the smaller municipalities as it is in the line of home rule. —Somerville Unionist Gazette.

An Entertainment Bureau.

"The Plainfield Entertainment Bureau" is the title of an organization which has just made its appearance with Harvey R. Thorn, of East Second street, as manager. It will furnish everything in the entertainment line for churches, societies, lodges and clubs.

Rev. Dr. Schenck Says Drink Incited Two Recent Murders and One Assault.

LOCAL SITUATION

Tells Voters That Mayor's Commendation Does Not Give Character to Saloon—Protest Against Excise Commission.

In Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, preached on the text "So Mightily Grew the Word of God and Prevailed," Acts 19-20, and referred at length to the liquor question. After speaking of the method of growth he alluded to the force against which it prevailed. In the opposition of the craftsmen of Ephesus whose business was in danger by the success of the Gospel he found a type of a present day obstacle to the growth of the Gospel in the liquor traffic. He then referred in no unkind but still in no uncertain language to some recent happenings in the community.

He said that the saloon was known by its fruits and it required more than the indiscreet commendation of the Mayor of a city to give it character.

Rev. Dr. Schenck drew attention to the fact that if the Dalrymple bill becomes a law, Mayor Buckle will have power to name three excise commissioners who will have sole jurisdiction in liquor license matters. We all know what kind of a man he is on this subject, said he, from what he said on the floor of the Common Council. It was pointed out by the minister that Mr. Buckle could appoint whom he choosed and that there would likely be as many saloons in the city as there were requests for them.

"The saloon is a menace to the highest welfare of a town and a moral and social plague. It is the prolific sower of poverty, suffering, disorder and crime," said he.

Dr. Schenck called particular attention to the relation of the saloon to the two murders and the murderous assaults in this vicinity. "Several negroes maliciously and feloniously attacked the borough marshals," he remarked. "They were drunk—made drunk or still more drunk by the saloons of this city and borough. Next Friday these men who have been adjudged guilty will come up for sentence before the very court by whom, practically, an all-night license was granted to sell and that for a most insignificant fee.

"The Common Council of North Plainfield and the Grand Jury of Somerset County, the latter composed of men of most unexceptionable character, have presented the exact state of affairs to the court and no relief has been yet granted. Cramer, who was made a brute by the rum he drank, was murdered by his brother-in-law, who now awaits trial on the charge of murder. The latter will be tried by the same court which granted the licenses to the saloons and hotels whose rum dehumanized Cramer.

"A pistol shot rings out over the peaceful valley of Washingtonville," said he, "and a soul is ushered into the presence of God without the privilege of a final prayer, and a young wife is plunged into widowhood to fight life's hard battle alone. The Prosecutor of Pleas, the press and the public are said to be at their wits end to discover a motive for so heinous a crime. I ask may there not possibly be a closer connection between that drink of whiskey which Wood took in the saloon in the notch and the murder of Williams than we have been disposed to grant? If drunk, Wood is not guiltless, because the law holds that drunkenness is no excuse for crime. The legal responsibility of the murderer must be determined by the courts. But, my friends, does no moral responsibility attach to the dealer who sells the wretched stuff and to the community who permits him to sell that which is such a prolific source of crime?"

Dr. Schenck also referred to the excise bill now before the Legislature which transfers the power of granting licenses in cities of our class from the Common Council to a commission of three to be appointed by the Mayor. He condemned the measure as being in the interest of the liquor traffic, and because it committed an unwarranted power to three men who are not directly amenable to the voters. He advised all men of the congregation to write to their representatives in the Assembly and Senate and protest against its passage.

ANOTHER BASEBALL TEAM

St. Mary's Association to Be Represented by Strong Nine.

M'LAUGHLIN TO PITCH

To Expend $500 in Making Improvements to Grounds—Wieringa the Promoter.

Following closely the announcement of the Plainfield Baseball Association of its lineup and plans for the coming baseball season, comes the news that the St. Mary Baseball Association will place a team on the local diamond and plans are now underway to secure suitable grounds and complete the details for the season. It is yet undecided whether to lease the Orange Field Club field or engage a diamond on East Second street along the trolley. It is proposed to expend about $500 in making improvements to either grounds, including the erection of grandstands.

According to the present plans it is proposed to have "Warry" McLaughlin for pitcher, with either Armbruster or Allen at the receiving end. The infield is made up with Poole at first, Flynn on second, Supple at third and Zimmerman, formerly of Manhattan College, at short. The outfield is to be covered by Taylor in centre, "Red" Alberts in right field and O'Brien in left field.

Poole, Flynn, Supple and Alberts are from last year's Aeolian team and Taylor is from this city. Zimmerman played for the Elizabeth Stars on Sundays last year. Armbruster is the New London catcher, who played several games with the old Alls team, while McLaughlin is from the same team. He has not decided to return to New London this season.

It is proposed to open the season the last of May in this city with the High Bridge team and other aggregations of equal strength will be secured. If arrangements can be made there will be a series of contests with the Plainfield Baseball Association team.

Henry Wieringa is taking the lead in the organization of the team, and he is supported by many of those formerly identified with the association two seasons ago.

BOOK NEWS.

State Librarian Henry C. Buchanan's annual report shows that the total number of volumes in the library is 67,640. The accessions during the year were 2,856. The report states that of the $3,500 appropriated for the "repair, preservation and purchase of useful books," $438 68 was spent for binding and repairs and the remainder for new books. During the year many more valuable pamphlets relating to New Jersey were bound in board covers.

A considerable portion of the report is devoted to a review of the improvements made in the library last summer. This part shows that 23 large oak book cases were replaced by 48 cases of rolled steel. Of these, 28 were installed in the law library and 16 in the reference department. This change, it is stated, has given a little more than double the former shelf room, and will be sufficient to meet all requirements for several years to come, at the present rate of growth. By the discarding of the old revolving cases scattered sets of books have been brought together and made much more accessible for use. The new steel newspaper cases and the repainting and decorating are also outlined.

In order to permit the changes to be made it was necessary to remove over 50,000 books and pamphlets from the old shelves and pile them away. The work was so far completed during the vacation of the court as to permit of the opening of the library, with all the books in place, on the opening day of the November term of the Supreme Court.

The document states that the improvements yet to be made, which will be completed before the report is printed, include the finishing of a room in the attic over the librarian's office; the placing of shelving therein; replacing with steel the wooden shelving in the work room; the opening of a door way from the upper hall into the same room in order to prevent unnecessary traveling through the library. All these improvements will be completed within the appropriation made for the purpose.

BOROUGHITES' VIEWS OF ELECTION MERGER

OPINIONS EXPRESSED BY OPPOSING LEADERS.

MAYOR N. B. SMALLEY—There was no question at any time but that Governor Stokes would do the proper thing at the right time. So far as affecting the situation in North Plainfield is concerned, I can't see any reason for alarm. The regular Republican ticket would have triumphed at a spring election just as surely as it will at the general fall election and the Citizen' Union Party, born on false issues one year ago, should consult the coroner.

A. V. D. HONEYMAN—I am not aware that the abolition of spring elections will affect the Citizen's party movement in any way. I can't tell what's going to happen by next fall. Some people seem to think the new law is a good one and we will certainly have to try it. It saves much expense to the borough and to the candidates. Personally I think there are arguments to be made both ways.

To the man who cannot accumulate a library of data that will bear upon his business pursuits the 1905 World Almanac is indispensable. The man who lives in the small suburban town or village will find in the Standard American Annual items of everyday reference. Although he may be considerably removed from the great commercial centres, it will put him so closely in touch with their daily happiness—in fact, with the progress of the world—that he will virtually move in a metropolitan atmosphere. The World Almanac helps a man to keep pace with the age in which he lives; it is an educator. Price, 25 cents; 35 cents by mail.

N. J. C.'s Big Storehouse.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey is having plans drawn for a new six story brick and stone storage warehouse to occupy the block bounded by the Central's tracks, Lawrence, Mechanic and Ward streets, Newark, to cost about $500,000. The plans are being prepared by a New York contractor and builder, and construction will be begun early in the spring.

RISK IN TWO ADDRESSES.

One on Each Side of an Express Package May Result in Double Charge.

The clerk in the express office was just about to toss the package back off the counter, says the Philadelphia Record, when he noticed that it was addressed on both sides. "It's good I saw that. Charges might have been collected twice," he said. "That's funny," remarked the shipper. "I just paid the charges, you know." "Yes," responded the clerk, "and I marked it paid, but the second address might have caused them to collect at the other end. You see, I checked it off 'Paid' on one side, but when it reaches the other office it might be that the prepaid mark would be on the bottom. That would bring the other address up, and, seeing no check mark there, the receiving office would mark it 'Collect.' The chances are the package would be handled that side up, without the other address and the prepaid mark being discovered, and the party to whom it is addressed would pay the second express charges." "And I thought I was doing something to expedite matters in putting the address on both sides," commented the shipper. "You weren't," said the clerk. "It's all right to address letters on both sides, for the convenience of mail clerks, but don't put two addresses on express packages, unless you want to run the risk of paying double."

GROOM TAKES TRIP ALONE

Bride Is Left at Home When Her Husband Starts on Honeymoon.

Booker T. Washington says that a domestic long in the service of a well-known Alabama family recently gave "notice" of two weeks, explaining that she desired to get married. The mistress, says the Saturday Evening Post, managed to secure an acceptable successor, but was dismayed to discover that the new maid could not report for duty until a week subsequent to the time fixed for the wedding of her predecessor. So the present incumbent was asked whether she would not agree to postpone the happy event for a week. This the domestic declined to do, from superstitious scruples, no doubt bearing in mind the old adage: "Change the date, change the fate." However, she said that she didn't in the least mind getting married and continuing the household duties till her successor could put in an appearance. The husband-elect offering no objections, this arrangement was agreed upon; and an hour or so after the marriage ceremony the domestic was performing her duties just as before.

"I presume your husband has returned to his work, as you have done," the mistress chanced casually to remark.

"No'm," responded the girl in a matter-of-fact tone. "Joe, he done gone on his honeymoon."

TRAIN SPIDERS TO CHEAT.

Insects Weave Webs About Wine Bottles Thus Producing Aged Appearance.

In this age of shams even spiders' webs may be fraudulently attached to wine bottles, for there is an elderly Frenchman who makes a comfortable competence by supplying unscrupulous wine dealers with specially-bred spiders at a fixed rate of $2.50 per 100, which may be relied upon, if turned loose among wine bottles, to at once proceed to spin abundant webs among them. The reason of this is that he keeps a large establishment, which he devotes to breeding spiders. They are kept in dark, cool rooms, and the spiders are allowed to roam at their will about shelves on which are placed numerous empty port wine bottles. If a spider spins on the wall or in a corner of a shelf, its web is promptly destroyed by the owner; but if one of these creatures spins on a bottle it is promptly rewarded with a fly. When their education is completed they are placed in separate compartments in tight wooden boxes and dispatched to the fradulent wine merchants, who make use of them to give their bottles the appearance of 20 years' storage in cellars cool.

The Patient Brain.

The brain is one of the most patient and industrious organs of the body. It can be induced, by good treatment, to perform prodigies of labor. Few realize its capabilities and endurance. But it is sensitive. It will not long brook abuse. It briskly responds to the whip at first, but if the lash is laid on too hard and often it balks. It insists upon having plenty of good, red blood when it works hard; and good, red blood is made from wheat and roast beef, not from pie a la mode, lobster salad and cocaine or whisky. The most especial thing for the man who works with his brain is plenty of sleep. Only in sleep does the brain find the rest and refreshment that are necessary to maintain its vigor and integrity.

Bridge Lights Mean Much.

There are three lights on the Brooklyn bridge which are never seen by those who have occasion to use the bridge at night, but those three lights mean much to the masters of sailing vessels whose masts approach or exceed the 135 feet between the center of the span and the water. One of the three is directly in the center of the span and marks the highest point, the other two are at each side of the center light, about 100 feet from the towers, and mark the danger limit.

Navy Rejects Smokers.

It is stated that nearly 20 per cent. of the recent applicants for admission to the naval academy at Annapolis were rejected because they were suffering from "tobacco heart," caused by smoking cigarettes.

THE HAGUE PEACE PALACE.

Plans for Andrew Carnegie's Magnificent Gift to the World Have Been Decided On.

The Hague.—Final decision has at last been reached concerning the Carnegie peace palace. The announcement was made the other day that the Dutch government had purchased a plot of ground situated at the eastern end of The Hague, behind the botanical gardens, to be given to the Carnegie committee, says a special from this place to the New York Tribune. Following that it was officially announced that the future palace of arbitration would be built on the plan of the Brussels palace of justice, of which it will be an exact copy on a smaller scale.

The estimated cost of the peace palace is $1,640,000, or about one-fifth the amount expended on the Brussels palace of justice. Mr. Carnegie's original offer, on April 22, 1903, was $1,500,000. Doubtless he will supply the rest. The general appearance of the palace now about to be erected will be that of a capitol. The style of the building will be classical, or Greco-Roman, as it is called here.

FRONT VIEW OF HAGUE PALACE.
It Is to Be Modeled After the Brussels Palace of Justice.

The edifice will consist of a main building, flanked at each end by a forepart, and with a spacious central portico as the principal entrance. A double row of columns will rise to the right and left of this portico, and behind them a large monumental staircase leading to the principal audience room, where the court of arbitration will hold its sittings. This audience chamber is to cover 12,000 square feet, being 270 feet long by 120 feet wide, with enormous pilasters of white marble. Beyond this main chamber will be the principal committee room, modeled after the court of assizes of the Brussels palace, with facings of variegated marbles. At each end of this committee room will be subcommittee rooms.

Above, on the second floor, will be two spacious rooms, one reserved for the president and the other for the secretary of the permanent court of arbitration. The first of these rooms is to be ornamented with marbles of various colors; the second will have pillars of pink stucco, with pedestals of gilded bronze.

The dome which will surmount the palace, and will, it is expected, give a majestic aspect to the structure, will be supported by two superposed galleries, the lower being square shaped, the other round, flanked by enormous bronze statues of Clemency, Justice, Law and Strength.

It is generally agreed by architects and leading authorities on public art here that no more suitable building could have been chosen as a model for the arbitration palace than the Brussels palace of justice, noted for its harmonious proportions and beauty of lines. The palace of justice was designed by the Belgian architect, Joseph Poelaert. It took 17 years to build, and was formally opened in April, 1883.

OUR SKILLED METAL WORK

Cleveland, Ohio.—A powerful lever to the encouragement of decorative forms in iron, bronze and brass has been the growth of wealth in the United States, since liberal expenditures of money for artistic treatment of metals for embellishing public and private buildings have made possible the accomplishment of some of the most artistic effects to be found in the world.

SHIP BELL OF THE CLEVELAND.
It Is a Good Example of Our New American Metal Work.

One of the striking examples of American skill in this respect is the ship bell presented by the citizens of Cleveland to the United States battleship bearing the name of that city. Upon the surface of the bell is depicted the surrender of Capt. Barclay to Capt. Perry in the battle of Lake Erie, and among the inscriptions is the famous dispatch which Perry wrote in pencil on the back of a letter to Gen. Harrison: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Chess in the Curriculum.

The Russian ministry has issued a circular that the study of chess should be added to the curriculum of the schools. Dr. Tarrasch, of Nuremberg, in one of the German papers declares that chess is of the greatest use in forming character, in inculcating prudence and judgment, in awakening thoughtfulness and the imagination and in adding clearness and consistency to thought. He urges teaching chess and giving prizes for proficiency in it.

FROM SLAVERY TO WEALTH

Life Story of Isaiah F. Montgomery Proves That Bright Negro Has a Chance in South.

Indianapolis (Ind.) Special.

One of the wealthiest men attending the National Negro Business league's convention is Isaiah F. Montgomery, of Mound Bayou, Miss.

Mr. Montgomery inherited some wealth from his father, and until 1883 owned the plantations formerly owned by Jefferson Davis and his brother.

He was one of the three largest cotton planters in the United States. Although at present a planter, he devotes much of his time to the real estate business.

The town of Mound Bayou, Miss., in the Yazoo valley, is composed of negroes entirely. Not a white person is in the town. The negroes own thousands of acres of land, and have manufacturing industries. In addition to being a planter and a real estate dealer, Mr. Montgomery deals in merchandise on a large scale. His fortune is estimated at about $200,000.

Although an old man, his mind is still active. He wears the large soft hat of a planter, and does not look the part of the man of wealth he is.

In speaking of his earlier experiences, Mr. Montgomery said:

"My father, mother, two brothers and two sisters were owned by Joseph E. Davis, brother of Jefferson Davis. There was a fear that the property might be confiscated, and it was turned over to us after Joseph Davis had gained possession of it. We were employed, together with 300 other slaves, but began to manage the estate ourselves.

"In 1887 I went to Mound Bayou, and for 15 years have been collecting negroes from all over the United States for settlement down there. Now there are 30,000 acres owned by colored people, with a frontage of five miles on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad.

"I employ 150 men who raise cotton for me, receiving one-half the crop, and a number of others who rent the land. I have been land agent for the railroad, but the farms are all sold there now. In Mound Bayou the postmaster, banker, and all the officers and inhabitants are negroes."

NO HOPE FOR PORT ARTHUR

Authorities at St. Petersburg Expect to Receive News of Its Fall at Any Moment.

St. Petersburg Special.

After months of brave defense it has become clear to the Russian defenders of Port Arthur that the place cannot be held much longer by them. Fighting of incredible fierceness has been raging around the fortress and news of its capitulation is expected momentarily. Gen. Stoessel, the Russian commander, has done all that man could do to hold the stronghold, but he has not enough troops to withstand the Japanese attacks. Gen. Baron Nogi, who commands the investing forces, is an intrepid fighter and an able strategist. He is a Samurai, and won fame as a military leader in the Chinese war ten years ago. He was in command of one of the brigades that captured Port Arthur, his men storming the celebrated Itzeshan works. Baron Nogi has served as governor general of Formosa, and is noted as an organizer. He was detached from Oku's command after the battles of Kinchow and Nanshan Hill and dispatched south to reduce Port Arthur.

GEN. BARON NOGI.
(Japanese General Who Is Commanding at Siege of Port Arthur.)

Moist Vapor from the Sea.

Moist vapor is constantly arising from the sea, and in the course of a year this amounts to a layer of water 14 feet thick. This mass of moisture is borne to the clouds, and the winds drift a large part of it over the land, on which it descends in rain or snow.

SELTZER WATERS' SCORES HIT AT THE CASINO

ENTERTAINS MEN'S CLUB OF GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

Members of Grace church Men's Club turned out in large numbers Wednesday at the Casino, where an entertaining programme well repaid them for their attendance. It was a success socially as well as from the entertainment standpoint. All who have had the pleasure of hearing W. S. Waters, familiarly known as "Seltzer Waters," in his humorous selections and songs, will realize what was in store for the Men's Club last night.

Mr. Waters was at his best and kept his audience in roars of laughter from the beginning to the end. His jokes, many new and some old favorites, were well received and delivered in a manner which never failed to bring down the house.

John Manley, of Park avenue, formed a pleasing addition to the humorous programme. He told several interesting stories, and proved an able entertainer. At the conclusion of the programme, refreshments were served and a social hour which follows the men's club meeting wound up a most successful evening. The committee in charge was composed of the following: Hugh F. Fox, chairman, J. Gilmore, Howard Fleming, Arthur Murphy and Theodore B. Reese. The next meeting of the club will be held on March 14, at which time a representative of the Prison Reform Association will be secured to deliver a lecture.

STATE TAX BOARD AT GARWOOD.

Organ Company Protests Against Taxes Being Doubled.

Judge Thompson and Charles C. Black, of the State Board of Taxation, visited Garwood last week and made an inspection of the property affected by the increased assessment as levied by the assessor of that borough. There are three contestants, including the Aeolian Organ Works, which claim that the valuations placed on their property is too high. S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Coddington & Swackhamer, who is counsel for the borough, was also present.

The property in question is assessed at $230,000, which is about double of that of last year, which is attributed to the fact that the assessment this year was made according to the law, that is by block and lot and not by the acre as last year. The sole question is that of the intrinsic value of the property, and it is quite likely that there will be a reduction in the assessment. A small park assessed to the contesting parties, it was determined belongs to the borough, and this was conceded by the officials. E. M. Wood, of Elizabeth, represents the contestants.

The State Board of Taxation will now take the matter up for consideration and a decision is expected within a few days. The contesting parties are among the largest taxpayers in the borough and the residents do not want to do anything that will cause them to move, yet it is the desire that a fair and equitable assessment be made.

Miss Rodman's Tea.

Miss Rodman, of Kensington avenue, has sent out invitations for a tea in honor of Mrs. Erastus Walbridge Buisley, of West Seventh street, to be given February 24 from 4 to 6 o'clock.

CITY FATHERS IN SESSION

Transfer Liquor License and Hold Committee Meetings.

BOOKS ARE AUDITED

Finance Committee Discusses Expert Accountant's Report—Street Committee's First Session.

The transferrence of the liquor license held by A. B. Rosell to Jerome Leary, a new applicant, was the only business transacted at the special meeting of the Common Council, Thursday. The fee, $25, was paid and W. L. Gloak moved that the transfer be made. The papers were prepared by W. A. Codington, of the firm of Reed & Codington, representing Mr. Leary and there was no unnecessary delay in making the change.

Mr. Wilson wanted to know whether it was customary to call a special meeting to transfer a liquor license and permit of no other business. President Daniel admitted that it was rather unusual. There was a feeling that it was a waste of time to call together a number of busy men to simply take up one matter requiring but a few minutes time.

The members took advantage of being together and decided to hold committee meetings. The finance committee, not having had time previously to consider the report of Expert Accountant Collins, who recently completed an exhaustive examination of the city's books, took up this report and examined it in detail. The committee also had a preliminary discussion regarding the annual budget to be fixed next month. The other committees were asked to make up the several amounts thought to be necessary for the coming year.

The Street Committee also held a meeting to take up certain matters needing attention at this time, although little can be done until spring arrives, when the regular work on the streets will be started.

The Public Affairs Committee decided not to do anything this week regarding the petition received from the Passaic Common Council, asking for co-operation in the matter of securing legislation favorable to the establishment of municipal lighting plants in cities of Plainfield's class. The committee will probably meet a little later in the month and take some action.

LITERARY.

Sir Gilbert Parker, long conspicuous as a native American member of the British Parliament, must now share this distinction with the member newly returned from the Isle of Thanet, H. H. Marks, an American born, and formerly a resident of New York city. Mr. Marks carried his election by a majority which might be characterized as "safe" rather than as "comfortable," and not without overcoming at strenuous opposition on all sides.—From "The World at Large" in The Metropolitan Magazine for March.

Collier's for February 11 calls attention to the fact: The Bayonet's Importance is recognised all over the world today, and this again is a lesson from the Japanese. The Boer War was supposed to be the final one of many demonstrations that this distinguished weapon had become obsolete. Now, however, we read that the issuance to the army of the new model Springfield rifle has been stopped because it is equipped with a proper bayonet. It had a rod bayonet, which is merely a projecting ramrod. Now it will be provided with a good old fighting piece of steel, ready for some bloody arbitrament as it has been used for in Manchuria. Experts are interesting citizens, but the disappearance of the bayonet is one of their bad guesses.

The Smart Set has fairly outdone itself in the March number, which marks the beginning of the sixth year of its existence. The complete novel is "The Princess Elopes," by Harold MacGrath, an author whose immense popularity is due to the fact that he is a born story teller. Mr. MacGrath is at his very best in this charming tale of a European princess and a young American medical student. It is a delightful blending of romance and delicate humor, touched everywhere with the deft hand of an author who has mastered his craft. Nothing better of its kind has appeared in a magazine in many a month. Among the dozen short stories in this number about half are by authors who have been either entirely unknown hitherto to magazine readers or are just coming into prominence.

Celebrated Two Birthdays.

Combining the birthday parties of Miss Mamie Mehl and William Mehl, of Liberty street, a delightful social was given in their honor Wednesday night. It was largely attended, and the evening was pleasantly spent playing games. During the latter part of the evening, refreshments were served.

FLAYS LONELY MR. SIDES

Angry Wife Tells Why He Advertised for Fair Friend.

CALLS HIM A "BRUTE"

Says That He Has Been Married Three Times and Warns Girls to Have Nothing to Do with Him.

A few weeks ago there appeared in The Daily Press "want" advertisements the following, sent to the office by letter:

"Gentleman, 39 years of age, tall and of dark complexion, wishes to correspond with tall attractive looking woman, not over 30; blonde preferred. Address W. H. Sides, 56 East Main street, Somerville, N. J."

The necessary expense for insertion was enclosed and the advertisement appeared to be bona fide in every way but to learn if possible why the lonely Mr. Sides should be seeking the acquaintance of Plainfield women, blond preferred, a representative of the paper was sent to Somerville to interview him. He was unable to locate Mr. Sides but found 56 East Main street in the form of a vacant lot. The matter remained somewhat of a mystery until today when the morning mail brought the following letter, dated at Reading, Pa.:

"To the Editor:

"In reference to the Sides' advertisement printed in your columns recently I wish you would be kind enough to print the following in your paper:

"When a man advertises the fact that he wishes to correspond with a lady, it is time to warn the girls of Plainfield and the surrounding towns of the character of such a man. It seems to be a secret why he prefers blondes, and why he cannot find one of this type in Somerville. Not that blondes in Somerville are not be found, but because the lone Somervillian knows that both blondes and brunettes of his town know that his blonde wife left him, or rather left the brute a few weeks prior to this 'ad.' He has changed his name slightly from Seiders to Sides, not mentioning that matrimony is his object, and seems to be in deadly earnest according to the 'ad.' But before the blondes who have answered his 'ad' go any further or trifle any more with the gentleman, it will be well to warn them that he has had three wives from this town and I, his third wife, am still in existence.

"The gentleman also makes himself younger, changes his street address as well as his name, thinking that if he changes all this that his wife in Pennsylvania will never suspect that he is looking for another wife while she is still living.

"I think that as your paper has printed his 'ad.' and also notice that you have another piece in your paper in reference to it, that the girls of your town should be warned, and if any respectable girl has written to him that she should know that he is a married man and that his home is here in Reading and that up to Nov. 19, 1904, we lived in Somerville and on that date I left him on account of ill treatment.

"Respectfully,
"Mrs. W. H. Seiders,
"231 Spruce street, Reading, Pa."

R. M. SHEPARD TO WED.

Society Man's Engagement is Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. James Murray Kay, of Brookline, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Winifred Prentiss Kay, to Rutherford Mead Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, of "The Gables," Fanwood. Mr. Shepard is a nephew of the late Elliott F. Shepard and is a prominent member of the New York and Philadelphia society.

He is a member of the Plainfield Country Club and is connected with the Philadelphia offices of the American Bank Note Company.

Beef Companies Restore Deliveries.

The local beef companies, which about a year ago abolished their delivery rigs and had purchasers remove supplies from the houses by John E. Keely, have returned to the old method. Hereafter the concerns will deliver meat with their own wagons, this method having been found more satisfactory.

Miss Hannah Goldsmith, of Allentown, Pa., has returned to her home after an extended visit with friends in this city.

CONTRACTORS' QUARREL SETTLED IN COURT

CAULFIELD GETS VERDICT IN CASE AGAINST BROKAW.

Deliberating for five minutes, the jury brought in a verdict for $100 and costs in favor of the plaintiff in the contract case of Cormick Caulfield against William H. Brokaw, which was tried at Justice Huff's court Wednesday afternoon. The case was a complicated one, concerning two receipts for $100 each, held by Mr. Brokaw.

The contract for building a house for La Grande Fulton on Grant avenue, was given to William H. Brokaw, who sub-contracted with Cormick Caulfield for the mason work. When the first payment was made $150 cash was to be given to Caulfield, according to agreement, but only $50 was received. The mason instructed Mr. Brokaw to pay the other $100 to Rajotti, a brickman, to whom that sum was owed. After considerable time the money was paid, Caulfield giving Brokaw a receipt for the $100 owed to him, and Brokaw receiving a receipt for the $100 paid to Rajotti.

Instead of turning over the latter's receipt to Caulfield, Brokaw kept it, and recently presented both receipts, claiming that one was for the debt to the mason and the other for money loaned to the brickman. Rajotti testified that the money was not given to him as a loan, and that he had no occasion to borrow. Mr. Caulfield was represented by H. C. Runyon in the trial yesterday, while his opponent was V. W. Nash, Jr. Mr. Runyon's handling of the case was admirable, so that it took the jury but a brief space of time to bring in a verdict in favor of his client.

These were the jurors: Robert Cook, Allan Laing, Thomas Carty, John Morton, Frank Dunham, Edward Willis, Dr. Pocock, Jonathan Smith, A. E. Jenkins, John McKeon, Cornelius VanHerwerden and Harold C. Durar.

CENTRAL'S LANDINGS AT 23RD AND 42ND STS.

RAILROAD'S SCHEMES FOR HANDLING ITS TRAFFIC.

The New Jersey Central has in contemplation some dock changes in New York which will probably be made during the coming year which give the company better facilities for handling its summer traffic. The company now has a freight pier at the foot of West Forty-second street, New York and it is proposed also to provide accommodations there for the landing of the Sandy Hook boats, which will connect with the Albany Day Line boats, the latter line proposing to have a pier at the same place. This arrangement will undoubtedly mean a large increase in traffic from the Adirondack regions and other cities along the Hudson for places on the Jersey coast.

If this arrangement is made the company will abandon Pier 8, North River, which has been the landing for the Sandy Hook boats, and which for a number of reasons has been unsuited for this purpose. It is believed that the boats will make a stop at Pier 10, near Liberty street, for the downtown patronage.

The company will also have a landing at Twenty-third street, near to that of the Pennsylvania, for the convenience of Jersey City passengers wishing to use this route, instead of the Liberty street ferry. The uptown service will bring passengers in the heart of the shopping and within easy access to the theatres.

Dry Argument on Fire Water.

A citizen of Plainfield combats the theory that it would be illegal to establish a saloon district there, for he calls attention to the fact that such a limitation is similar to the rule relating to the establishing of fire limits. If the latter is legal, the Common Council certainly has the power to fix the "firewater" limits. The argument is a sound one, though it is a rather "dry" reading for the advocates of the unrestricted sale of liquor. —Newark Evening News.

Engagements Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Jennie Saxton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Saxton, of Grandview avenue, and Henry Apgar, of West Front street. The engagement of Miss Jennie Langer, of Fairview avenue, and Morris C. Sutphen, of East Seventh street, is also announced.

Bird Store Change.

Mr. Snyder, of Scotch Plains, has purchased the bird and poultry supply business from William Krister at 42 Somerset street, and David Fairchild, of the borough, has been placed in charge as manager. Mr. Krister has secured a position as manager for a pigeon farm in New York State.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 26.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Heroes of home missions; what they teach us.—Jer. vii, 1-12.

The New Testament makes no distinction between home missions and foreign missions. It is all "missions." The apostles were sent to the world and very appropriately were instructed to begin their work at Jerusalem, at home. But the evangelization of Jerusalem, Judaea, Samaria and the uttermost parts of the earth was but one great work, and it is to be questioned whether the division into home and foreign missions has been a wise and profitable one. Yet the distinction has been made and the title "home missions" applied to missionary work done within the bounds of one's own country. In this sense Isaiah, Jeremiah and all the prophets, the apostles and all who have labored for Christ in their own lands have been home missionaries, and their work for Christ has been of inestimable value.

Our own country soon after its settlement by Christian people became a home mission field. The first subjects of home mission efforts were the Indians, and conspicuous among the heroes of early Indian mission work were John Eliot, "the apostle to the Indians;" Jonathan Edwards and David Brainerd, whose lives teach us noble lessons of heroic service and self sacrifice in the cause of Christ. Marcus Whitman in his sensational saving of the great northwest to our country stands conspicuous among the home missionaries, who teach us the lesson of Christian patriotism. Our home mission field is still a vast one. In the great west are many sections where the gospel of Christ is greatly needed, but greatest of all are the needs of our "exceptional populations"—250,000 Indians, 2,000,000 mountaineers in the south, 9,000,000 colored people, 300,000 Mexicans, 300,000 Mormons, the Alaskans, the foreign population and we may include today the 10,000,000 Fillipinos. What a vast field for missionary effort and what deeds of heroism have been performed in the efforts already made to spread the gospel among these peoples—deeds that teach everywhere the same lessons of consecrated zeal and self denial in the spread of Christ's kingdom, which should fire us with new enthusiasm in the effort to win our land for Christ!

But home missions in particular present to us a class of heroes who are often overlooked. We may call them the quiet heroes. In some faroff, distant field they labor day in and day out, month by month and year by year. The world bears not of them. Their names are not upon the lips of men, but quietly, patiently, inconspicuously they labor for the conversion of souls and their comfort and sanctification in Christ. To most of us such heroism may best teach useful lessons. A life devoted to the service of Christ is a heroic life, though the field may be distant from the busy marts of men and the stories of heroic sacrifice and lonely struggle may be forever unknown to the world and unpraised by men. The Master knows—"the Master praises. What are men?"

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxxii, 1-10, 17; cxxxvii, 1-6; Isa. vi, 1-10; Matt. x, 5-8; xxviii, 19, 20; Luke xxiv, 45-53; John xv, 26, 27; Acts i, 8; ii, 37-40; Rom. x, 14, 15.

India Inspiration.

The one city of Cuttack has twelve Christian Endeavor societies of one denomination.

A Christian Endeavor society in Kandy, Ceylon, has started the useful annex of a Christian Endeavor class in shorthand.

Dr. Clough, the great Baptist missionary at Ongole, warmly supports Christian Endeavor and has seven societies in his institutions at Ongole.

The girls' society of Bellary, south India, has taken an extra orphan into its school at its own expense. True Christian Endeavor that.

The East Bengal union has just held its first annual convention, reporting sixty-nine societies, fifteen of them for women, five Juniors and the rest for boys and men.

Professor Sterling of the Christian college at Madras is a Christian Endeavorer. He had been in India only three weeks when he organized a new society and invigorated an old one.

The East Bengal union has divided its societies into groups of from four to six, each group being watched over by a "circle secretary," whose duty it is to see that his societies are in good condition and visit them often, an idea worth transplanting.

Enlarge the Associate Membership.

Let us enlarge our associate membership, our future working forces. This has been sadly neglected in many societies. It is the evangelistic end of our work; it is our harvest field, our fishing ground, our recruiting station. Oh, make much of your privileges, your blessed privileges, as soul winners! Christian Endeavor has given us the greatest evangelistic opportunity of the century. Win one, my brothers and sisters, each of you win one, and soon the whole wide world will be won.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark in Irish Endeavorer.

Gains.

In the Hawaiian Islands the growth of the past year has been 116 per cent.

The present total enrollment of societies as shown on the books at United society headquarters is 64,004 societies.

The Primitive Methodist church of the United States has officially adopted the name Christian Endeavor in addition to the name of their denominational Young People's society, their title now being the Wesley Guild of Christian Endeavor.

WEDDING CAKES OF ROYALTY

Some of the Most Remarkable Confections Ever Made Were Among the Jubilee Gifts.

Royal etiquette demands that the chief wedding cakes throughout Europe be made in the royal kitchens. All the rest are received as gifts, except in unusual cases, when orders are sent out so that the royal confectioners may be relieved from undue stress of work, says the New York Herlad. When Queen Victoria was married quantity was in demand rather than elegance of design. Over a hundred cakes were made, and after the wedding was over hundreds of choppers were engaged under the head of the chief clerk of the kitchen in cutting the cakes to pieces and putting them into danty boxes, which were forwarded to the master of the house hold. This functionary in his turn distributed them, in accordance with a list furnished him by Lord Chamberlain, to her majesty's messengers, who bore then to the various courts of Europe and other high places where a piece of cake was expected on this occasion.

Messrs. Buzzard, the fashionable cake-maker of London, made for the Princess Beatrice a fine specimen of their art, for which the royal lady made her own choice of flowers. Among these were lilies and passion flowers in great confusion. Touches of color were given to these decorations, but every ounce of them was made of pure, edible sugar, and was intended to be eaten. Some confectioners use a composition over muslin for their flowers, but Buzzard prides himself upon using only sugar. As in everything else, there is always a desire for novelty. All the fine cakes made during the last year were decorated with natural flowers. Procelain cups perforated at the top were filled with water, and in this the stem of the flowers were placed.

The most remarkable cakes ever made were among the gifts at the jubilee celebration. The finest of these stood 13 feet high, weighed a quarter of a ton and cost $1,500. Another figured at the wedding of the Arctic explorer, Admiral Markham. On the top was a sugar model of H. M. S. Alert, wedged in the center of an iceberg.

A wedding cake once made for the Duke of Albany, stood six feet high and weighed 200 pounds. It was decorated with a chain of reading cupids, in compliment to his royal highness' literary taste. The Marchioness of Lorne's cake, though not so high, weighed 300 pounds and bore on its summit a replica of a famous piece of statuary. The Duke of York's cake was made in the royal kitchens at Windsor. Five weeks were expended over it and the decorations were magnificent. They reproduced episodes in the life of the sailor prince. It was six feet ten inches high and weighed 300 pounds. The Princess Maud's was decorated with wreaths of flowers and tinted to match nature. All except the leaves were edible.

GOOD SALESMEN SCARCE.

Some New York Merchants Think That All Competent Drummers Have Jobs.

Have all the good salesmen jobs? This question is worrying many business men in New York, says the Sun of recent date. Some merchants were discussing the subject the other day. Said one, "I have a good line, the facilities to execute orders and I spend some money for advertising, yet a good salesman is indispensable to my success. Try as I will I cannot get men who put their heart in their work. I myself have not the eloquence nor the persuasive powers necessary to a drummer, but I never go on the road without coming back with more orders than any traveler ever brought to me."

A paper dealer, who does a very large business, serving some customers with as much as a carload of paper a day, had been listening.

"I am afflicted with the same trouble," he said. "My best salesman is myself. I have tried all sorts of men and have lost more money in salaries to incompetent drummers than to bad debts. I have about given up hope."

"It does my heart good to hear that you have the same experience which worries me." A third man began thus and heaved a great sigh. "I have interviewed applicants of all ages and nationalties who answered my many advertisements.

"Scarcely one but asks about the salary before he knows what goods he is required to sell. I have put on men who looked like church deacons and some who resembled racetrack touts, in the hope that one might prove desirable.

"I have paid liberal salaries and commissions and have given the men every opportunity and encouragement, but I'm rapidly coming to your way of thinking, that all the good men have jobs."

Motor Cars for Jewels.

"Many people are selling their jewels just now to buy motor cars," is the statement made by the manager of a well-known jewelry establishment. "Others are buying automobiles instead of diamonds," he went on. "The money spent on the purchase of a Panhard or a Mercedes lessens the amount available for other luxuries. One can buy imitation pearls, you know, but small satisfaction can be obtained from riding an imitation Mors. Fine jewels, by the way, are very scarce at present. It is very difficult to obtain a ruby of the finest water or a flawless emerald. Americans have such a way of acquiring the costliest stones.—London Mail.

Where Fruit Is Cheap.

If you are very fond of fruit you should go to Jamaica, West Indies, the greatest fruit-growing island in the word. There you can buy a big pineapple for 1d., and 20 bananas or a dozen oranges for 1½d.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 26: "Medical Missions"—Matt. ii, 2-5; Acts iii, 1-8.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

Nothing stamps the gospel of Jesus Christ with a distinctive difference from all other religions the world has ever seen more than the manner in which it regards the diseased and unfortunate.

"Who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" seems to put in words the thought that is often unexpressed in many a mind. It is difficult to get rid of the impression that he who is infirm is not entitled to have consideration such as the strong receive. This has all degrees of force among different classes of men and finds expression in a multitude of ways. In some ages and among some peoples it has been customary to put the aged to death and so end their suffering and the care of others in helping them. The belief has been widely prevalent that the sick were in some way under the displeasure of the gods. How forcibly this is brought out in the speeches of Job's friends, who see in his calamities positive proof of the wickedness and hypocrisy of that patriarch.

No other religious teacher whom the world has ever seen has made it his special care to relieve the distress of the suffering and to base his teaching on the sympathetic care of God. Those whom others shunned as smitten, if not accursed, He received graciously and relieved.

It has been customary to center attention on the physical wonders of healing performed by Christ and to find in these the strongest proof of superhuman power and of His divinity. This has caused an unfortunate oversight of the stupendous wonder of His moral power shown in His compassion for the needy and distressed.

John sends messengers to ask Jesus if He is really the Messiah or if there is still another to come. John was the clearest visioned man of his day in regard to the age long promise of Jehovah to give an ideal Son of Man. But even he is perplexed because Jesus does not proceed as he had expected the Messiah would do.

Jesus answers him in the only way that it is possible to convey the truth to another mind. He goes straight forward with His work in the simple way He had been doing. Then He tells the messengers to go back and report what they have seen. What would be the decisive test to John of the divine mission of Jesus? Would it be the mere healing of the blind, deaf, lame or even of the lepers, however wonderful these things might be as physical cures?

The one decisive proof of the supernatural in Jesus was the fact that He cared to do these things for men. He bore our infirmities and carried our griefs. He had the heart of God and sorrowed for men. Otherwise He could never have relieved them. He did not despise or shun them. His holiness did not isolate Him from the sinful, but impelled to companionship with them.

So now with us. There is no more decisive proof of the vitality of our Christianity at the present day than the spirit of compassionate regard that is apparent in the efforts made for the bettering of the condition of the sick and suffering of all lands.

Our medical missions have given us entrance to many homes and influence in many places we could never have obtained but for them. All this is valuable indeed, but not of the highest worth. The supreme test of their value lies in the fact that they demonstrate and cultivate that deep sympathy with suffering which is the peculiar and distinctive mark of Christianity.

Our leagues should study the work done by these trained physicians and nurses, male and female, who at home and abroad are doing this most Christly work. It is to be hoped and expected that this study will lead many of our young people to devote themselves to this work and fit themselves to go to the most needy whom the church is trying in the name of her Master to relieve.

The relief of the suffering is of great importance, but the growth of the spirit of pity is of even more worth in the kingdom of God.

Be pitiful, for blessed are the merciful. The incoming of the merciful spirit fills men with a likeness to God.

Now Is the Time.

You mean to be religious some day. Now is the real time to open these deeper lives which you do mean some day to live.—Phillips Brooks.

God's Rest.

Rest, rest—His sleeping after pain;
When lights are down and curtains close, we sleep;
The stars watch on, their pale rays faintly keep Their unseen vigil o'er the slumbering one.
Not death—but rest—the music of the spheres
His angels' lullaby of sweet repose.
We should not weep—'tis well, God knows,
And it is sweet to sleep.

Such strenuous living! How the pulses throb!
Life's little triumphs, joys, its cares and pain,
The wondrous workings of the busy brain,
Till it is time to rest—He calls us home.
Think not of death, but rest,
More peaceful and profound, that does not dream
In half unconscious pain. It should not seem
That dreadful parting—surely He knows best.

'Tis hard to say "goodby," but not "good night!"
We all must some time sleep at close of day,
And if the weary one can only pray
With soul unstained—'tis well.
"He giveth His beloved sleep"—why weep?
The wayward, weary, sin stained soul needs rest—
Rest, rest, indeed, like those their works oppressed
For them the angels weep—we all need sleep,
Not death, but God's own rest!

—Boston Transcript.

PUTS COST OF SPECIAL ELECTIONS ON STATE

BILL PROVIDE FOR THIS ONLY TO FILL VACANCIES IN LEGISLATURE.

Mr. Ferdyce, of Middlesex county, introduced in the State Assembly Tuesday a bill which is intended to have the expenses of special elections for members of the Legislature paid out of the State funds and not by the counties.

This is intended to meet such situations as arose in Union County, where it cost at least $7,00 to elect a successor to the late Assemblyman Embree and to Sussex, which considered itself too poor to bear the expenses of the special election to fill the vacancy in the Legislature caused by the death of the late Jackson R. Decker.

The bill provides:

"That when any vacancy or vacancies shall occur, or shall have occurred, in either House of the Legislature occasioned by the death or resignation of any member thereof, or for other cause, and it thereby becomes necessary that a writ or writs of election should issue for supplying such vacancy or vacancies, then all the legal costs and expenditures incurred by the county or counties wherein such vacancy or vacancies have existed and such election or elections have been held, shall be payable out of the State treasury on the warrant of the comptroller; the County Board of Elections of such county or counties where said election or elections have been held shall certify the total legal expense thereof to the said comptroller, and the State treasurer shall make his payment to the county collector of each and every such county, for the said sum of money so certified as aforesaid, to be distributed by each and every such county collector to such county or municipal authorities within any such county as have or may have the duty to actually pay out the said expenditures for holding such election or elections as aforesaid."

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT PASSES AWAY IN THIS CITY

PUBLISHER OF BROOKLYN TIMES A VICTIM OF APOPLEXY.

William Cullen Bryant, the publisher of the Brooklyn Times, died Feb. 15, at Cooley's sanitarium here. He had suffered a stroke of apoplexy but a short time before.

Mr. Bryant was secretary of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. He was born in New York in 1849. He was married twice. His second wife died last September. During her illness Mr. Bryant began to show signs of breaking down, and after her death he became worse. In January he gave up his work, and went South, coming to Plainfield a few days ago. He suffered greatly from nervous prostration, which induced a paralysis of the left side.

Mr. Bryant's eldest son, William B. Bryant, was with his father at the time of his death.

Dr. A. B. Crane to Wed.

Dr. Arthur Barton Crane, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Crane, of East Second street, and Miss Mary Wallace Pollard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Pollard, of Alexandria, Va., will be married in the M. E. church at Alexandria on Tuesday night, February 28. Dr. Crane is a graduate of the Plainfield High School, the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, Class 1900, and during the past three years has been practicing dentistry in Washington. He recently received the appointment as professor in dental surgery at Georgetown University.

Attractions for Casino.

Robert Grau, nephew of Maurice Grau, is interesting himself in bringing first-class theatrical productions to the Casino, and he hopes to have some of the stars in Plainfield during the season. He says that he can see no reason why such productions should not pay here. He is much pleased with the recent improvements at the Casino and says that the stage is fully as large as that at the Princess Theatre, New York, making it possible to give the best shows.

The Inaugural Trip.

William A. Kline, of this city, has been appointed a chairman for Plainfield with power to select ten other men to arrange for the accommodation and reception of colored people intending to go to Washington for the inaugural ceremonies on March 4. The committee at Washington has engaged Convention Hall, where all colored persons will be entertained and quarters can be secured. It is expected that a number of colored people from this city will attend the ceremonies and further particulars can be obtained from Mr. Kline.

ANENT THEATRE TALK

Interested Persons Suggest a Desirable Site.

ON EAST SECOND ST.

Has Many Advantages, and It is Believed Play House Would be a Financial Success.

Several persons who would like to see a theatre in this city, have discovered what would appear to be in every way a most desirable site for an amusement house. The property is on East Second street and extends from the stables of the Plainfield Cab Company to the William Hand & Sons' property. The frontage as well as the depth is ample and it would allow for a modern building of good proportions. The only obstruction now in the way is the dwelling house located on the property and occupied by William Townley. It is argued that the main entrance to the theatre could be located on North avenue, adjoining the office of the Plainfield Cab Company and another entrance to the galleries could be established on Second street, at which point a convenient place for taking scenery in and out could be arranged. This property is now of no great use, except to afford a rear entrance to some of the stores fronting on North avenue, and it is believed that it could be purchased for a reasonable sum. If some public spirited citizens could be induced to lend their efforts towards the building of an up-to-date theatre it is generally believed that it would pay. It is now about five years since Music Hall was closed and according to the opinion of several prominent citizens the town is growing theatre-hungry. With the vast territory now reached in this part of the State by the trolleys, there would be no trouble about securing patronage. At present there is no first-class theatre between Elizabeth and Trenton and Plainfield is considered an excellent place to locate one. If first-class plays are given there seems to be no doubt but that the proper support will be given. Other points in favor of the East Second street property are that the Plainfield Trust Company, as well as C. W. McCutchen propose to erect handsome structures on Park avenue, and other buildings in that section are in prospect, and within a few years J. A. Staats will occupy his recently-purchased property, the Hotel Rosell, which will be greatly improved. Other improvements are also being made in Watchung avenue property, all tending to increase property values. For these reasons it is believed that the vacant property on Second street would be an ideal one for a theatre.

STATE FIRE CHIEFS FORM AN ASSOCIATION

HEAD OF THE LOCAL DEPARTMENT IS MADE PERMANENT TREASURER.

Fire chiefs from every part of the State gathered at Elizabeth Feb. 15, for the purpose of forming a permanent organization. The convention was called to order by Chief John Stagg, of Paterson, and Chief D. J. O'Neil, of Ridgewood, was elected temporary president, and Chief George Arnett, of Lambertville, secretary. A committee of five was appointed to draft by-laws for the new organization and these were accepted following a recess and dinner, the latter being served by Chief Gerstung and former Chief Astfalk, of Elizabeth.

An election of permanent officers resulted as follows: President, John Stagg, of Paterson; vice president, D. J. O'Neill, Ridgewood; secretary, C. H. Mount, Red Bank; treasurer, T. O. Doane, Plainfield. It was decided to hold the regular meetings in September, the night before the annual convention of the State Exempt Firemen's Association, as all fire chiefs are supposed to attend the latter.

The association was formed for the purpose of bringing the chiefs in closer touch with each other for mutual advantage and also for sociability at stated times.

OPPOSE EXCISE BOARD

Poll of Common Council Regarding Bill in Legislature.

TO ASK A HEARING

Features of Assemblyman Dalrymple's Measure Which Applies to Plainfield.

Plainfield's Common Council places itself on record as opposed to the enactment of the bill now in the Legislature for the appointment of three commissioners, in all second class cities, to serve as an excise board. This measure, which is fathered by Assemblyman Dalrymple, of Passaic county, vests the mayor with power to name the members of the board, and fixes their pay. It takes from the Common Council, representatives of the voters, the right to deal directly with the granting and regulating of licenses.

These expressions of opinion were made to a reporter for The Daily Press by members of the local Common Council last week:

President Leslie M. Daniel—"I think it would be a good thing for we would have a rum town," he ironically said.

Ralph I. Tolles—"I do not favor an excise commission, and I do not think it would be a good thing for Plainfield."

Frank DeW. Randolph—"If care is exercised in the selection of excise commissioners, being sure to choose men who are impartial and fair, I believe such a board would be a good thing for the city."

William L. Gisak—"I think the Council should decide such matters. The Councilmen represent the people."

Charles C. Randolph—"It would be a bad thing to change the present method."

J. Stephen Higham—"We don't want it. The present way of dealing with the liquor question is all right."

W. S. Tyler—"I think the bill is one which calls for careful consideration. To much haste should not be excised in such a matter. While I do not think that our Mayor would act unwisely under the provisions of this bill, there are such officials who would and it is a question whether a measure of this kind would be of as much benefit to Plainfield as the present system.

Theodore Wilson—"I don't know as I care to express an opinion. You better see Mr. Tolles or ask Mr. Daniels about it.

Clarence L. Murphy—"I do not think that the measure in its present form is a wise one for Plainfield. It should require the concurrence of the Common Council with the Mayor's action in the appointment of an excise commission"

Following the several committee meetings at the Common Council rooms last week, the members held a caucus on this subject. There were nine members present, Councilmen Daniels, Tolles, Bullock, Giesz, Wilson, Murphy, C. C. Randolph, Higham and Tyler. Councilmen Hibbard and Frank DeW. Randolph were absent.

It was the unanimous opinion that the measure as now drafted would not be a wise one and all thought that the city should be represented at a hearing to be given at Trenton for the purpose of suggesting some changes. It is generally believed that the bill was introduced chiefly for the benefit of Elizabeth. At present they have a Democratic excise commission and having a Republican Mayor the members of that party want to make a change and secure a Republican commission. The Plainfield members of the Common Council will undoubtedly oppose the adoption of the bill unless certain desired changes are made in it.

Y. M. C. A. CONCERT.

Seventeenth Orchestral Entertainment Will be Given on Feb. 27.

The seventeenth concert by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra will be given at the association hall on Monday, February 27, a new programe of popular selections having been arranged for the occasion. As formerly the orchestra will be under the direction of Martin I. Korff, the trainer and conductor.

Roland B. Randolph, a baritone, will be the soloist for the concert. Mr. Randolph is an accomplished singer, and is well known in this city as well as Westfield and Bound Brook. He has appeared in concerts here at various times.

Hit at Democratic Sheriff.

The State Senate has passed Mr. Lehlbach's bill placing the sheriffs in first-class counties on a salary of $10,000 a year. The bill is now in the hands of the Governor, and as he is known to favor the placing of public officials on salary, it is thought he will sign the measure. This act only affects Essex and Hudson counties. As both of these counties now have Democratic Sheriffs it does seem the measure is partisan on its face. The Sheriff of Essex county, Wm. C. Nichol, is the man who defeated Major Carl Lentz the Republican boss of Essex, in the fall of 1903.

HONEYMAN REMAINS ON HEALTH BOARD

AND SUBMITS STATEMENT REQUESTED BY BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Complying with a demand made upon it at the last Councilmanic meeting, the Borough Board of Health, at a meeting Wednesday night, took steps to furnish the former body with a complete statement relative to its financial condition. It was prepared by Rev. W. E. Honeyman and will be submitted to the Council at the regular session to be held next Friday night. The action of the Council was taken because of Collector George F. Brown's declaration that Mr. Honeyman had informed him he could not tell what funds the Board possessed.

As Mr. Honeyman was not reappointed a member of the Board, the meeting Wednesday night should have been the occasion for his resigning as secretary but this he did not do. Under the circumstances his membership will be ignored by friends of the administration, it is said, at the annual meeting on March 6, when officers will be elected. Dr. A. H. Dundon, who was appointed by Mayor Smalley in his stead, and who was present Wednesday, is slated for the secretaryship and in the event of any of the members recognizing Mr. Honeyman's claims to membership and voting for him, a deadlock may result.

Rev. Mr. Honeyman's friends contend that his term has not expired.

ERIE FLIER WRECKED

THREE DEAD, SEVENTY-NINE INJURED

Express For New York, Going a Mile a Minute, Derailed by Broken Truck, Plunged Down Embankment Into Ditch.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 21.—Three lives were lost and seventy-nine persons more or less seriously injured when the Tuxedo club special of the Erie railroad was ditched on the Bergen short cut midway between Warren Point and Fairlawn, N. J., about four miles north of Paterson. The train left the track and rolled down an embankment into a deep ditch.

Of the three killed but two have been identified—Miss Grace Matthews, on her way to New York to seek a position to aid her aged mother, and Miss Mary Speers, eighteen years old, of Turners, N. Y. The third was a woman about seventy-five years old.

That the wreck was due to a flaw in a casting on the truck of the engine tender was the statement of an official of the Erie company. He declared the accident unavoidable and said no one was to blame.

Of the 150 passengers on the train were many wealthy residents of Tuxedo, Suffern and other points near by. They were mostly brokers, lawyers and business men on their way to New York to business. The train was made up of a parlor car, smoker, a day coach and a Tuxedo club special car. The train started from Suffern and was half an hour late, making up lost time when the accident occurred.

One mile a minute is said to be the schedule time of the club train at the point where the smoking car left the rails. The train is said to have been making nearly that speed, and for [illegible] the smoker was [illegible] along the track [illegible] engine left the [illegible] pull the bell rope and [illegible] the smoker left the [illegible] an office boy employed [illegible] York, was hurled [illegible] a window and severely cut about the head.

All that saved the wreck from being one of the most horrible in the annals of railroading in this section was the fact that after the cars jumped the track they pounded along on the ties for a quarter of a mile before plunging down the embankment. The entire train of four cars—a combination baggage and smoking car—went into the ditch, but speed had been slackened, and the ditch was full of snow.

The train, running at high speed, had just passed over a switch at Warren Point when the rear truck of the tender broke. The back of the tender swung to one side, and this threw the first of the five cars off the track and broke the coupling between the car and the tender. The train plunged ahead for a distance of a thousand yards, tearing up the tracks as it went, and finally, while the passengers were trying frantically to reach the doors, all five cars rolled over the ten foot embankment alongside the track. Three of the cars turned completely over and now lie upside down. The engine did not leave the track and ran nearly half a mile before it could be brought to a stop.

Those who were killed sustained their injuries by being jammed between the seats as the cars were crushed together. Another train following close behind took the injured on board, where they were cared for.

The wrecked train was running on what is known as the Bergen branch, a short cut from Ridgewood to Passaic.

Among the injured at Paterson hospital are: O. H. Cutler of Suffern, injured in back; Frank Furman of Suffern, head and leg injured; R. E. Mesner of Middletown, head cut; Walter Duryea of Suffern, head cut; E. M. Post of Tuxedo, injured about the head; S. D. Moore of Tuxedo, head injured; Edward Roberts of Tuxedo, badly injured about the head and face; Carlisle Norwood of Tuxedo, cut about the face and head; Joseph Sedgmore of Suffern, injured on head; John Van Houton of Paterson, injured on head; J. E. Ford of Suffern, injured about the body; Raymond Wayton of Monroe, N. Y., injured head and arm; Arthur Day of Tuxedo, injured on head; Mrs. Joseph Noonan of Chester, N. Y., had her left eye gouged out, and she was otherwise injured about the head and face; Edna McConnell of Suffern, cut about face and head; Elizabeth Mitchell of Madison avenue, New York city, injured about the face and arms; William O'Brien of Washington street, Brooklyn, injured about the head and body; G. # NAVAL BILL PASSED

Congress Voted $99,000,000 For Defense.

TWO MORE BATTLESHIPS ORDERED

New York Representative Condemned Action of President in Sending Condolence to Russia Regarding Late Assassination.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The house after a seven hours' session passed the naval appropriation bill, carrying a total of $99,914,359. The provision for two battleships, as reported by the committee on naval affairs, was retained. Both the majority and minority were badly divided over the proposition, at least forty members of the latter going over to the Republicans, while about an equal number of Republicans voted in opposition. Several important changes in the bill were made. The proposed increase of 1,200 men and officers for the marine corps was stricken out, as was also the provision authorizing the construction of a collier somewhere else than at the Mare Island navy yard in California. In order to do the work better an item of $175,000 was inserted for the proper equipment of the Mare Island navy yard.

Several times during the debate the assassination of Grand Duke Sergius was referred to, the subject being brought up by Mr. Baker (N. Y.), who condemned the action of President Roosevelt in sending a message of condolence to Russia expressing the sentiment that the government and the American people viewed the act with abhorrence. The people, he declared, did view with abhorrence the massacre in St. Petersburg on Jan. 22, but the president, he said, had not seen fit to send a message of condolence on that occasion.

He was replied to by Mr. Grosvenor (O.), who took the ground that, regardless of the character of the duke or the question of the right or wrong of Russia's policy toward her subjects, the president in sending the message he did had done exactly what civilization recognized as his duty.

With particular reference to that action Mr. Grosvenor (O.) was bitter in his criticism of Mr. Baker. Mr. Baker's action he declared to have been unprecedented. Had adjournment been taken, he said, it would have been a meaningless and stupid exhibition of ignorance. The public and the world knew that the American congress did not sympathize with riot and unnecessary bloodshed. Whether it was necessary or not there was no doubt a strong critical opinion in the country, but he said no intelligent man would suggest that congress express an opinion on that subject.

Mr. Grosvenor spoke of Grand Duke Sergius as a cabinet officer of the emperor. He denied that the president fell short of his duty and said that as regards the killing of the grand duke it would have been little short of impropriety had not the president sent his message of condolence.

The climax came later in the day when Mr. Baker read a resolution on the subject, which he subsequently introduced and which in effect was a reiteration of his remarks previously made. He explained that his object in so doing was because it had been suggested that in that event a motion would be made to expel him. He shouted defiance to any member of the house to make the motion as he deposited the resolution and took his seat amid the confusion and turmoil which the incident had created.

Pneumonia Epidemic at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 21.—Owing to an epidemic of pneumonia in this city the health authorities have issued a warning. Since New Year's 600 persons have been affected, nearly one-half of this number dying, and as yet there is no relief. During the last week out of 170 deaths 70 were due to this disease, and in the six previous weeks there were 194 deaths from the same cause, making 266, or 25 per cent of the deaths in 1905, due to pneumonia.

TRINITY SUNDAY-SCHOOL PROSPEROUS AS EVER

ENCOURAGING REPORTS READ AT QUARTERTY MEETING.

CHAMBRMAID SUS MR. CRUIKSHANK, $10,000

DEMANDS DAMAGES FOR ALLEGED DEFAMATION OF CHARACTER.

Miss Jennie Crotty, of this city, has started suit for $10,000 damages against Simeon A. Cruikshank, of Belvdere avenue, for alleged defamation of character. The action is brought in the Supreme Court and will be tried at the May term.

On December 15 the plaintiff was engaged by Mrs. Cruikshank as chambermaid and seamstress. After working for one month, Miss Crotty notified Mrs. Cruikshank that she was going to leave. She was asked to remain until another girl arrived, but she would only stay until the next morning. After packing her trunk, and when about to have it taken from the house, it is alleged, Mr. Cruikshank would not allow the trunk to be taken from the place until it had been searched. Accordingly he summoned Patrolman Overbaugh, who said he had no right to search the trunk. Chief Kiely also assured Mr. Cruikshank that he had no right to make a search without a warrant.

Miss Crotty brought suit in Justice Mosher's court for the unlawful detention of her property but later it was returned. Subsequently Miss Crotty instituted suit for $10,000 for defamation, and for damages in failure to secure a position owing to the defendant's action in detaining her. She is represented by William Newcorn.

DECIDE ON SCHOOL SIGNAL

System Arranged to Notify Pupils on Stormy Days.

IN EFFECT NEXT MONTH

Commissioner Bullock Consents to Plans Submitted by Superintendent Maxson and Chief Doane.

Superintendent of Schools Maxson, Commissioner Bullock and Chief Doane, at a recent conference, decided upon the details of the school alarm to be used on stormy days when the regular school sessions will not be held. The "school signal," as it will be termed, will consist of five long blows of the fire alarm whistle, five seconds intervening between blows As the elapsed time between blows when any regular alarm is sounded over the fire telegraph system is about one and one-half seconds, and as all present alarms, both regular and special, are "repeated" alarms, there is no probability that any citizen will mistake the school signal for a fire call. To still further obviate probability in this direction, the school signal will be given only at stated hours, and, as will be readily understood, but one signal will be necessary on any one day.

The "no school" signal will be given at 7:30 a. m., in order to be of benefit both to high school and grammar grades. The pupils of the former come from all sections of the city, and should have early notice whenever it is deemed unwise to hold a school session.

Of course, this 7:30 signal will mean no school anywhere in the city. Should Superintendent Maxson decide that the storm was not severe enough to keep the older pupils at home, but was rather too much for the little tots in the primary grades, he will ask that a signal be given at 8:15 a. m. A school alarm rung in at 1 p. m. will signify no afternoon session for the pupils who regularly return to their classes at 1:30 p. m. This last signal will be of benefit in case of a severe spring or summer shower, which often comes up with remarkable rapidity.

The several signals mentioned above will go into effect prior to the middle of March, and will be used only on quite stormy days. The establishment of such signals in other cities throughout the country has proved of great convenience and benefit to the entire school population, and Plainfield will no doubt benefit in like manner.

PERSEVERANCE MEMBERS PRESENT "IRISH JUSTICE"

LARGE GATHERING OF PYTHIANS AND FRIENDS ENJOY THE PRODUCTION.

The laughable farce comedy sketch, "Irish Justice," which is frequently seen on the professional stage, was ably presented by members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., before a large gathering of Pythians and their frends Friday night. The parts were all well taken and because of the many funny situations following a make-shift judge presiding over a police court, the laughter was continuous from beginning to end.

The different characters were as follows: "Judge," William N. Runyon; "prosecutor," Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.; "Lawyer Bum," V. W. Nash, Jr.; "court officer," William Schorb; "prisoners," William Baker, Elmer D. Cutting, William Schorb, Jr., Harry Keen, T. Muir and Bertram C. Firstbrook. Various specialties were introduced as the farce progressed and at its close piano and vocal selections were given by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., William N. Runyon, Thomas M. Muir and Bertram Firstbrook. A smoker was enjoyed during the rendition.

The committee which had the affair in charge consisted of William Schorb, David Bowden, Philip Jahn and Elmer D. Cutting.

SAM METZER'S TROUBLES

Thirteen Attachments Issued on His Household Furniture.

TRADESMEN'S BILLS

As far as can be learned Samuel Metzger, formerly of Fairview avenue, an alleged absconding debtor, has not returned to this city to settle the various claims against him or attempt to secure the release of his goods which are still held at the stables of George Conover & Son, of the borough.

In all there are thirteen attachments on these goods, eleven of which were obtained by Reed & Codington for these persons, who have claims against Mr. Metzger: Smalley Brothers, butchers; Frank Howley, druggist; Woodhull & Martin, dry goods; Consumers Coal Company; two physicians, medical services; Dr. C. L. Jenkins, rent; J. A. Smith & Brother, grocers; J. K. Arnold, groceries; J. P. Humble, grocers; John I. Brokaw, carpenter. These parties have claims representing about $500. In addition there are two other claims, the Public Service Corporation, for lights, and V. W. Nash, Sr., for coal. These claimants are represented by V. W. Nash, Jr.

According to legal procedure the goods can be held twenty days, when a judgment can be obtained, the goods appraised and advertised and then sixty days are allowed for the owner of the goods to settle the claims against them. It is possible, however, that Reed & Codington may proceed sooner under a distress warrant in the claim of Dr. Jenkins for rent. This would expedite matters considerable.

Originally Reed & Codington had a claim for $100 for pro ecuting his case in the Supreme Court against a burglary insurance company, last summer, securing a settlement in favor of Mr. Metzger, also for services in securing a settlement from a fire insurance company. Mr. Metzger did not pay Reed & Codington for services rendered and three weeks ago the firm brought a suit against him on contract in Justice Smalley's court, securing judgment on this claim and another one for a claim of the Plainfield Cab Company for the care and keeping of Mr. Metzger's horse and wagon there. Following the judgment there was execution and a levy on the goods in the Metzger home on Fairview avenue and the sale was advertised. The firm met a representative of Mr. Metzger at the house and received $385, the amount of the claim. The firm then released the goods, only to be followed by the thirteen attachments, the claimants getting wise to Mr. Metzger's intention to leave the city.

There's a touch of humor in the Metzger case. Shortly before the attachments were issued, a reporter for The Daily Press was rang up on the 'phone and was informed by a feminine voice of the great fortune which had come like a windfall to the Metzgers. The woman refused to give her name but took great pains to explain that a grandfather of Metzger's wife had died in Paris, leaving a cold million dollars. According to her romantic story, the decendant's father had been disinherited and the estate was left entirely to Mrs. Metzger, of this city. "Mrs. Metzger dislikes any publicity about her good fortune but in justice to the family I think it ought to be published," said the informant. "Now you can say that the Metzgers don't care what the people of Plainfield think of them," declared the woman as she hung the receiver up on the 'phone. An investigation failed to reveal any fortune but closely followed the woman's story came the news that creditors all over the city were seeking Mr. Metzger for payment of their claims.

Watchung Hunt Club Plans.

The Watchung Hunt Club has prepared its schedule of March events, and hopes to be able to resume the weekly chase next Saturday. A hunt was arranged for last week, but the weather interferred. Master of Hounds M. O'M. Knott has announced the following dates and places of meeting: Saturday, March 11, Netherwood at 3:30; Saturday, March 18, residence of Col. J. I. Holly, at 3:30 o'clock; Saturday, March 25, Oak Tree, at 3:30 o'clock.

A landlord with enterprise enough to advertise should suit you—for he will have enterprise enough to keep his property in repair and "up to date."

PARENTAL SCHOOLS IN ALL COUNTIES

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION MAKES IMPORTANT RECOMMENDATION.

At the annual session of the State Board of Education, held at the Hotel Seaside, Atlantic City, on Monday, it was decided to recommend to the Legislature the establishing of parental schools in all counties of the State where there are juvenile courts. S. St. John McCutchen, of North Plainfield, is a member of this board. These parental schools are to be merely schools of detention for incorrigible children under the age of 16. The schools are to be maintained at the expense of the various counties in which they are located.

After a lengthy discussion it was decided to accept the plans and specifications of the proposed new New Jersey State Normal School to be erected in Passaic County, near the Essex County boundary line at Montclair. The building of the school was authorized by the Legislature last year, and $355,000 was appropriated. It was decided to ask the Legislature for an appropriation of $375,000.

The Board voted in favor of amending the bill now before the Legislature providing for a pension for teachers who have taught forty consecutive years in one district.

WHISTLER A SUBJECT FOR PROF. NIEMEYER

LECTURE BEFORE THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB ON GREAT ARTIST.

An unusually large audience greeted Professor John H. Niemeyer, M. A. instructor in the School of Fine Arts, Yale University, who lectured on James McNeill Whistler before the Monday Afternoon Club Monday at the Casino. The president, Mrs. Lowry, in her introduction of the lecturer referred to the coincidence that the date of this lecture planned a year ago was the same date as the memorial exhibition of Whistler's works in London.

Professor Niemeyer tracted the combative qualities of Whistler to an ancestry of military men, and claimed that the man must be known by his works rather than by biographies which are diverse in their estimate of the artist, born in Lowell, Mass., in 1834, and resident abroad most of his life. Whistler, he said, was persistently and aggressively defiant of the opinion of the public. In Paris for many years his works were rejected, but the day came when they were received with acclamation, a medal was granted him and also the decoration of the Legion of Honor. Still, Professor Niemeyer said, every insult was offered him but that of popularity.

The lecturer illustrated his talk with a large number of stereoscopic views of Whistler's etchings and paintings, the former showing departure from old methods and the latter being symphonies in shade and grade color. Among the most remarkable of his portraits, which reveal character rather than the sitter's double, were Miss Alexander, Thomas Carlyle and a picture of his mother. It was Professor Niemeyer's opinion that the portrait of Carlyle would be his greatest work if he had not painted his mother's picture showing his great love of art and his filial devotion.

The American puritanism of Whistler's pictures, the lecturer regarded as their greatest charm, claiming that forty-five years of life in Paris and foreign cities had not diminished the purity of Whistler's conceptions which had in them the artistic touch of the century.

"Billy" Holbert's Success.

W. L. Holbert, the well known minstrel man, who arranged and took part in numerous local minstrel shows during the past few years, is meeting with great success in the same business at Scranton, Pa. He has organized a talented group of coal breaker boys under the name of the "Green Ridge" minstrels and they have been playing to capacity houses through the Scranton valley. Mr. Holbert has booked a tour for them that will continue at intervals until late in the spring.

A Mammoth Kite.

In his spare moments at the West End engine house No. 3, Driver Walter Harrison has constructed a mammoth kite with which he intends to conduct a number of experiments for the purpose of ascertaining its lifting capacity. It is twelve feet high and is composed of an aluminum frame work covered with the very best grade of silk. Instead of cord, small twisted steel wires are used to hold it in check and at times it requires two men to steady it. Clarence Woodcock assisted in making the kite and will help conduct the experiments.

Miss Bertha Brokaw has returned to her position at Reed & Codington's law offices, having recovered from a recent illness.

FINE MENU OF MUSIC

Eleventh Annual Concert at Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

HEARTY APPLAUSE

Mrs. Faxon, Miss Wohlfert and Paul F. Handel the Soloists—Pianists Splendid Work.

An audience that comfortably filled the main auditorium and parlors of the Seventh Day Baptist church, gathered last night to enjoy the eleventh annual musicale given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church. It was an audience comprised largely of music-lovers and the excellent programme prepared by Miss Jessie Utter, who was also organist and accompanist for the evening, was fully enjoyed and received with generous applause. Too much cannot be said in praise of the soloists, Mrs. John G. Faxon, of Fitchburg, Mass., contralto; Miss Florence Wohlfert, of this city, violinist, and Paul F. Handel, of East Orange, tenor, while the work of the Euterpean Glee Club was fully up to the standard. A pleasing feature was the work of Miss Mabel A. Maxson, Miss Grace I. VanSickle, Mrs. W. C. Hubbard and Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, pianists. They gave several selections on two pianos, eight hands, accompanied by Miss Jessie Utter on the organ. The execution, as well as the selections, were such as to call forth hearty applause.

The programme opened with an overture, "Rosamunde," by Schubert, two pianos, eight hands, and organ, which was followed with a contralto solo, "Were I a Sunbeam I Would Fly," and an encore by Mrs. Faxon. She received a cordial welcome by her many friends, and her singing occasioned favorable comment. The Euterpean Glee Club sang "Annie Laurie," and was obliged to respond to an encore. Paul F. Handel's first selection was "Daphne's Love," by Renald, and his rich tenor voice aroused considerable enthusiasm, calling for a second number equally as pleasing.

The work of Miss Florence Wohlfert was of the usual high standard. Her first numbers were "Les Adieux," by Sarasati, and "Obertass," by Wieniawski, in which she displayed that perfect skill which has placed her among the most favored violinists.

Part first of the programme was concluded with two selections by Mrs. Faxon, "The Rose," and "The River and the Sea," by Noel Johnson, in which her voice was heard at its best. At this time a silver offering was received.

Miss Mabel Maxson, pianist, and Miss Utter, organist, opened part two with an instrumental duette—two movements from "Stabat Mater." The glee club then gave "Pickaninny Lullaby," by Macy, and "Honey dat I Love So Well," air by Honeyman. The selections were so well received that the quartette was recalled twice, when they gave two popular selections.

"Israfel," by King, was Mr. Handel's selection in this part, and the range of his voice was given full test. As an encore he gave "The Four Leaf Clover." One of the features was the instrumental trio, "Walther's Preislied," by Wagner, given by Miss Wohlfert, Miss Maxson and Miss Utter. The rendition was delightful.

The next number was a contralto solo, "Till Death," by Mrs. Faxon, accompanied by Miss Wohlfert, violin, and Miss Utter, organ. The last number was an overture, "Stradella," by Flotow, two pianos, eight hands, and organ.

The members of the Euterpean Glee Club are Elmer D. Cotting, E. Maxwell Honeyman, tenors; Sydney R. Trewerth, baritone; Howard T. Lewis, basso, and Clifford A. Braider, conductor.

The silver offering received amounted to $90 and the money will be placed in the treasury of the Christian Endeavor Society.

GOLF CLUB OFFICERS

Parks Re-Elect Charles W. McCutchen as President.

MEMBERSHIP, 111

T. U. Dudley Chosen as Vice President—List of Committees.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Park Golf Club was held last night at the Park Club, with Charles W. McCutchen in the chair. It was the annual meeting and besides receiving reports, electing officers, there was the appointment of committees and discussion of plans for the coming year. The report of the treasurer, Leon H. Thurlow showed a balance of $87 in the treasury, and Charles B. Morse, as secretary, reported a membership of 111.

J. B. Betts and John L. Watson were appointed a nominating committee and they presented the names of the following persons as trustees: Charles W. McCutchen, S. St. John McCutchen, Charles B. Morse, Leon H. Thurlow, T. U. Dudley, Samuel Townsend and Rev. J. O. McKelvey. It was a source of much regret that George T. Rogers found it impossible to serve as a trustee, although he will continue to be just as active in the club affairs and in the play on the course.

Following the meeting of the club, the trustees met and organized by electing Charles W. McCutchen president; T. U. Dudley, vice president; Leon H. Thurlow, treasurer and Charles B. Morse, secretary. The president then appointed these committees:

Greens—Samuel Townsend, chairman; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, J. B. Betts, Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll; golf—T. U. Dudley, chairman; Charles B. Morse, Morgan T. Townsend; house—George D. Hallock, chairman; Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peck, Nelson A. Miller; membership—Charles B. Morse, chairman; George T. Rogers, Leon H. Thurlow.

Plans for the coming year were discussed and outlined and it was generally believed that it would be one of the most successful in the club's history. It was decided to continue the weekly competitions for the President's and Park Golf Club cups, and in addition the golf committee will arrange for the other competitions, including those for women. If the four-cornered golf league, comprising the Westfield, Cranford, Colonia and Park Golf Clubs, is continued, the local club will arrange to have a strong team.

While the opening of the course will depend largely on the weather, the members hope to begin play the last of April. Considerable attention will be devoted to the putting greens with a view to making them better than ever.

TEST FOR SUFFRAGE.

School Debate on Qualification for Suffrage.

The subject "That There Should be an Educational Qualification for Suffrage," was well argued at a debate held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of St. Mary's Parochial School. William Summers and John McEachen took the affirmative and Miss Mary Murray and Miss May Harding the negative.

The judges were the Misses Jeannette Hand, Elizabeth Casey, Elizabeth Brown and Henry J. Ferristel, Warren L. Seaman and James Buckley. Following a lively debate, the affirmative side was given the decision.

OSTEOPATHS FIGHT FOR RECOGNITION

DR. HERRING AMONG THOSE WHO ATTENDED A HEARING YESTERDAY.

Physicians from all parts of the State were at Trenton yesterday to attend the hearing of the Osteopathy bill before the Senate Committee on Miscellaneous Business, among these present being Dr. George D. Herring, of this city. Old and new schools were alike represented, as were also the State Medical Society and several county medical societies and there were a number of women in the delegations. The discussion was at times acrimonious, and was heated up to the "liar" point in one instance.

The osteopaths urged and the regular practitioners opposed the passage of the bill introduced by Senator Hutchinson, which authorizes the Governor to appoint a State board of examiners in osteopathy, the board to consist of three members. A license fee of $25 is required, and practising without a license after July, 1906, is made subject to a fine of $50 or imprisonment of not less than sixty days or more than six months. The same bill, in substance, was before the Legislature two years ago.

A. V. D. HONEYMAN ENTERTAINS MEN'S CLUB

LECTURE TO CONGREGATIONALISTS ON REINDEER LAND.

The Congregation Church Men's Club held a social last night which was largely attended. A. V. D. Honeyman made an address on the subject: "Travels in Reindeer Land." The talk was a description of Mr. Honeyman's own experiences while travelling in Lapland. The speaker referred to the nature of the country, its climatic and scenic conditions, and dwelt at some length upon the people with whom the "reindeer land" is inhabited.

Mr. Honeyman's description of the rough life of the Laplanders, their habits and characteristics was at once interesting and instructive. It is rarely that anything is heard of the Laplanders except through books, so few people have visited their frozen domains. This fact made Mr. Honeyman's account doubly appreciated, as he spoke from direct knowledge of the people and their country.

Selections by the Victor talking machine were appreciated, as were solos by E. C. Martin. Dr. J. H. Buchanan was the accompanist. At the conclusion of the entertainment, refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. The member of the refreshment committee were A. Millard, chairman; Gilbert Rhoads and Samuel Harper.

CHURCH SOCIETY ELECTS.

Staats; secretary, Clarence E. Teel. The reports for the year showed a substantial increase in business over the year before.

—The Sesame Club will meet on Thursday morning in the parlor of the Public Library.

ORDINANCE FOR BARBERS

Health Board's Rigid Provisions Covering Local Shops.

IN EFFECT JUNE 1

Sanitary Requirements — Penalty of $20 for Violations—Licenses.

The Board of Health at its March meeting yesterday adopted on second reading the ordinance to license and regulate barber shops in this city, the object being to prevent the spread of contagious skin diseases in unsanitary shops. The ordinance provides that every barber in the city shall on or before June 1, 1905, and annually thereafter, procure a permit in writing from the Board of Health for which permit the sum of $2 shall be paid.

The ordinance also provides for strict adherence to these rules: First—barbers must wash their hands thoroughly with soap and water before attending any person, and keep their finger nails short and clean. Second—no alum or other astringent shall be used in stick form. If used at all it must be in the form of powder. Third—the use of powder-puffs is prohibited. Fourth—no towel shall be used for more than one person without being washed. Fifth—a sponge must not be used on more than one person. Sixth—mugs and shaving brushes shall be thoroughly washed in boiling water after use on each person. Seventh—combs, razors, clippers and scissors shall be thoroughly cleaned by the use of some germicide as frequent intervals. Eighth—floors must be swept or mopped every day and all furniture and woodwork kept free from dust. Ninth—hot and cold water must be provided. Tenth—no person shall be allowed to use any barber shop to sleep in.

The ordinance also provides that on and after June 1 next, a printed copy of the ordinance shall be placed and kept in a conspicuous place and position in the various barber shops. Any persons offending against or violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall on conviction thereof, forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than $2 nor more than $20, the amount of such penalty to be left to the discretion of the court or magistrate before whom complaint may be made.

POLICE PENSIONS.

Plan to Deduct Two Per Cent. From Active Men's Salaries.

Councilman W. S. Tyler, chairman of the police committee, believes that the city can secure better police service and greater efficiency in this department if after a long service the men are given a suitable pension, according to the system in vogue in other cities. At the meeting of the Common Council Monday night he made the suggestion that some scheme be adopted whereby a pension fund can be established and he invites suggestions from everybody. Mr. Tyler does not propose to bring the matter up at present for action. He wants a free and full discussion of the subject.

Mr. Tyler referred to the case of Roundsman William J. Mattox, who has just resigned owing to ill-health, and stated that he regretted that the city was not in a position to assist him. With some kind of a pension system this trouble would be overcome and it would prove an incentive for persons seeking positions on the force, knowing that in after years they would not be thrown on their own resources.

By way of a suggestion Mr. Tyler said that after a certain period of service a man might be retired on half-pay and that to provide for this a pension fund might be established by deducting two per cent. from the salaries of the active men. This system is in force in other cities, although the amount deducted is said to be one per cent. The police departments are larger and the one per cent. would bring in more than two per cent. would here. It was believed that if the plan is fully explained to the members of the force it would receive their hearty endorsement.

City Court Cases.

The following cases were disposed of in the city court yesterday morning: Charles Leonard, intoxication, sixty days; Miss Emma Rockfellow, adjudged insane and committed to State Hospital; Chris Deimonsch, who has temporary aberration, committed for ten days until his mind clears up, when he will be sent to his home in Philadelphia.

Miss Clara Weber, of East Third street, has been entertaining Miss Bessie Strickland, of New York.

Women Wise And Unwise

Gossip In the Arcadian Simplicity of a Village—Female "Swappers"

"Isn't it idyllic living in a small town like this!" sighed the city visitor. "It doesn't seem possible you can have cares and worries. Plenty of fresh air, plenty of green grass around each house, no brick fronts, no ostentations—you know every one, and every one knows you"—

"And your business!" put in Mrs. Jones, the object of all this envy.

Then, as she noticed the astonishment on her visitor's face, she went on: "You people in the city can form no idea of the gossip in a small place like this. Between the maids over the back fences and the hackmen at the station I can assure you we need no reporters for our daily paper. Anyway, your neighbors consider that you ought to tell them your business. It is your duty, and if you don't provide that slight recreation they resent it bitterly. It appears I am considered rather close mouthed, as I found out recently.

News at Any Cost.

"When they haven't actual news they make it up. Recently a friend stayed with us while she was attending to the funeral of a near relative. The night before the ceremony I went out in a closed depot carriage (it was after 8 o'clock and a cold night) to get the minister, as my friend wanted to talk with him and arrange matters. The minister stayed an hour and then went away. Two evenings later my daughter Anna rang up a hack from the station and started off, as she supposed, for a musicale at a friend's house. When the driver stopped she looked out and saw, to her surprise, he had drawn up at the minister's house. 'What is the matter?' she cried, sticking her head out. 'Oh, I thought you'd want to stop here on the way for Mr. Nichols. He dropped in here on his way to the party,' was the rejoinder. And with a very puzzled expression the driver condescended to move on. Not until she reached home was the matter made clear to the girl, and then she learned the whole story amid shrieks of delight from her sisters. Through the station hackmen a rumor was afloat that, to put it in their own language: 'One of the Jones girls was married last night. Jim was rung up from the station to take the mother to the minister's in a closed rig, and the minister stayed just long enough in the house to marry 'em.'"

"Well, I never!" gasped the city visitor.

The Swapping Habit.

There is a mania among men known as the swapping habit. They swap watches, rings, horses—everything except wives, and in the divorce courts there have been cases of that even. But the disease is not confined to men. I know a lot of women who would swap their eternal souls if they thought they were getting a bargain.

On the whole, I'm not sure the sort of woman who progresses in her belongings, so to speak, is not more clever than she who "hangs on" indefinitely. The great idea is to get rid of things when they are going out of style or you feel you won't need them any more—to get rid of them at that very moment—and let the money go toward the new things needed instead of hoarding useless stuff. Some women make friends of the secondhand dealer and sell all their old things to the betterment of their house; others regard him as their natural enemy.

I have actually seen a woman refuse to sell an old piece of furniture she had used several years because the secondhand man wouldn't give her the original price. She was angry too! Five years later she drew it out of the garret, where it had been stored, and gave it away for lack of a purchaser.

That's all the difference between a good housekeeper and a bad one. The bad one goes on accumulating old truck; the good one uses judgment and keeps gradually getting rid of the old by things and investing the proceeds in the new articles she needs.

MAUD ROBINSON.

NEW HATS.

Poke Bonnets In the Lead—Modified Napoleon Shapes Also Liked.

The 1830 poke bonnet will lead in millinery. It is made up in the airiest materials, including chiffon, mousseline de soie, milan straw and horsehair braid, with long flowing strings of chiffon and dainty wreaths of button roses inside the crown resting against the hair.

The colonial or modified Napoleon is to be a favorite shape, also English turbans, and the flat sailor will hold its own.

Ready to wear hats are mostly of chip. A French chip plateau trimmed with roses in mahogany shades is one of the attractive models to be seen.

An odd lingerie hat is in directoire style, with the stiff lines softened by the material it is made of, which is nothing but the tiniest of frills of airy pink lace. It is trimmed with stiff white camellias.

Irish crochet lace will make many of the summer hats to be worn with thin dresses.

The parasols that have made their appearance are diaphanous affairs, looking as though a breath would blow them away.

China silk petticoats to be worn under lawns and dimities are made very pretty with shirred ruffles, hand embroidered in large dots.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

Waistcoats to Be Seen on the New Coats—Some Handsome Laces.

The new spring coats will have chic little waistcoats, which will make them individual and smart.

With the close fitting jacket waistcoats of linen, pique and duck are very mannish and tailor-like. Most women, though, prefer the soft lingerie shirt waist worn under the coat.

The new tweeds and cheviots come in very light shades. Champagne and mode barred off with invisible checks are favorite designs.

Etamine later on will take the place in coat and skirt gowns of the heavier tweeds.

For all coats reaching below the waist line the tight fitting models will be used in preference to loose sack coats.

Embroideries for summer frocks are more alluring than ever and, unfortunately, very expensive. All the modish thin frocks will have about them somewhere lace and embroidery, and often both will be in evidence.

Irish crochet lace is handsomer than ever. The design most fancied has part of the crochet pattern raised and separate from the groundwork.

The costume sketched is of rose cashmere. The full skirt is shirred with a heading in groups of three lines at the knee and a foot higher up the skirt length. The waist has the same shirred treatment at the bust line. Around a chemisette of mousseline are a mousseline trimmed collar and small revers. The buttons on the stole piece are of dull silver. The deep cuffs and the little turnover on the mousseline choker are of lace.

FOREWORDS OF FASHION.

The Tailored Sleeve—A New Dress Fabric—Favored Colors.

Green, blue and brown are the predominating colors in trimmings, and the newest embroideries show the faintest line of gold thread through them.

The tailored sleeves of the spring will be very full at the top and narrow down gradually at the wrist. For more elaborate frocks the bagging sleeve will hold its own, with a double puff effect gathering into a deep cuff in the lead.

Chiffon serge is a lovely dress material which is both serviceable and inexpensive. Many of the new walking skirts are gored at the top and have a side plaited flounce from the knee.

Fashion authorities say that trimming upon trimming will be a characteristic of the spring styles in dress. It seems hardly possible that the adornment craze of the winter can be carried to a greater extent.

Mother-of-pearl effects represent the latest fad in foulard silks.

Valenciennes lace is to be used as a trimming on the new organdies, which are very sheer in texture and lovely in design. The lace is dyed to match the dominant color in the organdie. Ribbon of a contrasting color is combined with the val for trimming.

The picture shows an attractive gown of cornflower blue voile. The skirt at the waist is slightly gathered, and a second skirt hangs full from a scalloped heading. Scallops also trim the bottom of the skirt above a band of deep blue velvet. The waist is plaited about the figure into a horizontally plaited yoke of the voile, trimmed with guipure lace of the same cornflower hue.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

The Laces on Summer Frocks Will Be of Dainty Texture.

The lace to be used on summer frocks will be of thin makes. In place of last year's Irish, cluny guipure and venetian, the thinnest kind of malines and brussels will be employed. These laces are manufactured to look so much like the "real" that it is hardly worth while paying the very great difference in price between them and the imitation even when money is no object.

Chantilly and a new silk Spanish lace which comes in a combination of two colors—for instance, bronze and white or ecru and white or with gold threads—are to be the favorite laces of the season.

Tulle lace with plastic cabochon beads on it and hollow metal capsules in the shape of half a ball in gold, silver, steel or jet is the latest of fashion's creations.

This is to be a great silk season, and fortunately the silks all come in wide widths. The bouffant skirts have made this extra width a necessity. They have also made a silk dress pattern number at least eighteen yards where formerly fifteen were sufficient.

The draped evening bodice shown in the illustration is of yellow taffeta. This waist needs careful fitting over a boned lining. About the decollete neck are two fitted velvet ruffles overlaid with ruffles of brussels lace. The bodice fastens at one side with large cabochons of silk. The puffed elbow sleeves finish with ruffles of lace and silk.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

To Be Handsome a Woman Must First Be Healthy.

Good digestion, perfect cleanliness of the body, abundant exercise and fresh air, plenty of sleep, a serene, sunny mind—these are the essentials of good health. Next, good health is the foundation of all physical beauty whatsoever.

But life is too short for the average woman to spend half her time in breathing exercises and posturings merely for the sake of bodily culture. She has something else to do—at least let us hope so. But undoubtedly she can do useful work and by that very occupation get also the proper physical culture.

To begin, let us go at our housework in a cheerful, happy mind, knowing all the while that it is good for us, soul and body. Next, let us remember always to stand and stoop in the right way. How to stand you know already—spine erect, weight mainly on front of foot, chest up. The right way, and the only right way, to stoop is to stoop without slumping. Bend the body from the waist and hips, never in the slovenly, ugly way from the knees. Hold always the stomach and abdomen in, the knees rigid, then curve the spine over forward from the waist downward in a long, graceful sweep.

Arm and Chest Culture.

In performing that admirable physical culture exercise, housework, it is frequently necessary to lift the arms above the head, as in wiping dust from walls, brackets, chandeliers and the top of picture frames. Nothing will do more to develop a noble chest and shapely arms than just this. When a woman ties a cloth over a broom, then lifts the broom above her head and gives walls and ceiling a vigorous rubbing, she thereby lifts her whole muscular system. She thus raises muscles that have slidden down into ungraceful prominence around the waist and pulls them again into the place where nature put them when she was a child and gave her thus a full, fine chest. It really ought to be a privilege instead of an irksome duty to perform tasks that require using the hands vigorously while the arms are lifted above the head. The spine must necessarily be held erect in this position, and drooping, bowed shoulders are thus straightened and made flat.

The Scrubbing Exercise.

A word about scrubbing, which so strengthens back, shoulders and arms. It is usually not necessary for a woman to get down upon her poor, bruised knees to scrub a floor. She can do it quite as well except in places she cannot easily reach by stooping over from the waist and hips till her hands reach the floor. In this position she can do as effective work, and she does not grow weary or wear her knees out.

Developing the Lower Limbs.

Few men and almost no women have the full use of their lower limbs. The legs are apt to be stiff and clumsy with the best of us. To make them strong, nimble and graceful housework comes in as a beneficent agent, provided the woman does not peg around her kitchen and home wearing those nerve racking, foot and leg destroying high heels so commonly seen. They were never made to walk upon—never—though when a woman is "dressed up" she rather likes the looks of them.

Stooping forward with the knees rigid and the heels together strengthens and limbers the muscles of the back of the leg throughout its whole length. There are a few movements over which every woman alive can spend two or three minutes a day. One of these is standing upon the toes and moving the heels rapidly up and down. This limbers the ankles and instep. Next stand upon one leg while you shake the other vigorously. Also swing the free leg back and forth, then from side to side as far as possible in front.

Sweet Sleep.

It is certain that no woman can be either healthy or handsome without abundant sleep to brighten the eyes and soften the facial lines that the day brings. Some persons need much more sleep than others, but find out for yourself just how much you need, then take it in spite of everything. To skimp sleep makes a woman old and stupid twenty years before her time.

BUSINESS HINTS FOR WOMEN

Things They Do and Things Men Wish They Wouldn't Do.

"We are told that women are becoming more businesslike every day," remarked the wife of a prominent lawyer, "and yet I cannot see any apparent decrease in the number of those who conduct their affairs foolishly or carelessly. Every now and then, for instance, my husband comes home and tells me about a case where a widow is at the mercy of some man who administers her estate. I don't mean a man her husband has left in charge, but one she herself has permitted the court to appoint because she blushingly confessed she knew nothing about business. Why a woman will give herself a tyrant of this description I don't see when by retaining the administration of her own estate and merely appointing her lawyer her agent she can still enjoy his advice and yet be able to do things without his permission. I know of one silly woman with two grown daughters who appointed an uncle of hers administrator of her husband's estate, and, lo and behold, she had to ask the cross old man's consent even to shingle the roof on her summer cottage!

Every now and then I hear the officials of a bank largely patronized by women complain of the multitude of small checks they are compelled to bother with. Why on earth will women write checks for $2.38, for instance? Another thing, why will some women always sign their checks as Mrs. Robert Brown instead of Mary Smith Brown as ordinary common good sense and taste should teach them to do? These are feminine mysteries as well as the distracting habit some women have of never adding up the checks they issue and consequently obliging the bank to notify them that they have overdrawn their account.

Then take the incidents of daily life. It is the women who favor installment plan furniture—not the men, when they can help it. A woman only sees the small cost of the initial payment.

CHILD DISCIPLINE.

A Peculiar Phase of Training From the Maternal Standpoint.

Some parents' attempts to discipline the child seem to be much in the nature of a boomerang. It is rather hard to determine who is going to be hit.

I shall never so long as I live forget an instance I beheld. It was about Christmas time, and the mother of a large family was busy getting ready the annual basket of cast off toys and clothing for the poor. The eldest children contributed cheerfully, as was their custom; then came the turn of the youngest, but she firmly refused to part with any of her belongings, no matter how hideous or dilapidated.

Thoroughly shocked by such callousness, the mother administered a severe lecture on the evils of selfishness, and then, to punctuate her remarks, she took a rag doll from the child and packed it in the basket.

Cry? You never heard anything like the agonized sobs of that poor infant. That child learned a lesson not of charity, but of injustice, and imbibed as well such a hatred of the said poor that she would not bestow even as much as a copper on a beggar in the street until she was almost grown up and things began to assume their normal proportions.

And how many mothers you and I know who punish or "discipline" their children in the same senseless manner?

FASHION HINTS.

Shirt Waist Material—Handsome Lace Collars—Moire Poplin.

The new madras shirt waist material is as handsome as satin and looks like an exquisitely fine piece of table linen. Stripes will take the place of the dotted designs of last year in linens.

A handsome deep lace collar is an indispensable possession for the girl with a limited wardrobe. An attractive collar is made of lace beading between which white chiffon is shirred in puff-ings. Over the shoulders the collar runs into a point to give a becoming width to the shoulders. Two tab fronts are made by lace motifs, and the whole collar is outlined with a deep chiffon ruffle with a ruched edge. A high collar may be added if desired, but the collar described is finished at the neck by a velvet ribbon tied in bowknots every few inches. Two of these knots down the front serve as fastenings.

Moire poplin comes in thin spring weight and makes most charming afternoon costumes. The new voiles are softer and more silky than the manufacturers have ever produced.

Jaunty little short coats made with slightly full short basques promise a successful vogue.

The smart outing hat illustrated is one of the season's advanced models. It comes in all the modish colors and is simply trimmed with a band of velvet and a chou of the same material.

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

Cloth Embroidery Is the Vogue. Flower Motif Trimmings.

Cloth embroidery will be used next spring, and, as usual, the checked frock will put in its annual appearance.

White homespun trimmed with black makes a stunning costume for a luncheon party. The skirt, of course, will clear the ground, be cut fairly plain and have a slight fullness at the waist. From the knees are three flat tucks braided with thick cream braid with a suggestion of black in it. The coat, with its small sleeve and pelerine shaped collar, has a thickly braided vest and deep cuffs of black and white braid. A well cut pointed band of white kid finishes the coat at the waist, from which comes a tiny fluted basque cut away in front. A lingerie shirt waist is worn with the gown. Surmounting the whole is a three cornered black straw hat trimmed with cockades of black and white braid.

Motifs of flowers are a very pretty gown trimming. A pansy or violet motif is a lovely scheme for a flower adornment on a waist. Purple velvet is cut in the shape of the blossom selected. The leaves toning on the same color are applied to the flowers. In the middle of each pansy or violet is sewed a bead to look like a jewel. The petals are worked with long silk stitches.

Broderie anglaise makes the charming evening frock illustrated. Three flounces of this handsome embroidery form the lower part of the skirt, the upper portion being made of the all over lace. The bodice is simply designed. A fall of the broderie anglaise over a chiffon ruffle softens the decollete neck. The sleeves are short puffs.

Let the Girls Do What They Want to Do.

Klotho McGee, daughter of Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, is going with her father, Professor McGee, the anthropologist, to Arizona. Professor McGee will make explorations in the desert near Yuma, said to be the hottest place in North America. Miss McGee is fifteen years old and accompanies her father of her own choice. It is pleasant to note that at least one girl is thus allowed to have her own way without any conventional old tabbies to sit upon her and crush the originality out of her. One young woman I know would have made a shining success on the dramatic stage but for the chilling, deadening influence of "our folks," who set themselves against it. All over the country are girls who would have been successful authors, actresses, lawyers, doctors, professional singers or tradeswomen, but the aspiration was crushed out of them by old tabbies of both sexes who surrounded them. To be sure, if a girl has tremendous will power she will take her own way in spite of these professors of conventionality, but they make the way ten times as hard for her. But for them hundreds of girls that are now never heard of would make brilliant records in the professions.

The Mothers' Congress meets in April. Do the mothers know what is the most lamentable lack in America today? It is the want of training in common honesty and courtesy in the schools. The country is overwhelmed with persons who come from the most boorish classes of Europe. They are strong and cheeky; they know only how to grab all they can without any scruple of good manners or any other kind of scruple. Too often, indeed, the very teachers come from this same class and actually themselves need ethical and aesthetic training as much as their pupils do. American men are rapidly acquiring the reputation of being the rudest, most unpleasant mannered men in civilization. These are not men of the old American stock, but those who have no training in morality or politeness either at home or in school. Nobody but mothers can deal with this grave menace to American society.

A curious thing happened the other evening in New York. A well bred person could scarcely believe it, but I assure you it is fact. A young lady—at least she is supposed to be a lady—had dinner with some friends. After dinner a man told an amusing story. The climax to the story took the girl unawares, and she laughed suddenly and immoderately and swallowed a big steel pin. She—she—one hates to write it, but that girl was picking her teeth with this pin. Troubles followed. There came an ambulance and took the girl to the hospital. Next came surgeons, knives, rays, magnets and eager doctors "trying projects" on her. At last reports the young woman was in a sad condition from fright, suffering and the doctors' continued "projects." Moral—Let those addicted to the dinner table toothpick habit use a fork.

For many years girls have been trying, often vainly, to squeeze into colleges and universities attended by the supreme white male person. At length philanthropists took pity on poor, forlorn girls and established schools of housekeeping, where feminine folk with their living to earn might become accomplished cooks and housekeepers. # TAKE MONEY FROM WOMAN'S STOCKING

CHICAGO THUGS MAKE BOLD ASSAULT ON LADY BARBER.

REMOVE STOCKINGS IN HUNT

Find Secret Hiding Place of Her Wealth—Unusual Methods of Burglars in Robbing a Flat.

Chicago.—When within a few feet of her home last night Miss Nellie Sprague, No. 221 Dearborn avenue, was attacked by three highwaymen, who, after they had assaulted her robbed her of $500.

Miss Sprague was on her way home from the barber shop at No. 95 Washington street, of which she is the proprietress, and had drawn some money from the bank. Her movements were evidently known to the thugs who assaulted her. They hid in a hallway next to her home and when she passed one of the three sprang out and dealt her a blow on the head. She was felled to the ground and the three threatened her with death if she cried out.

A pocketbook containing a small amount of change was torn from her wrist and three rings which fitted so tightly that the flesh was torn off her hand when they were torn from her, were taken.

The spokesman for the men then demanded to know where she had her money. She feigned unconsciousness and a search was made in her clothing. Her stockings were pulled from her legs and $175 was found in them.

After the robbery the men carried her to her doorway and told her to go to her apartment and remain perfectly quiet. After threatening death if she called for assistance they left her in her hallway. She was discovered by a neighbor, who summoned a physician. None of her injuries is fatal.

Using methods entirely new to the police, burglars planned to rob the home of Samuel Schweitzer, No. 4440 Vincennes avenue, recently, and the case failed only because of the fact that owing to illness Dr. Emil G. Hirsch was unable to deliver a lecture at Temple Israel, Forty-fifth street and Vincennes avenue, as had previously been announced. Mr. and Mrs. Schweitzer decided to attend the lecture and they left home shortly after eight o'clock, leaving Mrs. Schweitzer's mother and a maid at home. They had been gone but a short time when the maid was called to the telephone. She was told that Mrs. Schweitzer had been seriously injured by an automobile and that, accompanied by her husband, she was on her way to the Provident hospital. The maid informed Mrs. Schweitzer's mother immediately they started for the hospital. They had been gone but a short time when the coachman was called to the telephone. The speaker ordered that he drive to Provident hospital immediately. In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Schweitzer went home from the church, and when they entered saw two men run across the yard from the house and disappear in the alley.

Freed by Prison Wedding.

New York City.—Love of a girl of wealthy parents for the son of a janitor in an apartment house at No. 340 West One Hundred and Twentieth street, in which she lived, had its denouement in the Tombs prison, when Emma Couch, 19, pretty and well dressed, became the wife of William Frahm, 20 years old, who gave his address as No. 323 Hudson street, where his mother keeps a saloon for the long shoreman couple. The two met last summer when Frahm was assisting his father. On last Wednesday Frahm was committed to the Tombs from the court of special sessions for failure to comply with an order of filiation. The ceremony was performed by one of the prison chaplains, and the young couple left the Tombs apparently happy.

Lobster's Pinch Causes Death.

New York.—Blood poisoning caused by the pinch of a lobster's claws has caused the death of Otto Zimmerman, a chef in a big Harlem restaurant. Zimmerman's special work was in preparing lobsters, his skill for which was somewhat noted. He handled hundreds of crustaceans every day and frequently was bitten. Finally one, particularly strong, caught him by a thumb and let out the blood. Swelling set in the next day and in a few days the end had in great agony.

Paris.—The departure of Judge Steyn for South Africa was the occasion for a gathering of Boer sympathizers at the northern railroad station. Judge Steyn expressed his thanks for the sympathy manifested toward him, but said that he had no resentment at the result of the war. He was glad to return to his farm near Bloemfontein, which was free of taxes, and her burned under General Kitchener's regime, but it had been completely devastated, and all the live stock had been commandeered. When a representative of the press approached Judge Steyn concerning the reports of another uprising of the Boers the ex-president answered:

"We have given our parole to the British government, and as men of honor shall keep it. I look forward to the day which I think is near when South Africa will have renewed prosperity, with Englishmen and Boers working side by side."

Judge Steyn leaves his son to be educated at Cambridge university. He continued:

"The Boers will be the first to help put down an uprising of the blacks against the British."

The ex-president is still partly paralyzed and has been under the care of Paris specialists.

FITTED WITH A CRANE.

A Unique Traction Engine That Will Serve Many Purposes—Many Now in Use.

Boston.—Traction engines are coming more and more into use for hauling heavy loads. For them it is claimed that they can "do anything." But supposing a traction engine on the road finds its path blocked by a fallen tree! It will be stopped! Only temporarily, though, for with the engine it be fitted up front with a crane.

The crane—some of them are removable at will—is fixed to the fore-platform of the traction engine. In some cases, when the crane is in use, legs or supports are fitted beneath the fore-platform, to take some of the strain off the front axle and wheels. A long steel chain is passed up to the pulley of the crane, and down to the trunk of the fallen tree, around which the end of the chain is made fast. The engine then, instead of revolving its big driving wheels, expends its energy in hauling in the chain; the tree swings in the air; and, the power being switched back again to the road wheels, the engine trundles to the side of the highway and drops the tree in a field.

PECULIAR TRACTION ENGINE.
(It is Fitted with a Crane and is Adapted to Many Uses.)

Worm's Defense.

The annelid, Podynce cirrata, is a mean-looking worm about an inch and a half in length, of flattened shape, blunt at both ends, apparently covered by a smooth skin of a dull brown color. On being touched it throws itself into elegant serpentine curves, and then what appears to be the upper skin is seen to be composed of a great number of round flat membranous plates or shields, arranged in two rows, overlapping each other. These, though of larger size, are attached to the body only by a small point in the center of their sides, so that when the animal moves the edges of these shields are lifted and exhibit their live structure, sliding upon each other in a singular manner.

Champagne City.

The town of Epernay, in France, is a vast subterranean city, the streets for miles and miles being hewn out of the solid chalk, flanked with piles of champagne of all blends and qualities. There is no light in this labyrinth of streets, crossings and turnings, except that which the spluttering candles afford. All is dark and damp, with the thermometer down about zero. The largest champagne manufacturers in Epernay possess underground cellars which cover no less than 45 acres and contain 5,000,000 bottles of wine.

Must Be Clean.

Under a new rule, women inspectors visit the public schools of London and inspect the pupils. Those that are not clean are sent home. But already it has been found that some of the children smear themselves with mud before entering school, in hope that an inspector will pay a visit.

SHOT AT A CAT, BUT KILLED WIFE INSTEAD

Long Island Farmer Put a Bullet Through a Wall Into Heart of His Helpmate.

St. James, L. I.—Ludwig Weisse, a prosperous farmer of this place, shot and almost instantly killed his wife the other day, but the bullet that entered her heart was not intended for her. It was aimed at a strange cat that had invaded the hennery.

Weisse, prostrated by the tragedy, was arrested by his own son, Deputy Sheriff Rudolph Weisse, the only official at hand legally equipped to act in the case. But it was so clear that the killing was accidental that a county authorities released the heart-broken farmer and surrendered to him the body of his wife.

Weisse is 66 years old. He owns one of the best equipped farms in the vicinity. His wife was a noted breeder of fine poultry, and the Weisse hennery is one of the finest on Long Island. Recently cats and chickens have disappeared. Mrs. Weisse accused prowling cats.

At nine o'clock the other morning Mrs. Weisse saw a cat enter the hennery. She called her husband, who took a rifle and ran to the big hennery.

Just then a farmhand called for instructions and Mr. Weisse went out in search of her husband. At the door of the hennery she called his name.

"In a minute," he replied. "I'll come as soon as I kill this cat and not before."

Just then Weisse spied the cat on top of a beehive in the park. Supposing that his wife had returned to the house he fired. The bullet missed the cat, crashed through the thin wall of the hennery and entered the heart of Mrs. Weisse. She screamed as she fell, and in an instant the farmer was at her side. Medical aid was summoned in haste, but she was dead before it arrived.

A VILLAGE SHOCKED OVER FOOT SOCIAL.

Fad in a Charity Entertainment Leads to Wrangle Among Norristown, Pa., Church Folk.

Norristown, Pa.—A "foot social," held recently at a residence near West Conshohocken, has caused much gossip among those who do not believe in novelties. The "social" was held for the purpose of providing certain charity funds, and those who attended say that the affair was a complete success.

The manner in which the fad was carried out is the cause of the excitement and the sudden suppression of the names of those who participated in the affair. Across the room in which the guests of the evening were assembled there was drawn a curtain, being such a distance from the floor as to permit the display of the feet of those sitting in the rear of the curtain.

The women guests took positions back of the curtain and exposed their feet beneath it, while one, acting as auctioneer, sold the pair of feet to the highest bidder. The lucky purchaser kept the woman to whom the feet belonged as a partner during the evening and entertained her at supper.

It is understood that about $100 was realized and the proceeds were applied to a worthy charity.

LAID TO MISPLACED LIVER.

Why Worst Boy in Chicago Is a Confirmed Thief According to a Physician.

Chicago. — Stephen Szadokierski, dubbed by the police of Chicago as the worst boy in the city, has at last found out why it is that he cannot help being bad. It was found on an examination by Dr. Sydney Kuh that the lad's heart is on the right side and his liver is on the left side. "Who could help being bad with such an arrangement of his "works?" " said the doctor, after he had made the examination.

"I can't understand how he has been as good as he has been, for, besides this peculiar arrangement of his physical organs, he has water on the brain," concluded Dr. Kuh.

The formal report of the case, setting forth in formal terms the causes of little ten-year-old Stephen's excessive badness, will be sent to Judge Mack, in whose court the case was tried.

This will probably solve the problem of the little fellow, who was brought into the juvenile court and hailed by his father and the police as an incorrigible little thief. The father, Marion Szadokierski, claims that he has been impoverished by the thefts of his son.

THE SMALL FARMER

HIS OPPORTUNITIES ARE IMPROVING EACH YEAR.

How Employment in Shop or Store Might Be Combined with Agriculture on a Small Scale to Advantage.

How to get people "back to the soil" has been a question for years with economists. It has been brought forward more clearly of late, by the military successes of the Japanese—a people living on small farms, on what we would call a meager diet, yet manifestly highly civilized, and physically strong.

The extension of irrigating schemes in the arid regions of the United States has directed attention to the possibility of a profitable use of much smaller tracts of land than we have been accustomed to accept as our minimum allotment for a home.

When in order to "get back to the soil," there was required ability to secure and handle 80 or 160 acres of land, the difficulties seemed insurmountable. But if it can be shown to the people to whom this counsel is given that they can be supported and can even accumulate property on a tract of three, five or ten acres, the problem will seem much easier of solution.

Farming is a profession, and should be studied as such. This pursuit is subject to a great variety of modifying influences, and gives wide intelligence and careful judgment to secure the full measure of success.

It is believed that most men have a natural aptitude for drawing support from the soil, since the mechanics of large cities and even their children frequently make a measure of success, cultivating little corners of town lots.

It is no longer necessary for men to search the outskirts of civilization to find land where they may secure a living. Small tracts from one to five acres may be had on easy terms almost everywhere, even in the suburbs of large cities and out along trolley lines. Thus the isolation of farm life is avoided, while there are 40 to 50 families instead of one on 160 acres, cooperation makes house building, as well as the procurement of tools, animals and machinery much easier.

It is also much easier to combine work on the land with employment in the shop or store, to the great advantage of the worker. Health would be promoted, and great pecuniary advantages would result from a judicious combination of this kind.

It would be interesting, for example, if a factory could be established, the employes of which would work eight hours a day therein, and during the proper seasons devote two hours a day to the intelligent cultivation of a two-acre or three-acre field.

On this tract could easily be produced vegetables and small fruits, sufficient for family use, and a marketable surplus, which, under favorable circumstances, would in many cases equal the earnings in the factory.

A comparison of the health and prosperity of the operatives of such an institution with that of workers in a neighboring establishment, giving ten hours a day to their indoor work, would, we are confident, make an unmistakable showing in favor of the former.

Details have recently been made public as to the operations of a five-acre farm in an eastern state that is making a comfortable living for a family of four and a good profit in addition. After paying for the farm, the implements, a cow, poultry and pigs, which cost $1,200, the owner had $200 left for working capital. A garden was planted, which soon furnished most of the food for the family, and the surplus was sold in a neighboring town. The cow furnished the milk, and added to the income. Small fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries and blackberries and trees like pears, peaches and plums were set out. In the fall the poultry gave the best of this and the surplus poultry gave the means for the family with some left for market.

Each year his income increased, until to-day he shows a net gain, after paying all living expenses, of $50 a month. He keeps 300 head of poultry and devotes the rest of his land to gardening, vegetables and fruits.

This success shows what can be done by a combination of muscle and brains on a small piece of land. The same measure of success is possible to many people in different localities, and each instance thereof helps to solve the problem of getting people back to the land and relieving the congestion in cities.

The plan as applied to factory employes is worth careful thought.

BOY WONDER VIOLINIST.

Eleven-Year-Old Lad Whom Daniel Frohman Pays $1,500 Each Time He Plays.

New York.—Franz von Vecsey, the little Hungarian violinist whose performances have been the talk of musical circles of Europe, and who is to give a series of 20 concerts in this country under the management of Daniel Frohman, arrived a few days ago on the Lucania of the Cunard line, accompanied by his father and mother and by Herr Zilcher, a Berlin pianist, who is his accompanist.

Wrapped in a gray fur lined ulster and wearing a small fur cap young Von Vecsey looked as bright and wide-awake as any ordinary 11-year old boy who doesn't know one note from another and thinks more of skating at this time of year than anything else, says the Herald. In fact, his chief concern seemed to be for a small camera which he carried with him. He is of good height and frame. He has large black eyes and a pronounced frontal development. The forehead is high and broad. In complexion the boy is dark. He is said to be of Magyar descent.

Franz was very hungry when the liner arrived, and when soon after he landed he started with his parents to leave the dock to get something to eat, a customs official "spotted" the camera and insisted on taking charge of it until an inspector had seen it.

"No, no!" cried the boy. "You must not take this. See, it is an American camera," and he showed the manufacturer's stamp to the customs man, who thereupon let him pass.

The youngster speaks English very well.

"I want to see Chicago and San Francisco," he said to Daniel Frohman, his American manager. "When are we going to those places? I have heard so much about them. I saw the Statue of Liberty and I know I got a good picture of it. No, I was not ill at all crossing. Mamma was, though, all the time."

The boy was delighted to learn that Wassily Safonoff, who conducted when he played in Moscow, was here. Franz has played at Buckingham palace before King Edward, as well as before the kaiser and the czar and czarina of Russia.

When he played a month ago at Berlin Joachim led the orchestra for him. His first recital was given in Carnegie hall the other evening. The 20 concerts for which Mr. Frohman has engaged the boy embrace Philadelphia, Baltimore, Brooklyn and Washington.

Maurice Bouvier a Man of Great Ability and Recognized Influence.

Paris.—Maurice Rouvier, the new French premier, was minister of finance in the last cabinet. He has long been a distinguished figure in French politics, and has been highly successful as the minister of finance, receiving much praise for his work in converting government rentes from 3 1/2 to the present 3 per cent. basis. The celebrated Mme. Rouvier, writer, sculptress and diplomat, who died six years ago, was his wife. She married M. Rouvier shortly after the death of the famous Abbe Constant, whose marriage to her had caused his expulsion from the church.

Foreign Labels for Sale.

Many a time loaded with awe upon suit cases and steamer trunks covered with labels of every size and color, and thought enviously of the advantages the traveled owners of such baggage had over the poorer stay-at-homes. The baggage proclaimed that its owners had been from Sydney to San Francisco, from Copenhagen to Colombo, to say nothing of visiting half the capitals and health resorts of the continent. But the ostentation has found utopia where such baggage is sold, all shattered and battered and labeled with a score of foreign towns, although it may never have traveled two miles from the Grand Central station.

ADVICE FOR EVERYBODY.

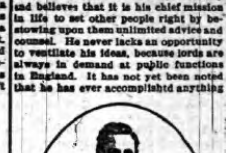
It Is Given Gratuitously by a Young and Handsome English Nobleman.

London.—Though he is only 23 years old, the earl of Beauchamp—pronounced "Beecham," you know—is said to possess the distinction of having made more speeches than any other living Englishman. He takes himself very seriously and believes that it is his chief mission in life to set other people right by bestowing upon them unlimited advice and counsel. He never lacks an opportunity to ventilate his ideas, because lords are always in demand at public functions in England. It has not yet been noted that he has ever accomplished anything



EARL OF BEAUCHAMP.
(English Nobleman Who Has Advice for Everybody.)

by his oratory, but he is still young and persevering.

He is very devout, and in his early youth he had decided to enter the ministry. He changed his mind on that point on succeeding to the ancestral acres and titles when only 19. He has, however, always shown keen interest in church matters, and only the other day he berated church choirs and organists for being more devoted to music than to religion and thereby sacrificing piety to art.

When he was 27 a conservative government whipped him off to New South Wales as governor of that colony. The Antipodeans, who have much less respect for hereditary titles than English folk, did not take very kindly to him. His state dances were derisively dubbed "Seidlitz Powder balls," because tickets of admission were blue and white. The holders of the blue pasteboards were entitled to a better feed than those who had been provided only with white ones, and had other exclusive privileges, too. To the democratic colonists distinctions of this sort savored of snobbishness, and they resented it. The earl did not mend matters any by taking them to task for their small families and declining birth rate. That sort of talk comes all very well from President Roosevelt, whose precepts are backed up by the example his own home furnishes of a large and healthy family, but Australian husbands and wives regarded it as sheer impertinence, coming from a young peer who was at that time still a bachelor, although he could well afford a wife.

In 1902 Beauchamp married Lady Lettice Grosvenor, a daughter of the late Earl Grosvenor and a sister of the second duke of Westminster.

The earl is a very good looking man, and he knows it, too. Likewise he is well aware that he has very shapely hands, and they always figure prominently in his photographs. He is considered the best dressed man in the house of lords.

WOMAN OF STRANGE POWER

New Spiritualistic Leader Is Attracting a Large Following in New York.

New York.—The strange mystery of Rev. May S. Pepper and her spiritualistic power is attracting great attention in Brooklyn. Mrs. Pepper does not pretend to read the future; she does not even enact the pretense of going into a "trance" state. Messages purporting to come from the dead are received through her in answer to questions placed in sealed and unopened envelopes. Many strange and unaccountable instances of her power are reported. So strongly has the belief in her advocacy of spiritualism taken hold that a congregation has been formed of which she has been made pastor. Among the members are some of the most prominent business and professional men of Brooklyn. Many of the attendants at meetings conducted by Mrs. Pepper assert that messages she delivers from the dead are correct and they are moved to deep emotion thereby. She has gained a large following of believers in this city.

THE YAQUI INDIANS

ANCIENT MEXICAN RACE OF ADVANCED CIVILIZATION.

Oppressed and Their Lands Confiscated They Have Become Rebellious and a Menace to Citizen and Traveler.

When the whole country is aroused over the murder in Mexico of prominent Americans by Yaqui Indians, it becomes in the nature of a surprise to one searching after information concerning these hostile red men to read, in the first paragraph of an authoritative article: "Before the advent of the Spaniards they were the most numerous and powerful race in northern Mexico, and were then, as now, an exceedingly peaceful people." We have been led to think of them, when we thought of them at all, as exceedingly fierce, vengeful, lawless, no respecters of life or property; now swooping down on inoffensive Mexicans, now playing highwaymen, robbing and slaying luckless bands passing by their mountain retreats.

Heedful of the oft-repeated admonition to judge the present in the light of the past, let us consider what manner of Indians they were in days gone by, what conditions have brought them to their present state of rebelliousness.

Before the Spaniards came the Yaquis were the most numerous and powerful race in northern Mexico, to-day they are the most populous aboriginal tribe dwelling in the province of Sonora. Prior to the Spanish invasion they had attained to a considerable degree of civilization; they tilled the soil, and in minor manufactures were well skilled; made excellent pottery, wove blankets and woolen fabrics. After the Spaniards came they continued, when not interfered with, a peaceful, independent people; but oppression decimated their numbers and drove many of them into open rebellion.

For some years past the Sonora government has had an Indian question it has not found a ready matter to solve. Ever since the Sonora government confiscated their hereditary lands along the course of the Yaqui river. From time immemorial the Yaquis had lived on these lands, and when the government seized them the Indians did not submit tamely. Upon being dispossessed, a part of the tribe took to the war path, and successfully defied troops sent to quell them. Over and over again they were driven from the river and sought the mountains, back in 1886, efforts to dislodge them have met with failure. Repeatedly in the last 25 years have Sonora troops been sent from the capital out into the Yaqui region for the purpose of settling the rebels, and generally have had to retreat ignominiously.

The Yaqui is as good a fighter as he is worker; knowing every inch of his country, an adept in ambush warfare, he has such an advantage on his side that soldiers and travelers fare ill when they fall into his retributive hands. Though there never is any very large band of Yaquis engaged at one time in fighting, yet their system of reenforcing in time of need brings up the strength of the warrior band; as soon as scouts inform a chief that soldiers are advancing against the tribe, he sends out messengers in all directions where his tribesmen are at work, and presently in small groups there come straggling in enough men to make a resistance. They stay just long enough to scare the soldiers away, then when the game of war is over return without delay to their labor.

It is thought that a better way to overcome the Yaquis than by violence is to assure them of steady work and good wages in the rich lands that American capital has been developing; and to assure them of honest rule, relieve them of the oppression of the petty officials who under dishonest Mexican overseers they labored in the Sonora mines and fields. Though given but a scanty pittance for their hard work, their employers knew well enough that these laborers were industrious and plucky, immeasurably superior to the lazy, sullen Mexicans working beside them. And the Yaquis of a few years ago was socially superior, "exhibiting an activity and gayety in marked contrast to the sullen, brow-beaten Mexican laborer."

More Time, Less Sermon.

The subject of making literary abridgments was being discussed.

"It requires a master mind," said Hugh Hastings, the state historian, "to make an abridgment, but said it requires as much time and talent as to write an original work. That reminds me of an interview between a distinguished professor and the late Phillips Brooks, in which the compliment him upon his sermon, but said it had one fault—it was too short."

"'Madam,' he replied, 'I should have made it shorter if I had had more time.'"—N. Y. Herald.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, March 9, 1905.

Senator John Kean well knows the fact that the "nearest road to a man's heart is through his throat and by his stomach." His magnificent entertainment to the New Jersey delegation and West Point cadets at Washington is a case in point.

Thanks, the license question is settled for a year to come, out of all the discussion and contention. We feel that is will be quite generally admitted that our city has evolved a more satisfactory settlement of the vexed question than any other city in this State.

Through the generosity of Mrs. George H. Babcock and her son, the new high school, for which $125,000 will be expended, is to have a thoroughly equipped laboratory. The gift is intended as a memorial to her husband, who during his life was deeply interested in the cause of education. Mr. Babcock was once president of the Plainfield board and during the entire period of his connection with that body displayed great energy in advancing the grade of the schools and promoting education facilities. This timely gift from his widow and son will be indeed a fitting memorial.

The Borough Council's action in raising the rate of pay for its marshals is one that will meet with the commendation of all of its citizens. An efficient police force is one of the greatest needs of a community, but when the compensation is so small good men decline an appointment, a poor system is the result. North Plainfield, until recently, was hampered in this way but its present officers are capable men and the substantial increase will tend to spur them on to greater efforts.

Although no announcement has been made regarding the selection of the judges for the new place in the United States District Court of New Jersey, it has been learned from good authority that the position will undoubtedly go to Hon. Joseph Cross, of Elizabeth, State Senator from Union County. He is eminently qualified for the place, and his appointment would give satisfaction. Of course, the South Jersey people would like to see Judge Armstrong appointed, but inasmuch as the office of the new judge will probably be located at Newark, for the convenience of the lawyers in the northern part of the State, it is but natural that the judge should come from that part of the State. It is believed that Senator Kean will be glad of the opportunity to recommend Senator Cross, and any recommendation he may make will be concurred in by Senator Dryden.

Adjt. Gen. Breintnall is in danger of losing his official head because of the small showing made in Washington Saturday by the New Jersey troops. A bill has been prepared for introduction into the Legislature tonight to legislate him out of office by fixing an age limit of retirement at sixty-two years. Breintnall will be sixty-two years old on August 12 next. The Adjutant General was one of the State Military Board which decided that New Jersey could not get together a provisional regiment in three days, as wanted by the law which passed last Tuesday.

From Trenton comes the statement that the "State Military Board will have to mount its heaviest guns and prepare for a siege of its official fortress." The turning down and denying the State Militia from participating in the inaugural ceremonies rankles in the hearts of Jerseymen the State over. Already it is rumored that bills will be introduced in the Legislature looking to the abolition of the Board. They may learn that one plays with the buzz saw when you step on the toes of the soldier boys.

Funeral of Morgan Bird.

The funeral services of Morgan C. Bird were held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home on Randolph road. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Bird was a member, conducted the services. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery, and the pallbearers were George Bird, Lewis M. Bird, Elias Bird, Lemuel K. Hart and N. W. French.

Westfield Gets the "Go By."

The petition of the town council of Westfield to have another express train stop at that place, morning and night, has been denied by the officials of the New Jersey Central on the grounds that the present express trains are now overcrowded and an additional train cannot be put in service just now.

AMUSEMENTS.

The stock company at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre is meeting with unparalleled success, which is due not alone to the excellent quality of the organization, but also to the manner in which the productions are staged, one of the noticeable features being the little difference between the plays when originally produced and now by the stock company. In all the plays presented thus far Mr. Proctor has employed a wealth of original scenery, electrical effects, and in every way striven to make the productions a faithful following of the original. Miss Edna Phillips also continues adding to her throng of admirers, as does Miss Agnes Scott, Harold Hartsell, Charles Arthur, William Norton and the other members of the company.

There is no modification whatever in the interest impelled by "Leah Kleschna," which at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, plays steadily to a series of audiences that crowd the theatre, and that represent the very best class of metropolitan theatregoers, with distinguished persons from all parts of the country—the cream of sojourners in New York—who even before arrival, so wide is the fame of this production, set down the pleasure of witnessing the work of Mrs. Fiske and the admirable Manhattan Company as one of the first to be indulged. As "Leah Kleschna" runs on, with no cessation of patronage or attention, the fact that it is not only the dramatic treat of the season, but the treat of years, is re-emphasized. The play itself, in ordinary circumstances, would engross attention; but when to its appeal there is added the practically flawless representation, it is no wonder that "Leah Kleschna," originally a revelation, continues to be the dramatic achievement beyond comparison in New York, and maintains a prestige that is all the more notable because it is genuine and deserved. Aside from the occasional holiday matinees, but one matinee a week—on Saturday—is scheduled at the Manhattan.

The newest comedy success at the Liberty Theatre is to be credited to Augustus Thomas, who has already put two brilliant triumphs to his score this season. "The Education of Mr. Pipp," founded upon Charles Dana Gibson's familiar drawings, is the latest Thomas play, and the Broadway critics, professional and amateur, are united in saying that it is the best thing in the comedy line that has come from the pen of the gifted author of "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," "The Earl of Pawtucket," "Arizona," "On The Quiet" and "The Other Girl." The comedy is in three acts and the story told is that of a wealthy middle-class American family who attempt an ambitious social career, under the goad of a vigorous and vulgar old lady. Kirke La Shelle and Daniel V. Arthur are the managerial sponsers for the new play, which is crowding the Liberty Theatre, and they have given it a stage production of rare beauty, as well as a thoroughly competent cast.

That famously funny fellow, Lew Dockstader, accompanied by his merry eighty, appearing in the latest novelties of the black-face art, will be the magnet at the Grand Opera House following the two weeks of "The County Chairman." Dockstader was once referred to by a clever Chicago writer, as an "animated humor column," and the clever minstrel has never belied that apt appellation. He can always be safely trusted to provide the very latest in the laugh line, and his jests and quibs are always directly down to the minute. Dockstader is the one American comedian who believes that the American joke must keep apace with the times, and his efforts to get away from the old funniosities are unceasing.

When David Belasco brought Blanche Bates in "The Darling of Gods" to the Academy of Music, New York, last night, the occasion was of particular interest, for many reasons. In all its features of star, play, cast and production, it was, of course, the greatest dramatic offering ever made at the Academy, inasmuch as everything was offered precisely as during the remarkable triumph which gave David Belasco's Japanese drama its great run of 348 consecutive performances at the Belasco Theatre. This in itself should prove sufficient for the patrons of Manager Gilmore's popular playhouse; but there are other points that cannot pass unmentioned. Especially should it be borne in mind that Monday marked the beginning of the end of "The Darling of the Gods." Great as has been Miss Bates' success in this gorgeous triumph of oriental picture and drama, made real through the magic of Belasco's genius, she soon must set aside the fascinating language and dress of the Princess Yo-San to prepare for next season's new play which Mr. Belasco is now writing for her. Accordingly, the coming performances will be not only the last of "The Darling of the Gods" in New York but also Miss Bates' farewell to the part.

LITERARY.

The April Red Book promises to be a noteworthy number, with sixteen stories, including such authors as Henry Burnham Boone, Robert Aitken, Anne Warner, Roy E. Norton and Cutcliffe Hyne in the list. In addition to the fiction features, a department of dramatic news and criticism will be introduced, contributed by Acton Davies, who is recognized as one of the most scholarly and interesting of the more eminent dramatic critics of the time.

The leading feature of Lippincott's Magazine for March is a novelette by Captain Archibald W. Butt, U. S. A., called "Both Sides of the Shield." The Shield is, of course, the South before the War. A writer on a Northern paper goes to Georgia to report conditions and falls in with a typical Southern family, much reduced in estate. He also falls in love with the daughter, and when his newspaper revelations come to her ears she indignantly rejects him. The Spanish-American War, strangely enough, brings a true to the bitterness, and all ends in charming appropriateness.

Grandma beside the evening lamp, scanning the pages of her "old scrap-book"—presumably hunting clippings for Joe Chapple's $10,000 "Heart-Throb" competition now running in the National—makes beautiful the cover of the March number of the National Magazine of Boston. Strong short stories by Mary Morrison, Helen Corinne Gillenwater and Christobelle van Asmus Buning, with serials by James Ball Naylor and Anna McClure Sholl, and fine poems by J. A. Edgerton, Edwin Markham, Alice F. Tilden, Zona Gale and Yone Noguchi, round out the best number that the National has ever given its readers. Twenty pages of "Affairs at Washington," with forty portraits and other illustrations, reflect the picturesque aspects of life at the capital.

It is common belief that the germs of disease flourish only in the human organism, and that, if we could once eradicate an infectious malady, it would stay eradicated. It now seems very probable that this is untrue. According to a view held wholly or partially by many pathologists, and strongly upheld by a recent French writer, Professor Bodin, disease germs are only accidentally virulent, their normal existence being what is called "saprophytic;" that is, independent of any other organism. When one of these harmless varieties changes its nature so as to become parasitic, we have a new disease. Observation has shown that many kinds of bacteria are very unstable, and are constantly forming new varieties. It is possible, therefore, that potential germs of typhoid, lockjaw, or consumption may be growing harmlessly about us, to assume, suddenly, a virulent parasitic life at some future time. According to this view, all bacteria are primarily benevolent agents for promoting chemical change, and the variation that turns some of them into injurious parasites is accidental and abnormal.—Success Magazine.

Concentration does not mean straining every nerve and muscle toward obedience, it means dropping every thing that interferes. If we drop everything that interferes with our obedience to the two great commandments, and the other laws which are given us all through the New Testament to help us obey, we are steadily dropping all selfish resistance, and all tendency to selfish responsibility; and, in that steady effort, we are on the only path which can lead us directly to freedom.

An important treatise on the science and art of organ-building will soon be published by Dodd, Mead & Company. The work is by George Ashdown Audsley, the result of thirty years' study of the subject of organ construction in England, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany and the United States, and in addition the author has been directly assisted by all the leading organ-builders in the world. It will be fully illustrated and issued in a limited edition. The illustrations are drawn by the author and are in all cases true to scale. They will be reproduced by photo-engraving and inserted in the text for reference.

Miss Milne Recovering.

Miss Belle Milne, of Willow avenue, who has been detained at home since Tuesday, February 21, as the result of an accident, is now able to be about the house. She was standing at East Second and Richmond streets waiting for a trolley, and as the car turned the corner the fender struck Miss Milne and threw her down. She sustained a severe nervous shock and several bruises. She was assisted home, where she has been under the care of a physician ever since.

HOME MISSION WORKERS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH WOMEN ENJOYED PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Largely attended and marked by excellent reports of prosperity, the annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society, of the Crescent Avenue church, Friday afternoon, was the most gratifying in years, with respect to both spiritual and financial growth. The chapel was filled when the meeting opened with a devotional service led by Mrs. William Honeyman. Mrs. Charles Hall presided at the piano and Mrs. Ring was the soloist.

At the conclusion of the devotional exercises, the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson; first vice president, Mrs. William Honeyman; second vice president, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore; secretary, Miss Mary W. Ketcham; treasurer, Mrs. William Myers; secretary of literature, Mrs. H. R. Halloway; young people's secretary, Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury.

A feature of the meeting was the report of the secretary, Miss Mary W. Ketcham, who in an interesting manner described the work of the year in general, referring particularly to the missionary boxes, which aggregated $600. The report was well written and listened to attentively. The treasurer, Mrs. William Myers, reported a balance of $100 in the treasury, which was appropriated to the New Jersey Academy at Utah, an institution supported by the Women's Missionary Societies of this State.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Ella Alexander Boole, corresponding secretary of the Women's Board of Home Missions. Her address referred to home missionary work in general, though she particularized the work in the southern schools. Mrs. Boole has recently returned from a trip through the schools in the south, and was well prepared to speak on that subject. The speaker brought out especially the fact that the schools are growing extensively. "This," Mrs. Boole said, "may be said of home missionary work in general, but of all the varied branches, the growth, both in numbers and spiritually, with which the schools in the south have been blessed, is the greatest. It is in some places beyond the control of those in charge, and without a proportionate increase in managing funds, the work cannot go on." Mrs. Boole did not make a financial appeal, though she spoke of the natural need of money in order to meet the rapidly growing expenses, which come with the general growth of the work.

Following the address, a social hour was enjoyed and tea was served by a committee of the society.

BOARD DISMISSES MAYOR'S CHARGES

BOROUGH BOARD OF HEALTH HOLDS EXECUTIVE SESSION.

After considering the facts behind closed doors, the Borough Board of Health Monday night, dismissed the charges brought by Mayor Smalley against Health Inspector Pangborn. Another closed meeting is to be held Friday when Mayor Smalley will be present.

These officers were elected: President, Andrew Love; secretary, Dr. A. H. Dundon, to succeed Dr. Honeyman, the vote being 3 to 2. The appointment of an inspector was held over. Secretary Honeyman presented his annual report but it was not made public. His term expires March 10.

EIGHTY YEARS OLD.

Miss Catherine Webster Celebrated That Anniversary Tuesday.

Miss Catherine Webster, of East Second street, one of Plainfield's eldest residents, celebrated the eightieth anniversary of her birthday on Tuesday. She was born in this city, where she has lived all her life. She is well known to all the old residents of Plainfield and is one of the most active members of the Hicksite Society of Friends.

Miss Webster has lived in the house she now occupies for nearly seventy years, having at one time lived on Watchung avenue, then Peace street. Considering her age, Miss Webster is enjoying good health and is able to be about and to receive friends.

During the day, Miss Webster has been receiving congratulations of those of her friends who knew of her birthday.

LICENSEE IS BLOCKED

Remonstrants Obtain Writ Holding Up Schanz Transfer.

IN SUPREME COURT

Successful Application Before Justice Fort—Made by Neighboring Property Owners.

Being defeated in their efforts to prevent the granting of a liquor license to Charles Schanz by the Common Council, a writ of certiorari was obtained from Judge Fort on Saturday, putting a stop to all proceedings until the matter can be reviewed by the Supreme Court. This action prevents Mr. Schanz from getting his license or opening the place at 136 Park avenue. The writ has been served on City Clerk James T. MacMurray and was reported on at the meeting of the Common Council Monday night.

It will be remembered that Mr. Schanz was granted a liquor license for 136 Park avenue, with the understanding that an iron gate be placed at the entrance to the driveway, adjoining his place, and that a lock and key be attached thereto. It was afterward learned that if any one person having the right to use the driveway should object to its being closed, the Common Council would be helpless to act and could not compel the closing of the driveway. There has been objection to the closing and Mrs. Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., owner of the building occupied by her husband and William Feiring, the barber, instituted the action which resulted in obtaining the writ of certiorari.

Some of those who are opposed to the establishment of a saloon at 136 Park avenue, when seen expressed the opinion that the latest move would probably result in compelling Mr. Schanz in applying for a license for some other place.

COUNCIL RECEIVES CERTERORARI WRIT

CORPORATION COUNSEL TO ACT IN SCHANZ LICENSE MATTER.

As stated a writ of certiorari issued by Chief Justice Gummere, of the Supreme Court, was served on City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Monday, as a result of the action of the Common Council in granting a liquor license to Charles Schanz for 136 Park avenue, provided he make certain improvements, including the erection of an iron gate with a lock and key at the entrance to the driveway, adjoining his proposed place of business.

The writ was issued at the request of W. L. Hetfield, Sr., as attorney for Mrs. Mary G. Hetfield, owner of the building on one side of the driveway and which is occupied by William Feiring and Mr. Hetfield. It requests that all papers and any facts in connection with the action of the Common Council in granting a license to Mr. Schanz be returned to the Supreme Court for review by Monday, March 20, and the writ does not stay all proceedings, as was first supposed.

Clerk MacMurray read the writ and on motion of Mr. Tolles the matter was referred to the police committee with instructions to consult with Corporation Counsel Marsh with a view to future action.

It is expected that W. N. Runyon and W. L. Hetfield, Jr., of counsel for Mr. Schanz will soon make a move looking toward a settlement of the matter which will secure for their client his license for 136 Park avenue. It is within the power of the counsel to rescind the resolution upon which Mr. Schanz's license was granted, compelling certain improvements, and have the application come up in the regular way as the others did.

An attempt will probably be made to have this done, although it is not known at present whether six votes could be obtained in favor of Mr. Schanz's application.

Funeral of David Blow.

The funeral services of David Blow were held at the Calvary Baptist church, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, Rev. E. E. Jackson, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Scott Wallace. Mr. Blow was born in Sussex County, Virginia, in 1842, and was ordained to the ministry by the Christian church at that place in 1868. While in Sussex County he was instrumental in building two churches. He still retained his religious zeal after coming to Plainfield twelve years ago. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were members of Mr. Blow's Bible class at the Calvary church.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of George Baily, of West Front street, and Miss Carrie Schegel, of Jersey City. No date has been set for the wedding.

William T. Newman, of West Second street, is confined to his home by illness.

STATE OFFICERS GUESTS OF OLD GLORY COUNCIL

LOCAL LODGE RECEIVES AWARD FOR GREATEST MEMBERSHIP INCREASE.

Old Glory Council, No. 62, D. of L., at its regular meeting Saturday night, entertained the State officers and received the silk banner for the greatest increase in membership for the year 1904. Those of the State officers who were present were State Councilor Margaret Russell, State Secretary Heywood, State Guide Pullan and State Secretary Margaret Wits. The presentation speech was made by the state councilor, who in bestowing the banner upon the local council, complimented its members upon their work, and commended them upon the fact that no council in the state had made such a good showing. The local council has added forty-eight new members during the last year.

The various officers made speeches following the words of the State councilor and representatives from other councils were called upon for addresses. Councils from the following places were represented: New York, Jersey City, Elizabeth, Cranford, Westfield, Dunellen and New Market.

Six new members were initiated Saturday night and after the degree work, took part in the speech making. There were 225 present at the meeting, which was one of the largest ever held in the local lodge rooms. At the conclusion of the formal entertainment, the lodge members and guests were invited to the banquet room, where light refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. George Demarest, chairman; Mrs. Benjamin Moore, Mrs. John Wakefield, Mrs. William Mundy, August Windham and Fred Soper.

AGAIN AFTER GLAZER

Alton Residents Want His Fat Factory Removed.

SAY ITS A NUISANCE

Fanwood Board of Health Advises Them to Take the Necessary Legal Steps.

The residents of Alton are again up in arms and waging a war of extermination against Theodore Glazer's fat rendering factory, which has been in operation for the past three years. On Friday night at the Fanwood Township Board of Health meeting a long petition was received from the residents there, claiming that the odors from the factory were foul and a menace to the public health. The petition was backed up by the personal appearance of many of the signers.

Ever since Glazer began operations the residents in that neighborhood have tried in many ways to have the local board declare the place a menace to health, but so far their efforts have failed. The board has visited the factory and demanded certain improvements that have always been followed by the proprietor. Two years ago modern machinery was installed and a large smoke stack erected to carry off the offensive odors. This entailed an expense of several thousand dollars, but it was thought that a remedy for the evil had been found, but not so.

Last summer the residents again petitioned the board to condemn the place and the matter was even taken to the State Board of Health. Dr. Hunt, the head of the board, became interested and visited the factory personally. Just what he discovered has not been learned, but it is said the local board was told that he was unable to detect the offensive smells spoken of and personally he could not say the place was a menace to the health of the community. The residents always claimed the Doctor's visit was paid upon a day favorable to the rendering of fat, when the little wind stirring would hardly take the odor outside of the building.

The failure of the local or State board to act at this time met with some criticism from those interested, but for the time being the matter was allowed to drop, but the flame of extermination was only smoldering and several weeks ago was fanned into a flame again with the result that another petition was presented at Friday night's meeting.

The board received the petition as well as the verbal appeal for relief, but being familiar with the several phrases of the case could not declare the factory a nuisance, but decided hat if any of the residents would go about it in the regular way and by making an affidavit that the factory was a nuisance and menace to the general health, the township counsel, W. R. Coddington, would take the necessary legal steps to secure an injunction against Glazer. This the residents declare they will do and the outcome of the prospective battle will be watched with interest.

HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS PRESENT "THE PRINCESS"

PLAYED TO CROWDED HOUSE AT FRANKLIN HALL SATURDAY NIGHT.

Franklin Hall was filled to the doors Saturday night, on the occasion of the junior class, Plainfield High School, production of Alfred Tennyson's poem, "The Princess," which was well received by the enthusiastic attendants. There were passages in the play which were somewhat beyond the actors, but for the most part the production was well carried out.

The poem was arranged for dramatization by Miss Elizabeth Winters, a member of the class. Much credit is due to Dramatic Director S. B. Howe, Jr., of the High School faculty, who coached the pupils. The best acting was the work of Miss Edith Hansford, who took the part of Lady Psyche. The parts of the Princess and the Prince, taken by Miss Antoinette Aaholm and Stuart Freeman, were also well executed.

A feature was the music which accompanied the production. Several choruses added much to the play. The High School Mandolin and Banjo Club furnished music between the acts and accompanied the chorus numbers. The members of the cast and chorus were the following: Stuart Freeman, Malcolm Davis, Arthur Whitney, Jerome Cline, Howard Freeman, Hudson Burr, and the Misses Antoinette Aaholm, Edith Hansford, Louise Kline, Sadie Coyle, Avis Aldrich, May Hallett, Margaret Demarest, Louise Rickerts, Ruth Thompson, Gertrude Hunter, Mary Conover, Bertha Hill, Elizabeth Winters, Ellen Ulrich, Bessie Dunham, Mabel Found, Moss Droll and Ethel Boice.

An informal dance followed the play.

MRS. BABCOCK'S GIFT

Offers $4,000 to Equip Science Room of New High School.

IN MEMORY OF HUSBAND

Board of Education Accepts and Expresses Thanks by Naming It "Babcock Laboratory."

Through the generosity of Mrs. George H. Babcock and her son, George L. Babcock, the new Plainfield High School now in course of erection, will be equipped with one of the most extensive science departments to be found in any building of its character in the State. In the name of her husband, the late George H. Babcock, who was at one time president of the Plainfield Board of Education and intensely interested in the local school system, the present Board of Education received an offer of $4,000 from her to equip the laboratories. Her intentions were made known in the following letter read at the regular meeting of the Board last night:

"To the Board of Education:

"Gentlemen—During his life, Mr. Babcock was deeply interested in all that pertained to the public schools and particularly in the proposition to erect a new high school. If he were now living, he would be especially interested in the equipment of the science department in the new building; therefore as an expression of this interest which he always felt and as a memorial of his service as a member and president of the Board of Education, I hereby join with my son, George H. Babcock, in offering the Board of Education four thousand dollars for the equipment of the laboratories of the new high school.

"Respectfully submitted,

"Mrs. George H. Babcock."

Following the reading of the letter by Superintendent Maxson, Mr. Abbott offered a resolution that Mrs. Babcock's generous offer be accepted and that in recognition of her thoughtfulness, this department be designated as the "Babcock Laboratory," and that a memorial tablet bearing the donors' names be placed in the room. It was carried unanimously.

The remainder of the business transacted at the meeting was purely of a routine nature with the exception of Superintendent Maxson's report of the National Superintendents' Association annual convention at Milwaukee which is printed entire in another column. The medical inspectors reported examining twenty-eight pupils during the past month, this being supplemented with a verbal report from Superintendent Maxson, who said the epidemic of measles in the West End had practically abated. Thomas Fay and Patrick Powers applied for the appointment as engineer of the new high school and S. S. Valentine and William Gunselman asked for the janitorship of the same. Miss Mabel Wilkins, of Mountainside, also applied for appointment on the teaching staff.

Preliminary plans for the commencement exercises in June were discussed and it was said by Mr. Abbott that in all probability, if the Board so desired, they could be held in the auditorium of the new building. It would necessitate a decrease in the number of invitations at least 400 as the seating capacity is but 800. Mr. Abbott also reported that he would secure the commencement speaker before the next meeting.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

Subject of Address Before Trinity Ladies' Christian Work Society.

Better observance of the Sabbath, and how to deal with the growing desecration of the Lord's Day, was in brief the substance of Miss White's address at the regular meeting of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church Monday afternoon. The meeting was largely attended.

Miss White referred in her address to the many ways in which the Sabbath is broken and said that the sin is growing. She mentioned various sports as aiding in Sabbath desecration and dwelt at some length upon the business houses which require Sunday work.

In conclusion, Miss White said that though in many cases the spirit and enterprise of the age demands a more or less excusable disregard for the Sabbath, it was the work of all Christian societies to stop as far as possible the rapidly growing desecration, which comes from mere pleasure seeking.

Fair Was Successful.

Surpassing even the first night, the fair conducted at the Babcock building by the Young Women's club drew to a successful close Saturday night, with a large attendance, and good financial returns. The fair was also open Saturday afternoon, when a large sum was taken in from the fancy work, candy and lemonade tables.

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN LENTEN REGULATIONS

PRIVILEGES GRANTED CATHOLICS OF NEWARK DIOCESE NOT RENEWED.

There is an important change this year in the Lenten regulations for Roman Catholics of the Newark diocese, which includes St. Mary's parish, as the dispensation granted those performing manual labor permission to use meat on certain fast days, including the Ember days, but excepting, of course, Fridays, the closing days of the Holy Week and the eve of Christmas, has expired. This privilege was granted for ten years by the late Pope Leo, and the time expired this month. A request for a renewal of the dispensation was sent to Rome, but as yet no answer has been received from the Pontiff. The Rt. Rev. John J. O'Connor, bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Newark, delayed preparing the regulations until a decision was reached, but nothing was heard from Rome and the regulations will be issued this week and read through chancellor of the diocese, the Rev. T. A. Wallace, and will be read in the churches throughout the diocese.

The regulations in full are as follows, and under the provisions workingmen will be required to abstain from meat on fast days unless the dispensation is again granted, and if so formal announcement will be made of the fact:

"The following regulations will be observed throughout the Diocese of Newark during the Lenten season, commencing on Ash Wednesday, March 8, 1905:

"All the week days of Lent from Ash Wednesday to Easter Sunday are fast days of precept on one meal, with the allowance of a moderate collation in the evening. The church excuses from the obligation of fasting (but not of abstinence from flesh meat, except in special cases of sickness), the infirm, those who are attaining their growth, those whose duties are of an exhausting or laborious character, women bearing or nursing infants, and those who are enfeebled by old age. The following dispensations are granted for this diocese:

"The use of flesh meat is permitted at every meal on the Sundays of Lent, and at the principal meal on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, with the exception of Ember Saturday and Holy Saturday.

"The use of eggs and milk, butter, cheese and the like is allowed every day at the principal meal, and at the evening collation.

"A small piece of bread with a cup of coffee, tea, chocolate or similar drink, may be taken in the morning.

"When it is not convenient to take the principal meal at noon, it is lawful to invert the order and take the collation in the morning and the dinner in the evening. Dripping and lard may be used in the preparation of food.

"On Sunday there is neither fast nor abstinence, but it is not allowed to eat fish and flesh meat at the same meal on any day during Lent. Those who are not obliged to fast may partake of flesh meat at every meal on a day when by special indult flesh meat is permitted at the principal meat.

"All priests exercising the faculties of this diocese are empowered to grant dispensations from the precept of fast and abstinence in particular cases and for sufficient cause.

"A plenary indulgence has been conceded by the Holy See to all the faithful of this diocese, who, on the Feast of St. Patrick, or within the Octave, receive with proper dispositions the sacraments of penance and the blessed Eucharist, and visiting a church or chapel, offer prayers to God according to the intention of the Holy Father and for the propagation of the faith.

"The holy oils will be consecrated at the Cathedral on Holy Thursday, April 20, at 10 a. m., and distributed at 2 p. m.

"In accordance with the direction of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore a collection will be taken up in all the churches of this diocese on the first Sunday of Lent, in aid of the propagation of the faith and of the Indian and colored missions.

"With the view of encouraging this salutary work of mercy and of animating the Christian zeal of the faithful for the salvation of perishing souls, our Holy Father has benignly granted a plenary indulgence to all who having contritely confessed and worthily received holy communion on that day, devoutly visit a church in which the collection is made, assist at the sermon and the other observances of divine worship that may be celebrated on that occasion, and offer prayer for the propagation of the faith and the intention of the sovereign pontiff.

"In compliance with the command of our Holy Father in his brief of December, 1887, a collection for the Holy Land will be taken up in all the churches of this diocese either on Good Friday or on the third Sunday after Easter this year."

LOCAL CHURCHES HOLD COMMUNION SERVICES

EIGHTEEN NEW MEMBERS UNITE WITH TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

There was an unusually large number of new members received at Trinity Reformed church at the communion service held Sunday morning. There were eighteen in all, eight by letter and ten on confession. Of the latter seven were from the Sunday-school.

The last communion service, before the Newark conference, was held at the First M. E. church. One person, Mrs. L. C. Hurst, was received by letter.

Communion services were held at the Monroe Avenue church Sunday morning, when Mrs. George Whitley was received on confession; Miss Mary Eyck from probation; Mrs. Angelina Fix by letter from the M. E. church, Jamaica, L. I., and Mrs. Harry Pound from the Reformed church, New Brunswick. There were no accessions to the membership at the communion service held at Grace M. E. church.

Those who united with the First Presbyterian church at the communion service Sunday morning were Mr. and Mrs. Morris, and son, of Cranbury, Mr. Finger, and Leslie Bond, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Bates, Stanley Bates, W. S. Conant, of 243 East Sixth street, and F. A. Henckle, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., were received into membership at the communion service held at the Congregational church, Sunday morning.

WORK OF THE COUNCIL

Board of Health Desires Appropriation of $4,500.

ROUNDSMAN RESIGNS

Remonstrances Against Schans License Transfer—Commissioners of Assessment.

While the March meeting of the Common Council held Monday was not taken up with the transaction of many matters of great importance, there was an unusual amount of business of general interest. In accordance with the rule, Mayor J. F. Buckle appointed Robert A. Meeker, John W. Murray, Jr., and DeWitt C. Ivins, commissioners to assess benefits and damages for the construction of sanitary sewers. The matter was referred to the street and sewer committee and later the appointments were confirmed.

Elston M. French complained that he had been assessed twice on some property on the Second Ward, when he had sold some of the property on contract with the understanding that the purchaser pay the tax. The petition was referred to the finance committee and Mr. Tolles reported that Mr. French's request could be granted this year, but that the corporation counsel had informed the members that taxpayers have their redress by consulting with the Commissioners of Appeal, and only in case of error has the Common Council any right to act, and he therefore moved that the request for an adjustment be denied. The motion was adopted.

Mrs. Caroline J. Rockfellow, in a communication, informed the Common Council that she had paid her real estate tax for 834 Park avenue, but requested that a personal tax of $350 be crossed off her bill as she has not lived in Plainfield for three years and she has no personal property here. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

Residents of East Front street petitioned for two fire hydrants to be located on that street between Raymond avenue and Terrill road, and the petition was referred to the fire and building committee.

The Board of Health, through the president, Charles J. Fisk, stated that the amount needed this year for the care of the city's health would be $4,500, with the understanding that all fees coming to the Board should be transferred to the city treasurer. The matter was referred to the finance committee. Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that during February nine permits were granted, and after Chairman Bullock, of the fire and building committee, examined the permits he moved that they be received and filed.

Mr. Bullock offered a resolution, which was adopted, granting the petition of residents for a fire hydrant at McDowell and West Third streets.

Mr. Tyler offered the resignation of Roundsman William J. Mattox, dated Friday, February 10, and on his motion is was accepted. He stated that Mr. Mattox had been a faithful member of the police department and he regretted that he was forced to resign on account of ill-health.

Regarding the petition of W. R. Coddington, protesting against the granting of a license to Charles Schans for 136 Park avenue, and which was not presented at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council in February, owing to the fact that it could not be found, Mr. Tyler said that it had been given to Mr. Coddington's partner, Mr. Swackhamer for the purpose of securing other signers and through an oversight it did not come back in time for the adjourned meeting. Mr. Tyler presented the petition last night and it was filed, as was also one received from Mrs. T. J. Pruden, who owns property in Park avenue, between Second and Front streets, in which she protested against the granting of a license to Charles Schans and threatening to take legal action if an attempt is made to close up the driveway adjoining the property in question at 136 Park avenue.

After Mr. Tolles called up on third reading the ordinance providing for the sending of the city's indigent poor to the hospital, in accordance with the agreement with the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, the Common Council adjourned.

Putnam & DeGraw, the West Front street dry goods merchants, are showing a large stock of new spring goods of desirable pattern and low price.

J. J. Leany, the Richmond street plumber, will be pleased to furnish estimates for any kind of work in his line, guaranteeing entire satisfaction.

H. Mehrten, of East Front street, sells candy that will satisfy you in every respect. It is always fresh and pure, while the variety of stock is extensive.

Callahan & Son carry a fine stock of fresh vegetables, fruits and groceries of all kinds. The delivery system is good, and a telephone call will bring your order to your house on time.

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE

Colored Man Fires Three Shots at Her and Flees.

CAPTURED BY POLICE.

Charles Carr, the Husband, Held Without Bail on Charge of Atrocious Assault With Intent to Kill.

Angered because his wife refused to listen to his pleadings for her to return and live with him, Charles Carr, a well known local colored man, made a desperate attempt to kill the woman in a West Fourth street house last night. He called her to the door and when she retreated he pulled a revolver and fired three shots directly at her. The bullets buried themselves in the wall behind her. Carr fled but was captured this morning by Roundsman John Flynn and Patrolman Overbaugh. Arraigned before Justice Mosher on a charge of atrocious assault with intent to kill, he was committed without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The Carrs have been living in the old "Battle Row" on West Fourth street but separated a short time ago and the wife boarded with the family of Hulbert Randolph just below on the same street. Carr has been trying to get his wife to return home but without avail and lately she even refused to see him. He went to the Randolph house last night and through the family asked his wife to come out and talk with him on the street. She declared she wanted nothing to do with him and this so angered him that he forced the door back and fired the shots as his wife ran to the far corner of the room.

Carr is employed as a driver.

ANTI-SPITTING LAW TO BE ENFORCED

ARRESTS TO BE MADE IF WARNING IS NOT HEEDED.

Reports showing the sanitary condition of the city to be good were presented at the March meeting of the Board of Health, yesterday afternoon. There are about three houses under quarantine, two on account of scarlet fever and one for diphtheria. A large number of cases of measles were reported during the month.

Reference was made to the small yellow cards which have been distributed throughout the city among policemen, trolley car conductors and station agents to prevent the habit of spitting on the sidewalks of the public streets and on the floors of public buildings and railway cars. After a thorough warning is given the public a few arrests will be made.

Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow reported that he had analyzed thirteen samples of milk, all of which were found to be of good quality.

During February there were reported eight marriages, forty-seven births, two still-births and twenty-nine deaths.

The work on the garbage problem still continues. D. A. Woodhouse, representing the Decarie Manufacturing Company, of Minneapolis, was present at the Board's meeting and spoke on the merits of an incinerator made by his company. He visited the crematory later.

Vliet Fined $10.

Walter Vliet, the Dunellen man arrested a week ago Saturday night for disorderly conduct, was fined $10 after his case had been heard by Judge Runyon, last night. When Vliet was first arraigned he claimed that his arrest had been a case of mistaken identity but there was nothing to bear him out in the testimony.

M'ALL AUXILIARY ELECTS

Other Business Transacted at Nineteenth Annual Meeting

MRS. HEELY'S REPORT

Detailed Work of the Plainfield Branch for the Past Year and Gave Interesting Facts.

Officers were elected and interesting reports presented at the nineteenth annual meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the McAll Auxiliary, held March 1, at the Public Library. There was a large attendance and unusual interest. These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead; vice president, Mrs. Lawrence Myers; secretary, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely; treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster.

Mrs. Charles S. Lee, who was abroad for some time, gave an intensely interesting account of her visits to the auxiliary halls in Paris and of the excellent work being accomplished, and two letters were received from the missionaries at Limoges, France, who are supported by the Plainfield members.

This most excellent report for the past year was read by Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, the secretary:

"The nineteenth year of the McAll Auxiliary of Plainfield, which closes with the present meeting, has had its share of the joy which comes to a society through success achieved by hard work as well as the discouragements which come in any line of missionary labor. But we are thankful to report that the way seems open for most effective work at Limoges and that we have done much to make it possible. Our hearts have been very full of interest during the year, as the financial conditions seemed to be such that something would have to be done to reduce expenses in the general work and we have been looking with some anxiety in the direction of our more especial work at Limoges, fearing that it would seem unwise to curtail at this point, but thanks to the efforts of the women of the Plainfield Auxiliary it now promises to be a year of great usefulness at this place so dear to us all, as the one little portion of the grand McAll work which I think we may venture to call our own. The attendance at our monthly meetings has been very good, but this is one thing we would all like to see increased for we know the value of having women new to the work join us as they are sure to want to know more, of what is so much interest to us. The annual meeting was held in May in East Orange and the following delegates were sent from our auxiliary: Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, Mrs. Isaac Field, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck and Miss Dietrich. The women enjoyed this meeting thoroughly and came back to us with many helpful thoughts gathered there.

"Mrs. Mead was entertained by Mrs. Freeland, secretary of the East Orange Auxiliary, and who for a number of years corresponded with Mme. Saint Vidal, the wife of the evangelist at Limoges, and Mrs. Freeland was able to tell Mrs. Mead much about Mme. Saint Vidal which seems to have made us better acquainted.

"These meetings do much to bring about a large knowledge of the general work and they promote a spirit of fellowship which is great gain to all who are able to come under the influence of them. After our June meeting we did not come together again until October and I think that we all approached the work of the fall with renewed interest. Several of our members have been abroad during the summer and brought us most direct news of the mission work although no one was able to get to Limoges, which is a two days' journey from Paris. Mrs. Wadsworth visited two halls in Paris and was particularly impressed with the earnestness of one of the pastors. The audience seemed very attentive and really hungry for the truth.

"It must be a most encouraging part of mission work to those actively engaged to see so many avenues open just waiting for development, but though the ways to increase the work take very definite shape the necessary increase in a financial way seldom comes at the same time. But with all the dark side of our work there is so much more that is bright and hopeful that it is perhaps unwise to emphasize the troubles. Mr. Saint Vidal, our evangelist, is a most progressive and aggressive man with the interest of the work very close to his heart. Owing to the ill health of both Mr. and Mrs. Saint Vidal the work I think has at times been extremely hard for them, but they have done nobly. That which is done for the soldiers seems still to form a large part of the mission work labor and as someone suggests there could be nothing more important.

"For the men, many of them of good birth, are stationed at the barracks for a longer or shorter period and when they come under the influence of the blessed Gospel of Christ they take away with them a priceless gift which they are eager to give to others and so do good missionary work in their own way. The reading and game room is open every evening and during the year a billiard table has been added, which is a great pleasure to many of the men. The sewing classes and devotional services are carried on as usual. So it seems that all that is necessary for us to do is to send more money and there will be no doubt as to how the work will develop. I am glad to say that this year we have contributed more than last so let the good work go on. At Christmas time we sent $10, which was raised by private subscription, to Limoges, for the annual festival, which all the children looked forward to with great joy.

"You will see from Mme. Saint Vidal's letter which came last week, that she wanted us to help out at a fair the early part of March, but I fear she did not leave us time enough to do as she asked. We may well feel that we have great cause for thankfulness with what has been done since we met at our last annual meeting. In reading a report of one of our sister auxiliaries, I came across this extract from the editor of the most important religious paper in Paris. He had been discussing the religious conditions of the populace of France and the difficulty of carrying the Gospel to them, open air preaching, being not only illegal but impracticable. 'Right here,' he goes on, 'the popular evangelical mission continued by the friends of Mr. McAll, presents itself and says to us, there are my halls, make use of them. I make a point of being as near the sidewalk as possible and in the most populous quarters. I have helpers whose special work it is to bring us in the passersby. Come with us; and it is an encouragement to the disciple of Jesus Christ to learn of this opportunity of speaking for his Master to the casual passerby of Paris, in such a way that he will be heard.'

"So the wonderful work goes on and is as much needed as when it started over thirty years ago. As evidence that the French people themselves desire the mission and all Protestant work upheld I call your attention again to the fact that they give to the support of the Gospel, more, proportionately than the Protestant people of America. And these represent the poor people of France and we all know the giving must be done at tremendous sacrifice. Can we ask then if the McAll work is needed? To turn to our work in Plainfield—the women have been most active and interested and we are pleased to think that the interest has reached others during the year.

"This was noticeably demonstrated at the very charming afternoon we spent at the home of Mrs. Wadsworth. She opened her home for a 'birthday tea' and it was a truly delightful affair. Small envelopes were inclosed with the invitations, on which was a verse printed asking the recipient to put therein as many pennies as they were years old. We were most gratified at the substantial response, but most of all did we enjoy the social side of the afternoon for it brought us closer together and made others acquainted with our work. Miss Lent, of New York, and Mrs. Kelly, of Elizabeth, both members of the American McAll Board, gave us bright and instructive addresses and Mrs. Strong, aided by Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. George S. King and Miss Hubbell delighted us with some charming music. Surely Mrs. Wadsworth's most kind hospitality was appreciated and enjoyed by all and we thank her for it. This year we have done better work than last, may next year exceed this and so may our work grow and flourish for the glory of Him who said that doing good to the least of the brethren we would do it unto Him. God who has so wonderfully blessed us in our dear land, keep our hearts always tender toward the unfortunate and may nothing be too difficult for us to attempt in His Name. With a feeling of deep gratitude, a stronger determination for better work and with a loving sympathy toward all who need us, we will start the new year. We again express our thanks to the Boards of Managers of the Public Library for the use of this room and the press for its many courtesies."

Miss Kizzie Neagle, of West Fifth street, has been visiting Miss Linda Rowland, of Bound Brook.

PUNISH INDIAN TRUANTS.

Boys Who Play Hookey Are Arrested and Imprisoned, According to Account of Tutor.

It doesn't pay for an Indian schoolboy to play hookey, says the Kansas City Journal. Guns are employed to capture the truant, and if caught alive he is not tanned with birch, but is hustled to prison like a felon. At least, if this account of one of the tutors at the Chilocco institute is true. He says:

"One party of five Ponca boys that I escorted to Chilocco last December remained over Sunday and were returning to the reservation ahead of me. Unfortunately, they got on the smoker of the returning train and one of them looked into the coach. I instantly surmised that the others were with him and soon had three well seated and under guard. The fourth refused to come in, and we indulged in a wrestling bout on the platform, with the train speeding along at a rate of 40 miles an hour. I soon quit this method of capture, as it might have ended disastrously for both of us. Just as the train pulled into Ponca City my runaway jumped and I after him. He refused to stop and I fired twice, which simply accelerated his speed, and I am compelled to remark that with proper training that Indian could easily join the professional class of sprinters. I landed at the Ponca agency long after midnight with the three others, who were imprisoned."

STONE FROM EMPIRE STATE

Most of the Article Used in Grinding Apparatus Is Produced in New York.

Arkansas and New Hampshire supply us with most of our oilstones and scythe stones, although we import over $50,000 worth of "Turkey" razor hones. Most of our grindstones came from Ohio last year, but we also found it needful to import nearly $100,000 worth of stones for grinding and polishing lenses. Burr stones still find application in grinding paints, cements, etc., but other forms of grinding apparatus are gradually replacing them. New York state produces most of them, but some are taken from Pennsylvania strata. Pennsylvania provides most of the quartz for sandpaper and some garnet, but New York, New England and North Carolina also provide garnets for sandpaper. The United States produced at one time enough corundum for its own use, but now we have to import from Canada and India. The Chester county deposits are no longer worked and North Carolina and Montana are now the only producers. Nature is being helped out to a wonderful extent in supply abrasives by the manufacture of artificial corundum and carborundum in the electric furnace at Niagara Falls. Crushel steel is a new abrasive, being made in Pittsburg. It is steel of excessive hardness in a granular form.

JAPS GET GENUINE REST.

Coolies Perform All Chores Thus Keeping Fighters Fresh—Burial of Islanders.

It seems an innovation, worthy of particular notice. In the armies of the "civilized powers," so-called, the soldier's work is never done, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. After the battle the cavalrist needs look after his horse, the foot soldier must help clear the battlefield, or dig trenches. Only the Japs allow their men genuine rest, coolies doing all of the chores. It keeps the soldier fresh, gives him plenty of time to recuperate and enhances his feeling of self-importance. With all possible, but not indecent, haste the dead were buried. I saw no mass burials. Each man had a space of six by two feet for himself. The dead were carried to the rear on bamboo poles and crosspieces. An uncommissioned officer took the inventory—name, number and belongings. Then a guard of honor, sometimes six, sometimes only two men, came up and with them looking on silently the coolies shoveled dust upon dust, while the comrades dropped flowers upon the disappearing form.

WORLD'S BIGGEST MOTORS

Machines Capable of Hauling Immense Loads of Logs at High Speed in Use in Canada.

It is in the huge forests of Canada where the biggest motors in the world are seen. They have been specially designed for hauling logs over snow and rough roads. One of these machines is capable of dragging a train of 200 tons weight of logs at a speed of 12 miles an hour. It is the only machine in existence that will draw a heavy load through three feet of snow and over stumps and logs a foot in height. It is of 25 tons weight and 200 horsepower. It travels on four runners, with a traction wheel in the center weighing several tons. The machinery is inclosed in a box-like affair, giving the motor a somewhat strange appearance as it makes it way along the forest roads.

Finds Moth-Destroying Parasite.

George Compere, employed jointly by the state of California and West Australia, has discovered in South America a parasite which destroys the codling moth. Apple orchards that are the habitat of the parasite bring 95 per cent. of their fruit to maturity. Hitherto the product of the world's apple and pear orchards has not been more than 25 per cent. of the promise at the setting. San Francisco expects to receive from West Australia the first of the parasites very soon, and they will be cultivated under the most favorable conditions.

GENERAL VILJOEN IS HORSEWHIPPED

FORMER BOER FIGHTER ROUTED BY AN ACTRESS.

CHARGED WITH JILTING HER

South African Hero Beats Hasty Retreat Before Young Woman—Latter Tells of Romantic Adventures.

Chicago.—Gen. Benjamin Johannes Viljoen, Boer patriot and hero of half a hundred South African battlefields, was horsewhipped at the Coliseum here the other night by Miss May Belfort, an English vaudeville actress, who claims, in defense of her act that he jilted her after his wife secured a divorce from him in order to give him his freedom.

The sensational attack upon the famous soldier occurred at seven o'clock, when Miss Belfort appeared before the general and demanded:

"What do you mean by your scurrilous letter to me? Have you acted toward me as a man would toward a woman?"

"I know of no wrong deeds on my part—" began Viljoen, when the enraged actress snatched a heavy rawhide whip from the folds of her skirt and struck him a cutting blow upon the arm. Gen. Viljoen retreated before a shower of blows, the woman following him. With a last vicious cut, she desisted from her attack and then left the place.

In her room at the Sherman house Miss Belfort sat on the edge of her bed and told in picturesque style of her romantic adventures with Viljoen.

"I'm clean flabbergasted over this affair," she said. "Do you know that I met the Boer in 1903, while he was on a lecture tour in Lunnon. We were very fond of each other, but it was quite by accident, you know, that we left England for Africa on the same boat. Then we had our pictures taken together in Johannesburg."

Miss Belfort then obligingly loaned the picture, a heart-shaped card, showing herself and the general together.

"Do you know," she continued, "he wanted to know if I would marry him if his wife got a divorce through a barrister. I said 'Yes,' but my friends wanted to know what I wanted to marry a Boer general for. It was because I loved him.

STRUCK HIM A CUTTING BLOW UPON THE ARM.

"We returned to England together. About a twelvemonth ago the Boer went to St. Louis. I have real 'swads' of letters from him. After Mrs. Viljoen's barrister got her a divorce last fall the tone of his letters changed. He wrote to me that 'he was through with married life,' and that he could not afford to get married.

"He often took the trouble to cable to the London Daily Express and deny that he was engaged to marry me.

"I am sure I hurt him. If his coat had only been thinner I would have thrashed him even more soundly than I did. I did my best, anyway."

Miss Belfort sings French and English songs in vaudeville. Gen. Viljoen refused to discuss Miss Belfort, saying that the notoriety was distasteful to him. He declared that Miss Belfort was seeking notoriety for herself.

Gen. Viljoen is certain that a man accompanied the woman and made an appointment by telephone for her. Miss Belfort denies emphatically that any other person was connected with the affair.

Count Dresses as a Woman.

Paris.—An amusing story is related about an eccentric count living in this city on a modest income of 250,000 francs a year, and whose only fad is to dress as a lady. Not content with appearing in his dashing carriage in this strange costume in public, he has just given a ball, the guests being "ladies only," and numbering some of the most distinguished names. The count received and invited in a rose colored satin dress, trimmed with richest lace, and ornamented with bouquets of flowers. Equally interesting is the fact that he is always veiled, to hide his white moustache, as he has no desire to part with it.

Shower of Frozen Geese.

Nagy-Becskerek, Hungary.—The inhabitants of this little town have received an unexpected gift in the form of a shower of half-frozen geese numbering nearly 1,000, which have fallen from the skies.

UNIVERSITY OF HUMANITY.

Chief of Salvation Army Would Found a School for Research Into Human Ways.

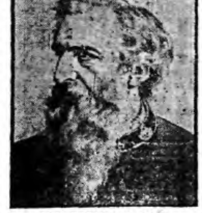
London (Eng.) Special.

Gen. William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, will lead a movement for the founding of a university of humanity.

"The reasons why such a university should be established," said the general "are many. At the present time we have such universities as Oxford and Cambridge. At these places it is possible for a man—and for a woman, too—to be trained in art, science, literature, medicine, law, theology, and almost everything you can mention, is taught, but up to the present there has been no place established upon a similar basis where men shall be trained from the social and human standpoint. When I was in America I met the late



GEN. WILLIAM BOOTH.
(Commander in Chief of the Salvation Armies of the World.)

Mark Hanna and many of the most distinguished men in the states. With them I talked the matter over, and had Mark Hanna lived, he and myself would have succeeded in getting some of the philanthropic millionaires to give us the money to start the scheme.

"What I want is two such universities—one in New York and one in London. Their business will be to train men to carry out the same kind of work that our officers carry on at the present time. We want men to have as thorough a training in the knowledge of men—as human beings—as they already have in everything else.

"Take the present poor law system, for instance, and couple the cost of carrying on its work with the money spent in the same direction from voluntary sources. It should be possible to train up men who will do all that these are doing, turn out better men and women, and, at the same time, minimize the cost. We want a class of men who are training in a knowledge of the fitness and capacity of the child and youth—men who will be able to perceive and detect the criminal and immoral instincts in human nature, and be able to divert it in the right direction. In short, we want men who will be able to turn out the human being as perfect as it is possible to turn him out."

"And the cost, general—do you want the country to bear it?"

"No—not at all. I don't, of course, see why the country should not make grants in just the same way as some of the colonies make us grants now in order to assist our work among the criminal and depraved clases, but the bulk of the money should come from voluntary sources." Then, with an emphatic gesture, he added: "Let them give us the money—we already have the humanitarian professors."

BROKE NATIONAL RECORD

Walter McNaughton Wins U. S. High Dive Championship.

MADE 6 FT. 1 3-4 INCHES

Plainfield Athletic Team Wins Fourth Place in Inter-Association Meet at Newark.

Walter McNaughton, a member of the athletic team which represented this city at the annual indoor inter-association meet at Newark Y. M. C. A. March 1, broke the National high dive record, winning the United States championship with a height of six feet, one and three-quarter inches. The meet, which took place in the Newark gymnasium, was won by Orange with 21 points, Plainfield coming in fourth out of nine competitiors. It was largely through McNaughton's work that the local team won a place as six of the seven points were made by him.

Last year, in the in-door meet which was held at the local gymnasium, McNaughton won the State championship with a dive of 5 feet, 11 inches, the National championship being held until last night, by a Buffalo man. A. G. Poelier, of Orange, was McNaughton's nearest competitor. He also broke the old record, but failed to equal the new one established by the Plainfielder.

The following were the events:

Fifteen yard dash, won by W. S. Lindsay, of Orange; G. H. Chase, of Montclair, second. Scull, of Plainfield, qualified for the second heat.

Running high jump, won by A. Horrax, of Montclair; H. Todd, of Newark, second; Walter McNaughton, of Plainfield, third. Height, 5 feet, 8 inches.

Twelve pound shot-put, won by D. C. Coleworthy, of Orange; R. McWilliams, of Orange, second; J. F. Maxfield, of Montclair, third. Collins represented Plainfield. Distance, 40 feet, 6 inches.

Fence vault, won by G. E. Ketcham, of Newark; F. Siebert, of Newark, second; C. M. Cronkite, of Orange, third. Walter Osborne, of Plainfield, made a good showing. Height, 6 feet, 4½ inches.

Running high dive, won by McNaughton, National champion; Poelier, of Orange, second; Cronkite, of Orange, third. Height, 6 feet, 1¾ inches.

Relay race, one mile, won by Newark; Orange, second; Plainfield, third. Time, 3.53; 3.59 and 4, respectively.

There is a possibility that Orange may be disqualified in the relay race, in which event the local team will win third place in the meet. The Plainfield representatives in the relay race were Ray Smith, E. W. Overten, C B. Koons and Harry Scull.

Frank Marclay, of Summit, formerly of this city, acted as referee. The other officials were the following: Director of meet, L. M. Smith, of Newark; judges, A. M. Obesley, of Orange Y. M. C. A.; George Henchel, of Montclair Y. M. C. A.; J. L. Roth, of Passaic Y. M. C. A.; Robert Gourley, of Morristown Y. M. C. A.; timers, J. C. Scott, of Central Y. M. C. A., of Brooklyn; M. J. Foss, of Bedford Branch Y. M. C. A., of Brooklyn; scorers, M. Myers, of Newark Y. M. C. A.; Fred Clarendon, of Newark Y. M. C. A.; measurers, Mr. Barnard, of Eidgewood Y. M. C. A.; Mr. Flood, of Hudson City Y. M. C. A.; clerk of course, Fred Metz, Jr.; starter, F. Welsmiller, of West Side Y. M. C. A., of New York.

The points were awarded, five for first; three for second, and one for third place. The associaions finished as follows: Orange, 20; Newark, 16; Montclair, 9; Plainfield, 7. The other associations, including Jersey City, Ridgewood, Hudson City, Morristown and Passaic, failed to win points.

A HOME WEDDING.

Chauncey F. Martin and Miss Annabel Doty Married at Somerville.

Chauncey Field Martin, of this city, and Miss Annabel Doty were married at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doty, north of Somerville, Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. D. Opdyke, of Martinville.

The house was beautifully decorated for the event in green and white. As the guests gathered Miss Louella Ellis played a selection from "Midsummer Night's Dream." The bridal party entered the parlor as she began the wedding march from "Lohengrin." The ushers, Messrs. Toleman, of New Haven, and VanMiddlesworth, of Newark, came first; followed by the best man and bridesmaid, they being Robert Doty, brother of the bride and Miss Alice Martin, sister of the groom. The bride and groom then followed, meeting the party in front of an arch of greens, with an emblem of good luck suspended from the centre.

After refreshments were served the bride and groom departed, for an extended tour, after which they will reside at Plainfield. The bride received many beautiful and useful presents.

DEATH OF MORGAN BIRD

Passed Away at His Home Thursday.

A PROMINENT RESIDENT

Had Been Identified With the City's Interests for the Past Fifty Years.

Morgan C. Bird, one of the best known local citizens, who for nearly fifty years has been identified with the business interests of this city, died Thursday a. m. at his home on Randolph road. Death was due to a carbuncle on the neck, which developed from a cold. The growth caused much trouble for several weeks, but Mr. Bird had only been detained at home about a week. Up to that time he was able to attend to business as usual.

Mr. Bird was born at Mt. Bethel and was a resident of this city fifty years. In his younger days he learned the carpenter trade and constructed many buildings here, including the Plainfield High School and Trinity Reformed church on West Second street, two of his largest contracts. Afterward he engaged in the sash and blind business at Sycamore and Fifth streets and later he operated a mill and cider press on East Fourth street, where he owned considerble property. He was one of the first to introduce horse-power here as a means for sawing wood and doing fancy scroll work. He was of decided mechanical ability and nearly all of the machinery used in his business was of his own handiwork.

In politics Mr. Bird was a Democrat, although he never took an active part in such matters. He was one of the first members of the First Baptist church, and was a regular attendant. He was married twice, his second wife and one daughter, Miss Carre Bird, and a son, Fred Bird, a daughter, Mrs. P. O. Vail, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., by his first marriage, and three brothers, Lewis, George and Jacob Bird, survive him.

PLAINFIELDERS WEDDED IN BROOKLYN CHURCH

FASHIONABLE CEREMONY UNITES MISS JESSIE PERKINS AND HUGH C. PIERCE.

Miss Jessie Thomas Perkins, daughter of the late Lithgow Towne Perkins, of Brooklyn, who has been living in this city during the past three years, and Hugh Clay Pierce, son of Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, who has been living at Trueli Inn for some time, were married March 1, at 7:30 o'clock in the Emanuel Baptist church, Brooklyn, in the presence of a large and fashionable assemblage of society people.

Miss Perkins was attended by her sister, Mrs. Frank H. Wycoff, as matron of honor, and by Miss Sarah Frances Jones, of Manhattan; Miss Fannie Votey, of Summit, and Miss Marie Kampman, of this city. The best man was Henry B. Moore, of Manhattan, and James Roche, of Bridgeport; Charles Hamilton, John Denholm, of Worcester, Mass., and Ralph Waldo Pierce were the ushers. There were two flower girls, Miss Mildred Wycoff and Miss Frances Williams and two pages, Master Frederick Lyle, Jr., and Master Edward Perkins.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Wycoff, at 25 Clifton place. The couple left last night for a wedding journey in the South. They will return here March 20 and make their home at Trueli Inn. Among the Plainfield guests at the wedding was Mrs. Wright, of Park avenue.

The bride has been a resident of the borough during the past year. Mr. Hartfelder is a carpenter. He is a member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., the Jr. O. U. A. M., and at one time was active in the Hope Y. M. A. The couple will reside on Whitewood avenue until June, when they will begin housekeeping.

GOOD BASEBALL ASSURED

The Coming Season's Team Will be a "Crackerjack."

"TUCK" TURNER SIGNED

Philip Daab Was in Town Yesterday and Expresses Pleasure at the Outlook.

In a little more than a month the Plainfield fans will welcome the opening of the local baseball season, at a time when the major and minor leagues will about be ready to start on their long and exciting series of contests for the year. That there will be good baseball here no one doubts as the best list of attractions will be brought to Crescent Oval. Philip Daab, who is best known by his connection with the management of the Hoboken team, was in town yesterday, getting acquainted with conditions. He, together with Charles Woolston and Lines Grae, will look after the management of the Plainfield Baseball Association, and this is assurance that the real article will be presented.

Charles S. Woolston.
(Who will manage the Plainfield Baseball Association Team.)

Mr. Daab is very much pleased with the outlook, so much so that he has about decided to live here during the summer season. He will be interested in the booking of teams here and will assist in placing the Plainfield team on the field, which will be the best ever. This has been brought about by not having a ball player engaged who is in any way connected with a league club without first gaining the full consent of the league club of which the player is a member, and by adhering to this stringent rule it will enable the local management to book only the very best independent and league teams under the National agreement.

While the majority of the players will be from the Hoboken Club, the complexion will be changed a little to strengthen the same. However, many of the familiar faces will be seen and the new men will add to the batting strength.

"Pete" Lamar will be the formidable backstop and captain the team, and there is every reason to believe that Linderman will be the chief twirler, notwithstanding other reports. Mr. Daab is anxious to have him pitch here and arrangements for this are now underway. Linderman was drafted by the New York Nationals, but has not yet signed. "Jim" Beisel, who is now a Plainfielder, will be the second pitcher, and he promises to do good work.

Dave Driscoll will occupy the initial bag and his superior work in this position in past seasons will be duplicated. As a daring base-runner and holding wild thrown balls and catching almost impossible foul balls, he has no equal.

It is probable that "Pete" Kiernan will hold down second base, although there has been negotiations with Frank Quinby, who is well-known here. If he will consent to play the whole season, he may be taken on, otherwise Kiernan, who is known as "Happy," will fill the place which he did for Waterbury, of the Connecticut State League.

"Rube" Oldring will be one of the new acquisitions and will either play at short or in the outfield, either of which position he is well qualified to fill. He is of league material with a reputation.

The fans are all glad that "Mike" Leonard will take care of third base. This position suffered last year and was one of the weak spots. "Mike" will be here, notwithstanding other reports. His brilliant play of this position was a feature last season. Numerous managers have been after him, but he holds a good position in New York, and prefers to remain with old friends. As a batter he has few superiors.

The outfield positions have received as much attention as the infield. One thing that will surely delight the fans will be the announcement that "Tuck" Turner, of the famous Crescents of other days, will play here again. He and Harry McCormick, of last year's Pittsburg team, and Edward Connelly, who has an established reputation, will take care of the outfield.

Of McCormick very little need be said. As a batsman and fielder he is the best. He was drafted by the Philadelphia Nationals this year, but in the meantime he secured a fine position with the Pennsylvania Steel Corporation with offices in New York and has decided to give up professional baseball. "Tuck" Turner can be depended upon to do his share. Errors by him have been so few that one cannot remember them and as a batsman he knows how to score the runs. Connelly, as a heavy batter and fast fielder, is sure to make good. His batting will bear watching, and if this feature does not cause outfielders to lead a strenuous life, his friends will be surprised.

During this month the team will have indoor practice so that everything will be all right for the opening game here with the Jersey City Eastern League team on Sraturday, April 15.

JOSEPH O'KEEFE IS NOW A BENEDICT

QUIETLY MARRIED A NEW YORK YOUNG WOMAN YESTERDAY.

Miss Mary Agnes McKinless, daughter of Mrs. James Chrysostom McKinless, of New York, and Joseph O'Keefe, of West Seventh street, were quietly married in All Saints' church, New York, Thursday. The ceremony was performed by the rector and was witnessed only by the relatives and near friends of the couple. Rev. Father Egan assisted in the nuptial mass and William O'Keefe, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The young couple left for a wedding trip last night and will be at home after April 25 at 16 West One Hundred and Twenty-Seventh street, New York.

Mr. O'Keefe is widely known throughout the city and has taken an active part in local social life for several years. He is a member of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, and other organizations and is also a member of St. Mary's church choir.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 12.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Christ, the Great Physician.—Luke iv, 16-19; v, 27-32; I Pet. ii, 24.

Christ has well been called the Great Physician. During His earthly existence He used His miraculous power for the physical healing of the people, and as the physician of the body He healed all kinds of diseases, and in no instance did He fail to successfully meet the needs of the case. Such a record would place Christ's name as a physician at the head of the list of the great physicians who have blessed mankind in the years gone by. But Christ's claim to greatness as a physician does not rest upon His work for the physical man. He was more than this—the physician of the soul. In this field He stands alone. Others may do something toward healing the body, but only Christ can cure the soul of its sicknesses.

1. Christ's mission on earth was to heal men spiritually. Sin sickened the whole human being, and Christ came to save man from the guilt, power and consequences of sin and to heal the wounds and heartaches that followed in sin's train. He Himself declared this to be His mission when in the synagogue at Nazareth. He applied Isaiah's prophecy to Himself—"He hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised." In answer to the murmuring of the Pharisees concerning His association with publicans and sinners at the feast of Levi, Christ taught the same truth concerning Himself. "They that are whole," He said, "need not a physician, but they that are sick. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance." To heal the sin sick was therefore Christ's supreme mission on earth, and all need to be healed, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Moreover, Christ alone can heal us, for "there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

2. Christ, the Great Physician, made possible the healing of the soul by the offering up of Himself a sacrifice for sin. "Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness, by whose stripes we are healed." He died on the cross of Calvary as a substitute for sin sick humanity, and His death makes it possible for us to have our sins forgiven and to live a new life unto God. Thus He paid the greatest price that one could pay for those whom He would heal. Physicians often make serious self denials for their patients and in so doing greatly endear themselves to them. Christ, our Great Physician, died that He might give life eternal to those who were dead in sins. Have we accepted this sacrifice, and, if so, do we appreciate all He has done for us, and are we living for Him?

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xv, 24-27; Ps. vi, 1-4; xli, 1-4; ciii, 1-5; Isa. liii, 1-5; Jer. xvii, 14; Hos. xiv, 1-9; Matt. viii, 1-10; Luke v, 17.

Enthusiasm Everywhere.

During the past year fifty-eight Endeavorers in Germany have become missionaries.

Germany now has 236 societies with 5,500 members, an increase of 1,528 made the past year.

The next European convention will be held in Berlin while we are meeting in Baltimore, July 9-12, 1905.

The last convention of the Yorkshire (England) Christian Endeavor union drew together nearly 4,000 Endeavorers.

The English Baptists have on the Kongo a steamship called the Endeavor, for which English Baptist Endeavorers are interested in raising money.

A Primitive Methodist society in England (at Eyemouth) has ten active members and a hundred associates. Perhaps most of the latter are "on probation."

Austria, Sweden and Russia were represented at the wonderful Christian Endeavor convention recently held in Berlin. There were nine Russian Stundists, among them a priest who had just escaped from the madhouse to which his persecutors had sent him.

Secretary Hubbell of Ohio reached personally last year more than 1,300 Christian Endeavor societies.

Massachusetts State Song.

Massachusetts Endeavorers have this state song, which they sing at their gatherings to the tune of "Fair Harvard:"

Massachusetts, my home land, America's pride,
Fairest gem in Columbia's crown!
Though in east land or west land thy children abide,
They rejoice in thy peerless renown.
Haven home of the Pilgrims my home land thou art,
Though far from thy borders I rove;
Thy shrines with their stories are dear to my heart,
Thy mother name always I love.

Mother state of the nation, thy sons are the sires
Of a race that is born to be free,
Thy sages and heroes have lighted the fires
That have spread to the occident sea;
Thy shores are the refuge of spirits oppressed,
Thy rocks are fair liberty's guard;
Our forefathers gave thee their dearest and best,
And thy fame was their sweetest reward.

From the bay to thy Berkshires the sun ever shines
On the flag that shall never be furled,
Thy hillsides and valleys all shelter the shrines
Of the faith that shall conquer the world.
Mother state of the Union, thy heart, ever young,
For the Union shall beat ever sure;
Commonwealth of the noble, thy praise shall be sung
While the noble and free shall endure.

A FISTIC DUEL IN A TREE.

Kentucky Negroes Engage in Unique Combat in View of Hundreds of Spectators.

James Askridge and Mason Thomas, negroes, who live near Middletown, were the principals in a fistic duel fought high in the branches of a large tree at the picnic grounds near Warwick Villa, Ky. The duel was the result of a quarrel between the negroes.

Askridge, it is said, told Thomas he could lick him anywhere—on the ground, in the air or under the deep blue sea. This boast was too sweeping for Mason, and he took issue with him.

"I can lick you up in dat tree," boasted Askridge, "an' if you don't b'leve it, come on."

"I CAN LICK YOU IN A TREE."

"You can't do nuthin' you say you kin—you can't whip me no whar." And with this state of things the two clambered up among the branches to prepare for the supreme test of prowess in battle in the air, while a crowd of interested spectators gathered to witness it. When the negroes reached a distance of 12 or 15 feet from the ground each announced ready, and while clinging to a friendly branch with one hand, each proceeded to pummel the other with a determination that furnished amusement for the crowd of picnickers below and bruises for the combatants among the limbs.

Finally Askridge hit Mason a telling blow on the jaw and almost knocked him from the tree, Mason saving himself by catching a limb below him. The victor, in taunting tones, then asked the apparently vanquished Mason if he was satisfied.

"Now, if you is satisfied I kin lick you in de air, jus' cum down on de groun' an' I'll do it down dar," said the confident Askridge.

Mason seemed to have sufficient proof and the two crawled down from their strange dueling ground, and after eyeing each other suspiciously for a time separated and forgot their differences.

HOW BROWN WENT HOME.

He Hailed a Cab and Made an Innocent Medical Man Pay for the Ride.

Brown always was a quick-witted chap. Only one other possession of his was as nimble as that wit of his, and that was his money. He was always broke, and always reckless withal. He took a cab once, being a bit unsteady, to convey him from the club to his dwelling, the latter some distance.

The cool night air blowing through the open windows sobered him enough to permit of his realizing that he had no money to pay the cabman's fare. Just at this moment the driver made that very usual inquiry:

"What address did you say, sir?"

And Brown said promptly:

"Dr. So-and-So, No. 4 Blank street," the same being around the corner from his own abode.

The house reached, Brown dashed up the steps, rang the bell furiously, and through the speaking-tube he implored the doctor to go at once to such-and-such a house. A cab was at the door, and would the doctor take the cab? When the doctor came down Brown bundled him in, gave the driver an address, and then started off.

Of course Brown went home around the corner, and of course the cabman searched in vain for the number, and of course the doctor—well, what could he do?

The Japanese, having become rather proud of the way in which they are amazing the Russians, think they are likely to become the rulers of the sea. They, therefore, propose to challenge the New York Yacht club for the America cup.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 12: "Christ the Great Physician"—Luke iv, 16-19; Luke v, 27-32; I Pet. ii, 24.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

Our worst sicknesses are not of the body. Physical pain and infirmity are bad, but there are suffering of mind and infirmity of soul that are more difficult to endure and are more deadly in effect. Our deepest need individually and as a race is for one who can cure us of the love of the evil and correct our willfulness. We are so blinded by our prejudices that we often fail to see the truth and so are out of the path of safety and need one who can make us able to see things as they really are.

Blind eyes need indeed to be opened, deaf ears must be unstopped, the lame feet must receive strength. There are leprous souls whose every touch is contamination and death to all moral impulse. Who shall cleanse them? No power of earthly philosophy has been sufficient to work any change in them.

The stupendous wonder in the story of Jesus Christ is that He attracts just such as these to Himself and transforms their lives until they become pure and wholesome. More than this, He imparts to them something of His own enthusiasm for goodness, and they become centers from which moral light and life seem to be irradiated upon all with whom they come in contact. The change is almost total in them.

And this power of Christ was not only exerted by Him on the people of His own time and land, but it still continues to act with potent energy on people of our own day and in all lands where the gospel is preached and men accept the offers of salvation through faith in the risen and glorified Lamb of God.

Much stress has well been laid in time past on the healing works of Jesus in His earthly ministry. Great discussion has sometimes risen as to the possibility of curing diseases at the present time by simple faith without the use of medicines. Not a few have seemed to think that the great mark of divine power lay in the cure of bodily infirmities and that the lack of that gift now was a mark of degenerate faith. A more careful consideration of the teaching of Jesus will show how great a mistake this is.

The relief of body has value, but is comparatively insignificant to the changing a soul from the practice and relish of the evil to the love of rightousness and sacrifice of self for the assistance of others.

Jesus wins men because He heals their souls' diseases. He changes the values of life and gives power to strengthless wills. The cowardly and cruel He makes heroic and long suffering.

No other man of the race has ever inspired such devotion. This is not so much the mere doctrine He teaches as the fact of His personality. His healing touch was given because He felt for men in their suffering. He had compassion. Men saw it in His eyes and felt it in His voice and in the touch of the hand. It was not so much condescension and a coming down to their level, not a professional distribution of benefits; it was a great heart giving from its store of love and fellowship; it was companionship. This challenges all the noblest that is left in a man. It awakens the dormant powers; it brings the sleeper to himself and awakens every slumbering faculty to keenest alertness and intensest action. If He cares like that for me He can have me and do whatever He pleases with me, is the feeling of the healed one.

Jesus came that we might have life more abundantly, of the very best sort. Whatever brings us to Him for this healing should be counted a blessing indeed. Let us not count bodily health as of the utmost importance, for it may be that in pain and privation He can show us the most satisfyingly His tenderness and bring us closest to Himself.

If Jesus can so wonderfully cure the soul's sickness and we have experienced His Healing power, how diligent we should be to bring our friends and all whom we can influence to the knowledge of His offers of salvation!

Think the Noblest Thoughts.

You have length and breadth to your life, but have you height to it? You are a farmer—are your thoughts always of your farm and stock? You are a manufacturer, but do you think alone of raw materials, refined and shaped for sale and use? You are a lawyer—do you think only of briefs, verdicts and decisions? You are a mechanic—how is it with you? Are your thoughts only of tools, products of your skill, hours and wages? Add height to your life. Rise to God in thought, faith, hope and love. Yield yourself to the invisible forces that draw the heart upward. Let your soul return to find rest in the God that breathed it into being. As you draw near to God the air invigorates, the clouds disappear, the stars shine, the heavens open. Doubt decays, faith revives, fears sink away, peace comes in, joy springs up, light breaks all around.—Philadelphia Methodist.

The Triumph of Faith.

In the world, perchance, there are sin and sorrow,
But we turn with faith to the sweet tomorrow—
The life to be
In eternity!

In the world, perchance, there is tear blind vision,
But we turn with faith to the land Elysian,
Where there are no tears
All the endless years!

In the world, perchance, there are sounds of sighing,
But we turn with faith to the life undying—
In the land of rest,
To be with the blest!

BOICE, RUNYON & CO. ACQUIRE SUTPHEN PLACE

WILL USE IT AS AN OUTLET FOR THE FIRM'S YARD.

An important local realty deal was completed Thursday, when the J. C. Sutphen estate on West Second street, adjoining that of the Public Service Corporation, was purchased by Boice, Runyon & Co. The deal has been under consideration for some time and marks the termination of many attempts to acquire this site. Among other parties seeking the property was the Public Service Corporation. There was a desire to increase the holdings of the corporation in this vicinity, but Boice, Runyon & Co. secured the first option which resulted in the sale. The consideration was about $5,000.

The property has a frontage of about sixty feet and when the old house is removed, it will allow for a fine driveway into the coal and lumber yards of the new owners, something that has been desired for many years. For this reason the property is especially valuable to the firm. It will do away with the present inconvenience of being obliged to cart coal and lumber from the extreme end of the yard to Park avenue, and at the same time will allow for a continuous driveway between Park avenue and West Second street. The new driveway will be used chiefly as it offers more advantages than the one on Park avenue where the travel is heavy.

It is the intention of the company to improve its property, making it attractive and in keeping with that of the Public Service Corporation. In the opinion of many it will be only a matter of a short time when much of the West Second street property will become a live business section equal with that of Park avenue and possibly Front street. Business is constantly increasing and every year there is difficulty in securing property suitable for business purposes.

With the erection of the new building at Park avenue and West Second street for the Plainfield Trust Company, a good start will have been made toward making that part of Second street a business thoroughfare. The improvements now being made by W. R. Coddington will also add to this and no doubt more building will follow during the year.

Plans for the removal of the old house on the Sutphen property on West Second street, which has just been purchased by Boice, Runyon & Co., were filed Friday with Building Inspector T. O. Doane. The company plans to remove the house and make other improvements in opening up a driveway to its coal and lumber yards. It is undoubtedly the purpose of the company to eventually use this driveway exclusively and close up some of the Park avenue entrances. If this is done there will probably be plans formulated for the erection of modern buildings on Park avenue corresponding to those to be erected by Charles W. McCutchen on his property which adjoins that of the Boice, Runyon & Co. estate.

With the Second street outlet the company would not need so much room on Park avenue and it could well afford to sacrifice this space for modern buildings which are in great demand at present. There are other important property deals in the business section underway and will probably be closed within a few weeks. Persons who have been engaged in real estate matters in this city for years say that they cannot remember a time when Plainfield property, especially that in the business section, was so much in demand and such high prices were obtainable. It is estimated that improvements representing many thousands of dollars will be made during the coming year, all of which will tend to increase the property values.

A "HOUSE WARMING."

Friends of H. A. Todd Assist Him in a Birthday Celebration.

In celebration of the fortieth anniversary of his birthday, and his removal from Duer street to East Third street, a large number of friends of H. A. Todd, manager for Boice, Runyon & Co., gave he and Mrs. Todd a "house-warming" Friday. There were guests from Westfield, Elizabeth, New York, Somerville, Manasquan and this city. The evening was spent in purely a social manner and at a late hour supper was served.

Mr. Todd received a number of valuable presents, including a Morris chair from the firm of which he is manager. He also received the best wishes of all for many happy returns of the day.

New Meat Market.

Alex Koch, who has been employed by Smalley Brothers, of North avenue, has leased Hand & Homan's new store at Watchung avenue East Second street, and will open a meat market there as soon as the building operations are completed.

BETTER PAY FOR POLICE

Regular Borough Marshals Will Now Receive $60.

CHIEF'S SALARY $75

Council Refuses Permission to William Lunger to Erect House on Harmony Street.

Acting on a resolution introduced by Chairman VanArsdale, of the Police Committee, the Borough Council in regular session last night, unanimously voted to increase the pay of the regular marshals. Chief George Weiss will hereafter receive $75 per month instead of $60 and the other members of the force will get $60 instead of $50, the change to date from March 1. The only proviso is that the men purchase two uniforms each year and supply other necessary paraphernalia outside of bicycles.

First mention of an increase in pay for the police was made in Mr. Van Arsdale's annual report and other councilmen expressed their approval. All have known that it has been impossible to keep the force up to a high grade of efficiency owing to the poor inducement and they believed more money would be an incentive. The resolution was accordingly presented and passed with but very little comment.

In the regular order of business, permission was refused William Lunger to erect a house on property owned by him on Harmony street. According to his plans he proposed to place a twelve foot house on a sixteen foot lot, which would leave but eighteen inches on one side and less than three feet or the other between it and other frame dwellings. The matter had been investigated by Councilman Arnold, who found that it violated the building ordinance and he recommended the refusal. Mr. Lunger explained his plans to the Council afterwards and for the purpose of making positive that he had been done no injustice all the members will personally inspect the property to see if there is any way he can be allowed to erect the house without conflicting with the ordinance.

A communication was received from the Board of Health asking that its annual appropriation be $550. It was referred to be acted upon later. On motion of Mr. Lee, a "cordial" invitation was extended the Board to use the Council room as its regular meeting place. Collector Brown was instructed to enforce the law regarding action against tax delinquents, and the bonds of the borough officials were ordered renewed. Bills amounting to $2,408.70 were paid and adjournment was made until March 30, when in all probability the budget will be made up.

PUBLIC SERVICE WANTS NEW ROSELLE ROUTE

PROPOSES CUTTING OFF PLAINFIELD IN THROUGH TRENTON SERVICE.

Frank Bergen, general counsel for the Public Service Corporation, appeared before the Union County Board of Freeholders yesterday afternoon to advocate a petition for a franchise to cross St. George avenue in Roselle with a prospective trolley line.

This line will begin at Third and Jersey avenues in Roselle and run through Linden to Elizabeth avenue in Rahway, where it will connect with a line for which rights have already been obtained. The franchise through Linden has been obtained. The petition was referred to the committee on county roads with power to act.

By the proposed line the Public Service will shorten the distance from the through line between Trenton and Jersey City. Instead of going round by way of Plainfield the cars will reach New Brunswick after passing through Linden and Rahway. For this purpose the Public Service sought a franchise from the Elizabeth City Council, but the application was granted under conditions that seemed onerous. It was the opinion in Elizabeth that the trolley company would ultimately accept the conditions imposed.

The county relinquished Westfield avenue, between Bayway and Broad street, in Elizabeth to the city; Westfield avenue, between St. George avenue, and the line between Rahway and Clark Township; St. George avenue, between Grand street and the line between Rahway and Linden were relinquished to Rahway.

Runkle-Talmadge Nuptials.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Helen Talmadge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Talmadge, of Belvidere avenue, and Daniel Runkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, of West Eighth street. The affair, which will be an elaborate one, will be celebrated on Wednesday, April 12.

MR. BESLER'S ADDRESS

Popular Railroad Man Tells About the Jersey Central.

TO BOARD OF TRADE

Gives Practical Facts in Relation to Management of the System—Routine Business at Meeting.

A review of the history of the New Jersey Central from its inception and its relation to the various towns along its line, especially Plainfield, formed the basis of an intensely interesting address made by W. G. Besler, vice president and general manager of the company, at a meeting of the Board of Trade, Thursday. The fact that Mr. Besler is a resident of North Plainfield, and is personally interested in both the borough and city, had a tendency to attract an unusually large number of men, there being nearly one hundred present.

Mr. Besler was introduced by President L. B. Woolston, and he spoke for over an hour. He began by placing the New Jersey Central in the position of a resident of the city, a taxpayer and therefore a part of the community. He referred to the first railroad established in Februray 26, 1847, and its subsequent growth and extension which resulted in the operation of the line between Somerville and Elizabethport, Easton, Whitehouse, the High Bridge branch and the final opening of the road through to New York with the first trip across the North river on the ferryboat "Central," and he then read an interesting letter written to Mrs. Johnston, by her husband, John Taylor Johnston, who was then president of the road, in which he told of the first trip over the road which was an occasion for much jollification.

Mr. Besler then turned his attention to some figures showing the importance of the New Jersey Central. He quoted the capital stock of the company at $27,419,800 and its bonded indebtedness as $51,317,100. Its earnings last year amounted to $11,820,618.42. The company employs a total of 12,000 men and the monthly payroll amounts to $590,000. There are 117 persons in and near this city employed by the company, averaging five adults to a family, and representing $120,000 in wages.

There were 161,841 tons of freight to and from Plainfield last year, and 15,997,293 passengers, an average of 133,331 a month and 4,400 daily, eighty per cent. being handled at the North Avenue station. Mr. Besler reiterated his former statement that passenger traffic is not self-supporting, when all the expenses of the company are taken into account, in fact he said that there are but two railroads in the country that claim that the passenger traffic pays and in these cases he thought that it was made to appear so only in bookkeeping.

He referred to the great expense of operating passenger trains, stating that on five round trips of a train between Jersey City and Philadelphia, the cost per car would average from $12 to $15. There are a total of 325 trains arriving and departing daily at Jersey City and 128 pass through Plainfield every twenty-four hours, besides eighty-five freight trains during the same number of hours.

Owing to the fact that the New Jersey Central gives so much in comparison to its returns, Mr. Besler said that the road was twenty-seventh in the list of the leading railroads. He spoke in a humorous manner of the very kind assistance offered the company from persons living along the line and of the requests made to have express trains stop here and there for their convenience. He said that suggestions were frequently received as to the makeup of timetables, all of which would be valuable if the parties could only understand other conditions. However, he added that these suggestions are kindly received.

An item of considerable expense referred to by Mr. Besler is that of timetables. Two million folders are issued yearly at an expense of about $15,000. Continuing Mr. Besler referred at great length to the Interstate Commerce law, competition of railroads and of unjust demands made upon railroad companies, concluding with the statement that the tendency of the times is to form great systems in railroads, thereby making it possible to provide better service. Mr. Besler concluded his remarks by relating a humorous story about a man applying for the position of conductor on a western railroad, he apparently having all the necessary qualifications, although he had never held a railroad job.

As an evidence of the good feeling and cordial relations existing between the company and the city, Mr. Besler said that the city had treated them very fair and there was no reason to complain on either side. He further stated that any resolution adopted by the Board of Trade tending to improve railroad conditions and benefit the city would be carefully considered.

This led Mr. Woolston to compare the management under Vice President Warren and that of Mr. Besler, referring to the time the committee from the Board visited Mr. Warren and was met with the declaration that he would like to know what the Board of Trade had to do with running the New Jersey Central.

Mr. Besler's address closed with long and hearty applause and a vote of thanks suggested by President Woolston and put in the form of a motion by James E. Martine, was unanimously adopted.

The rest of the evening was spent in a social manner, refreshments being served and excellent music rendered by Harold Cook, pianist, and Arthur Mosher, violinist.

While the Board was waiting for the arrival of Mr. Besler, some matters of minor importance engaged their attention. Secretary F. H. Smith presented several communications, one from the librarian of the Public Library, informing the members of the extensive library and special books of interest in municipal affairs. Citizens of Lakewood asked the Board for information relative to the formation of a similar organization in their town.

W. H. Riley, of the borough, who with J. E. Martine, attended the public hearing on the Colby bill at Trenton, gave a short address on the merits of the bill which propose to limit franchises to twenty-five years. He said that he did not believe any Common Council had a right to grant a franchise for a longer period, and all franchises should be guarded jealously.

Mr. Martine followed with a few words along the same line, deploring the fact that franchises are granted in perpetuity, and he did not believe that it was right to grant franchises beyond two generations.

H. O. Runyon caused some laughter when he introduced the saloon question, a matter that has been agitating the minds of the people recently. He said that while he lived in the flathouse district, he did not think that it was drinking that caused the trouble, but the quality of the liquor. While the milk supply is guarded so closely, he believed that similar restrictions should be adopted in the case of liquors. He believed that every applicant for a license should be compelled to give the size of the room in which liquor is to be sold, and he also believed that all screens should be removed giving an unobstructed view from the street into the place. He characterized the liquor sold as vile stuff, not of proper age.

Among those elected to membership was Charles Frost, of the Courier-News Publishing Company. Later in the evening W. W. St. John, city editor of that paper, secured the endorsement of the Board of Trade for a special industrial edition to be published soon and which is to be circulated in Greater New York.

BURSTING PIPE LINE CAUSES BIG OIL FIRE

BLAZING FLUID RUNS OVER FIELDS BACK OF NEW MARKET.

A break in the Standard Oil Company's pipe line running through Piscataway township, near New Market, was followed by an explosion of the escaping oil, Thursday morning. For two hours the oil burned fiercely, sending up huge clouds of thick black smoke that at times obscured the sun and could be plainly seen in every part of this city.

The break occurred between New Market and Lincoln. The pipe line here runs through fields and is at some distance from any houses. The leak was at first a small one but a huge quantity of oil had gathered in a great puddle on the frozen ground.

It is stated that boy threw a lighted match on the oil in an attempt to see what would happen. Something did happen, and all at once. The boy, or whoever was responsible for setting the oil ablaze, is not publishing the fact, or letting his identity be known.

The heat from the blazing oil thawed the ground and the first leak was followed by a second which let out a huge gush of oil. This was shortly before noon time, and the explosion which followed was heard distinctly in Plainfield.

The fire occasioned considerable excitement and speculation in town. When the smoke died down for a half hour and was then followed by another dense cloud, it was supposed that a general conflagration of some sort was under way.

The Bound Brook and Plainfield fire departments were notified, but their services were not needed.

The fire was overcome in the usual way, by cutting off the supply of oil above the break, and letting the fire burn itself out. Repairs will be made to the line at once.

Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of the local schools, returned [Sunday from Milwaukee, Wis., where he attended the annual convention of the National Superintendent's Association.

DEFEAT OF RUSSIANS

Kuropatkin Cannot Hold Mukden Against Oyama.

WILL RETREAT TO NORTHWARD.

Slaughter Is Worse Than That of Liaoyang—Both Armies Have Suffered Tremendously In Ten Days' Fighting.

LONDON, March 8.—A St. Petersburg dispatch this morning says: "That the battle of Mukden will go down in history with Liaoyang in the long list of Russian defeats is the almost universal belief in pessimistic St. Petersburg, which has forgotten the meaning of the word victory. The war office does not admit that the issue of the great battle has been decided, although it is positively stated in high quarters that General Kuropatkin has telegraphed to Emperor Nicholas that it will be impossible to hold Mukden and that the withdrawal of the army northward has already been begun."

While the Japanese buried themselves forward at every point, their main energies were behind the blow west and southwest in an attempt to envelop the Russian right and drive a wedge through the line at Madzyapu, but General Kuropatkin seems to have been able successfully to change front on the line of his shattered right, aligning from northwest to southeast, to protect the railroad to Mukden.

For ten days the Japanese and Russian armies in Manchuria have been engaged in a mighty conflict, the issue of which has not yet been reached. Although the most of the news from the scene of the battle comes through Russian sources and consequently may be supposed to present the facts in as favorable a light as possible for the Russian arms, it is evident that the Japanese have made some great gains. St. Petersburg has an unofficial report that General Kuropatkin's center has been broken and that thirteen siege guns have fallen into the hands of the Japanese. These guns, which are of the six and eight inch caliber, were given permanent impacements on the line of the railroad north of Shakhe station, the fact evidencing the confidence of the Russians that the Japanese could not penetrate thither. In St. Petersburg it is generally believed that General Kuropatkin is fighting a rear guard action to cover his retreat and that the night will have witnessed a large withdrawal of troops toward Tie pass.

Beyond the statement that the casualties exceed those of the battle of Liaoyang there is little known as to the number killed or wounded.

Mukden dispatches say that the battle on the Russian right flank rages with undiminished vigor. The Japanese have made good their position at Tacha and pushed the contest north to Sinmintin the same as on Sunday, four miles from the main battle line, though apparently no nearer. As was the case in the battle of Liaoyang, the semicircular positions where the battle is progressing now are so near that the whole of them are accessible from Mukden in a day's tour.

The losses already exceed those in the battle of Liaoyang on the Russian side, and the Japanese are supposed to have suffered much more, though this does not seem to shake the Japanese tenacity, for at noon they attacked Yenbsitun, advancing their infantry and occupying Yenhsitun, when the artillery battle increased furiously, shells setting fire to many buildings, the smoke from which, joining a dust storm, shrouded the vast plain in clouds in which the battle roared and the sun sank.

The appearance of this region, which has now been two days under fire, begins to resemble a siege.

The Japanese at 2 o'clock in the morning attacked a Russian position on the Hun river from Machiapu. The artillery fire has been continuous and shifted northward after daylight almost to the Sinmintin road, from which wounded and Chinese refugees are arriving. Fighting is heard also far to the northward.

Numbers of Japanese wounded along the Sinmintin road have been brought in and cared for.

The Japanese have made a succession of desperate attacks on General Tserpitsky's division on the west front south of Mukden, repeating the assault at intervals of two hours with constant re-enforcements. About 50,000 Japanese, with 200 pieces of artillery, participated. All the attacks were repulsed, there being enormous losses on both sides. One extremely important position changed hands several times. Finally General Tserpitsky, on horseback, placing himself at the head of his troops, led his regiments to the attack with colors flying and music playing. The attack was successful. After it was over the victorious soldiers crowded around General Tserpitsky, shouting his praises and even kissing his hands and feet. The Russians captured several quick firing guns and many Japanese prisoners, including officers.

It was reported that Major General Gerngross of the East Siberian rifles has taken and held Tashichao.

Gompers to Advise Strikers.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has arrived here from Washington. Mr. Gompers will be consulted by the leaders of the railway men's strike and his advice sought in any prospective settlement.

New York Strike Cripples Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, March 8.—The Interborough Rapid Transit company lines of New York has crippled the Pittsburg Railway company, which controls all the trolley lines in Pittsburg. Nearly all of the extra men and quite a number of the regular motormen have been rounded up for positions on the subway in New York. A conservative estimate secured last night is that fully seventy-five men have left for New York, thirty getting away last night.

END OF EQUITABLE.

Alleged Threat of Hyde Faction to Wind Up Company.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The World says that at a conference of the Alexander and Hyde factions in the Equitable Life Assurance society war the astounding threat was made by one of the Hyde party that rather than surrender control of the society the affairs of the Equitable would be wound up, so that the huge assets of the corporation could be distributed among the stockholders.

The method proposed was as follows: To provide for the reinsurance of the 600,000 policy holders of the Equitable in other companies, notably the New York Life and the Mutual Life, on an arrangement that would transfer to the companies taking the reinsurance sums from the assets of the Equitable sufficient to profit them in taking such a tremendous amount of business in one lump, and much of it old business that is soon to mature.

The legality of such a movement, it is asserted, could not be successfully attacked, there being several precedents in existence where life insurance companies have gone out of business by transferring to other companies all of their outstanding policies, together with a proportion of the premium money paid in on each.

The policy holders all being disposed of and without any right to claim any interest in the Equitable, it is claimed that it would then be eminently proper to wind up its affairs by distributing its assets pro rata among the surviving owners—the stockholders.

Were such a plan carried out the $100,000 capital stock of the society would have at the least a value equivalent to the surplus of $81,000,000. This would make each one of the thousand shares worth $81,000.

It would make the 510 shares of the Hyde estate worth $41,310,000, or more than eight times the amount offered young Mr. Hyde for his controlling interest by the Harriman-Frick syndicate.

The holdings of the Hyde family are now, however, greatly in excess of 510 shares. Since the fight began young Mr. Hyde, on the advice of his lawyers, has bought every share of Equitable stock that could be bought. Enormous prices have been paid for some of the shares.

HIGH CARNIVAL.

New Orleans' Gay Crowds Have Fun With Rex.

NEW ORLEANS, March 8.—Carnival day here passed without rain, and the pleasure of the vast crowds on the streets was uninterrupted.

A feature of the pageant was a brilliant display by Comus last night, and the mystic Krewe delved deeply into classic lore, telling in a series of twenty gorgeous floats the story of the search for the lost Pleiad.

At the conclusion of the parade Comus entertained at a ball at the French Opera House, which attracted leaders from all sections of the country. A popular reception was given by Rex at Washington Artillery hall, which for the occasion was converted into an imperial palace. His majesty selected as queen of the carnival Miss Hazel Ellis.

No Reconciliation For Cody.

OMAHA, Neb., March 8.—During the course of his deposition in his petition for divorce William F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") declared that he could not accept any reconciliation with Mrs. Cody and declared he would have absolutely nothing to do with her in the future. This declaration was made as the result, Colonel Cody stated, of Mrs. Cody having charged him with being the murderer of their daughter Arta and announcing publicly that she would denounce him over her grave.

Coal Digger Will Get a Medal.

PITTSBURG, March 8.—It is reported from McKeesport that as a recognition of his services for flagging a Baltimore and Ohio inaugural train Sunday and preventing a terrible catastrophe, Thomas Bain, a coal digger of Shanner, will receive a medal of honor from the government. He was notified that President Roosevelt would bestow the medal soon. The railroad will also recognize Bain's services.

Mrs. Di Pietro Dead.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Mrs. Rose Di Pietro, who was recently acquitted of murder when placed on trial in Manhattan for shooting and killing an Italian who had persecuted her with his attentions, is dead at her home in Long Island City. As she had apparently no medical attendance at the time of her death, the case is being investigated by the officials.

Religious Mania Caused Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—A. B. Edwards, second officer of the steamship Friesland, which has arrived here from Liverpool, jumped overboard in midocean and was drowned. The suicide occurred last Thursday night and is said to have been due to religious mania. Edwards' home was in Liverpool. He was thirty-six years old.

THE CHADWICK TRIAL

Defense Established Errors In Government Case.

CARNEGIE MAY NOT BE CALLED.

Oberlin Bank Books Did Not Show Any Account That Accused Could Draw Checks on Without Funds as Charged.

CLEVELAND, O., March 8.—Nine witnesses were examined in the Chadwick trial, and the defense established the fact that the claim of the government that Mrs. Chadwick had no money in the Oberlin bank at the time of drawing checks which were certified by Spear and Beckwith was incorrect in two instances at least.

It was shown by the general journal of the bank that on Nov. 3, 1903, when Mrs. Chadwick received a certified check for $10,000, an entry crediting her with that amount was made on the journal of the bank and a deposit slip for $10,000 was made out in her name. The entry and the slip were in the handwriting of Cashier Spear. Another entry of similar nature, amounting to $5,000, was also found. These facts were brought out on cross examination by Judge Wing, counsel for Mrs. Chadwick, after long and tedious questioning of H. H. Avery, assistant cashier of the Oberlin bank.

Mr. Avery testified that the entry giving credit to Mrs. Chadwick for $10,000 was in the handwriting of Cashier Spear and that the deposit slip for the same amount was also in Spear's handwriting. Robert Lyons, receiver for the Citizens' National bank of Oberlin, was the last witness of the day. He said that the books did not show that any account had ever existed by which Mrs. Chadwick could draw checks on the bank. All the accounts of the banks balanced, with the exception of that with the First National bank of Cleveland, where there was a discrepancy of about $27,000 in favor of the Cleveland institution.

Avery at first testified that Mrs. Chadwick at no time had either money in or credit at the bank.

It is doubtful if Andrew Carnegie will take the stand. District Attorney Sullivan said:

"It is not my present intention to put Mr. Carnegie on the stand, and I do not think that he will be called upon to testify unless his evidence should be needed in rebuttal of something introduced by the defense."

YOUNG MEN'S PARTY WON.

Charter Election at Bath—Bennett Elected Mayor.

BATH, N. Y., March 8.—At the annual charter election here the Young Men's party, which is nonpartisan, defeated the straight Republican ticket, headed by Moses Davison, Republican candidate for mayor, electing every candidate on the ticket except one. The successful candidates were:

Mayor, Edward Clarence Bennett; trustees, Martin V. Barton and Ambrose W. Hewlett; treasurer, Charles Davison; clerk, Frederick Y. Wynkoop; assessors, Burchard D. Platt and Royal C. Clark, and collector, George L. Dale. Hewlett was the only Republican elected and will be the only Republican in the common council. It was one of the hardest fought elections ever held in Bath.

Captain Kirkman Resigns.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Captain George W. Kirkman, Twenty-fifth infantry, who is being tried by court martial at Fort Niobrara, Neb., on charges of scandalous conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, has tendered his resignation as an officer of the army, and the question of its acceptance is under consideration by the president and the secretary of war. Charges of a serious character have been preferred against Captain Kirkman, and it is said to be unlikely he will be allowed to leave the service without punishment.

Protest Against Japanese Poachers.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 8.—A protest, supported by affidavits, has been sent to the department of commerce and labor by influential fishermen of Washington and Oregon calling attention to the fact that Japanese fishermen are coming across the Bering sea and catching salmon by the shipload off the Alaskan coast. The supply of fish in Japan is now limited and the demand increased by reason of the war, so that the poachers are cutting off a good market for the American fishermen.

Ex-Queen Leaves Villa For Hotel.

FLORENCE, March 8.—The Countess Montignoso, formerly crown princess of Saxony, has been obliged to give up her villa at Papinisvo and has taken rooms in a hotel at Fiesole. The countess states that the change is necessary until her former husband, King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, either voluntarily or by order of the court pays her the allowance agreed upon at the time of her divorce.

Arrest In Montclair Murder Case.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 8.—A man giving the name of Brooks and claiming to be a shipwrecked sailor has been arrested in York county on the charge of being implicated in the murder of Mrs. Hannah Ross in Montclair, N. J. He is said to answer fully the description sent out of the missing coachman.

Case Against Santa Fe Opens.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 8.—The taking of testimony was begun here in the case brought by the state of Kansas against the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway company in Chautauqua county on the charge of violating the state anti-trust law.

FATHER EGAN TO LEAVE

Bishop Assigns Him to Succeed Rector at Bayonne.

ACTION A SURPRISE

Has Been in Charge of St. Mary's Church Three Years, and Has Endeared Himself to Parishoners.

Greatly to the surprise of his parishoners, Rev. Andrew M. Egan, of St. Mary's church, has been appointed by Bishop O'Connor to the pastorate of the Church of St. Mary's Star of the Sea, in Bayonne. Because of ill health, the Rev. Daniel F. McCarthy, of Short Hills, has felt obliged to decline the appointment and Father Egan was then selected for the place. The announcement of the change in St. Mary's parish has caused deep and sincere regret. Father Egan's successor has not yet been appointed.

Father Egan, since coming to Plainfield three years go in January, has had great success in St. Mary's parish and from the very first he won the confidence and love of his people. Before coming here he was at Morris Plains. He is soon to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his admission to the priesthood, and it was hoped that the observance would be in this city.

This will mark Father Egan's third return to Bayonne. His first mission was there twenty-five years ago, when he was an assistant. Later he was sent to St. Michael's church, Jersey City, where he remained two years. He then returned to Bayonne for the second time, serving the church ten years as an assistant rector, and now he goes there as rector. The parish is a very large one and one of the most important in the State. Rev. Isaac P. Whelan was the rector there, but he has been assigned to the pastorate of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark. The change will go into effect on Friday, March 10, when Father Egan will assume the pastorate of the Bayonne church.

Father Egan succeeded Father Smyth at St. Mary's church, and by persistent and earnest effort he has been the means of enlarging the parish and awakening a deep spiritual interest in all the departments of work. He has been very popular, not only with his people, but with the citizens of Plainfield generally, for he has always stood for the best interests of the city and was ever ready to do his share toward advancing the cause of right.

JUMP FROM COAL TRAIN CAUSED REASON TO FLEE

BECAUSE PLAINFIELD WAS ASLEEP IT WAS TAKEN FOR PHILADELPHIA.

Chris Deimunsch, who gives his home as Philadelphia and still believes himself to be in that city, though he occupies a cell at the local police station, was arrested on West Third street, Sunday night, where he aroused the neighborhood with cries of "murder," "help" and "police." When Officers McGinley and Saunders arrived on the scene, Deimunsch had a sad story to tell. It appears that while riding on a coal train from Jersey City he had been keeping up his spirits with the aid of a little whiskey, so that when he came upon this city in the quiet of midnight and as all was still, he thought it was Philadelphia and jumped to the ground.

He was thrown on his head and the force of the blow was so great, that in addition to inflicting several severe cuts, it drove him completely out of his mind. He rose to his feet and raving up and down West Third street for some time, emitted the terrifying cries that called the bluecoats. The latter took him to what he persists in calling the Philadelphia police station.

Deimunsch will not listen to any truth concerning his whereabouts, and his parents have been summoned with the hope that they may be able to assure him of the fact that he is in the "wrong stall."

"Bosey" a Physical Director.

WESTFIELD DATES FIXED

Local Management Decides on Series of Six Games.

DENMAN WANTED TEN

Other Baseball Matters Discussed at Conference in This City Saturday Night.

Following a lively discussion, Manager Charles S. Woolston and Lines Groo, of the Plainfield Baseball Association, and Charles Denman, president of the Westfield Baseball Association, fixed the dates for the Plainfield-Westfield series, at a conference held in this city, Saturday night. The proposed plan of the local management not to exceed a series of six games was adhered to, against the opposition of Mr. Denman, who wanted ten games. Failing in this, he asked for eight games, then seven, and finally six was the number decided upon and they are so arranged that they will not become tiresome to the fans.

The first contest will be played in this city on Saturday, May 20, and the second at Westfield on Saturday, June 10. On Saturday, June 24, the third contest will be played on Crescent Oval, and the fourth at Westfield, on Saturday, July 15. The teams will meet for the fifth time in Plainfield on Saturday, August 5, and the final game will be at Westfield on Saturday, August 19.

It will be noticed that among the dates there are no holidays. The local management decided to reserve holidays for home games and it is likely that but one contest, in the afternoon, will be scheduled with the strongest attractions possible. It is thought that the fans will like one first-class game, instead of two as has heretofore been the rule. The morning game has never been a good drawing card and it is believed that one afternoon contest will attract a big crowd.

The local management has also decided not to issue season tickets this year, and all that is asked is that the public support the games by its attendance. The same prices, twenty-five and thirty-five cents, will be charged, the former for the bleachers and the latter for the grandstand. It is expected to have additional seating capacity, for it is believed that the attendance will be greater than before and it is proposed to accommodate all. The management also want it stated that the merchants or other individuals will not be asked to contribute a sum of money toward the support of the team.

Manager Murray, of the Jersey City Club, Eastern League, has promised to bring his strongest team here for the opening game on Saturday, April 15, and the local management will perfect every detail for a banner event.

AUDUBONS AROUSED OVER OPEN DOVE SEASON BILL

SOCIETY WILL VIGOROUSLY PROTEST AGAINST ITS PASSAGE.

The members of the New Jersey Audubon Society, of which Miss Julia S. Scribner, of this city, is secretary, are much aroused over a bill before the Assembly which allows an open season for doves, from August 20 to October 1, of each year. In a notice issued by Miss Scribner, it is stated that probably few know of the great service done to the farmers by this bird, which feeds almost entirely on the seeds of weeds. These are eaten at all times of the year and in enormous numbers.

Mr. Dutcher, a well known ornithologist, who is greatly interested in the preservation of birds, says: "It is a question for the farmers to settle whether they will permit any one to kill on their land birds that annually destroy tons of the seeds of pigeon grass, ragweed, smartweed, bindweed and many other noxious plants, and are thus worth so much as helpers on farms."

The New Jersey Audubon Society has taken up this matter and will enter a strong protest against its adoption by the Legislature. Any one wishing to join in the protest against the bill (Assembly 54) may send a letter to that effect to the members of the Legislature from his county. The society hopes to make such a vigorous protest that the matter will be settled definitely and that future Legislatures may not be disposed to favorably consider such a measure. It is expected that a strong petition will be sent to Trenton from this city.

Mrs. Eugene Moore, of San Francisco, has returned after spending several weeks with relatives and friends here.

Mrs. J. T. Baker, of Stelle avenue, who has been visiting her son in the south has returned home.

JUDGE SCHENCK IS REAPPOINTED

Senate Confirms Selection of Governor Stokes for Somerset's Judgeship.

LEADERS PLEASED

Senator Reed's Name Not Mentioned —The Situation in County Politics at the Present Time.

After listening to the leaders in county politics, Governor E. S. Stokes has reappointed Lewis H. Schenck, of Neshanic, as judge of the Somerset County Court. His name was transmitted to the Senate along with a batch of other nominations and no opposition was made by the law makers.

Since former State Senator Charles A. Reed declared that he would not consider the position no effort had been made by his friends to press his claims before the Governor. In fact all opposition to Judge Schenck disappeared in this way.

Judge Schenck's term is for five years. He was first appointed in 1900. The jurist is a graduate of Rutgers and is popular in Somerset County. The salary attached to the office is but $1,800 per year.

It is generally believed that the regular Republican organization in the county wished to see the judgeship fight settled in order to clear the way for the opposition of the prosecutorship. Griggs and Reger are in a contest for that office and the signs now point to the reappointment of the former.

GOOD WORK DONE BY FIRST M. E. ORGANIZATION

ANNUAL MEETING OF LADIES' AID SOCIETY.

Encouraging reports together with the election of officers comprised most of the business at the annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First M. E. church, held in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon. This is one of the largest and most influential societies in the church, the membership being about 130. Its chief purpose is to care for the church and parsonage and its furnishings and every year large sums of money are expended in this way. A year ago the society re-carpeted the edifice and other improvements at an expense of about $1,400. There is now a balance of $200 in the treasury.

During February and March the society has been engaged in making useful articles for the Children's Home and in this way the wardrobe has been substantially replenished.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Nelson A. Miller; first vice president, Mrs. Henry A. McCoy; second vice president, Mrs. J. C. Peck; secretary, Mrs. B. M. French; treasurer, Mrs. Nelson T. Hall. The committees for the year will be appointed later.

It was decided at the meeting to give Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Hoodgrass a reception before the Newark Conference, thereby showing the esteem in which they are held for the faithful services performed by Dr. Snodgrass during his eight years' pastorate. The date for the reception will be announced within a few days.

Dinner for Teachers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Berry, of Dunellen avenue, gave a delightful dinner party Monday night for her daughter, Miss Mildred Berry, to which were invited four of the teachers of the Plainfield High School of whose classes Miss Berry is a member. The dinner was given that Mr. and Mrs. Berry might become better acquainted with the teachers as their daughter has just entered the High School. The guests included Miss Cumming, Miss Gilbert, Miss Ball, Miss Berry and Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Berry.

Lenox New Lodge Room.

Franklin and Somerset Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., have leased the entire top floor of the Schauer & Co. building on West Front street, and will take possession at once. The main lodge room, one of the finest in the city, is 40x60 and there are also two well arranged committee rooms.

FORMER MAYOR LAUDS JAPANESE WARRIORS

L. V. F. RANDOLPH REVIEWS THE WAR IN THE EAST FOR THE VETS.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, a veteran of the Civil War and a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., favored the members of the Post and their wives with an entertaining talk last night on affairs in the Far East, where the plucky Japanese are meeting with such phenomenal success in their war against the Russians.

He based his remarks on the cause of the success of the Japanese and this he believed was due to the character of the men. He thought it was a most daring effort on the part of the Japs to try to conquer one of the largest world powers, such as Russia, but when he described the men, their mode and manner of conducting warfare, it did not seem so surprising that they were successful. He contrasted the two nations as regards habits and cited the fact that while the Japs were great advocates of the cold water principle, the Russians were devoted to their wines, which had a tendency to unfit them for fighting.

He said that it was one of the most remarkable incidents in history that 800,000 Japanese were able to surround and defeat approximately an equal number of Russians and he then described what this meant. He referred to the undying love of the Jap and his willingness to sacrifice everything and anything for the country of his birth. Many incidents which Mr. Randolph has picked up in his study of the war helped to make the talk one of great interest to the veterans.

After the talk Mr. John Manley sang several patriotic selections, and the entertainment committee comprising Fred Wenzel, chairman; John H. Naylor, Dr. Berg, William Hand and William Day served bean soup, crackers and coffee and a social time was enjoyed.

SISTERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME IN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

MRS. JOHN H. ROSS, OF THE BOROUGH, ONE OF A HAPPY GATHERING.

Mrs. John H. Ross, of Prospect place, was one of a party of five sisters who yesterday, met a sixth sister for the first time in twenty-five years. The gathering took place at the home of Mrs. H. H. Heagland, of Somerville, and was in honor of Mrs. S. W. Graves, of Idaho Falls, Idaho, who has just returned to the East for the first time since 1880. The other sisters are Mrs. William Price, of Perth Amboy; Mrs. William Veghte, of Jersey City and Mrs. Mary J. Hoagland, of Somerville. An elaborate dinner was served and the sisters spent the afternoon and evening in reminiscent conversation.

RAHWAY PRIEST SUCCEEDS REV. ANDREW M. EGAN.

Rev. E. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, Rahway, will succeed Rev. Andrew M. Egan as pastor of St. Mary's church, this city. Bishop O'Connor, of the diocese of Newark, has selected the Rahway priest, and the appointee will take charge about April 1.

Until Father Bogan takes charge, Father Delehanty, who was Father Egan's assistant, will continue to administer the affairs of the parish. Father Smith, of Newark, the acting assistant, will relinquish his office when Father Bogan assumes his duties. Father Egan is now in charge of St. Mary's church, Bayonne.

Father Bogan is president of the Young Men's National Union. He is a graduate of Seton Hall College. He has been in orders about fifteen years and is one of the most popular rectors in the diocese.

GEORGE THATCHER IS MARRIED AGAIN

PLAINFIELD MINSTREL WEDS AN ACTRESS IN THE WEST.

George Thatcher, the well-known minstrel who was a resident of West Seventh street, and who gained such prominence as a member of the Thatcher, Primrose & West troupe, was married yesterday afternoon in Chicago to Miss Zenaide Williams, who is playing the part of the milliner in George Ade's production of "The County Chairman." The marriage was performed by Judge George W. Underwood, of Chicago.

Mr. Thatcher is a member of "The County Chairman" company, now playing at the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago. He takes the part of Samaritan Livingston, the negro politician. Miss Williams is a native of Mississippi and she met Mr. Thatcher during the early rehearsals of the piece in New York last summer.

Mr. Thatcher's first wife, who was well-known here, died suddenly in a New York hotel between eight and nine months ago, after Mr. Thatcher had started on the road with the company he is now a member of. He was in the vicinity of Omaha when Mrs. Thatcher died. It is said that Mr. Thatcher's daughter is now with him.

Bill for Divorced Women.

The Senate yesterday passed Assemblyman Bovell's bill allowing divorced women to resume their maiden names. It appears that there is no law in the permitting this to be done.

PRISON REFORM WORK

Addresses Made by Those Who Reform Convicts.

MRS. WILLIAMSON TALKS

Speeches Made Before Grace Church Men's Club at Y. M. C. A. Last Night.

"The Discharged Prisoner and How He Can be and is Aided," was the subject of the public meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night, which proved not only an interesting but an instructive occasion. The subject was handled by experienced workers in prison reform in the State, and was presented in such a way that none could fail to realize the fact there is help for the criminal and that relief is being administered to him in every possible way through such societies as the State Charities Aid Association.

William H. Riley, of this city, a member of the State Charities Aid Association, who presided at the meeting, made a few introductory remarks.

Father A. M. Fish, Roman Catholic Chaplain at State Prison, told of the work which is being carried on for ex-convicts both in and out of prison and emphasized particularly the fact that the old saying "Once a thief, always a thief," is not true so far as his experience has been concerned. He mentioned examples of good citizens who were former criminals, and declared that criminals have the same sensibilities as other men and can be made as good citizens. "Criminals are not a class," Father Fish said, "but are composed of men from all classes whom circumstances have affected."

The reformatory work in connection with criminals was referred to by the second speaker, Rev. C. L. Crooder, of the Rahway Reformatory. His account of the life in the reformatory, its rules and practices was not only interesting, but new to most of his hearers. "The object of the reformatory is not to punish, but to reform and to train," he said.

"There are three grades at the Rahway Reformatory," the speaker continued. "The first is for the good behavior class, the second for those whose record is medium, and the last for the bad inmates. The first grade is the one which particularly concerns the subject, as it is this class to which parole is allowed." Mr. Crooder continued to mention the conditions for parole, and stated the manner in which the teaching at the reformatory is conducted. In conclusion, the speakers said: "It is the duty of every good citizen to help the offender back to good citizenship."

Mrs. E. E. Williamson, president of the New Jersey State Charities Aid Association, was the last speaker. As the head of all the various prison reform organizations, the society of which Mrs. Williamson is president has aroused public opinion against the mis management of jails and toward proper care of minor convicts in addition to introducing education and other valuable features into the prison life. Mrs. Williamson spoke at some length of the difficulty of the prisoner after being discharged and of the hardships with which he must contend in becoming a good citizen. It is after the discharge that the society does its great work in assisting the ex-convict to a standing wherein ridicule and trade prejudice are ineffective. The speaker said that the average age of prisoners in the reformatory is between 16 and 19 years.

In conclusion, Mrs. Williamson thanked the Plainfield people for the interest which they have always displayed in the work and for the help which they have afforded to those in active service for the relief of the ex-convict.

Afflicted With Scarlet Fever.

Mrs. Elliott to Lecture.

Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott will give the next lecture, "Social Life in Rome," in Mrs. Hall's course of entertainments tomorrow, Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Unitarian church, Park avenue. The change of location was necessitated by the large room of the audience.

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE ENDS WINTER'S WORK

NOW LOOK INTO PLANS FOR THE SUMMER OUTING.

With a full gathering of members in attendance, the Union County Republican Committee met at Elizabeth last night, and closed all accounts in connection with the recent inauguration trip to Washington. It was reported that 221 had taken the special train and that the receipts had covered all expenditures.

Communications were received from various State and county officials complying with the request of the committee for portraits to be placed in the rooms at Elizabeth. Charles S. Reed, of Rahway, was named for deputy census clerk of Union County and a committee composed of William Newcorn, chairman; Andrew McCardell, of this city; James White and Edward Bauer, of Elizabeth, and S. Hasling Ryno, of Rahway, was appointed to consider the advisability of conducting an excursion this summer.

PROTEST AGAINST RAZING HISTORICAL BUILDING

DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION WANT COURT HOUSE KEPT UP.

The Daughters of the American Revolution throughout Somerset, Middlesex and Union Counties have evidenced their opposition to the destruction of the court house at Somerville, by several outward demonstrations. The Somerset Board of Freeholders received a communication from Camp Middlebrook Chapter, of Bound Brook, yesterday, protesting against the proposed razing because of the building's historical interest. The members argue that suitable repairs could be made to place it in condition for years to come and that to tear it down would mean the loss to the county of one of its most interesting structures.

Other chapters in this city and other nearby places have been appealed to for support in the movement and the protest will soon become general with the order. So far, the Board has continued to go ahead with its plans and the communications that have been received have simply been placed on file. At the meeting yesterday, James B. Diehl, of Bernardsville, addressed the Board in regard to the architectural designs of the new buildings.

ROBERT RUSHMORE TALKS ON OUTING

CAMERA CLUB HEARS OF A PLEASANT HUNTING TRIP.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Camera Club, Robert Rushmore, of Grant avenue, entertained the members last night with a number of views and a description of his trip last fall through Maine and Canada in quest of game. The trip occupied the best part of a month and while away Mr. Rushmore succeeded in getting nearly fifty excellent views of the country through which he travelled. They were thrown on the screen by John Hagle, while Mr. Rushmore in his own interesting fashion told of the many incidents that helped to make the outing one of the best he had ever taken.

Mr. Rushmore and his party went to Boston, thence to Maine and through to New Foundland where the wildest sort of country is found. The party had great luck in shooting game, Mr. Rushmore capturing two fine specimens of caribou, the antlers and head of which he brought home. There were many amusing incidents which Mr. Rushmore related in his humorous style.

In addition to the lantern-slides, there was an enjoyable musical programme consisting of piano selections by Vincent Sokol, vocal solos by William Jeffery and violin selections by Maurice Audsley, all of which were well received. Mr. Rushmore's talk also received hearty applause. After the programme refreshments were served and one of the pleasant features was the "smoker."

Brown is Recovering.

Wm. Brown, the negro, who was taken to the hospital Sunday morning following a cutting affair between himself and brothers, is steadily improving and will probably be discharged within a short time.

SCHOOL BOARD TIMBER

No Dearth of Good Material in North Plainfield.

MEETING ON TUESDAY

Rev. J. O. McKelvey Among Those Mentioned—Terms of Three Members Expire.

The posters are up for the school election in the borough and for a wonder all is quiet over the brook, where, for the past two or three years the factional fighting has been carried into educational affairs where it is decidedly out of place. All signs seem to indicate that the North Plainfield people intend to take the school board out of politics—the factional politics which have raged so fiercely ever since the annexation question came to the front. The terms of President H. A. Overton, District Clerk S. M. Fountain and A. V. D. Honeyman expire this month, and their successors will be elected Tuesday evening as the public meeting which also votes on the annual appropriation for the support of the schools. These three trustees have served several successive terms of three years each.

It is not yet decided whether the three retiring members will stand for re-election, but meanwhile there is evidently a disposition, it seems, to bring forward new men for the position, who will be entirely free from factional prejudice or control. There is a strong demand, it is claimed, for the election of at least two men at this time whose occupations do not require their absence from Plainfield every day. As now constituted all but two members out of the nine are commuters, and can not give the most effective service, it is said, on those committees which require a close personal oversight of the property and educational work.

Among the new names most frequently heard in the circles in which the school election is being talked over are the Rev. J. O. McKelvey, who would seem to be just the right man to suit all parties; John P. Emmons, the real estate man; former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., R. E. McCullough, Nelson A. Miller, Allen B. Laing, Harrison Coddington and Ernest A. Lowe. From among these, it is claimed, it should be easy to make up a ticket which would steer clear of the dangerous reefs which ruffle the political waters of North Plainfield and would save the school system from the danger which always threatens it from ambitious politicians.

FREEHOLDERS ASKED TO BUILD NEW BRIDGE

MAYOR SMALLEY MAKES APPLICATION TO SOMERSET COUNTY BOARD.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, appeared before the Somerset County Board of Freeholders at its regular meeting, yesterday, and made application for a new bridge over Green brook on West End avenue. There is an iron structure there at the present time but it was built many years ago and is very narrow. As that section is soon to be made into a residential park, West End avenue is to be widened into boulevard-like proportions and the bridge would be entirely out of place. In addition, a new structure would be needed to span the old mill stream a few hundred feet north of it and it could be shifted to this point. The Board took the Mayor's explanations into consideration and will view the site Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

While the Board was in session, samples of building stone which will probably be used in erecting the new court house, were exhibited by representatives from Martinsville and Governeur, N. Y. A resolution was passed fixing the compensation of the members of the committee on the new court house at $3 each a day for actual work.

Fire Destroys Barn.

Fire destroyed the barn of Mrs. Brands on the old Houston place on the road from Warrenville to Mount Horeb, last night, burning up the entire contents, including one heifer and some hay and farming implements.

Street Sprinkling Bids.

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting on Thursday night, March 23, to receive bids for the city street sprinkling for the coming year, and to consider several other matters of more or less importance.

P. B. A.'S CRACK PITCHER

"Jimmie" Beisel is in Good Form for the Season.

GREAT BALL PLAYER

Started His Career in the National Game at Washington, Pa.—One of the Hoboken Nine.

"Jimmie" Beisel, has signed to pitch for the Plainfield Baseball Association, this season. He is well-thought of by his friends. Ever since December he has been practicing daily at the Y. M. C. A. and he is in the pink of condition. During the past two weeks he has been throwing a ball nearly every day and he says that his arm was never in better condition.

Considering his age, "Jimmie" has had a remarkable career. From the time that he was able to throw a ball he has followed the game, despite the strong opposition of his father, who is a very strict member of the Methodist church in Pennsylvania and not until this year would he consent to his son's playing ball, although he has pitched unbeknown to him.

Beisel while living in Pennsylvania, in Washington in that State, where he was employed to do engraving work, his father got him the position on the understanding that he was not to play baseball. At the time he was in fine condition and was persuaded to pitch one game for the Washington team. He won and after much effort the management got him to sign for the season. He continued to pitch winning ball and it was not until long after his return home that his father learned that he had been playing.

The next year he went to Brandywine, Pa., where he combined business with ball playing, still keeping his father in ignorance of the fact. Last year he came to New Jersey and Lines Groo, a personal friend, secured him a position with the Equitable Life Insurance Company. Out of business he pitched for the Roselle team early in the season and toward the last of the year he pitched successively for Hoboken in a few games.

Beisel has always been a lover of outdoor life and is one of the best pedestrians in this vicinity. Nearly every Sunday he walks fifteen or twenty miles across country and he seems capable of doing almost an unlimited amount of work. He has made his home with Lines Groo since coming to this State and he is now much attached to Plainfield, although he has lived here a short time.

Not only as a baseball twirler is "Jimmie" an artist, but with the pen he is an expert. Always jolly and good natured and ready for a game of ball or any other legitimate sport, he has become very popular. It was through the efforts of Mr. Groo, who is well acquainted with his father, that the latter consented to his son joining the Plainfield nine this year and he now takes as much interest in his baseball playing as his business success.

HONORS TO CROSS APPROVED BY SENATE

COLLEAGUES 'RAH FOR UNION COUNTY MAN.

The news of the appointment of President of the Senate Cross as the new United States Circuit judge was received with much satisfaction by his fellow-Senators. During the session of the Senate, Monday night, when the president called Senator Bachelier to the chair and took his seat on the floor for the purpose of advocating the passage of a bill, Senator Farrell, of Gloucester, taking the floor, offered resolutions of congratulation.

"In given me great pleasure," said Leader Bradley, "to second these resolutions on behalf of the majority. My associations with Senator Cross in the Legislature have always been most pleasant, and during a long period of close contact I have learned to admire him for his many sterling qualities."

When Senator Wakelee was called on to vote on the resolution he remarked:

"Not only the Senate but the people of the entire State are to be congratulated in that they have an upright, honorable judge."

President Cross replied feelingly to the complimentary things which had been said about him, and, thanking his colleagues for the honor they had done him, said that no honor which he might win could be greater than that of serving the people as a Senator and associating with fellow-members whom he so greatly esteemed.

DAINTY TRIFLES.

Oriental Scarfs For Opera Ride, Also Novelties in Jewelry.

Syrian scarfs are very fashionable for opera hoods. Most of these scarfs are black, cream or white, with designs in gold or silver. They are handmade, and no two are alike. The simpler scarf may be bought for $12.

Now is an excellent time to buy handsome furs at reduced prices. There is a month or so to wear them yet this season, and the furrier will store them through the summer months and see that they are in good condition for the first cold days of fall.

One of the novelties in jewelry is the miniature scarfpin containing the tiny portrait in oils upon porcelain of the wearer's favorite horse. For women fond of dogs and cats pose for these miniatures, which are set in a gold brooch or lace pin.

For the hair is a shell pin with jewelled chains attached which forms a Juliet cap. These caps are very much affected by smart women for theater wear.

New white neck and sleeve ruching, which comes by the yard, is now polka dotted.

Very modish and stunning is the bridal gown illustrated. It is evolved from the softest kind of peau de soie. The skirt is laid in plaits at the waist and trimmed at the bottom with an exquisite piece of brussels lace. This lace is made into medallions, and in the center of each alternate one is set a bunch of orange blossoms. The bodice is stirred slightly a few inches from the shoulders and blouses in plaited fullness over a lace girdle. A collar of lace fastens with a chou of silk and a bunch of orange flowers. The puffed sleeves have a band of lace catching the shirrings.

NEW SLEEVES.

Wide Skirts With Many Gores—The Popular Wash Fabrics.

Sleeves are the crucial test of the up to date frock. If the sleeves are in style much in the way of modishness is forgiven the rest of the dress. A very practical way of making over the sleeves of yesterday is to turn them upside down. The bagging fullness at the wrist is easily pushed up the arm and smartened with a deep cuff. These cuffs must be buttoned, and much of the grace and style of the lower sleeve is lost if it does not fit snugly to the arm.

Skirts are wide and many gored, twenty-one gores being not an unusual number for a skirt to possess. A new and swagger skirt is formed of alternate box and side plaits. For instance, the front of the skirt will boast a box plait, then on each side will be laid three moderate sized side plaits, then a box plait, and so on around the skirt.

In wash fabrics Scotch plaids and checks are to be used. Linen lawn and dimities in the thin materials are favorites for summer frocks.

Taffeta with a soft finish and in pin stripe effects holds first place among spring silks.

The illustration shows a practical way of renovating an old sleeve to look like a new one. The upper portion of the sleeve was originally of lace, which in the new edition forms the cuff, while the fancy wrist fullness is promoted to the top of the sleeve.

SARTORIAL ITEMS.

Colors For Mousquetaire Gloves. Elastic Instead of Buttons.

The short white glove is considered provincial among well dressed women. Even for long sleeves that have transparent deep cuffs the suede mousquetaire glove is pulled over them to the elbow.

In suede mousquetaire the colors most approved are tans and grays. Black and white gloves are only worn with costumes they match. The grays and tans are filled with gowns of all colors when worn with a hat.

The best makes of mousquetaire gloves are without buttons. They pull on easily over the hand and are worn well wrinkled.

Glace gloves are kept for shopping and traveling wear.

There is a new glove which has elastic at the top instead of buttons. They are convenient to don, but have not the neat and smart appearance of a buttoned glove.

With the low hairdressing in vogue there is a great demand for attractive hair ornaments. Back and side combs will be, of course, in vogue, and there are any number of lovely tortoise shell and amber pins for the hair.

The newest idea in hatpins is the safety pin to keep the hat in position. This pin is very long and has besides the regulation fastening arrangement that fits down firmly into the hair, the snap being adjusted through the folds of the millinery.

The frock illustrated is of blue chine silk. A very decorative ribbon trimming ornaments the skirt. The waist simulates a bolero and is slightly surpliced in front. The girdle and band about the neck of the bodice are of tan suede trimmed with a ribbon design.

FASHION FACT AND FANCIES.

These Piece Linen Suits a Fad—Floral Effects Are Smart.

Three piece costumes of the finest kind of white linen are the last fashion cry. The costume consists of a long skirt and two bodices, one low and the other high, both made with elbow sleeves. They are beautifully inserted with valenciennes lace and embroidered by hand in floral designs over lace and linen. The low waist depends for adornment upon an exquisitely wrought bertha. The high waist is of the usual dainty lingerie style.

Among the jewelry novelties is a dog collar of jet.

Corset covers fashioned entirely of insertion are worn with slips of fine linen or lawn.

Floral effects promises to outrival all other spring designs and are to be seen on all sorts of materials.

The old chine silk of long ago is again fashionable, the smartest colors in this silk being chrysoprase green and Du Barry rose.

The dainty hat pictured is of black ruffled malines, which forms the entire chapeau. Under the brim and peeping over it on one side are exquisite La France roses, with their foliage.

OUR GOOD LOOKS.

Hints as to the Care of the Skin, Teeth and Hair.

The woman with good complexion, even, well cared for teeth and neatly kept hair can never be uncomely. All these are within reach of every woman that is determined that she shall be hopelessly plain. Even with irregular features a woman's face may always beam with good temper and intelligence if she so wills it and takes pains to acquire these graces.

To preserve good complexion absolute cleanliness of the skin is necessary, so that it can be unclogged in doing its work of throwing off waste matter. You can tell the moment you set eyes upon a person's face, neck and ears whether the individual keeps the skin clean. The perfectly kept skin has a burnished, almost transparent look. The blood shines through it and gives it a real radiance. The neglected skin, on the other hand, is dull, coarse grained and fairly gummy.

In washing the body two points are to be remembered—first, to cleanse the skin properly, hot water, soap and vigorous scrubbing with a brush are necessary; next, cold water sprayed or dashed over the skin afterward prevents taking cold. One needs two brushes, a stiff one for the body, a softer one for the face and throat. Almost any kind of brush will do for the body. For the face comes specially an oval brush about two inches wide by three and one-half long. This face brush is sold in drug and department stores and is not expensive. In using the brush move it with a circular motion, always backward and up upward from the mouth. About three times a week a brisk scrubbing with brushes is needed all over the body. The other days a less strenuous bath may be taken.

Lemon juice has a bleaching effect on the skin, glycerin a softening effect. Mixed in equal parts and well shaken, one counteracts the ill effects of the other, and the two together constitute one of the best skin lotions ever devised. Apply, rubbing in well, to face, neck and hands after the bath. A few drops of a favorite perfume may be added.

Care of the Teeth.

With a country full of the best dentists in the world, there is no excuse for bad teeth in the mouth of any person in America. First, keep them clean; second, have them examined by a good dentist once a year. That's all. To keep them clean brush with a moderately stiff brush every night before retiring, and do it thoroughly. About twice a week use the tooth powder your dentist recommends. Once a year at least have the dentist scrape or cleanse the tartar and discoloration from your teeth.

A foolish fad is one lately for "bleaching" the teeth, as it is called. Don't do it. It injures the teeth, and in time they again become discolored as badly as ever. Just keep them clean and take care of your health. Our dentists have evolved a white porcelain filling that promises to supersede the gold filling.

Children's teeth should be looked after closely in the growing stage. Crooked, too prominent or unduly crowded teeth mar sometimes the whole beauty of a girl's face, or a man's either, for that matter. Watch your children's teeth, and if there is tendency to abnormality in their growth consult the best dentist you know of and have the abnormality corrected.

Let none grudge the money paid to a skillful dentist. It is far better to have a pretty mouth than to have cost by clothes upon one's back.

Beautiful Hair.

It can only be said over and again that to have fine hair it must be kept clean. Dingy, "gummy" hair is an unspeakable horror. The first duty of those who have the care of the shining coats of blooded horses is to remove from them all dust. Let us take a lesson from this. Even the longest heaviest hair should be washed once a month. A pure soap and abundance of hot soft water, with plenty of rubbing of the scalp, are all that one needs. The soap must be entirely rinsed out of the hair, and it must afterward be thoroughly dried.

Massage of the scalp is admirable to perform it run your finger tips into your hair and press them firmly upon the scalp. Then, without letting them slip, gently work the skin beneath them around and around with spiral action. Keep this up from time to time till the skin of your head will move freely to the touch over any part of the skull. This promotes growth of the hair.

Feminine Work In Religious and Sociological Fields

A remarkable change has occurred in the character of religious work in the past few years. Religion has apparently concluded that it must first care for the bodies of the poor and the wicked if it would make any impression on their souls. The tactics of wise and earnest people who desire the spiritual uplifting of the mass of humanity is to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, heal the sick and in addition develop the intelligence.

In this new scheme of endeavor women take wonderful part.

The Salvation Army, it seems to have been, that evolved the new plan of simultaneous body and soul help. Notable it is, too, that from the beginning women Salvationists have had in that organization precisely the same rights as men, even sharing with them the highest offices. That is undoubtedly the reason the Salvation Army has gained such power and influence.

What women can do in the new socio-religious field of work is illustrated by Evangeline, or Eva, Booth, the present executive head of the Salvation Army of the United States. She was appointed to her place because she could fill it. She has under her charge 30,000 Salvationists.

Eva Booth is the fourth daughter of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. As head of the organization in America she will have the disbursement annually of nearly or quite $1,000,000. Helen Gould is a generous contributor to Miss Booth's treasury.

A Rich Girl Works For the Poor.

Among the lassies of the American Salvation Army one of the most earnest and devoted is Miss Elizabeth Van Norden, the daughter of a New York banker. Miss Van Norden was reared in luxury. All that fashionable society has to offer was at her feet. Yet one day Elizabeth Van Norden turned away from it all and enrolled herself as a cadet with the Salvationists to work out alike her own salvation and that of some of her fellow creatures. She wears the regulation blue uniform, is in all respects a Salvation Army lassie and declares that as such she is far happier than she was in the days when she led the "humdrum existence of a society butterfly."

Because of her superior intellect and education Miss Van Norden was sent to Europe to study slum conditions in the cities there. At the time she went the army was establishing headquarters in Paris. To Paris Elizabeth Van Norden was assigned first accordingly. Afterward she visited Germany and Italy, still in army work. The Salvation Army now has secure foothold in all the large cities of Europe, and nowhere is it more successful than in Paris.

"The Tombs Angel."

Miss Ada Eliot is a probation officer of the court of special sessions in New York city. She is also agent for the children's department of the bureau of charities there. Miss Eliot belongs to the old family of that name in New England. She is a relative of President Eliot of Harvard, and her father, a citizen of St. Louis, is a very wealthy man. Miss Eliot herself is an earnest student of sociology, highly educated and intellectual, having withal that universal sympathy which unlocks for her all hearts. Her labors for two years have been mainly with women arrested for various offenses. She has become such a faithful, helpful friend to these that she is now known as the "Tombs angel." When a woman is sent to the Tombs prison Miss Eliot visits her and investigates the case. If it was a first offense, the prisoner is set free on probation and turned over to Miss Eliot. The refined, high bred woman officer in a majority of such cases restores the offender to respectable life, and her past is blotted out.

A New Religious Cult.

In Chicago Mrs. Mabel A. Jackman has announced an organization on the basis of what she calls "scientific Christianity." A writer describes this scientific Christianity as an admixture between Christian Science and Salvation Army methods. Like Christian Science, Mrs. Jackman's plan proposes the healing of the sick and also includes social and industrial undertakings.

LINGERIE SUGGESTIONS.

Dainty Underwear For Summer. New Sock Trimmings.

Nightgowns in lingerie sets are to have the sleeves set in with the tiniest of baby beading.

Some of the new nightgowns are embroidered like the linen shirt waists of last summer, with great flower designs that twist up each side, and are heavily embroidered.

Mateiasse silk dressing sacks are stunning and may be bought just now at greatly reduced prices. They are more within the limit of the average woman's pocketbook than the lounging robes of the same material.

Petticoats of changeable taffeta running through many colors are to the fore again.

Very charming are the new silk mulls in solid colors.

Taffeta with a soft finish and in pin stripes holds first place among spring silks.

Filmy fichus, little ripples and swirls of lace and elbow sleeves and lace ruffles will make the summer frock a thing of loveliness.

Quite as pretty as the chiffon ruches are the neck trimmings of double and triple rows of dainty lace. They have the advantage of washing well.

Pink and blue chip hats are trimmed with blue velvet ribbon bows that match in color, but deepen in shade. Pink camellias are used on the blue hats, while a hat of pink will boast impossible blue camellias.

An exceedingly smart and becoming toque is herewith illustrated. It is made of the palest blue tulle overlaid with a glistening embroidery in which pale blue pearls play an important part. Inside the daintily curved brim folds of tulle are arranged, and a lovely feather droops over the side.

WHAT WILL BE WORN.

Fashions In Outing Skirts—Smart Lingerie Waists.

The circular short skirt for walking and outing generally is one of the summer models. It is made with a seam up the front, which insures a perfect fit about the hips and a pretty swing at the feet that no amount of darts and seams can accomplish.

Soft surah in a checked design, the colorings in black and white, blue or green and white, makes an ideal warm weather traveling gown. A dress of this kind worn with a white "dicky" and cuffs to match always makes the costume look fresh and neat, as these adjuncts may be frequently renewed.

NEW BODICE MODEL.

Chic examples of lingerie, lawn and batiste shirt waists are a mass of tiny tucks. They are daintily embroidered by hand in small sprays of hand worked embroidery. Insertions of lace and swiss are to be seen on the best machine made models, but the hand work is much more exclusive and elegant.

Shirt waist sleeves are fuller at the top and are not trimmed there with tucks or lace, as they were last summer.

The smart waist pictured may be carried out in any of the heavy silks of the season. It is laid from shoulders to waist in wide outward turning plaits. These plaits are embroidered with designs in fancy braid, the upper pattern simulating a yoke. About the vest of Irish lace is an empiecement of velvet embroidered in daisy petals. Tiny pieces of petal embroidered velvet trim the vest from the empiecement down to the chiffon velvet girdle. The sleeves are box plaited into the armholes and have a braid trimmed cuff.

SPRING FASHIONS.

Ugly Automobile Costumes and Some Really Pretty Dresses.

Sweet and pretty as women generally manage to make themselves look do they make themselves ugly and homely for their automobile trips. This reflection was forced upon me as I looked at two ladies who were choosing their outfits for this dangerous but evidently exciting sport. They were going south, where the weather did not permit of the great, clumsy fur things which they had been making themselves hideous in all winter. One cost finally chosen by a lady (whose name had upset the machine before he reached Palm Beach, I read in the papers) was long, reaching quite an inch below the bottom of her skirt. The material was thick cravenette, such as is used in men's rain coats. This was almost shapeless and belted in at the back. Down the front there was a wide plastron of fine dressed leather. It was so arranged that it could be left off if not needed, as it buttoned on both sides all the way down. This, I suppose, is to protect the chest. Over the shoulders is a cape made of the leather and a capuchin hood, which can be drawn up over the cap. If there is a more unbecoming thing for a woman than one of these caps I do not know what it is, and, above all, when the hood is brought up over the peak, leaving the crown to stick out like a mushroom. And, as if this were not enough, there are about six veils all available to add to the structure. No, woman is not beautiful in an automobile suit.

The other suit had a really pretty dress of soft gray cloth, with a coat of the same that reached to the knees lined with Siberian squirrel. The big sleeves had deep velvet cuffs to catch and hold the dust, while there was a horribly ugly hood with a short cape, and then a long one below made of gray cravenette also. This was lined with silk, I think. The object was to have the rain proof cape cover and protect the shoulders. Now, I like to see lovely woman look lovely always, and that is why I see no beauty in automobiling costumes.

I noted with pleasure that among the really elegant outdoor coats the new redingotes, which has been revived for the coming spring. This always graceful garment is made coat shaped in the back, having exactly the finish of a man's coat, while it is cut away in front, allowing for a pretty and stylish vest of satin, velvet or other material, and having shawl revers. The sleeves are the sensible and comfortable coat, with full tops. Cloth, cheviot and tweeds, all of solid colors, make up handsomely in this style. Such a costume is quite fine enough for any outdoor occasion. Several suits with the redingote effect are shown in velutina, which proves that we have not finished our velvet styles yet.

Changeable taffeta is seen again, too, in several very pretty spring gowns for visiting and teas and other semigrand functions. A case in point is shown here. A gown, with the flounce of the same, headed by two folds of the silk, edged with accordion ruffles of chiffon in two thicknesses. The silk is dove colored, and one of the chiffon ruffles is red and the other blue, which gives the changing effect. The waist is in the same old blouse shape, almost covered with lace. The cape—and capes are many this year—is of pastel blue cloth, with fancy castle braid effects at the yoke and breloques of the same.

Among the several of the importations in dress goods for the early spring I saw some that are finer, richer and more beautiful than I have ever seen. Each season sees something new and some more perfection. There is a crepe de chine, which is polka dotted in black, and the cunning weaver has made those dots look like steel on the black. Panama cloth is a soft and fine weave, sometimes left plain and again with dots or other fine figures in the weave. Gypsy cloth and mother of pearl powderette with tiny specks over the surface, lizard with scales like that reptile, granite with the roughish surface so much admired for tailor suits, queen's granite, a still finer rough wool; mignonette, which has a close weave most elegant and fine; broadcloth of various weights and in all colors, and camel's hair, which is in for a long season of popularity. But for every day use the mohairs in many varieties of weave and color and the cravenettes will be favorites. There are also roxana, prunella, oolienne, crepe de Paris, all wool china crape and any amount of silk and wool mixtures in thin vellings. There are clairette and batiste, tamise and no many of these thin and transparent wool goods that I cannot remember them.

Plaids, large and close designs, fine stripes and checks, are seen on many of the finest of the imported goods, and they make neat and pretty suits.

OLIVE HARPER.

WHAT IS WORN.

Smart Touches on Tailored Gowns. New Embroideries.

Tucks give a strapped seam effect to many tailored coats, and ruffles and tucks will ripple all the way from hem to waist on skirts.

Smart women are becoming rather tired of the plaited skirt, and some exclusive spring gowns are being made up with plain skirts, or when trimming is used it is laid on flat about the bottom.

Bunting which sells at 10 cents a yard is going to be made up this spring into stunning little shirt waist suits.

Jaunty suits of checked material are being shown in the shops for early spring walking gowns.

The new embroideries are exceedingly lovely. In flowered effects the designs are delicate and scattered. Heavy padded embroidery is used on both linen and cloth gowns.

A novelty in trimming is a combination of broderie anglaise and Japanese hand work. This joining in one design of two such diametrically opposite schools of embroidery is very happy in effect.

Hand embroidered yokes and cuffs for nightgowns are to be purchased from 50 cents up.

The stunning gown of pearl gray taffeta herewith illustrated is one of the dainty models for early spring wear. About the full skirt are bouillonnes and tiny ruffles of the taffeta silk. A bertha of silk trimmed with shirrings and ruffles is draped around an empiecement of lace threaded with silver.

SUMMER GOWNS.

Dressy Silk Costumes Which Are Trimmed With Lace Ruffles.

Many of the dressy spring and summer silk gowns will be trimmed with garlands of lace ruffles arranged on the skirts in festoons and caught with chiffon rosettes in the tone of the coloring.

A pretty idea for a garden party gown is to catch the festooned lace ruffle with a flower and have the accompanying hat adorned with the same flower. Orchids are very smart for this purpose, and orchid colorings generally will be used extensively in the spring.

A dainty little plain linen dress of Du Barry rose is made with a perfectly plain plaited skirt. The blouse is cut in a broad V at the throat and filled in with a guimpe of openwork batiste. A broad turned back collar and deep cuffs are features of the gown. They are buttonholed at the edges and embroidered in a raised design. A scarf of black silk coming under the collar and knotted in front is a pretty touch.

Another popular separate skirt is laid in narrow box plaits at the waist and stitched to the knee, where the plaits gradually spring out and flare becomingly at the feet.

Voile or nun's veiling, which is what voile really is, makes an awfully nice shirt waist dress. It is light and easily sheds dust and dirt.

Tulle for evening gowns is embroidered with gold and silver and has incrusted between the designs motifs of lace.

The blouse illustrated is of Havana brown cashmere. The wide bands forming the square yoke and the center trimming and sleeve bands are of darker brown panne edged with cream white peau de soie.

SAVE THE BUFFALO

THE MOVEMENT FOR THIS IS GAINING GROUND.

Ernest Harold Baynes Tells of the Men and Societies Assisting in This Work—The Real American Animal.

The movement for the preservation of the last few hundred specimens of American buffalo, not long since the most numerous of the earth's big mammals, is rapidly gaining ground. The deep regret of the American people at the fact that their grandest native animal has all but disappeared, finds expression in a hundred ways. Naturalists and true sportsmen are meeting, both in public and in private, not to discuss the advisability or the possibility of preserving the animal—those points have been decided once and for all by the best authorities in the country—but to consider and formulate wise plans for its preservation. Naturalists who have never lectured or spoken in public before are raising their voices in this cause; they know that if they have anything to say in the interest of the buffalo, they must say it at once or it will be too late. And men, aye, and women, too, who are not naturalists, but who are lovers of things which live, are helping the movement by expressing to others their interest in it.

The interest of scientific bodies is being aroused, and almost every day we hear of some sportsman's club or natural history society discussing the subject of the buffalo and passing resolutions expressing sympathy with the movement now on foot to save him. Some have gone even further than this, and are even now agitating the question of organizing a national society, whose object shall be to arrange for the preservation of the typical American mammal. The first step has been taken, the men and women who took it are in earnest, and it is safe to predict that, before the buffalo has grown his heavy coat to protect him from next winter's cold, his friends will have gathered around him in force, for the purpose of protecting him from the colder hand of the fate which now threatens his existence. And when these people have once organized I believe that the preservation of the bison will no longer be one of the objects which "should be accomplished," but rather one of those which "must be and shall be" accomplished.

In the meantime it is very desirable that those who are now, and who for months have been, working so hard for this cause, should be assured of the cooperation of all who have the interest of our native animals at heart. The success of the movement would be beneficial to the entire nation, and therefore it should have the support of the nation. That means the support of the reader of this article, just as much as that of the man in Cincinnati, or St. Louis. The preservation of the buffalo is probably dependent on governmental action in the matter, since in the hands of the government alone will it be quite safe from those who are continually offering big prices for heads and hides. In other words, the matter is in the hands of the people, and my reader is one of these. Every set of resolutions that is passed, favoring the movement; every letter addressed to me at Meriden, N. H., will help the cause of the buffalo, and will bring nearer to us the day when this great animal will be out of danger. In the entire United States there are now only 600-odd buffaloes, exclusive of those confined in public parks and gardens, and which cannot be counted on to assist in the perpetuation of the race. The majority of these are in three herds, the Corbin herd at Newport, N. H.; the Pablo-Allard herds in Montana, and the James Philips herd in South Dakota. If tuberculosis or other contagious disease were to carry off any one of these herds, the fate of the race would probably be sealed, as even now there are none too many strains to allow for the necessary interchange of blood. This danger could be avoided at once if the government divided these herds into smaller ones and provided for their maintenance on separate reservations.

While speaking on this subject with an old plainsman the other day, he remarked:

"Well, there is no other native animal toward which Americans should have so kindly a feeling as for the buffalo; it has done more toward the civilization of the country than all the rest put together. To the explorer and early settlers it was an unfailing supply of the best kind of food, and many a hundred times have thirsty tradvelers been more than grateful for the water which collected in the buffalo wallows. And who shall say how many thousands have enjoyed the luxury of a fire on the treeless plains of the west, when but for the constant supply of buffalo chips they would have been obliged to spend the days and nights damp, cold and miserable. Save the buffalo! Well, I should say they ought to, rather."

TERRAPIN UNDER HOTEL.

Largest Farm in the World Is Located Beneath Big Philadelphia Hostelry.

In point of stock, if not in area covered, the largest terrapin ponds in the world are in Philadelphia. Deep down in the earth, three stories under the Bellevue-Stratford, the ponds are located, and are intended to supply the tables of the big hotel exclusively. There are no less than 5,000 of the succulent "turtles," every one a diamond back of the finest variety, says the Philadelphia Telegraph. Some of the terrapin in the Bellevue-Stratford ponds are seven inches in diameter, which is exceptionally large. These cost $85 per dozen. From these kings of their kind the size gradually diminishes to six inches, and those of that size cost $45 per dozen. The value varies between these prices, according to the difference in size. The value of these toothsome beauties is estimated at nearly $30,000. The terrapin ponds are located in the wine cellar, and the beauties are the pride of the Steward, Martin McLaughlin. "It will be many years before the Bellevue-Stratford guests will have the pleasure of eating terrapin which are born and raised in these ponds," said the steward, in talking about his plans, "and until that time, of course, we must buy our supplies."

INVESTITURES IN ENGLAND.

King Edward Makes Several Important Changes in the Regulations for Them.

The king of England has made an important change in the regulations for investitures. Hitherto the order has been: "No insignia are worn by gentlemen who are to be invested." In future, however, the recipients of honors are to wear any orders, decorations, or medals which they may have recived. Investitures are now state cermonials. Queen Victoria observed semistate if the function was at Windsor castle, but at Osborne there was a considerable reduction in the ceremonial, with fewer members of the court in attendance. It is understood that next year the periodical investitures of the Bath, the St. Michael and St. George, the Indian orders, and the military decorations will be held by the king in the throne room at St. James' palace. Queen Victoria usually conferred investitures to the higher classes of the several orders—i .e., Knights Grand Crosses and Knights Commanders. The king, however, has kindly consented to invest the companions of the orders, who are introduced into his majesty's presence in single file, as at a levee.

CACTUS USED FOR FORAGE

Botanical Wizard Robs Plants of Their Thorns and Spines—His Methods.

Luther Burbank, who is called the botanical wizard because of his development of stoneless plums and other fruit freaks, has just produced, after ten years' work, a spineless cactus, which is half as nutritious as alfalfa, and will yield more forage to the acre, says the San Francisco Letter. By a series of crossings and recrossings of different varieties from different parts of the world, Mr. Burbank is aiming to make the plant hardier and to produce more fruit and leaves. He has at his Santa Rosa experimental grounds specimens of a cactus which he has robbed of thorns, having brought the leaves to a state of perfection in which a man can rub a leaf over his face. The surface is found as soft as silk. The creation of a spineless cactus is of world-wide importance. The plant will grow luxuriantly on the driest desert. In this and other countries its leaves and fruit are food for man and beast, and it will mean to some regions more than the introduction of the potato means to Europe.

NATIONAL 'PHONE IN JAPAN

Entire Service of Insular People Is in Possession of the Government.

Telephones in the land of the mikado are government institutions. The service has been established since 1890. There are 5 exchanges in Tokio, employing 63 men and 25 women clerks, and 115 men and 1,722 women operators. The number of subscribers at the end of November, 190, was 35,265. The telephone department has 2,537 miles of bare wire, 201 miles of aerial cable, 169 miles of underground cable, and 3.58 nauts of submarine cable employed in the service. The charge to subscribers varies according to the size of the town, being 48 yen per annum in some of the smaller towns and 66 yen in Tokio and Osaka, the middle charge of 54 yen being made in Yokahama and other places. The call office fee is five sen for a conversation not exceeding five minutes, with an additional five sen for each additional five minutes' conversation within town limits, and ten sen with similar regulations for out-of-town subscribers.

Valuable Furs of Indian Girls.

"Expensive dress is not the exclusive privilege of civilized women," said E. L. Foster, an Alaska mining engineer, as he watched a party of fashionably dressed women preparing to go out into the rain. "Up on the Seward peninsula I have seen Indian girls wearing suits of furs which would be worth $5,000 to $10,000 here. More than one of those semi-barbarous women have dresses of sealskin and hoods of silver fox fur. I have seen such outfits which were lined with the fur of young sea otter, trimmed with fringes of wolverine tails. I should say that $700 is a good average value for the dresses of Indian women on the upper Columbia and Fraser rivers, so you see those women have no reason to envy their more sophisticated sisters in the matters of furs."

Berlin (Germany) Special.

Miss Krupp, who on the death of her father became chief proprietor of the world-famed Krupp works, at Essen, in Germany, is the richest girl in the world. A great deal of the artillery of Russia and Japan, France, Germany and Italy was manufactured at the Krupp works; and during the South African war England had to apply to the Krupp works to supply urgently needed weapons. Practically every gun on every Russian and Japanese warship has been constructed in the Krupp works, and similarly every gun mounted on every German warship and every Italian warship bears the Krupp trademark. mark, Holland, Belgium, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Turkey, Switzerland, and all the South American countries are equally dependent on the Krupp works for their naval and military armaments. Miss Krupp is a charming German girl, who wields her power with discretion and generosity. The city of Essen, with its 100,000 inhabitants, is practically her private property, so that she possesses almost despotic power over her 25,000 employes and their families.

The kingdom over which Bertha Krupp reigns is one of enormous magnitude. Employed in her various works are 4,190 officials and 45,289 workmen. The total number of the workmen and of the women and children dependent on them exceeds 100,000. Among the establishments controlled by the company owning the name of Krupp are included not only the famous steel works at Essen, but numerous coal and iron mines, large shipbuilding yards, iron foundries in various parts of the empire, machine works, a stretch of country 20 miles long for artillery practice, mines of various minerals in Spain, and a flourishing line of shipping, with its headquarters at Rotterdam.

All Germany is awaiting the announcement of the coming marriage of Fraulein Krupp. Herr Deichmann, the son of a Cologne banker, is named as the fortunate man.

She is a good housekeeper and is said to be a firm believer in "Kirche, Kinder, Kuche" (church, children, kitchen), as the fields for woman's work. It is said the crown prince proposed across a table while sipping a cup of tea with the young duchess.

ENGINEER INSANE; TRAIN RUNS AWAY.

Fireman Fights to Subdue Him While Heavy Freight Goes at Terrific Speed.

Carnegie, Pa.—With an engineer, suddenly gone mad, holding open the throttle, and his fireman fighting desperately to control or stop the runaway, a freight train ran 30 miles the other day at a rate of 40 to 60 miles an hour. Expecting a wreck momentarily, the train crew clung to the cars, unable to reach the engine.

While pulling his fast freight train out of Colliers, W. Va., Engineer Charles FOUGHT WITH THE FIREMAN.

Kull became made and fought with his fireman, Perry McKinley, who struggled to subdue him and check the fearful speed which had been attained before McKinley discovered the condition of his engineer.

The battle lasted almost the entire 30 miles between Colliers and this place, and both the engineer and fireman were exhausted when the train was brought to a standstill here.

Kull was turned over to a doctor, who examined him and later had him confined in a Pittsburg hospital.

The ride shattered the nerves of all the trainmen. The forward brakeman tried to get to the engine when he saw by the speed that something was wrong, but could not stand on the running boards. As the train whizzed through Burgettstown the operator telegraphed ahead to clear for a runaway.

Kull has been known as one of the best young engineers on the road, but recently he received a fearful shock at Colliers, W. Va., where a switch failed to work and his engine left the train hanging over a bluff. It is thought this shattered his mind.

MOUSE FOILS PRISON PLOT

Four Desperadoes Had Planned to Kill Jail Guards and Make Their Escape.

Cincinnati.—With a note tied to its tail a wee mouse tipped off officials to a daring attempt of four desperadoes to saw their way out of the Cincinnati prison and murder guards by wholesale, if necessary, in order to secure their freedom.

The mouse had been drafted as an unwilling messenger between the prisoners, and the slip of paper attracted the attention of an ever vigilant guard.

The men who planned the break were James Berry, a hold-up man; James Taylor, diamond thief; Earl Moore, serving time for two offenses, and James McGuire, ex-convict of Joliet. The men had secured saws and two iron bars were sawed in Berry's cell and one in Taylor's. The prisoners had planned to kill Guards Bishop, Henry Assel and William Hetrick, if compelled to, in order to secure their freedom.

Three saws were found in Moore's cell. In Taylor's the officials struck a dozen hack saws and a steel frame was found in his bed ticking. A murderous oak club 20 inches long and a large dirk were also located.

They have been planning for weeks to escape, and their mode of communication was, perhaps, the most novel ever heard of. Berry would catch a mouse, tie a note to its tail, and as the rodent passed the cell of McGuire he would catch it and get the message.

GIVES LIFE AS SACRIFICE.

In Religious Frenzy, Young Girl Votary of New Cult Perishes from Flames of Pyre.

Chicago.—Made insane by a new religion, Miss Frances Wakley, of this city, built a funeral pyre of papers and books of her cult, lighted it and perished from the flames.

For four months Miss Wakley, who was 23 years old, had been a member of a sect recently arisen in Englewood, which teaches the near approach of the millennium. She had been fasting and praying for several days, her only nourishment being a little rice. From her dying words it was gathered a vision had appeared to her in the night, ordering her to offer herself a sacrifice.

Her mother and a neighbor heard groans and rushed to the young woman's room. She lay across the bed and beneath and about her books and papers by which her cult had been spread were blazing. The neighbor seized a blanket and attempted to beat out the flames. The girl waved her away.

"I lay down my life gladly at the call of the Redeemer," she cried. "He ordered this sacrifice last night. You are sinning not to allow me to die."

Miss Wakley died soon after being taken to the hospital.

KING EDWARD'S SECRETARY

Private Correspondence of England's Monarch Is a Task Requiring Great Labor.

Should you by any chance receive an autograph letter from King Edward or Queen Alexandra, the royal signature may be there, but they know nothing of the contents, beyond the fact of having said to their secretaries, "Write thus and so," declares the Boston Herald. To be the private secretary of popular sovereigns is no sinecure. Fifty or sixty letters a day is the average of her majesty's "correspondence," while the king's "duty" is doubled by state papers for his signature, which no one, of course, can save him the labor of writing. Royalty reads a letter and often limits its supervision to a laconic no or yes, scrawled on the margin; then Lord Knollys and Miss Knollys, the queen's confidant, will take it and do the rest. King Edward's skillful right hand man expands this into the diplomatic style with which most people are familiar and long believed direct royal dictation. Such very private notes as the king and queen do send to their families or intimates are discreetly burned, or buried in archives, from which it would be lese majeste to unearth them.

ELECTRICITY MENDS BONES

Sundered Limbs of Both Animals and Men Have Been Repaired by Process.

The same power that speeds the destructive automobile mends the bones of the unfortunates along the highway. The sundered bones of both rabbits and men successfully unite when properly treated by electricity. The electric current is applied to the fracture daily. Galvanism, faradism, and static electricity were all tried. In the rabbits the galvanic current acted rapidly, there was no suffering, and after the apparatus was removed the animal walked and ran well at once. The other forms of electricity seemed beneficial to a less degree, and there was some limping after removal of the bandages. Four cases in man were treated, one of over a month standing without any tendency to union. In this case the patient was cured in about three weeks from the beginning of electrical treatment. The other cases all did well. The most noticeable thing was the absence of trophy and disability after the removal of the bandage.

CAT WAS LEFT IN TRUNK.

Disappearance of Kitty Proves Mysterious Until Clothing Receptacle Is Opened.

A teacher in one of the public schools has a very attractive cat, says the Hartford Times. The feline is of an inquiring turn of mine, it may be because of association with the learned lady who is her mistress. A night or two ago kitty was much interested in watching her mistress rearrange things in her trunk. Suddenly the cat disappeared. How she vanished was a mystery. Doors and windows were closed and there was no chance of her getting out of the room. Her mistress was much exercised, and sought high and low for kitty, from whom not a sound was heard. A day or two afterward the teacher had occasion to go to her trunk again, and when the cover and the tray were lifted there was kitty reposing cosily on her mistress' evening dress. A mew, a shake, a stretch, and kitty was herself once more, a sadder but a wiser feline.

MYSTERY OF REAL HEALTH

If One Would Be Physically Perfect Regularity and Diet Must Be Observed.

Whenever anyone is released from jail or penitentiary after a long sentence, we read that while he was in poor or downright bad health when he entered, he comes out as hearty as a brick, says the Saturday Evening Post. Yet almost without exception jails and penitentiaries are unsanitary, sunless places, with no facilities for proper exercise or for any of the other precautions usually taken by those who wish to get or keep health. The mystery lies in two words—regularity and diet. The first is perhaps the more important. Clocklike regularity; everything done on the second, and on the same second every day; a recognition of the fact that the body is a machine. Then, as a supplement to this, a simple diet—plain, not too varied—enough to eat, but not too much.

Curious Cave Creatures.

Marvelous are the lives of creatures condemned to live always in a darkness as black as night, says the London Globe. One of these creatures a very rare specimen and is styled the cavern beetle. It was first discovered some 70 years ago in an Austrian cave, the grotto and, though its discoverer offered a prize of $25 for another, it was 14 years before a second was found. Brought out from its gloomy haunts into the light of the sun it dies almost immediately. The sunlight seems to wither and shrivel up these insects, just as though they had been placed in front of a hot fire. Yet, in spite of this fact, it is known that the blind cave creatures are descended from others which originally lived in the light of day.

Embalmed in Glass.

In order to preserve the features of those who have died it is proposed by a Russian to embalm corpses by casting around them a solid mass of glass. This would be perfectly transparent, and as no air could get in the features would be preserved indefinitely. Of course, it is not possible to pour molten glass directly on the body, so it is first coated with a thin covering of so-called "liquid glass," or sodium silicate. This is allowed to harden and forms a protective coating. The body is then put in a mold and melted glass pour around it.

WOMAN POSED AS MAN; WAS GOOD COW PUNCHER

Wore Male Attire to Earn Living for Baby and Mother—Also a Dining Room Girl.

Norfolk, Neb.—Masquerading as a man for many months before she was finally discovered wearing male attire for the purpose of securing work at men's wages with which she might support her babe and mother, Mrs. Omer F. Sweigert, of Waterloo, Ia., has been playing a unique role in Holt county and at O'Neill, Neb.

Working on ranches in western Nebraska as a full-fledged cowboy, pitching hay alongside the huskiest fellow, attending neighborhood dancing parties as an attractive beau and making love to the young women of the cummunity for the sake of carrying out her masquerade in each detail, Mrs. Sweigert was chagrined to a degree when, upon rumors that her features were too fine for any man, the authorities investigated her story and wrung from her the confession of her true sex.

Deserted by her husband, Mrs. Sweigert declares that she was unable to sustain the babe that he left and her aged mother, at woman's wages. Accordingly she came west, got work at good pay, earned a team and a wagon, and was rapidly acquiring all the habits that are known to man. She was a good fellow among the other cow punchers on the ranch, could shoot as well as the average man and rode horseback with perfect ease. When Christmas came, the disguised woman came to town, secured work in the Dewey hotel as cook and roomed with an old-time friend, Jack Nance. The new cook was a winner with the dining-room maids, and was engaged to be married to one of them.

Mrs. Sweigert has agreed to leave town, and Nance mysteriously disappeared when he suspected that the game was up.

GIRLS ATTACK WILD BEAST

Nervy Young Maidens Kill Maddened Lynx and Save Their Pet Dog from Death.

Northport, Wash.—While a maddened lynx was worrying their pet dog, the Phillips sisters attacked the wild beast. One literally wrested the dog from the jaws of the lynx, the other killed it with a shot through the head.

Faye and Florence Phillips, aged 17 and 19, respectively, live on the homestead of their father, Fred S. Phillips, on the reservation side of the Columbia, near the mouth of Big Sandy creek, two miles from Northport. The other afternoon the hired man ran home to tell that the dog had treed a large lynx. The girls seized rifles from the wall and followed up the bark of the dog. He had the beast treed on one of the highest limbs. Both girls fired at the same time. The wounded animal bounded into the air and landed on the ground a few feet from the girls, who were coolly reloading their weapons.

The moment the beast struck the ground it was attacked by the dog. The animals rolled over and over in a savage struggle, but the lynx was too much for the dog. So rapid were the movements of the animals that the girls feared to shoot, because they might kill their pet dog. Finally the dog emitted a shriek of mortal agony.

The girls rushed to the rescue. One grasped the dog's limp hind legs and literally pulled the combatants apart, while the other sent a bullet through the head of the lynx. They shouldered the animal between them and returned home accompanied by the limp, torn and bleeding dog. They hung the lynx in the woodshed, and he proved to be an unusually large beast, with long tassels on his ears.

MISSING HOGS FOUND.

Gone for Three Months, They Are Discovered in Mine Shaft in Emaciated Condition.

Batavia, N. Y.—John Bower, residing six miles from here, three months ago lost three hogs. Bower advertised and made diligent search without avail. The other day while some miners in a mine of a gypsum company were at work they heard strange sounds, and upon searching the adjacent tunnel came across three hogs. The animals could scarcely walk, and were a mass of skin and bones. They were taken into the open air and fed carefully, and are getting along with every prospect of living.

It was found that the animals had fallen into an unused shaft, a distance of 50 feet. There was some water in the tunnels, so that they had something to drink. The hogs when they disappeared weighed in the neighborhood of 225 pounds each. When taken from their three months' imprisonment they weighed 35 pounds each.

RESCUED BY A DOG

HELPLESS CHILD IS DRAGGED FROM BURNING HOUSE.

Noble Animal Defies Flame and Smoke in Saving His Little Master—Thrilling Incident of a Swiss Village.

It was midnight. The little Swiss town of St. Saphorin lay slumbering. Not a soul was abroad to notice a certain house from which the blue smoke curled.

Within the burning house a father, a mother and three young children lay sleeping.

An ominous crackling succeeded the silent outpouring of the smoke. The woodwork was ablaze.

A horrified man sat up in bed. With eyes outstaring, he tried to penetrate the darkness. He caught sight of a small glow that issued from beneath the door.

He awoke his wife, and, endeavoring to hide his awful fear, quickly explained the danger. Then, bidding her await his return, he opened the door and disappeared into a dense cloud of smoke.

A moment later he had entered his children's bedroom. Groping his way to a cot, he seized the youngest child in one arm, whilst with the other he threw his little daughter, dazed and scarcely awake, over his shoulder.

And now came the terrible journey down the already burning stairs. But help was at hand, for just as they reached the bottom of the stairs the front door burst open, and the half-suffocated family staggered into the street.

Suddenly a piteous cry broke from the mother. Heavens! where was little Henri? Her little four-year-old boy lay sleeping in the burning house! An exclamation of horror escaped the father.

He looked around him helplessly. Just then his retriever trotted up to him. Its faithful brown eyes, gazing trustfully up into his master's face sent a wild thought through the distracted man's mind.

"Go, fetch Henri!" he said, pointing to the burning house.

Would the dog go? On him alone hung Henri's life. A second the handsome creature hesitated, then, trotting forward, was swallowed in the thick smoke.

A minute went by—one terrible minute in which the anxious parents stood, hoping with the hope of despair. Then through the smoke there loomed a strange creature. Could this hairless, black animal be the handsome retriever? It must be! But how he staggered. Surely he was carrying something—a little night-clad figure!

A cry burst from the mother. She rushed forward and snatched her baby to her arms—saved by a faithful dog.

Cookery and Government.

Rossini, the Italian composer, is reported to have said a droll thing on the unification of Italy when some one asked his opinion on this matter. He replied that he thought it very difficult, if not impossible to effect it, for the simple reason that the Neapolitans eat nothing but macaroni, the Florentines nothing but fagiuoli and the Lombards only polenta, while the Piedmontese swallow all they can get. "It is clear," he said, "that uniformity of cookery must precede unity of government."—Chicago Daily News.

A Little Tokio.

The following notice was posted up recently in an art exhibition in Tokio Japan: "No visitor who is mad or intoxicated allowed to enter in, if any person found in shall be claimed to retire. No visitor is allowed to carry in with himself any parcel, umbrella, stick, and the like kind, except his purse, and is strictly forbidden to take within himself dog, or the same kind of beasts. Visitor is requested to take care of himself from thievely."—Argonaut.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, March 16, 1905.

And the public is the football whether the trust or the union is kicking.

Russian war news is making a hard struggle to keep on the first page but New York's strike has it skinned to death.

The President finds that the Senate is hard of hearing, but why should he care when eighty millions are glad to listen to what he has to say.

An exchange notes that William Randolph Hearst was attending an auction sale in New York while Theodore Roosevelt was being inaugurated. Nothing wrong in that, Hearst always was classed with pretty cheap goods.

A great deal of good advertising copy is spoiled in an effort to please the man who is to pay the bill. An advertising man must possess the necessary experience and ability; he must then be sufficiently firm in his convictions to fight for them if necessary.—Pacific Coast Advertising.

New York papers seem astounded at James M. Beck's remark that Wall street is more impressive to him than the beauties of nature, but we haven't noticed that any Philadelphia paper is at all amazed. Beck shouted Democracy in the Quaker City until it paid him better to get a change of heart.

Republican editors are already booming Mr. Fairbanks for President in 1908. Let's see, he's Vice President isn't he?

Being in the midst of a railway strike, New Yorkers have forgotten all about the beef trust and other evils of equal magnitude.

Roosevelt has selected a Bryan Democrat for an United States District Attorneyship in George to succeed a stalwart Republican. Now watch out for the next issue of The Commoner.

Notwithstanding Commissioner Garfield's report that the beef trust is not making much profit, it will take more loquence and figures than the Commissioner can command to convince the average bread-winner that his statement is either true in fact or honest in judgment.

Not only the congregation which he served so well for many years, but the entire community suffers a distinct loss in the death of Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes. The venerable pastor-emeritus was held in high esteem here, where he spent the best days of his life in earnest religious work and where he was a distinct power for good. The action of the Mayor in ordering the city flag at half mast is in fitting tribute to the memory of a noble man who travelled in the footsteps of his Master.

The Philadelphia Record says: "The fact that the United States Government spends hundreds of thousands of dollars for advertising every year without experienced direction as to the choice of mediums and the preparation of 'copy' has recently been called to the attention of the authorities at Washington, and the creation of a Bureau of Publicity in connection with the Department of Commerce and Labor is being urged. Uncle Sam is a thorough believer in the value of advertising, but there is a woeful lack of system in his conduct of this branch of his business. The woods are full of advertisers on a lesser scale who could give him valuable pointers."

Although Plainfield is not a railroad centre, according to Vice President Besler, who enjoys living here, there are 117 Jersey Central men in this city, among them being several of the principal officers, including General Passenger Agent Burt, General Freight Agent Koons, Chief Engineer Osgood, Superintendent of Telegraph Sherman, Superintendent of Motive Power McIntosh and General Train Master Edgar. The B. & O., which uses the Central's tracks through Plainfield, is represented by Vice President and General Superintendent Campbell and minor officers and employes. General Passenger Agent Lee and others of the Lehigh Valley, and Foreign Freight Agent Beard and several others of the Erie live here. Even the Union Pacific is represented, Alexander Millar, secretary of the road, being a resident. Joseph W. Reinhart, former president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and Francis DeLacey Hyde, who practically owns a short line road in the South might also be named. And there are many more than these and it all goes to show that railroad men are surely good judges of a model city.

AMUSEMENTS.

George Ade's comedy, "The College Widow," was produced for the first time last September, in Washington, and after a week's engagement there came to the Garden Theatre, where it has remained ever since playing to a succession of crowded houses. The homely humor of the characters and life at an inland college town are particularly appealing to those who come "from the interior" as a reminder of their youthful days, and to those who know only of the city, the clean, wholesome atmosphere of the play is delightful. The sixth month of "The College Widow" began Monday night.

"Buster Brown" is proving to be the biggest hit in the history of the Majestic Theatre, and this is saying a great deal when one recalls that this is the house where "The Wizard of Oz" and "Babes in Toyland" scored their phenomenal runs. With such a pair to set the pace, it required a record-breaker indeed to make "three of a kind"—but that is just what Manager Flaherty found in "Buster Brown." That he doubted it himself is proved by the fact that he wagered a new hat with Manager Melville B. Raymond, who is responsible for "Buster Brown" being successfully transplanted from the genial garden of the Sunday colored supplements, where he originally grew, to the frequently frosty and inclement land beyond the footlights—that this "infant prodigy" would never beat the records for receipts achieved by "The Wizard" and also "The Babes." But Manager Raymond is wearing a new hat, while Col. Flaherty wears a contented smile, indicated that he would be glad to lose more such bets.

Y. M. C. A. AS HOST.

To Entertain Montclair Men on Wednesday, March 22.

The members of the local Business Men's class of the Y. M. C. A. have extended an invitation to the Business Men of Montclair for Wednesday night, March 22, when a social will be arranged and a basketball game will be played between the older men of the two classes. The Plainfield men were recently the guests at Montclair and a pleasant evening was spent at the gymnasium.

The entertaining committee consists of the following members of the Business Men's class: Dr. Frank Clawson, Dr. Shaw, John Doane, William H. Garrigues, Dr. T. S. Davis, Dr. Henry M. Maxson and P. R. Van Wyck. An auxiliary composed of the wives of the Business Men will serve dinner at the Y. M. C. A. rooms after which a social hour will be spent previous to the basketball game. It is expected that about twenty of the Montclair members will be provided for.

In the gymnasium at 8 o'clock a team composed of five of the above named Plainfielders will contest with a cider team from the visitors. In addition to the game there will be other attractions such as apparatus work, tumbling and acrobatic features.

PERSONAL.

Miss Carr, of Elmira, N. Y., is visiting her brother, William T. Carr, of West Fifth street.

Miss Helen Pearce, of Essex street, is detained at home by illness bordering on typhoid fever.

Boardman Mosher, of West Fifth street, who has been very ill with pneumonia, is now convalescing.

James Smith, of Elmwood place, who has been visiting out-of-town since Christmas, has returned home.

Harry K. Tetsuka, of Belvidere avenue, has purchased the large property adjoining his present residence and may decide to build a home for his occupancy.

Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of East Front street, who was called south several weeks ago by the serious illness of her mother, has not yet returned. Her mother's condition practically remains unchanged.

P. J. McAndrews, of North avenue, has so far recovered from his recent very serious attack of paralysis as to be able to be about on Saturday. During his illness his many friends have aided him by deeds and cheering words to regain his health.

H. Russell Voorhees, a member of the advertising firm of Voorhees & Co., New York City, is away on a business trip through New York State. He is at present in Troy, N. Y., stopping at the Hotel Rensselaer. Mr. Voorhees' home is on Carlton avenue, Plainfield.

Newark Priest Temporary Assistant.

Rev. Father William Smith, of Newak, has been appointed by Bishop O'Connor as temporary assistant at St. Mary's church. He will serve under Father Delehanty until a permanent successor to Father Egan has been appointed. During all this week the mission services at the church will be in charge of the Paulist Fathers and the attendance so far have been overwhelmingly large. The church extends a special invitation to non-Catholics to attend.

LITERARY.

The "personal equation" is strong in the March number of The Booklovers Magazine. A large proportion of the articles deal with striking personalities in varied and interesting ways, partly biographical, partly critical, and by means of the interview. All of them are fully illustrated. Among the most notable articles of this stamp is "Religion in the Novel," by Hall Caine, who describes and defends his use of religious themes in the novel and makes a strong plea for the novel as an ethical force. Joseph M. Rogers' article on "Henry Watterson" is a most charming character sketch of a peculiar and fascinating figure in our politico-literary world. The interview with Dr. Doyen, the cancer expert of Paris, which is recorded at length by Frederic Lees, will be read with the greatest interest as the first authoritative statement made for publication by the great specialist who, after investigations covering twenty-five years, claims to have discovered the specific bacillus of cancer and the specific cure of that dread disease by means of vaccination.

Stories, descriptive articles and drawings by several San Franciscans appear in Sunset Magazine for March, which is an unusually attractive number of this wide-awake western magazine. Among the local contributors are noted Maryyard Dixon, V. J. Waterhouse, Dr. Alfred Emerson, John Hamilton Gilmour, J. U. Simpson, John D. McGillivray, Wallace Everett, Charles K. Field, Professor Alexander McAdie, Gelett Burgess, Albert Bancroft (Mrs. James Steele Reid), T. Wesley Wright and Isabel Fraser. Here, also Dr. A. Emerson, formerly of Berkeley, now of the Chicago Art Institute, tells for the first time the interesting story of California's Etruscan Museum. Professor McAdie, of the United States Weather Bureau, tells of the method by which the world is weighed; Mrs. Mary L. Cheney, appointment secretary of the University of California, tells of the superiority of the California high school system over that of Massachusetts, and E. S. Harrison writes of the railways and reindeer of Alaska.

Recreation, the well-known New York Sportsman's Magazine, has passed into new hands and will, in future, be published by William E. Annis, formerly of "Success." Dan Beard, the veteran sportsman, author, lecturer and artist, will be the new editor. In the preliminary announcement of the new management, promise is made of a continuance of the fight for game and fish protection, the conservation of the forests and the better administration of the game laws. A number of new editorial features are included in the March number, which has just been issued, among them being a striking series of photographs of anglers at work, in every section of the United States. There are a great many well-written stories of the forest, the field and the stream, with many hints for the users of rod and reel. The subscription price of the magazine will remain the same, $1 a year.

Conference Not Concerning Reed.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley said today that the name of former Senator Charles A. Reed was not mentioned at his meeting with Col. Joseph Frelinghuysen, Republican chairman of Somerset County, in New York on Saturday. Mayor Smalley did not enter into the report that peace overtures were being made, but stated that he saw Mr. Frelinghuysen on business. Senator Reed's name is coupled with the Somerset County judgeship. Mayor Smalley says the Senator does not want the position. The conference in question took place at the New York Athletic Club, and it is reported that there were some political bouts before adjournment.

Dill for Judge.

Friends of James B. Dill, the corporation lawyer, of Pine street, Manhattan, who resides in East Orange, are urging his appointment as a Justice of the New Jersey Court of Errors in the place of Justice Van Voorhees, resigned, but he has not yet consented to be a candidate. His income as a lawyer is estimated at from $250,000 to $300,000 a year. Should he go on the bench it would necessarily limit his private practice.

Memorial Service Date.

It has not yet been decided whether the memorial service for Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes will be held on Tuesday, March 28, or Thursday, March 30, but it will undoubtedly be held on one of those two dates. Those in charge of the plans will have a conference in a short time to decide the matter.

Dancing Teacher Made Defendant.

Ira C. Andrews, who has been conducting a dancing class in this city, has been served with divorce papers through proceedings brought by his wife, a resident of Millville. Andrews is now in Newark where was located by sheriff's officers. He is well known in Plainfield having taught classes in dancing for several seasons.

TRUST CO.'S STRUCTURE

Preparing to Tear Down Old Buildings.

BIG IMPROVEMENT

Concern's Home to be One Story High—Driveways to the Building.

Another important step toward the commencement of the work of erecting a building for The Plainfield Trust Company at Park avenue and West Second street, was taken Friday, when the company sold to Alex. Kane the old frame structures extending from the corner up to the brick building formerly occupied by Charles Schans, the saloonkeeper. His bid for the buildings was accepted and he has been given twenty days in which to remove the same. The frontage on Park avenue is about 200 feet and there is a depth of sixty feet, covering the ground that will be occupied by The Plainfield Trust Company.

The plans for the handsome new structure are about completed and those who have seen them declare that the building will be one of the finest in the State. It will be but one story high, but it will contain the very latest improvements for a structure of its character. One very important feature in this improvement will be the arrangement of the grounds about the building. There will be a driveway approaching the structure from Second street and this will continue in a semi-circle to Park avenue, practically making a continuous driveway about the bank. It is proposed to have the building free and clear from all adjoining property and a sufficient amount of ground will be left to provide for this.

The bank will be set back far enough to allow for the proposed widening of Park avenue on the south side, also for the proposed side line on West Second street, all of which will show the building off to better advantage.

Mr. Kane also has an option on the remaining portion of the old property extending from and including the brick building formerly occupied by Mr. Schans up to the Boice, Runyon & Co. property, but he has not closed the deal for it yet. He hopes to secure these buildings soon so that he can remove them all at the same time. The materials in the buildings thus far purchased by Mr. Kane have been sold by him to builders who will use them in various houses now in course of construction about the city, and he has had no trouble in disposing of his property.

The work of demolishing the old buildings will commence at once and pushed forward as rapidly as possible. The Plainfield Trust Company is now particularly anxious to have the corner cleared so that the new work may be started soon. With favorable weather and no other obstacles, the company hopes to occupy its new home during the latter part of the summer or early fall.

The other propery owned by Charles W. McCutchen will be improved a little later, there being no urgent need for a change at present. However, he expects to commence building during the spring or early part of the summer. Plans for the new buildings are now being prepared and as soon as completed estimates will be obtained.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB AGAIN ON THE RUN

DISCUSS PLANS FOR RACE MEET IN MAY.

After a vacation of over two months, the members of the Watchung Hunt Club enjoyed a chase Saturday afternoon, the first in which they have been able to participate since the heavy snow made the meadows impassable. After a short ride, beginning at the Netherwood Hotel, the group of horsemen returned to the kennels, where they held a business meeting.

The plans for a race meet were discussed, and though no definite decision was made, there will undoubtedly be a meet sometime in May. The meet will include the usual steeplechase feature, and will be conducted at the club's grounds on Hillside avenue. The date suggested was May 13.

Those who met for the consideration of the race meet, and who participated in the ride were Miss Leila Cruikshank, Miss Noe, Miss Bourne, of Cranford; George S. King, C. R. S. Bellows, Mr. Lentz, of Newark; C. A. Ubebbaare and Dr. Knott.

G. O. Keller does the cleaning and dying for the most fastidious people. He has the best patronage because of the high grade of work which he has done in this city for years. He has recently changed the location of his store, but will be found a few doors below.

PLEAS FOR THE INDIANS

Mrs. Alfred R. Page Tells of Work Among Commanchees.

INTERESTING ADDRESS

The Red Men, Themselves. Mrs. Page Says, Ask for a Church From Their Christian Friends.

A graphic description, in all respects interesting, and at times pathetic, was Mrs. Alfred R. Page's story of the work among the Comanche Indians, at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning. So vivid was Mrs. Page's address and so well chosen were her words that the listener felt himself transported to the Indian village, bristling with closely crowded tepees, and could see for himself, as Mrs. Page very beautifully described, the circles of blanketed Comanches crouching in the dim light between sun set and moon rise, listening to the words of the Gospel, near Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Page's address, which was virtually a plea from the Indian himself, was told in such an attractive manner that not a word was lost and she displayed an interest, and a depth of feeling, which completely won her hearers. Mrs. Page described how, by the conversion of one Indian girl, a chief's daughter, at the Government school, the whole family was brought to Christ, though for a time they stood alone in their tribe. A particularly interesting account was Mrs. Page's story of the conversion of one decidedly wicked and stubborn chief. Having resisted for years and lived a life full of evil, the chief, when forty years old, decided to accept the religion of the white man. He gave as his reason the fact that, as three Christian Indians stood out against the whole tribe for two years, there must be something more in the white man's religion than in the Indian's. The chief, Pericooic, was taught the story of Jesus, and soon after at a meeting of the Indians, in the presence of the Christian teacher, he was the means of converting seventy other Indians by a public confession of his sins, and a profession to live a Christian life.

Probably the most pathetic passage in Mrs. Page's talk was her presentation word for word, illustrated in the sign language, of this same chief's plea for the Indian children. The substance of the Red Man's plea was that he was sure that God loved the Indian and his children as well as he loves the white man and his children, and for that reason he begged the children of his tribe to learn of Jesus, to be taught to write and to read. Above all he sought for the opportunity of salvation from the white man. One of the first pleas made by the chief by means of sign language was for a church edifice. The Government has donated 160 acres of land for the purpose and Mrs. Page has raised over two-thirds of the necessary $3,000 for its construction. Trinity's contribution will be nearly $100, estimating on the pledges made yesterday.

Mrs. Page said that this is the only case in the history of the world when a nation has come to Christians with the request for salvation. "This honor," the speaker said, "belongs particularly to the Reformed church and it is the duty and privilege of the church to see that the Indians are given the opportunity which they so much need, and for which they ask."

FIRED UPON BURGLARS.

Two Homes in Westfield Robbed and a Bull Terrier Killed.

Burglars entered the homes of Joseph Perry, in Mountain avenue, and Charles P. Worth, Walnut street, Westfield, Saturday night. They stole at the Perry house $37, two gold watches and some jewelry. Perry, awakened by the noise of the burglars on leaving, fired at two men running across the lawn. Forty dollars was taken from Worth. In the morning Worth found his valuable bull terrier in the cellar chloroformed and dead.

Police Chief Thomas O'Neil tracked the men to Garwood, one mile east of Westfield where they escaped on a passing coal train.

John Layton Dead.

John Layton, formerly of Plainfield, but for many years a resident of Brooklyn, died at his home on Sunday, March 5, after a long illness. For the past five years he was Eightless. He was seventy-seven years old. He was a son of John Layton, who lived on East Second street, adjoining the entrance to the stable of the Plainfield Oak Company. He was a veteran of the Civil War and a brother of the late Josiah Layton. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Theodore Allen, who lives at Peapack, Somerset County, and who is the last one in the family living at the present time.

WOMEN'S GOLF PLAY HERE MONDAY, MAY 29

ONE-DAY TOURNAMENT AT PLAINFIELD COUNTRY CLUB.

Considerable enthusiasm is being shown in the proposed plan of the clubs in the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association wishing to give one day tournaments for the feminine players and their offers will be snapped up as soon as made. The announcement comes in a formal way from the executive committee, which has already booked the Plainfield Country Club for such a tournament on Monday, May 29.

It is believed that a number of other clubs will offer their clubs for such tournaments. To make the plan the success that the women are working for, there should at least be one tournament of the sort each week between April 24 and the middle of July.

It is easy to arrange an attractive card that will combine both medal and match play for a one-day tournament, so framed that the interest will be kept up for both the class A and B players. To attain the best results no entrance fee should be imposed and the clubs volunteering in the cause should offer a proper series of prizes, as they do in the tournaments for men. The clubs intending to enter the field should communicate at once with the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, so that the full schedule may be prepared at the April meeting.

TRIANGLES DEFEATED.

In Bowling Match With Saturday Night Club of Westfield.

The Triangle Bowling Club was defeated in three straight games by the Saturday Night Club, of Westfield, Saturday night on the former's alleys. The Westfield team had a big margin in all three games and put up a strong steady match.

The Triangles were off their game, rolling under 700 in all three matches. Gilmore, of Westfield, was high man, rolling 210 and making an average of 186. For the Triangles, Koons was high man, though his score was not a remarkably good one. The line up of the two teams follow: Westfield—Decker, Gilmore, Maxson, Kuhn and O. Ortleb; score by games, 815, 680, 838. Triangles—Egan, Neal, Philips and Koons; score by games, 696, 673, 666.

TWO SMALL FIRES.

Children and Matches Cause One; Gas and Matches Another.

Children playing with matches started a fire at the home of Zebedee Freeman on East Front street, near Church, Saturday evening, that caused $75 damage. The department responded quickly and soon had the blaze out.

The department was called out early Sunday afternoon for a gas pipe fire in the basement of one of the old hospital buildings on Muhlenberg place. The pipe had been broken and plugged up with a piece of wood. Boys smoking in the basement pulled this out and one of them striking a match to light a cigarette set the gas on fire. The damage will not exceed $5.

WOMEN'S CLUB EVENT

Monday Afternoon Club Represented at Westfield Affair.

MRS. HALL SPOKE

Metuchen, Cranford and Roselle Delegates Attended—Tea Followed.

The Women's Club, of Westfield, celebrated its tenth anniversary Monday afternoon. Mrs. Robert Lowry, the president, and Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, represented the Monday Afternoon Club, of Plainfield. The clubs of Metuchen, Cranford and Roselle also sent delegates to the meeting, which was a very enjoyable one.

Mrs. Robinson, president of the Westfield Club, presided gracefully over the occasion, and received, on behalf of the society, an ivory gavel bound with silver, the gift of former presidents. The fact that this club has existed ten years without a gavel, shows that the members possess the spirit of order to a marked degree. Mrs. Anderson, of Newburg, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, made an interesting address, telling of the work of the State body.

As Mrs Lowery was detained by the funeral of Dr. Yerkes, until a late hour, Mrs. Hall spoke for the Plainfield Club, and expressed her gratification at the growth and progress of the Westfield Society. She reminded her hearers that the Monday Afternoon Club of Plainfield, being older than the Federation, the Westfield and the Jersey City clubs, had had the honor of contributing certain features to the constitutions of these bodies. Mrs. Hall was at that time, chairman of correspondence of the General Federation for New Jersey.

Mrs. Bance read an excellent paper on "American Women of the Eighteenth Century," which was supplemented by a loan exhibit of dresses, silver, crockery, etc., of that period.

A social hour, with tea and refreshments, including a handsome birthday cake, followed. There were lilies-of-the-valley, violets and potted plants decorating the assembly room, the meeting being held in the Presbyterian chapel. Letters from former presidents were read. The Westfield Woman's Club now has one hundred members, and is a flourishing organization. In addition to their literary work, the women are interested especially in the public schools of the town, and in the public library.

CIRCUS ON APRIL 5.

Y. M. C. A. Costume Event to Take Place on That Date.

The date for the first annual circus at the Y. M. C. A. will be Wednesday, April 5. The affair, which will be in charge of the men's class, and in which only Y. M. C. A. members will participate, is for the benefit of the gymnasium fund, the proceeds being set apart for improvements in that section of the building.

Among the attractions at the circus will be the following features: Pyramid squad work, special costume drills, elephant leaping, tumbling, clown attractions, lightning fencing, broadsword work, torch swinging and blindfold boxing. The committee in charge of the event consists of Stryker Hoagland, W. F. Cullingworth, H. Hansen, W. T. Bentliff, E. W. Pioneer and Walter McNaughton.

QUIETLY WEDDED.

Simple Ceremony Unites Francis Whitley and Mrs. E. Watters.

In the presence only of near relatives, Francis Whitley, of Essex street, and Mrs. Elizabeth Watters, of New York, were married Saturday night at the home of the former's son, George Whitley, of West Fifth street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George Moasey, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church and there were no attendants. A brief reception followed after which a supper was served.

The groom is an employe of the Potter Press Company and is widely known in the West End. The couple will make their home on Essex street.

Gun Club's Entry.

At a meeting of the Independent Gun Club, last night, a team consisting of C. W. Leonard, D. E. Gavin and S. S. Adams was appointed to shoot for the silver trophy which is now held by the Freehold club. They will go to Freehold Saturday. A club practice shoot will be held on the Independent range Thursday. The organization is rapidly gaining new members and will soon install a new style trap.

"The Princess" Again Pleases.

The second production of Tennyson's poem, "The Princess," Saturday night, by the juniors of the Plainfield High School, was equally as successful as the first, both with respect to attendance and to acting. The play went off smoothly and was well received.

Edward McLane will again pitch for Fordham College, this season.

MINISTERS PAY TRIBUTE

Pass Resolutions of Respect to the Memory of Dr. Yerkes.

PULPIT UTTERANCES

Prayers for Dead in Many Churches —Held in High Esteem by His Fellow Pastors.

In nearly all the churches Sunday reference was made to the death of Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the venerable pastor-emeritus of the First Baptist church. In the Episcopal churches, the prayer for the dead was said by the officiating clergymen.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association met at the Seventh-Day Baptist church at 2:30 Monday afternoon and adopted these resolutions which were presented by Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace Episcopal church:

"On the close of eighty years of life and forty years of ministry in the First Baptist church of Plainfield, Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes has been called to rest from his labors. Assembled today to attend the funeral of this aged and honest servant of God the Ministers' Association deem it fitting to put on record a memorial minute of their esteemed departed brother, and of their thankfulness to God who has so prolonged his life and his ministry in the church. He was the oldest member of our association, both in appointment of years and of ministerial service, commencing in 1863, when the whole country was convulsed with the horrible throes of the Civil War which was just then at its most terrible height. He must have found a trying time to enter upon a new church work, but trusting firmly in the Captain of his Salvation he knew no fear.

"But in the fulness of his manly and spiritual vigor he gave himself to the work of building up the congregation which had called him. How usefully and lovingly and unsparingly he labored some of us well know. Five years after he came here the present edifice was built and the congregation has steadily grown and prospered until he resigned his pastorate in 1903.

"It was the largest of the ten Baptist churches in this State. So greatly had God blessed the faithful labors of his devoted servant amid all the cares of toils incident to such a charge and under all the honors resulting from the remarkable developements of his work. He ever retained the simplicity and cheerfulness which became the servant and follower of Jesus Christ. His heart and hand were ever ready for every cause that commended itself to his good judgment. Full of labor as long as his strength held out he continued to discharge all the duties of life that were laid upon him to the last and now he rests in peace."

In speaking of Rev. Dr. Yerkes at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, said in part, "When I came to Plainfield eighteen years ago, Dr. Yerkes was one of the first men with whom I became acquainted, and at the outset a sincere friendship existed between us. And ever since I have admired Dr. Yerkes with a deep and profound admiration. A staunch friend and an able preacher, Dr. Yerkes' death has touched the whole community. So like Paul in his life, it was peculiarly appropriate that the worthy servant of God should have died with the Apostle's words on his lips, 'I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God which is in Christ Jesus.'"

At the Sunday-school session of the First Baptist church Sunday afternoon, Charles W. McCutchen paid a high tribute to the Christian character of the late Rev. Dr. Yerkes. The characteristics of Dr. Yerkes calling forth admiration, according to Mr. McCutchen's true estimate, were rare kindness, extraordinary ability and faithful service in every relation of life.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, before preaching his morning sermon, referred impressively to the severe loss which the city, and religious interests thereof had sustained in the death of Rev. Dr. Yerkes. He paid rich tribute to the memory of the departed.

Court House Custodian.

Now that the county court house is nearing completion, the Board of Freeholders is confronted with the problem of appointing a custodian. There are three men named thus far for the position, ex-Sheriff William Halskamper, Captain John Burns, of Elizabeth, and William Westphal, of this city.

Operation Successful.

Miss Beatrice Hedges, daughter of Dr. E. W. Hedges, of Watchung avenue, who was operated upon last week for appendicitis, is convalescing. Owing to her illness, the reception planned by her sister, Miss Leila Hedges, for Saturday afternoon, was postponed.

Miss Margaret Dobeney, of New York, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shirley, of Madison avenue.

CHAMPIONSHIP FOR P.H.S.

In Annual Interscholastic Athletic Meet at Y. M. C. A.

LEAL'S SCHOOL SECOND

Smith and Freeman, of P. H. S., Make the Best Scores—Daniel's Good Work.

Plainfield High School athletes are the scholastic champions of this section for 1905, having won the title in the annual indoor interscholastic athletic meet under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon. The affair was conducted at the association gymnasium and was witnessed by a crowd which filled the galleries and overflowed the main floor.

It was an enthusiastic gathering, all bedecked with school colors representing the various contestants in the meet, Leal's, Westfield High School, North Plainfield High School and Plainfield High School. Promptly at 2:30, the officials announced the high jump, which was the first event and which started the points a-rolling for P. H. S. Her athletes took all three places, securing nine points thereby. Freeman and Smith did the work, their ability being largely responsible for the High School winning the cup.

Daniel, of Leal's School, was the best man for his team, while Jewett, Wyckoff and Perkins figured prominently in several events. Of the borough athletes, Steiner was the best man, making all the points for his school. The Westfield team had a strong man in the person of Welsh, who won considerable applause by his creditable work.

Leal's School was a close second in the meet, the contest with the P. H. S. boys being a hot one from start to finish. Westfield finished third, with the borough boys pulling up in the rear. The standing by teams was as follows: Plainfield High School, 32; Leal's School, 26; Westfield, 10; North Plainfield High School, 4

The individual standing was as follows: Smith, 13; Freeman, 11; Daniel, 10; Burt, 6; Welsh, 4; Jewett and Steiner, 3; Perkins, 2; Collier, Russell and Wyckoff, 1.

The following was the order of events and the winners in each:

NARROWLY ESCAPED A HORRIBLE DEATH

LUSH'S ARM AND SHOULDER WERE PLUNGED INTO BOILING FAT.

While removing the lid from a caldron containing boiling fat at Theodore Glasier's factory, Saturday, Herman Lush, an employe, lost his balance and his left arm and shoulder were plunged into the seething mass.

Other workmen pulled him away and hurried him to Muhlenberg Hospital, where it was necessary to cut off his clothing in order to reach the burns.

They are serious but the man's recovery is assured.

REV. DR. YERKES' FUNERAL

Many Fellow Ministers From Here and Elsewhere Present.

CHURCH THRONGED

Mayor Buckle Represented the City—Prominent Citizens in the Congregation.

The high esteem in which the Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes was held in this community found true expression Monday afternoon in the great outpouring of people of all stations in life at the funeral services held at the First Baptist church, of which he was the beloved pastor for nearly forty years. The laity and the clergy of all denominations united in one common bond of sympathy and love for one who had been so closely identified with all that was good and best in the religious interests of Plainfield. The services were held at 3:15 o'clock, but fully an hour before that time the large edifice was filled with mourners and when the cortege arrived at the church, there was scarcely standing room for all those who wished to be present. Not only did the pastors in this city attend, but there were many Baptist ministers from distant and nearby cities, who had known Dr. Yerkes for years and had always admired him for his sterling qualities and exemplary life.

The funeral cortege in entering the church was preceded by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor, and President Rush Rhees, of Rochester University, a life-long friend of the departed pastor. As they proceeded up the aisle, Dr. Chambliss read aloud appropriate Scripture selections, while Howard Case, at the organ, rendered an impressive dirge. Following the pastor and President Rhees, were the honorary pall-bearers, Frank W. Jones, George F. Brown, L. W. Randolph, E. L. Benny, H. E. Needham, Dr. J. B. Probasco and George H. Batchelor, deacons of the church, and behind them the remains were borne on the shoulders of six porters. The bier was almost covered with beautiful flowers and wreaths of galax leaves.

The members of the Plainfield Ministers' Association, of which Dr. Yerkes was an honored member, entered in a body. They included the Revs. Dr. A. H. Lewis, Erskine M. Rodman, Charles E. Herring, Theophilus Bond, George H. Whitney, J. R. Bryan, J. P. Taylor, Cornelius Schenck, W. C. Hubbell, L. R. Howard, F. D. Tilden, J. S. Zelie, W. C. Snodgrass, John W. Musson, A. E. Finn, George Mooney, Edward Love, L. T. Lindholm, George B. Shaw and Charles L. Goodrich.

Then followed the immediate relatives and close personal friends who occupied seats reserved for them in the front part of the edifice.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, was in charge of the service, which was simple and impressive. The full choir of twenty-one voices opened the service with a sweet rendition of Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." There was a short prayer by Dr. Chambliss, followed with the singing of "How Firm a Foundation," by the choir, and after the reading of Scripture selections by the pastor, the choir sang "My Peace I Leave With You." There was additional Scripture reading and a prayer by President Rhees. In an earnest petition to Almighty God, he referred to the beautiful life just closed and he invoked divine blessing on the bereaved family, as well as pastor and people. At the conclusion of the prayer, the choir sang "Rock of Ages."

While the mourners were seated the remains were borne to the vestibule of the church and there all were given an opportunity as they passed out to take a final look on the face of the departed one.

In the profusion of floral tributes was to be seen another strong testimonial of love and esteem. The pulpit platform was completely hidden by a wealth of flowers. From the trustees of the church there were American Beauty roses and lilies-of-the-valley in two large vases. The deacons gave a standing wreath of white roses and galax leaves, while from the Sunday-school there was an open Bible of violets and white flowers inside of which was a book mark with the words "God is Love" inscribed thereon. From the primary department there was a basket of sweet peas and pink roses, and the Men's Club gave a large set piece of Easter lilies and violets, on top of which there rested a white dove. The tribute from the family comprised a galax wreath with white roses and violets, tied with violet chiffon ribbon. A tribute of lilies and pink roses was received from the Mt. Olive Baptist church, and in addition there were a number of personal tributes, all of which were surrounded with beautiful palms.

In addition to those already mentioned as being present there were these well-known divines: Rev. Dr. Robert Stuart MacArthur, of Calvary Baptist church, New York; Rev. Dr. T. E. Vassar, of Elizabeth; Rev. Dr. Stoddiford, of Trenton; Rev. C. J. Greenwood, of the Baptist church, Westfield; Rev. G. M. Shott, of Scotch Plains; Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church, New Market; Rev. Edward Burr, of the Baptist church, Montclair; Rev. A. G. Lawson, of the Clinton Avenue Baptist church, Newark; Rev. C. H. Dodd, of the Peddie Memorial Baptist church, Newark, and Rev. W. G. Fennell, of the South Baptist church, Newark, and Rev. W. E. Honeyman and Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of this city. There were also present Mayor James F. Buckle and many other officials of this city, as well as those prominent in the business of this city and New York.

Those who served as ushers were Dr. Norman H. Probasco, John G. MacLaughlin, Samuel Case, Edgar I. Serrell, J. H. Crane, J. Herbert Case, N. Douglass Drake and Fred Armstrong.

The remains were conveyed to Hillside cemetery and placed in the receiving vault. They will be interred later in a family plot.

FANWOOD SIDEWALKS GIVE MUCH TROUBLE

FLAG PAVEMENTS ARE FOUND TO BE UNSATISFACTORY.

The word sidewalks mentioned, to a resident of Fanwood borough at the present time, can make more trouble than "a bull in a china closet" cou'd in a month's time. The reason for it is the residents claim that the expenditure last fall of $3,300 for a uniform grade of sidewalks in the borough was a mistake. For a number of years the borough residents, who are nearly to a man commuters, who have come from New York to establish suburban homes, have wrestled with the question of sidewalks.

The borough was enjoying other improvements, fine macadam roads, electric lights, as well as gas, city water and even street sprinkling during the summer months, but the walks in many places were wretched and the commuters were obliged to go to business each morning with the "Jersey mud" stamp upon their feet. This led to the question of sidewalk improvement, but opposition developed and for several years the question was an issue, even at the elections. Last summer, the Common Council, realizing the need of an improvement, gave a public hearing upon the matter before passing the ordinance which has raised the trouble. The taxpayers and Council met and the question was thoroughly discussed. Some wanted asphalt pavement, others flagging and still others believed Pennsylvania slag would make the best walk. Estimates were read and it was finally agreed to use slag.

Then the Council passed an ordinance compelling each property owner benefitted to pay his proportionate share towards the laying of the walk. The only clause being left to the owners being that slag or some other material equally as good should be used. None took advantage of this clause, however, although some wish they had now. The work was done under the direction of the borough and when completed it was thought that a most troublesome question had at last been settled. Money was borrowed on three and six-month notes to meet the improvement, as the assessment against the property owners could not be collected until the annual taxes for the year were gathered. Many put up a kick when they found upon receiving their tax bills that improvements come high, but this was nothing to what it is now. During the fall and winter months the walk in many places washed out and had to be repaired. Now that winter is breaking up the slag is also showing signs of life by presenting a spongy and elastic body which is decidedly uncomfortable for pedestrians and a very sore spot to the taxpayers.

As the matter of good walks in Fanwood still seems to be a question and one that would not doubt had been heard at the spring election had the new law abolishing it failed to pass.

CROSS GETS JUDGESHIP

President Sends Union Co. Man's Name to Senate.

KEAN IS SPONSER

State Senator to Have the U. S. District Court Judgeship, Recently Created—His Career.

President Roosevelt has sent to the Senate the name of State Senator Joseph Cross, of Union county, to be United States District Court Judge for the district of New Jersey. Congress has just passed a measure giving an additional judgeship to New Jersey, Judge Lanning being the sole incumbent at present. United States Senator John Kean presented Senator Cross's name to the President and his action met with hearty approval.

Joseph Cross was born near Morristown December 29, 1843, and graduated from Princeton College in 1865. Immediately thereafter he began the study of law in the office of William J. Magie, Esq. He also took a course of lectures at Columbia College Law School, and was admitted to practice as an attorney-at-law in June, 1868, and as counsellor in 1871.

Upon his admission to the bar he was taken into partnership by his preceptor, under the firm name of Magie & Cross, which relation existed until 1880, when Mr. Magie was appointed one of the justices of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Cross has resided in Elizabeth since the spring of 1858, and has always been a staunch Republican. In 1888 he was appointed a judge of the District Court of the city of Elizabeth, but in common with all the other Republican District Court judges of the State was legislated out of office in April, 1891.

Mr. Cross was elected a member of the Assembly from Union County in the fall of 1893, and again in 1894. When Speaker Holt resigned the chair, May 26, 1894, Mr. Cross was chosen his successor for the remainder of the session. In 1895 he was re-elected Speaker by the unanimous vote of his Republican colleagues. In November, 1898, he was elected Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Senator Voorhees, who had been nominated as the Republican candidate for Governor.

He was re-elected to the Senate for a full term in 1899, and again in 1902. Last year he was the leader of his party on the floor of the Senate when he served as chairman of several of the most important committees. This year he was elected President of the Senate.

It is reported that City Treasurer William F. Arnold rested comfortably last night and this morning and that the family feel slightly encouraged concerning his condition.

MRS. FRAZER ON JAPAN

Wife of Former British Envoy Talks on Court Life.

A SOCIETY AUDIENCE

Lecturer a Sister of F. Marion Crawford and a Well-Known Authoress.

The lecture room of Truell Inn was filled to overflowing into the halls on either side, Thursday afternoon, by an audience representing the wealth and culture of Plainfield society. They had gathered to hear the first lecture in Mrs. Hall's course of entertainments, delivered by Mrs. Hugh Fraser, a sister of Marion Crawford, and herself a well-known writer. Mrs. Fraser is tall, slender and graceful, and possesses a magnetic personality which at once captivated her hearers. Her voice is beautifully modulated, being clear and distinct, yet soft and sweet.

The title of her lecture was "Sword and Cherry Blossom" and she explained how truly these emblems represent the spirit of Japan.

"A nation that worshipped the sword as its god, took beauty for its guardian angel—and in all its long stormy history, the one has never belied the other."

Mrs. Fraser illustrated this by the story of a young officer, Captain Migamoto, who has won signal distinction in a series of brilliant actions in the present war. He was at one time reported to be dead, when even the young Royal Princess grieved deeply for the fate of so brave a man. This proved a false report however, and a young Japanese maiden, who perhaps was in love with the gallant captain, sent him a beautiful branch covered with artificial cherry blossoms, fashioned by her own hands, as only a Japanese can do such dainty work. This gift showed him that grateful hearts at home, were praying for his welfare. When Captain Migamoto was badly wounded in the frightful battle of Nan-Shan, the maiden sent him a gift of sterner meaning—a real cherry branch, bare of flowers. He wrote in reply that he was glad she understood what was in his heart, "when a soldier's duty is done, he must be content to drop from life as the flower from the branch, leaving not so much as a memory behind. * * * When his hour should come, he would remember the lesson of the cherry blossom."

As the wife of thee British envoy to the Court of Japan, Mrs. Fraser had rare opportunities of seeing court ceremonies. She described to her audience, the occasion of the silver wedding of the Empress.

"When I went to congratulate her on the day of her silver wedding, it was a glorious morning, and all the fountains of the Palace courts were singing in the sun. Plum and cherry blossoms blew about in clouds, and came straying into the great rooms, whose walls, sheets of glass, had all been thrown open to the sunshine and the flowers. The Empress was dressed in silver brocade, with rivers of diamonds rippling on its folds, a tall crown of diamonds on her hair, and in her eyes, the happiest smile I had ever seen there. Beside her was the Emperor, etc."

Mrs. Fraser's poetic temperament puts her in thorough sympathy with the Japanese, and enables her to interpret them as few Occidentals can.

Among her published works on the Island Kingdom are "A Diplomatist's Wife in Japan," "The Custom of the Country," tales of new Japan, giving the modern spirit of the country." "Warner's Hunting," and a book of Japanese stories, "The Slashing of the Sword," which has been published recently here and in England, and has been highly successful.

At the close of the lecture, Mrs. Fraser and Mrs. Hall were both warmly congratulated on the success of the afternoon. The next lecture in the series will be given by Mrs. Ward Howe Elliott, on Thursday afternoon, March 16, subject: "Social Life in Rome." So many persons are desirous of attending the course that Mrs. Hall has been advised to have the remaining three lectures given at the Unitarian church, next door to Truell Inn.

ISSUES HANDICAP SHEETS

Leighton Calkins Distributes Them Among Golf Clubs.

A NEW SYSTEM

Adopted by Metropolitan Association to Which Plainfield Belongs.

The clubs belonging to the Metropolitan Golf Association, with which the Plainfield Country Club is affiliated, will be expected to report the handicaps of their members by April 1. Leighton Calkins, chairman of the handicap committee, has just issued the official sheets upon which these reports are to be made. Every club is required to base the handicaps of its members on the par score of its course, and this score is to be reckoned according to the official distances. For holes up to 200 yards in length the official par score is 3; from 201 to 250 yards, 3½; 251 to 375, 4, 376 to 450, 4½; 451 to 500, 5; 501 to 550, 5½, and for all holes measuring more than 550 yards the par is 6. By adding the par for each hole gives the total par score of the links.

A new system is to be adopted this year of reckoning the handicaps in accordance with par. Instead of taking the exact difference between par and the average of the three best scores of a player to determine that player's handicap, as has been the custom heretofore, that difference is to represent the handicap of the scratch men and men with very low handicaps.

For example, if part of the course is 75 and the average of a player's best three scores is 75, under the old system he was rated at scratch; if his average was 80, he received a handicap of 5.

Under the new system, to be tried this season, the poorer the player the more his handicap will be shaved down from the figure representing the difference between his average score and par.

A man whose average of best three scores is 80, would, under this scheme, received a handicap of 4, instead of 5, presupposing that 5 is the difference between his averge score and a par value of 75.

This is on the theory that one stroke is a fair measure of the improvement that a player is likely to make as against the better player, whose average score is 75, and who is, therefore, rated at scratch. In other words, this plan is based on the supposition that a poor player, with fair practice, is likely to improve his game more quickly than the man who is already able to do the course in close to par figures.

For example, a man whose average is 97 would get a handicap of 17, instead of 22, the five strokes representing the shaving which the handicap committee, believes proper from the exact difference between 97 and 75. That is, the man doing the course in 97, is likely to improve his game five strokes, if he plays with any regularity, while it is hardly probable that the man whose average is 75 would improve his game a similar number of strokes.

It is this advantage of the poor player over the good one which has not been taken into consideration before and which Mr. Calkins now plans to reckon with. The tables prepared by Mr. Calkins show at a glance the proper handicap for each player. The instructions are explicit, and each club will be expected to submit the ratings of its members in accordance with them. The handicaps thus obtained will be used in admitting entries to the approaching championship under the auspices of the Metropolitan Golf Association.

MINUTE MAN MEMORIAL.

Design of Battle of Elizabethtown Statue Has Been Chosen.

The State, in deciding upon an appropriate monument to erect in commemoration of the Battle of Elizabethtown, which will be dedicated on June 6, with a celebration and ceremonies by the citizens of Elizabeth, has selected the design of a Minute Man a little over six feet tall. The statute will stand erect upon a pedestal, about eight feet in height and will be of granite, cut by Canfield, the sculptor, of New York. He designed most of the statuary used in the Dewey celebration in New York. The cost of the monument to be erected in Elizabeth will be $2,500.

The monument will be placed in Union Square. Charles H. K. Halsey, of the committee appointed by Governor Murphy to carry out this matter, refused to say anything about the design of the monument yesterday beyond stating that the architect and contractor were in Elizabeth this week and looked over the site.

The entire monument will be cut from granite to be brought from Rutland, Vt. Work has already been started upon the piece of statuary and further plans and details will be announced later.

NEITHER STONE NOR METAL

Uralite May Be Cut Like Wood, But Is Fireproof—Is a New Invention.

Have you ever heard of uralite asks the Dietic and Hygienic Magazine. Probably not, for it is a new invention. Yet it is well worthy of your notice, since it is superior to anything of the kind that has yet been produced. It is the invention of a Russian artillery officer and chemist, named Imschenetzky, and its claim to distinction lies in the fact that it is absolutely fireproof. Uralite is composed of asbestos fiber, with a proper proportion of silicate, bicarbonate of soda and chalk, and it is supplied in various finishes and colors, according to the purpose for which it is intended. In a soft form a sheet of uralite is like an asbestos board when hard it resembles finely sawn stone and has a metallic ring. Besides a nonconductor of heat and electricity it is practically waterproof (and may be made entirely so by paint), and is not effected either by atmospheric influences or by the acids contained in smoke in large towns, which rapidly destroy galvanized iron. Moreover, it can be cut by the usual carpenters' or woodworkers' tools; it can be veneered to form paneling for walls or partitions; it can be painted, grained, polished and glued together like wood; it does not split when a nail is driven through it; it is not affected when exposed to moisture or great changes of temperature, and it can be given any desired color either during the process of manufacture or afterward.

VOLUMES EXCEL IN PRICE.

Book in a London Salesroom Found to Bring $20,000—Cost of Others.

In one of the London salesooms the other day a book was sold for $20,000. It was a Latin psalter of 1459 and the price was the second highest ever given in auction for a printed book. The record price for a book printed in movable types is $24,750, given in the same rooms December 19, 1884, at the Sir John Hayford Thorold sale, for another and slightly finer copy of the same work, the second book printed with a date at the world's first printing press. The last-mentioned copy remained in the possession of its purchaser, the late Bernard Quaritch, for a long period, and was finally sold after his death to J. Pierpont Morgan. Twelve copies, perfect and imperfect, are now known of the psalter of 1459, of which an edition of 20 copies was printed by Faust and Schoffer at the expense of the Carthusian monastery of St. James, near Mentz. The copy just sold for $20,000 was discovered in 1887 in the library of Count Wilhelm von Westerholt-Gysenberg, in the castle of Freienthun, near Klagenfurt, in Carinthia. It came into that family's possession on the dissolution of the monastery of St. James in 1781.

TERRORS OF FIRING LINE.

Screech of Death-Dealing Shells Declared to Be an Awful Strain on the Nerves.

Only those who lie in the firing line and hear the constant screech of the shells as they cleave their way through the air above know the true sounds of modern war, says World's Work. The whiplike smack of the bursting shell, the swish of the scattering bullets are nothing to the mocking screech of these messengers of death as they pursue each other as if in competition to complete the awful object of their hideous mission. The whole welkin is discordant with their tumult; you feel the rush of misplaced air, splinters sing in your ears, the earth is in constant tremble with the violence of the discharge; you feel it pulsate against your cheek pressed to the moist mud of the parapet and then a bullet saps the life blood of the comrade whose elbow has touched yours day and night for 40 hours. There is a limit to human endurance in these straits.

WHY DONKEYS DO NOT SHY

Different from Horses Because of Their Early Environment—Food Also a Factor.

The ancestors of the horse were accustomed to roam over the plains, where every tuft of grass or bush might conceal an enemy waiting to spring upon them. Under these circumstances they must often have saved their lives by starting quickly back or jumping to one side when they came without warning upon some strange object. This is a habit which has not left the animal, even after long years of domestication. On the other hand, the donkey is descended from animals which lived among the hills, where there were precipices and dangerous declivities, and from these conditions resulted his slowness and sure-footedness. His ancestors were not so liable to sudden attacks from wild beasts and snakes. Besides, sudden and wild starts would have been positively dangerous to them. Consequently they learned to avoid the very trick which has been so useful to the horse. The habit of eating thistles, which is peculiar alone to the donkey, is also descended from these ancestors. In the dry, barren localities which they inhabited there was often little food, hence they learned to eat hard, dry and even prickly plants when there was nothing else.

Great Cantilever Bridge.

The cantilever bridge which is being constructed across the St. Lawrence river, at Quebec, will contain the longest span ever built in any bridge. There will be two shore arms, each 500 feet long, two approach spans of 210 feet each, and the great central span of 1,800 feet, which is 90 feet more than the length of the central span of the famous bridge over the Firth of Forth, in Scotland.

CORNER MEXICO SALT

CHICAGO CONCERN GETS FIRM HOLD ON MARKET.

Company Establishes Mine for Lead and Silver, But Surprising Wealth of Rich Brine Is Brought to Light.

Mexico's salt market, which up to a short time ago paid an enormous price for the commodity, is now in control of a clique of Chicagoans, who hold shares in a company known one time as a mining concern. Rough salt in Mexico once cost as much as $80 per ton, while its price in the United States was $3.50 for the same amount; but the discovery of the new industry in the southern republic has brought into the hands of the Americans the power to reduce the price and besides corner the entire sale in Mexico.

The salt is not mined as is generally the case in this country, but is pumped out of the earth in the shape of brine spread out in great tanks and with the aid of the sun the water is evaporated leaving the much-desired article. The salt is 99.59 per cent. pure chloride of sodium and no article can be produced which comes any nearer the absolute standard of purity.

The demand for salt in Mexico with its 15,000,000 inhabitants is so great that previous to the discovery it was impossible to supply the demand from the home product. At present the Chicago concern, interested in the mine, is receiving for its product $35 per ton in the bulk.

A story of surpassing interest marks the discovery and development of the industry. About five years ago La Minita mines, in the district of Vallecillo, Nuevo Leon, Mexico, were producing lead and silver ore, which commanded a high price at the smelteries at Monterey, about 80 miles distant. Here the ore brought about $45 per ton. When the miners reached a depth of 100 feet water began to appear in the shafts and despite all measures it was impossible to get rid of enough of the fluid to permit the continuance of operations, thus resulting in the abandonment of the enterprise. The water possessed a salty taste and when chemically analyzed was found to contain over 18 per cent. of salt. At once the interested parties were notified by telegraph and little time was wasted in forming a company for producing salt, for the organizers realized the enormous value of the article in the southern republic.

Few industries could be found which possess such great advantages for labor-saving and at the same time commanding the steep price as that of producing salt, as it is carried on in this Mexican mine. From the United States to Mexico there is a protective tariff of $22.50 a ton on the product, thus making the actual cost of a ton nearly $80. Then another fact, nature furnishes in the wind and sun two agents which perform nearly the entire work.

The water containing the salt is pumped from the mine by a wind-mill pump and after being passed to the tanks, Old Sol's task is to evaporate the fluid, thus leaving the rough article. Practically the only labor that is needed is that necessary to deposit the salt in the storehouse and the best may be had for 40 to 75 cents per day.

It is hard for one unfamiliar with the workings of the industry, to realize that so much salt may be produced from water, but the figures show that the amount is really very large. From one gallon of the brine one and one-half pounds of salt is produced. In 24 hours a tank 20x60 feet full of brine will produce two and one-quarter tons of salt.

Of late the industry has become a "double-header." The excessive flow of water which was noticed at first seems to have been checked and now the flow is steady, thus making it possible with the machinery on hand to mine the silver and lead ores with but little difficulty. Many persons who have directed their attention to this enterprise in particular at one time, declared that soon the density of the brine would drop and the flow fall off, but for three years the water has risen to the surface with as much consistency as at first and the percentage has always remained at 18, not even the slightest deviation ever being noticed.

GET SUNDAY PAPERS.

Trolley Lines Aid Newsdealers in Extending Business in Country Hitherto Isolated.

The circulation of Sunday newspapers has largely increased among the farmers of territory near Chicago. The rural mail carriers make no deliveries on Sunday, but many of the enterprising newsdealers who get their papers early in the day have Sunday country routes where the farm houses are close together. In some instances the Sunday papers are delivered by the trolley lines that run past many of the houses. They run on Sunday as well as on other days, and many farm houses that formerly were cut off from the world on Sunday now spend a portion of the day reading the big papers that they get fresh from the city. The farmers are taking a large amount of reading matter. The rural carriers are doing more and more of this class of business. Not only does the average farmer take his own county paper, in many instances two or three of them, but he subscribes for as many farm magazines and other periodicals. There are few of the soil tillers who are not now taking a daily paper. They have grown to depend upon it with about the same regularity as they want their breakfast, and in some instances they get both pretty close together.

ANIMALS THAT OFTEN FAINT

In Moments of Fear and Exhaustion Cats and Dogs Fall in a Heap as a Person Would.

A little gray dog tumbled headlong into the area of a house in a west end square, says the Baltimore Herald, and the maid who happened to be standing there closed the gate. When the dog saw she was safe from her pursuers—two huge bull terriers—she toppled over in a dead faint. The other servants, who crowded out into the area to help bring the little animal to, derided the assertion, but a veterinary surgeon who finally joined the group said there was nothing preposterous about it. "Of course she fainted," he said. "Lots of animals faint. Cats and dogs and even more stolid animals keel over in moments of fear and exhaustion. In the case of horses the prostration is generally attributed to sunstroke, but quite often they are knocked out by a plain, everyday faint instead of atmospheric excesses. Fowls faint, too, and the birds of the air. In fact, it is hard to find any living creature that doesn't topple over under crucial circumstances."

MICROBE IS A CANNIBAL.

Scientist Declares That the Germs Devour Their Own Kind—Other Facts.

An obliging microbe who devours unobliging microbes is the newest acquisition to the microbe population as discovered by science. A Scotchman named Neilson, who has been resident for some time in Italy, is said to have found this accommodating creature, which lives on all zymotic germs in sewage, and when it has completed its task no longer encumbers the earth but dies and dissolves. Mr. Neilson is said to have invented an automatic biological tank, applicable to dwelling houses of any description, wherein his microbe disports itself by transforming the sewage into odorless, colorless liquid which is perfectly innocuous to human life, and may therefore be safely permitted to flow off into street drains, and thence into rivers. This transformed liquid has been subjected to the public analyst by order of the commune of Florence, and it is pronounced to be clear water but undrinkable.

KNIVES FOR ONE-ARMED.

They Look Like Sickles and Have a Fork at the End—Are an Ingenious Device.

"What is that thing over there?" asked a man on a high stool at a lunch counter. The thing he was pointing at was shaped like a sickle, had a handle, and at the very tip of the blade was a pronged fork.

"That?" said the waiter. "Why, that's a one-armed knife. Ever see one before?" And he passed it over the counter for inspection. "Nearly all restaurants keep them in their stock of cutlery nowadays. You see, the one-armed man can't cut his meat with the same motion that you or I use. He must bear down on his steak or chop, and to make the work easier for him some wise chap invented this sickle-shaped knife with a fork attached. If you'll notice, it is made on the principle of the half circular cutter harness makers use. To be sure, we have to keep them sharp, or their usefulness would be gone."

The Purchase of Wives.

Wives are still obtained by purchase in some parts of Russia. In the district of Kamyshin, on the Volga, for example, this is practically the only way in which marriages are brought about. The price of a pretty girl from a well-to-do family ranges from $100 to $200, and in special cases a much higher sum is obtained. In the villages the lowest price is about $25. It is customary for the fathers of the intending bride and bridegroom to haggle for a long time over the price to be paid for the lady. A young farmer whose father cannot afford to pay for a wife for him need not think of getting married.

Stopping an Epidemic.

An epidemic in Kambun, Japan, was traced to a certain stream of water, but as the natives who drank the water could neither see nor smell the germs of the disease, they continued to drink from the stream. Then the police allowed kerosene oil to trickle into the water, and this evidence of pollution proved convincing and ended the epidemic.

TO THE SEASHORE IN 80 MINUTES

IMPROVEMENTS ALONG THE CENTRAL EXPECTED TO REDUCE THE TIME.

In connection with the erection of the Central railroad bridge over the Raritan river, just west of the present drawbridge, it is learned on good authority that numerous improvements are to be made in the train service between Elizabeth and Long Branch, Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, with the general purpose in view of lowering the running time between these points to one hour. The present running time between Long Branch and Elizabeth is, on an average, an hour and twenty minutes. The running time between Plainfield and Elizabeth is about twenty minutes.

Among the improvements contemplated, in addition to the new Raritan river bridge, is the raising of the tracks at South Amboy and Perth Amboy, and the removal of a number of the curves in the tracks between South Amboy and Long Branch.

The new bridge, it is said, will be of stone, with the exception of the draw, similar to the Pennsylvania bridge over the Raritan river at New Brunswick.

The commuters from Long Branch and points further down the road have, for some time, been crowing for reduced running time between Elizabeth and the shore, and it is in indirect response to these demands that the officials of the road have created the above ideas, which are not yet in an entirely complete state.

The raising of the tracks at South Amboy, thus eliminating grade crossings, would work both ways. It would benefit the public safety and would enable the railroad to cut a few minutes off the running time. Just how the crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad tracks at South Amboy is to be arranged is not known. To elevate the tracks in either Perth or South Amboy means that the N. Y. & L. B. road cannot pass under the P. R. R. tracks as it does now, yet the Pennsylvania would never consent to a grade crossing where there are so many tracks leading to the coal docks. It is known, however, that the sharp curve just south of the drawbridge is one of the things to be fixed. There is no doubt but that elaborate alterations are under way and that actual work will be started in the near future.

HOPE CHAPEL BOYS CLUB HAS ANNIVERSARY NIGHT

ENTERTAINS 300 FRIENDS IN HONOR OF COMPLETION OF ITS FIRST YEAR.

To celebrate the completion of its first year as an organization, the Hope chapel Boys' Club held an anniversary meeting, Friday, that was attended by 300 of its friends. It was opened by prayer made by Rev. L. R. Howard after which Walter Firstbrook gave a neatly worded address of welcome. The nomination committee reported names and the following officers were elected: President, Frank Rimmer; vice president, Morris Hunter; secretary, Walter Firstbrook; treasurer, Allen Snyder; librarian, Harold Hunter; assistant, James Kenny; chairman entertainment committee, Peter Sweeney; chairman membership committee, Allen Snyder; chairman games committee, Harold Firstbrook. In conclusion refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

The club is composed of the boys in the chapel below sixteen years of age and has become one of its most influential organizations through the aid of G. Herbert Condict, a tireless worker in matters of this kind. The original membership was twelve and in the twelve months it has grown to forty-nine. A library of 200 books and magazines is one of the club's possessions, bought with money raised by the boys through entertainments.

Extensive Improvements.

W. H. Forristel, of the Bellview Avenue Nursery, has received materials for the construction of a large greenhouse, 21 x 50 which will be devoted exclusively to the growing of carnations. When completed will hold 1,200 plants.

DAAB WITH THE P. B. A.

Hoboken's Manager Interested in Plainfield Team.

SOMETHING ABOUT HIM

His Career as a Promoter of the American National Game—A Player Himself.

Philip Daab, who has become interested in the Plainfield Baseball Association, and who will look after the booking of teams and assist Manager Charles S. Woolston and Lines Gros, in the placing of the team on the field during the coming season, has long been identified with the National game. He has always stood for good, clean sport and has held the highest respect of other managers as well as ball players in general. There is not a player of any note who knows Mr. Daab who does not always speak in the highest terms of him.

Mr. Daab is himself an old player, being a member of the Jersey Blues, of Hoboken, in 1883 That was really the commencement of his interest in the game, although from boyhood he had that inborn love for the sport. He undertook the management of the Hoboken Baseball Club in the spring of 1902, and the organization was a great success from the start. The Hobokens are known throughout the country as one of the strongest aggregations. In 1902 and 1903 the team defeated the New York Nationals, the Boston Nationals twice, the Boston Americans, world champions, twice, Cincinnati twice and numerous other league clubs. A number of players have graduated from the Hoboken Club to the major league and are making a success. As a rule the independent teams appearing against Hoboken use the very best league batteries.

In arranging his schedule for this city, Mr. Daab will bring the strongest attractions here. Thus far he has arranged the schedule for the latter part of April, opening with the Jersey City Eastern League team on Saturday, April 15. On Saturday, April 22, the Elizabeth Stars will appear on Crescent Oval, and on Saturday, April 29, the Chatham aggregation, which defeated Plainfield last season, 7 to 0, will be here.

A strong feature which Mr. Daab confidently hopes to carry out is that of beginning and ending the season with the same lineup, and avoiding changes as much as possible.

Aside from following the National game, of which he is so fond, Mr. Daab is president of the Daab Contracting Company, treasurer of the Hoboken Exhibition Company, a member of the Royal Arcanum, Elks, Eagles, a Mason, a member of the Columbia Club and the Club of Hoboken, and is a member of the bowling team of the last named organization, which is identified with the Athletic League of Hudson County, and he is also publisher of the Hoboken Inquirer. He has a pleasing personality and makes friends wherever he goes. His coming to this city is sure to mark the beginning of better days in baseball and that he will be supported in his efforts goes without saying.

Guards, Not Brakemen.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is considering the question of changing the title of brakemen to guard in passenger service. The old title is no longer descriptive. There was a time a quarter of a century ago when brakemen acted in that capacity. Nowdays brakemen seldom, if ever, touch a brake wheel. Their chief duty is assisting passengers, protecting the train by signals, looking after switches and other duties which are best described by the title of guard. The men are understood to approve the proposed change.

Pupils to Give a Play.

Pupils of the borough High School have decided to give a play within the next six weeks for the benefit of the athletic association. The title selected is "The Curtain Raiser, or the Order of the Sons of Mars." It requires ten male speaking parts and a large number of supernumeraries.

P. B. A.'S NEW CAPTAIN

David F. Driscoll to Have Charge of the Team.

TO COVER FIRST BASE

Dave's Career on the Diamond—He Organized the Equitables.

Among the members of this season's baseball team that is to play for the Plainfield Baseball Association, none are more popular than David F. Driscoll, who will play first base and captain the team.

Captain Driscoll.

Outside of the major league he probably has no superior and few equals. "Dave" was born at Taunton, Mass., and commenced his baseball career in the New England States. He managed the Jersey City team before the Eastern League located in that city. He organized the famous Equitable team and signed the best semi-professional players and secured them good positions with the Equitable Life Insurance Company.

This team played together for three years, making a great record. Manager Philip Laab then signed Driscoll for the Hoboken team and through his efforts the best aggregation of ball players on the market were secured, the foundation of the Hoboken team being based on the pick of the Equitables. The makeup of the Hobokens has practically never been changed.

"Dave" takes more than ordinary interest in the success of the team that will represent Plainfield during the coming season and predicts that the fans will be more than pleased with the result of the season's work. He says that "nothing is too good for Plainfield" and can assure the baseball public that they can positively depend on having one of the representative teams of the State; also that the schedule of attractions will be gilt-edge and of a calibre far superior to any yet witnessed in this city. Driscoll's ability as a ball player is too well-known to need much comment. He is thoroughly posted on the game and can always be depended upon to do good work.

FAITH CHAPEL CHANGE.

Committee to Report on Advisability of Making It Independent.

The officials of Faith chapel are gradually completing arrangements for the establishment of that organization as an independent Baptist church. A committee comprising Charles W. McCutchen, M. C. Dobbins, E. L. Benny and George A. Chapman has been appointed to complete the details and report at a meeting to be held Wednesday night, March 23.

This chapel has constantly been growing in membership and interest under the direction of the pastor, Rev. J. W. Mason, and L. W. Randolph, the Sunday-school superintendent, until it is believed that it is in a position to become an independent chapel.

To Entertain Montclair Men.

The business men of the local Y. M. C. A. have extended an invitation to the business men of Montclair to come to this city on March 22. A social will be arranged, a committee of the Women's Auxiliary providing supper, and a basketball game will be played.

PLAINFIELD GAS TO FEED NEARBY TOWNS

North Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Somerville and Metuchen to be Supplied.

A CENTRAL PLANT

Establishment Here to be Enlarged—Pipes Are Now Being Laid—Will Probably Extend to New Brunswick.

Contrary to reports, the local gas plant of the Public Service Corporation will not be removed from this city. On the other hand it will be made the central station for the supply of gas not only for Plainfield and North Plainfield, but Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville, as well as Metuchen, and it is not unlikely that New Brunswick will be served too.

The Public Service Corporation, since coming to this city, has expended thousands of dollars in bringing it up to a high state of efficiency and it is also proposed to spend a great deal more during the coming year to enlarge the capacity and provide for the increased business that will come within a few months.

Material is now on the way for the piping of Dunellen and Bound Brook and the corporation is planning to give these places the best of service. The local plant is now thoroughly equipped with all of the modern appliances for the making and distributing of gas, and an investigation proves that the best possible quality of illuminating gas is now being made.

The Public Service Corporation does not own the Elizabeth gas plant, as reported by another paper. It is the property of Senator John Kean and the corporation has no control over it.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

Many Local Sales Recorded at the Office of the County Clerk.

The following transfers of Plainfield property have been recorded at the office of the county clerk: Plainfield Land and Building Company to R. D. Armstrong, Berkeley avenue, corner David Hand, $1; James C. Manning, et ux, to Plainfield Land and Building Company, southwesterly side Hobart avenue, 167 feet southeasterly of West Seventh street, $1; Plainfield Land and Building Company to Abel A. Brousse, lots 20 and 21, block 3, map of "Plainfield Real Estate Company," $1; Robert A. Meeker to J. Coben Meeker property, 132 to 136 East Front street, $16,200; James W. Runyon, et ux, to Hugh Harris, northwesterly side West Third street, 100 feet southwesterly Spooner avenue, $1; George Kapp to William F. Messerschmith, 335 East Fifth street, $400; John C. Smith, et ux, to William C. Smith, lot 2, block F, map of Elston M. French, $400.

The following contracts have also been recorded: John E. Curtis with William H. Bohl, mason, carpenter, painting, etc., new building on Carleton avenue, $3,050; Abram Kussman with Joseph Moscroft, remodelling 429 West Fourth street, $456.

C. T. VAIL WINS AGAIN.

Supreme Court Refuses New Trial in Damage Case of N. and S. Traction Company.

The Supreme Court at Trenton has discharge a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted in the suit of Charles T. Vail, formerly of this city, but now of Valley, N. J., against the Middlesex & Somerset Traction Company.

Mr. Vail was injured on one of the company's cars between Dunellen and Bound Brook about two years ago, and in a suit for damages in the Somerset county courts he received a verdict for $5,000. The case was appealed on a rule to show cause.

Approaching Wedding.

Miss Elizabeth Henry, of Basking Ridge, who is well known here, will be married to George Haas, of California, on May 4. The wedding will be celebrated at the home of the bride's brother, Parmenas C. Henry, Basking Ridge.

George W. Beebe, who has been spending the winter with his parents on Madison avenue, has returned to Japan, where he is interested in the tea business.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 13: "Glorifying God in Our Daily Work"—Matt. v, 13-16; Rom. xii, 11.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

"Ye are the salt of the earth."

"Ye are the light of the world."

Salt may not be food in the strict sense of the term, but no other article we eat is so necessary to health. Light is not life, but without light no life could exist.

Is it possible that we hold a relation to the religious life of men as vital as salt and light are to health and existence?

Occasional flashes of light will not answer the need of the world of life. Occasional pinches of salt are not sufficient for health. Nor will spasmodic exhibitions of goodness meet the religious requirements of men. Salt with every meal and light every day are the demands of nature.

"Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." That is the demand in Christian living. It is daily living in such fashion that men can see by our acts what right is and can know truth and so learn what God is saying to them. Then, as they see and realize and accept, they become lighted and then shine with God's light. God is glorified in the simple shining of men. This is more than reflection of light from a source outside. It is more like the lighting of the wick of one lamp by the flame of another.

"The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord." Men are capable of divine life. God touches them, and they burn in thought and feeling and doing. He lights them at His own flame, and they shine out as they burn with a light and life like His. They are sons of God, and so their light is of the same nature as His light. He ever shines, lighting all. So must we shine, that men may see continually, not intermittently or occasionally.

It is a grievous mistake to separate the daily and the religious life as if they were different in kind. Sacred and secular have been used as if there could be some things not touched by our religion. But light that does not shine is darkness, and salt that is not saline is savorless. All our living and doing is to be Christlike every day and all the days. If we are lighted and burning we cannot do other than burn continuously. He shines in our hearts, and we shine out.

We must not be misled by any false modesty either. There is a kind of pride that ostentatiously shrinks from being seen and shouts out for nobody to look at it, but to give all glory to God. It is all a self deceptive piece of mock humility. We are to be seen of men. We ought to want them to see us. We are to compel them to look at us if they do not look of their own accord. We are to do our good works in such a way that they can't help seeing them.

But this is an altogether different thing from doing them so they will see us. What is the difference, do you ask? It is just the difference between having attention called to the fact that a light is shining, so men can see their way in the dark and hasten on their way, and having attention called to the fact that there is an elaborate lamp which they would best stop and admire. Shine as you ought and you need have no fear that men will stop long to see what you are made of, whether gold, silver, glass or common clay. They will be so busy rejoicing in the light that not one in ten will give a thought to the vessel that holds the oil. Be genuine and your humility will take care of itself.

How shall you shine? Not by straining after anything, but just by simple daily living rightly. Think the good and pure thoughts. Let no evil stop in the mind. Then do each duty as it rises cheerfully, as if it was done for God, no matter what it is nor how simple. If it be washing a child's face or your own, if tying up a bundle or a shoe string, do it as it ought to be done, and do it gladly. At least do it pleasantly and the gladness will come in due time.

"Whatever you would like to have others do, go and do that thing yourself."

Probably no one else can shine that way yet. God has lighted your candle to shine on that place. Shine, then, and you shall light others by your flame.

So shall God be glorified as men see and take the path to life.

Tomorrow Morning.

In a remote churchyard in Cambridgeshire I read, a few years ago, an epitaph nearly a century old on two aged sisters. The text included in it was, "When the morning was come Jesus stood on the shore." It seemed to me to sum up lives in which the patience of faith had been the guiding principle. These two forgotten disciples had trusted through the night and the toil. They were willing to wait. They knew it would be well tomorrow morning.—H. C. G. Moule, D. D.

Content to Doubt.

Cold hearts are not anxious enough to doubt. Men who love will have their misgivings at times. That is not the evil, but the evil is when men go on in that languid, doubting way, content to doubt, proud of their doubts, morbidly glad to talk about them, liking the romantic gloom of twilight, without the manliness to say, "I must and will know the truth." That did not John the Baptist. Brethren, John appealed to Christ.—F. W. Robertson.

Contentment and Decay.

Sad will be the day for any man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life he is living, with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds that he is doing—when there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger which he knows that he was meant and made to do because he is a child of God.—Phillips Brooks.

COIN DOLLARS IN PRIVATE.

Italian Tells of Money Which Is Minted in Palermo—Shows Samples.

One evening I was sitting with an Italian friend in a restaurant, relates an Everybody's Magazine writer, and we were discussing American laws and restrictions, at which he was very much inclined to scoff.

"Did you ever see a dollar that is not a dollar?" said he. I shook my head, and he rolled across the table to me a silver coin. It seemed to me to be a dollar. I examined it with every care, and getting another from the cash register, compared the two. They were exactly alike in weight, sound, color, milling and all. At last I got them confused, and only my friend was able to point out which was which.

"That is what we call a Palmero dollar," he said. "Do you remember some years ago that western silver miners were caught taking about $7,000,000 worth of silver into the Nevada City mint and having it turned into money without being recorded? Well, that is just what is going on in Palmero to-day, with variations. Silver is brought in San Luis Potosi, Mexico, or thereabout, shipped to Paris, taken to Palmero, and minted with reasonable privacy. The dollars are jumbled with stones to nick them and laid in greasy clay, then come over here in third-class baggage for distribution. They cost about 43 cents and defy detection, except that the nicks are too similar, and it is said that the 'M' on the neck is not quite deep enough, and that the 'I' in pluribus is a thousandth of an inch crooked. You know every counterfeiter makes some little mistake."

TEACHING OYAMA TO SHOOT

American Tells of Delightful Experiences with Now Famous Japanese Field Marshal.

"Twenty-five years ago I was an experienced rifle shot," writes Horace Fletcher, in World's Work, "and could hit a moving object every time. The 22-caliber rifle and machine-made cartridge, which came into general use in the '70s, made extensive rifle practice possible. I wrote and published at the time a pamphlet on how to shoot with a rifle. It happened that copies of the pamphlet reached Japan, where I passed some time soon after. Japan had just begun to make a military organization on the most modern lines and Marquis Oyama was minister of war. He invited me to visit him in his home at Tokio and showed great interest in learning to shoot at a moving object with a rifle. He had already seen the pamphlet. I had a number of American rifles and ample ammunition with me in Japan and Marquis Oyama and the then Col. Murata (inventor of the Japanese military rifle) joined me several afternoons at target practice. They entered enthusiastically into the spirit, Oyama in particular showing the enthusiasm of a boy. I shall never forget his keen joy the first time he hit a moving object with a bullet. It was a teapot thrown in the air, I believe, and when it came down in dust and pieces he capered about and screamed in his delight like an excited schoolboy.

AMERICA'S FOREIGN SCENES

No Better Way to Go Abroad Than to Start Journey in Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Those of our fellow citizens who imagine that the only way to go abroad is via a trans-Atlantic liner, need to get acquainted with certain spots in southeastern Pennsylvania. There is no better starting point and time for his voyage after novel sights and interesting experiences than the city of Lancaster, the seat of the richest county in the state, on any local market day, says W. H. Richardson, in Four-Track News. Most of these people are representatives of one of the most curious survivals in all America, the Amish Mennonites, a schism of the Mennonite society which seceded from the main body about the year 1693. So far as language, manners, dress and traditions are concerned the Amish, as they are locally known, are foreigners in America. Their tongue is almost the same as that of their ancestors from the far-off Rhine two centuries ago; the dress of the women suggests Holland or Brittany of to-day; their religion, with its austerities and its curious practices and observances, smacks of the days of the reformation.

A Colt That Assisted.

One rainy day a farmer opened the barn door and tried to call in the cows, so that he would not have to walk in the deep mud to drive them. One cow refused to come, although he called her name repeatedly. A colt, standing at the other side of the yard, watched him, as he vainly tried to drive the cow without stepping into the mire. Then the colt quietly stepped up to her and bit her. Of course she moved. He followed, giving her a nip whenever she moved in the wrong direction, until she went through the door into the barn. Then he trotted back to the other side of the yard.

Pyramid Building Not So Hard.

When the pyramids were built the laborers did not work under such disadvantages as have long been attributed to them. Researches show that they had solid and tubular drills and lathe tools. The drills were set with jewels and cut into the rocks with keenness and accuracy.

Over Hamlet's Grave.

A railway is about to be constructed near Elsinore which will run across the spot traditionally believed to be the grave of Hamlet. Numerous signed protests against the projected railway have been addressed to the government.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 19.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Glorifying God in our daily work.—Matt. v, 13-16; Rom. xii, 11.

"What I write here is for the glory of God." This is the opening sentence of the autobiography of John G. Paton, missionary to the New Hebrides, whose thrilling story of carrying the cross to the New Hebrides cannibals electrified the Christian world. For more than twenty years he had been importuned to tell the world of his unusual experiences, but steadily refused, characterizing the idea as "savoring too much of self." But at last, convinced that this narration might be of use to the church of God and hence for His glory, he undertook it, emphasizing the fact that it was written for the glory of God by adding, "I lift my pen with that motive [the glory of God] supreme in my heart." For the glory of God he had undertaken his missionary labors, and for the glory of God he reviewed them to the world.

Man's supreme business in this life is to glorify God. This is his vocation. He may have many avocations, but the calling which should have the supreme place in his life is that of living for the glory of God. "Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever." "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." But if the supreme duty of man is the glorifying of God we must glorify God in our daily lives. Life is not a succession of Sabbaths, but the sum of the endeavors of every day. Out of seven days there is but one Sabbath. Therefore the man who limits his religion to the Sabbath day falls six-sevenths short of making it the supreme business of his life to glorify God.

Religion between Sundays is as important as religion on Sunday. We serve God and glorify Him by faithfulness in business and by fervency in spirit in discharging the most routine duties of life. The statesman should legislate, the business man direct his business, the agent buy and sell, the tradesman labor, the student study, the home life be lived for the glory of God.

When we can write over every act of life, whether performed on the Sabbath or on a week day, "What I do is for the glory of God," we shall have reached the point where our religion means what it should mean in view of the inspired injunction, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

Glorifying God in daily life is the best sermon that can be preached. Observant men will see not only our good works, but also the propelling motive back of them, and they, too, will be led to glorify not you, but God. "What in your sermon converted me? Nothing," answered a questioned inquirer. "I have been led to accept Christ by the nine years' consistent daily life of the man beside whom I work in the shop." Let your light shine for God. That is your mission as a member of God's kingdom on earth. Men will see it and will want to and will enter the kingdom and will also glorify God.

Salt was not made to grow savorless by lack of use. It was made to season and to preserve. Light was not made to be hidden. It was made to shine. Do you possess the grace of God that will season and preserve the world morally and spiritually? Use it. Have you the light of Christ in your heart? Then let it shine, and let it shine every day. The world needs daily preservation and daily light.

Endeavor Among the Disciples.

A very encouraging—indeed, a triumphant—report is made by Rev. R. H. Waggener, national superintendent of Christian Endeavor among the Disciples of Christ.

During the past year the number of Christian Endeavor societies in his denomination has increased 500, and it is now 7,016, with 165,252 members.

During the year these Endeavorers contributed to their denominational board $63,058.

The conversions among them were 11,453.

"All our missionaries in the field, both home and foreign," says Mr. Waggener, "are enthusiastic Endeavorers."

The superintendent traveled more than 25,000 miles in his work during the year, and all at no expense to the denomination.

It is his special desire that the Endeavorers join forces and support in the theological seminaries the ablest young men that can be found to take up the work of ministers and missionaries.—Christian Endeavor World.

Put In Paragraphs.

"The secretary was absent, but I found him after a ride on a bicycle of twenty miles over the mountains and through the ravines to North Fork." That is a characteristic bit from a report by Field Secretary Hadlock of the California union.

Finland's Christian Endeavor organ is for the present written by hand, a monthly called Sanastus—The Dawn. Almost every week, however, there is something about Christian Endeavor in Finland's Weekly (Finnish) and the Home Friend (Swedish).

Rev. Charles Murray, brother of Andrew Murray, has just died in South Africa. He held a position of honor only second to that of the gifted author and orator, and was especially earnest in his efforts to promote peace between the English and his countrymen, the Dutch. He was an enthusiastic Endeavorer and a founder of societies.

PISCATAWAY WATER CO.

Incorporation of New Market Concern at Trenton Yesterday.

CAPITAL, $10,000

David Lawson Agent—Incorporators Are Not Known in New Market.

The Piscataway Water Company, with registered office at New Market, has been incorporated at Trenton, with a capital stock of $10,000. David Lawson, of New Market, is the agent in charge, and the incorporators are Herman L. Koenig, Nicholas W. Bendsell, Monte T. Moorehouse, J. Edward Ashmead, William K. Flanagan, Robert Carson, Kinsley Twining. The company is organized to maintain and operate water works in the township of Piscataway.

Inquiry fails to reveal much concerning the company or its plant. Old residents of New Market when questioned said that they saw an ordinance published in the Dunellen Call by the Piscataway Water Company, seeking the right to operate in the township, but outside of Mr. Lawson, the incorporators are strangers. It was thought at first that the company might have something to do with the Middlesex Water Company at South Plainfield, but this is denied. Further investigation fails to disclose the location of the plant or source of water supply to serve the township.

There is a demand in certain parts of the township for such a water supply, but just where it can be obtained seems to be a mystery at present.

K. OF P. DEMONSTRATIONS

Unity and Perseverance Plan Four Celebrations.

BOOMING THE ORDER

Street Parade and Entertainments—Committees Appointed—Membership, 450.

In keeping with a movement that is gradually working throughout the State, local Knights of Pythias, comprising Perseverance and Unity lodges, are planning for a series of four public demonstrations to promote interest in the order. The preliminary arrangements have been mapped out by District Deputy David Bowden and the combined efforts will result in one of the largest Pythian gatherings since the field day meet was held here ten years ago.

The first of the four will be given the latter part of April and will comprise a street parade with many hundreds of men in line and a public meeting in conclusion at which prominent speakers will give short addresses exploiting the merits of the order. Entertainment numbers will intersperse and the finale will be in the nature of a supper and smoker. The other demonstrations will follow at intervals of a few weeks and the last will be held in June when all the Pythians in the city will attend a union praise service at a church yet to be designated.

The lodges have already taken hold of the plans with their usual energy and they will be assisted by Crescent Company, the uniformed rank. Each of the lodges has appointed a committee of three to keep in touch with the deputy and these are comprised as follows: Unity, Past Chancellors Horace J. Martin, Harry Werner and Jere VanWinkle, Jr.; Perseverance, Past Chancellors Thomas Ooment, Asa D. Pope and Joseph C. Blimm. Lodges in other cities will be invited to take part but the Plainfielders will have entire charge.

Pythianism always has been strong in Plainfield and the proposed arrangement will result in increased interest. The membership of the two lodges which have assumed the task aggregates 450 and includes nearly everyone of the city officials from Mayor Buckle down. Perseverance alone has over 300 names on its roster and is regarded as one of the strongest lodges in the State.

BALDWIN'S HAY BARN DESTROYED BY FIRE

EARLY MORNING BLAZE CAUSES AN AGGREGATE LOSS OF $600.

A large barn in the rear of the residence of William Baldwin on West Front street, and used by him as a storage place for hay, caught fire shortly after 3 o'clock this morning and was totally destroyed. In addition, several tons of hay were consumed, the total loss aggregating $600.

The origin of the blaze is unknown as the structure was wrapped in flames when they were discovered by Augustus Baldwin from his bedroom window. He turned in an alarm from box 83 and the department was soon on the scene but the barn was beyond all saving. The burning hay caused the flames to leap high in the air and at times huge sparks were dropped five blocks away. What was left of the hay had to be thoroughly turned over and soaked with water, this task keeping the firemen busy until nearly 5 o'clock.

Chief Doane made a thorough investigation today but was unable to gain any information that would lead to an explanation for the start of the blaze.

PLANNED A FLAT.

Morgan Bird Arranged to Build Before His Death.

On account of the death of Morgan C. Bird, Plainfield will likely lose a desirable improvement which he had planned to carry out long before his illness. Mr. Bird had plans drafted by Fred Lancaster, the architect, for the erection of a modern four-flat building on East Fourth street, directly back of the Miller building. He proposed to introduce every modern convenience, one of the features being a laundry, which was to have been located on top of the building for the benefit of the tenants who did not care to do their own washing. By this arrangement washing and ironing could be done at a very little expense to the tenants.

The plans also called for the location of a lighting and water plant, independent of the companies now furnishing light and water in this city.

Quarantine Off.

The Board of Health has raised the quarantine at the home of Letter-carrier C. R. Pierson, of Manson place, where his little girl was ill with diphtheria.

REV. DR. D. J. YERKES IS DEAD

Venerable and Beloved Clergyman Passed Away Saturday Morning.

EVENTFUL CAREER

"I Press Toward the Mark for the Prize of the High Calling of God in Christ Jesus." His Last Words—Community Mourns.

In the death of Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, dean of the Plainfield clergy, which occurred at his home in West Seventh street, at 3 Saturday morning, the First Baptist church of which he was its continuous pastor for forty years, has suffered a distinct loss, the Baptist denomination one of its faithful members, while the city of Plainfield an honorable and upright citizen who had held the highest respect and esteem of all during his residence of nearly a half century here. The venerable divine was so closely identified with all the best interests of the city, that in nearly very walk of life he will be missed, although during the past few years he was unable to take an active part.

From the beginning of his pastorate here over forty years ago, his work continued unabated, and with each succeeding year he became more thoroughly attached to his people and it was his greatest pleasure when busily engaged in the work of his church. He took especial pride in his long pastorate, which exceeded that of any other local minister, and while of late years his physical strength failed rapidly, he disliked any reference to the fact that he was growing old or becoming feeble. He liked to think that just as long as he lived he would be able to continue his activity and usefulness which had been such a power here.

Well Beloved.

Not once during his long residence here was there ever heard an unkind word or a reproachful remark concerning Dr. Yerkes. He was always looked upon with veneration and his life was considered noble and pure, while his lofty ideals and purposes always carried great weight in the religious councils of the city. A few years ago when revival services were being held in the First Baptist church, Dr. Yerkes was an active and central figure, and many will remember his earnest words at that time. He said that he felt confident that when he died that he would go to Heaven. This expression was made in response to a question asked by the evangelist in charge as to how many felt that Heaven would be their future home.

Dr. Yerkes' style of preaching was of the old school, and was most effective. He was forciful and earnest and his oratory always held the closest attention of his hearers. This same force of speech he held almost to the last. After his appointment as pastor-emeritus of the First Baptist church, it was his custom to attend the Sunday morning services, frequently taking some part. As late as last Sunday, he occupied a seat in the pulpit with Pastor Chambliss and had a small part in the service. At that time he felt as well as at any time during the past few months. On Tuesday he contracted a cold which made a decided change in his condition. From that time he grew rapidly worse, death resulting from an acute attack of Bright's disease. He was conscious up to within a short time of his death, and the end came peacefully, all the members of the family being present.

Dr. Yerkes is survived by a widow, five daughters, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. Charles H. Smith, Mrs. Hannah Flanders and Miss Ida Yerkes, of this city; Mrs. A. Worthington Paige, of New York, and one son, Joseph B. Yerkes, also of this city.

A short time before Dr. Yerkes died he recognized the members of his family surrounding him and he feebly said: "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." These were his last words.

His Career.

Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes was born in Philadelphia, January 27, 1825, of a distinguished family known for its wealth and position in public affairs. Early in life he went with his parents to Hatsboro, Pa., and it was there that he was converted at revival meetings. He attended Hatsboro Academy in preparation for a course of study at Columbian University at Washington, he having determined to study for the ministry. He was graduated from this university in the Class of '48. There being no theological department there, he read theology with Rev. Dr. George B. Ide, of Philadelphia, a distinguished Baptist clergyman.

Dr. Yerkes was ordained to the Baptist ministry in the First Baptist church at Hollidaysburg, Pa., where he remained for a short time. He accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Pittsburg, remaining until 1856. He displayed exceptional ability as a pastor and was considered a brilliant preacher, being known throughout western Pennsylvania as the "mountain orator." In his preparation for the ministry he had every advantage that wealth and position could give him and for years he was a shining light in the Baptist denomination.

In 1856 Dr. Yerkes accepted a call to the First Baptist church, of Brooklyn, where he remained for three years. His ministry there was most successful and resulted in large additions to the membership of that church and an awakening in religious feeling. In 1863 he received and accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist church, this city, where he continued as pastor until June 15, 1903, when owing to physical incapacity he resigned and was made pastor-emeritus, which position he held up to the time of his death.

The First Baptist church was constituted in 1818 and the present edifice was erected in 1888, five years after Dr. Yerkes came to this city, and it was largely through his efforts that the structure was built. For years this church has been one of the leading ones in the denomination in this State and today it is the largest in membership of the first ten largest in New Jersey.

Golden Wedding.

On March 15, 1900, Dr. and Mrs. Yerkes celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and in honor of that event the members of the church and congregation gave them a reception. It was an auspicious event in which nearly all of the local pastors had a part. A pleasant feature of the occasion was the presentation to the couple of a purse of $1,250 in gold. After Dr. Yerkes resigned his pastorate, he spent several months in the South, while the pulpit was occupied by various ministers in the denomination. Among these was Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the present pastor, who is now serving his second year. There was the strongest affection between Dr. Yerkes and Dr. Chambliss and the venerable divine often expressed his pleasure of the choice made by the church, which was so dear to his heart.

Dr. Yerkes's father was a man of prominence and Dr. Yerkes came from a distinguished line. Charles T. Yerkes, the Chicago trolley magnate, was his cousin. He was also a cousin of former Judge Harmon Yerkes, of Bucks County, Pa.

CITY DEPARTMENTS TO ASK FOR MORE MONEY

INDICATIONS OF LARGE INCREASE WHEN YEARLY BUDGET IS MADE UP.

It will be quite interesting to know just how the Common Council will fix its annual budget of expenses this year. There is a demand for more money in nearly every department, probably induced by the fact that the city will receive over $3,000 additional as a result of increasing the liquor license fee to $1,000. The fire department, through its chairman, Councilman W. S. Bulleck, declares that an increase in the appropriation must be made to keep out of debt and he does not propose to wind up the year in debt, as previous fire committees have done.

The police department will undoubtedly want more money, for there is an urgent demand for additional patrolmen which cannot be engaged now owing to a lack of funds. If the municipal system of collection and disposal of garbage is adopted there will be an increase in the taxes to meet the expense for this work, although the individual tax would be small.

It is also understood that if possible an effort will be made to get more money for the streets, especially if it is decided to pave some of the streets in the business section with vitrified brick, as suggested by Mayor Buckle.

President Daniel, of the Common Council, has asked the various committees to make up a list of expenses for the coming year and have it ready by March 20, so that the finance committee will not be delayed in making up the annual budget which will be presented at the regular April meeting for adoption.

Harry Woodruff With Proctors.

Harry Woodruff, formerly of this city, who had one of the leading parts in the Ben Hur production, has been engaged as leading man of Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre Stock Company, replacing Edwin Arden, who has resigned to go into vaudeville.

THE CZAR'S DECISION

Kuropatkin Complains of Generals and Troops.

PREPARING TO DEFEND TIE PASS

Oku Accuses Russians of Firing on Red Cross Bearers With Wounded. Harbin a Vast Disorganized Hospital.

LONDON, March 15.—St. Petersburg dispatches say that the war council held at Tsarskoe-Selo, at which War Minister Sacharoff, General Dragimoroff and others were present, has decided to continue the war to the bitter end.

General Kuropatkin in his report has assumed full responsibility for accepting a battle at Mukden. He has complained to the emperor that his plans miscarried, largely through the failure of two generals, whose names he does not state, to execute his orders. He also throws blame on some of the troops, which failed to respond properly at the critical moment.

General Oku, reporting to headquarters, complains of seeing wounded men being carried across a plain shelled by Russians. He says they shelled a large party of stretcher bearers till they were out of range. Hospital carts crossing the field were plainly followed with a fire of shrapnel for over a mile.

Tokyo reports say that Japan will now demand a war indemnity of between $500,000,000 and $750,000,000.

Dispatches from Russian headquarters at Tie pass say that preparations for the defense of the fortifications there are being carried on with frantic haste.

General Kuropatkin telegraphs that General Meyendorff, commander of the First army corps, who held the famous Putiloff hill until the general retreat of the Russian army compelled him to abandon it, has been injured by a fall from his horse.

General Kuropatkin does not say in his telegram that he has succeeded in reorganizing his forces.

Eyewitnesses of the retreat after the battle of Mukden describe with pitiless realism how the panic stricken condition of the troops reached its climax. When the Russians were near the village of Pethke shells burst among the confused procession of infantry and artillery and thousands of carts. The sufferings of the wounded in the course of the pursuit were beyond description. Most of the foreign military attaches who were with the defeated army, including one British and two American officers, fell into the hands of the Japanese.

Dispatches from St. Petersburg say that some of the Russian surgeons remained at Mukden to care for the wounded who had to be left behind and are in the hands of the Japanese, together with several American and English war correspondents. The sanitary service there is completely disorganized. Chloroform and antiseptics are lacking, and the sick are piled up on uncovered railway trucks. The mortality among them is frightful. Civil doctors have been requisitioned and are operating without cessation.

The railway station at Harbin has been transformed into a vast amphitheater, where the dead, the dying and the wounded are, so to speak, abandoned. The confusion is indescribable.

The Russian army exists in name only, being at the mercy of the slightest Japanese attack. There is ground for fearing that not a man of the present fighting force will reach Harbin if the Japanese follow up their success.

The dispatch adds that three Japanese divisions have been in action with the Third Russian corps on the line of the Fan river, between Hsientun, on the Mandarin road, and Tafanho, on the railway.

Oku's and Nogi's troops are pressing westward, following the road to Tieling. General Nodzu is marching along the Mandarin road. General Kuroki is pushing on to Tieling from Fushun.

A battle at Tieling appears to be inevitable. The fortifications there are the last hope of the Russians.

Peasant Revolt Spreads.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—The peasant movement is spreading to the northwest provinces. Serious disturbances are reported in the province of Vilna and Kovno, where the estates and property of government officials and others have been sacked and burned, necessitating the employment of the military to suppress the revolt.

Marquis of Anglesey Dead.

MONTE CARLO, March 15.—The Marquis of Anglesey, who came here several weeks ago with a system of his own invention with which he hoped to break the bank, is dead. The cause of his death was consumption. Henry Cyril, earl of Uxbridge, Baron Paget and marquis of Anglesey, was head of the great Paget family, and his eccentricities and lavishness have been the subject of extensive public comment for many years.

Ulster Park Man Shot Himself.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 15.—Elton Benjamin, twenty-two years old, accidentally killed himself at Ulster Park while cleaning a revolver. He was found dead by his wife and child, who returned home from a visit to a neighbor's house after waiting several hours for him to call for them.

A Democratic Victory.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., March 15.—The Democrats elected their entire ticket at the village election here. Michael Hanlon was chosen president by eighteen majority, and Dr. Ernest L. Richter and George H. Carley were elected trustees.

CORDOVA IS GUILTY

New Brunswick Case Ends In Conviction of Pastor.

PROSECUTOR CHEERED IN COURT

State Attorney Scored Eloping Divine, Who Leaped Up In Fury, but Was Howled Down by Spectators—Court Against Him.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 15.—After six hours' deliberation the jury which tried J. Frank Cordova, the former South River minister who eloped with Julia Bowne, one of his choir singers, for abandoning his wife, came into court last night with a verdict of "Guilty as indicted."

Cordova appeared to be greatly shaken by the verdict. He will probably be sentenced on Saturday. The extreme penalty is imprisonment for one year.

As soon as the case was given to the jury the second indictment against the ex-minister was called. It accuses him of assault and battery upon his wife. She and her fourteen-year-old daughter will be the principal witnesses.

When Cordova was put on the stand in his own defense he was subjected to a severe cross examination by Prosecutor Berdine, who tried to bring out that Cordova in his trips to Philadelphia, Camden, Canada, Mexico and other places was accompanied by Julia Bowne. The efforts to make the former pastor admit that Miss Bowne was his companion on these journeyings were thwarted by the defendant, however, as he declined to answer to this line of questioning, on the ground that he might incriminate himself. He appealed to Judge Strong, who said that he need not answer questions that might incriminate him.

Mr. Cook, counsel for Cordova, then took the witness in hand and elicited a statement that Cordova had been in the habit of giving his wife all his salary, with the exception of $10 a month. The prosecutor objected to the introduction of letters received by Cordova from his wife while he was in Mexico and was sustained by Judge Strong, who said:

"Even if these letters declared that it was necessary for the defendant to stint himself and to cease remitting funds home I would charge the jury not to allow such a fact to quash the indictment, for this is an action brought by the state of New Jersey against the defendant and does not concern merely Mr. and Mrs. Cordova alone. Forgiveness by Mrs. Cordova does not imply forgiveness by the state of New Jersey."

After Cordova had testified that he directed his wife to sell $700 worth of property and apply the proceeds to her personal needs the defense rested.

In summing up Prosecutor Berdine scored the former minister unmercifully, and once Cordova leaped from his seat in fury, sinking back again when the spectators howled at him and shouted, "Sit down." The close of the prosecutor's address was hailed with cheering, which the court officers could not suppress.

Judge Strong's charge was brief and he emphasized the point that the prisoner could not be excused because he had sent money to his wife.

Officer Sent to Alcatraz Island.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The president has approved the sentence in the case of Lieutenant Francis M. Boone, Nineteenth infantry, who was tried and convicted by court martial at Vancouver barracks on the charge of desertion, absence without leave, breach of arrest and nonpayment of debts. The sentence of the court was dismissal and two years' imprisonment, but the president, upon recommendation of the war department, reduced the term of imprisonment to one year. Alcatraz island, California, is designated as the place of confinement.

Hospitals For Canal Zone.

PANAMA, March 15.—An arrangement is being made between the governments of Panama and the canal zone for the construction of three buildings for lepers, lunatics and incurable indigents. Panama contributes $40,000 as its share of the cost. The sanitary department will control the management of the hospitals, and the running expenses will be divided proportionately between the two governments.

Santo Domingo Treaty In Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The discussion of the Dominican treaty in executive session of the senate resulted in the drawing of party lines. The Democrats who have been reported as likely to support the treaty will return to the fold, it is said, and on both sides of the chamber it is admitted there is little prospect that the convention will be ratified.

Operation on Mrs. Shaw Successful.

BALTIMORE, March 15.—Mrs. Shaw, the wife of Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, was operated on here for a serious ailment at Dr. Howard Kelly's private sanatorium. The operation was performed by Dr. Kelly and was reported to be successful. Secretary Shaw was present in the sanitorium during the operation.

Deposit Man Died From Exposure.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., March 15.—John Ryan, aged fifty, is dead at his home in Deposit as a result of exposure on Sunday last. While suffering from mental derangement he undressed and lay down in a snowdrift, thinking that he was at home and going to bed. When found his legs were badly frozen.

CROWD SAW THEM DIE

Nineteen Persons Perish In New York Tenement.

INCENDIARY LIT FIRE IN BASEMENT

House Destroyed Had Given Shelter to Twenty Families With Seventy-eight Children, and It Is Said 200 Slept In Burned Building.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Nineteen persons, men, women and children, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the five story tenement house at 105 Allen street. More than forty were injured, and only a few of the sleeping inmates escaped unhurt. Several of those who perished were roasted to death in plain view of thousands in the streets.

Coroner Goldenkranz declared after an investigation that he had reason to believe the blaze was the work of an incendiary.

He issued subpoenas for the fire marshal, tenement house and building inspectors and health and police officials to appear before him at the inquest tomorrow.

The fire started in the basement and spread with frightful rapidity to the roof. The victims were caught in traps of flames, the halls and exits being rendered impassable in a few minutes after the blaze started.

The building was one of the usual crowded tenements, where lived twenty families with seventy-eight children, nearly all Hebrews.

The disaster was the worst in the history of the east side. The district attorney's office has begun an investigation to place the blame for the great loss of life.

Chief Croker of the fire department asserts that the police and the tenement house departments are to blame for the disregard of the fire escape law. The tenement house department officials, however, say that the blame is on the shoulders of the fire commissioner.

Of the nineteen dead three bodies, those of a boy and two girls, remain unidentified.

The majority of the dead are children. The east side was thrown into a turmoil, and the police reserves from all of the nearby stations were turned out to handle the unreasonable crowd.

The fire escapes were blocked with baskets, boxes, tin pails, bedding and other paraphernalia, so that they were impracticable. The flames meantime were belching from the windows and licking out hungrily for the frightened tenants.

There had been a fatal delay in turning in an alarm.

Policeman John J. Dwan was the hero of the fire. He scaled the fence and, climbing to a shed in the rear of the burning house, improvised a bridge with a plank to the fire escape on the second floor, over which he made his way and extricated twenty panic stricken persons and hurried them over the plank to safety.

The flames, however, had been growing hungrier every minute, and Dwan was invisible from the street on account of the smoke. He did not desert his post, however, and remained until, overcome by the fumes, he lost his footing and fell to the court below, where he was found some time later with a broken collarbone and severe contusions.

Victims of Mine Disaster 111.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 15.—With the removal of the last four bodies from the Virginia mine the total fatalities from the awful explosion is swelled to 111. The fund which was raised for the relief of the widows and orphans left by the disaster reached nearly $30,000. This is being distributed among them in the form of a semi-monthly allowance by a committee composed of the most prominent ministers in the Birmingham district.

Anderson's Nomination Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The nomination of Charles W. Anderson, the negro candidate, to be internal revenue collector for the Second district of New York has been confirmed by the senate. The senate also confirmed the nomination of Alston G. Dayton to be United States judge for the northern district of West Virginia and Charles H. # HEALTH SEC'Y'S REPORT

Rev. W. E. Honeyman's Annual Statement for Borough.

HIS RECOMMENDATIONS

Milk Supply From Other Places Is Poor—Ash Dump Must be Closed.

The report presented to the Borough Board of Health Thursday night, by the retiring secretary, Dr. W. E. Honeyman, touched upon a number of subjects that have been engaging the attention of the members for the past year and will continue to do so until eventually disposed of. His suggestions were grouped under nine separate heads and were as follows:

"1st. As to milkmen and milk. The milkmen have given us considerable trouble in regard to their license fees, and have in many cases resorted to all kinds of practices to escape paying their dues. It took nearly two months to complete the collections, and then several had to be threatened with a suit at law. Their promises were fine, but their performances were decidedly poor. As to the milk, there is no question that poor milk is brought in from Morris County, as also from Finderne, Anandale, etc. The Secretary has had occasion to test a large quantity of milk with the lactometer, and cromometer, and has found some very poor specimens. This testing should be continued. Some milkmen naturally say that the Board takes their license fee and gives nothing in return unless it tests the milk they buy of farmers, and therefore it should make tests for them, and there is reason in their argument, so that the work cannot well be discontinued.

"2nd. As to the cesspool dump. The President and Secretary have been compelled to examine this dump and think they have kept it in good condition, but it needs constant watching, as the scavengers will sometimes get on too large a load, or get stalled on ploughed ground, or on a marshy place, and empty their load near the fence, or in the gutter, to the annoyance of passersby. Without oversight trouble is inevitable.

"3rd. As to dump for ashes. Many people place in their ashes grease, fat, bones, decayed vegetables, etc., and no one inspector can detect the evil, so that the President and Secretary have to look after the matter, and prevent its constant occurrence. The present dump must speedily be closed and a new one secured.

"As to vaults and cesspools. Here too, the President and Secretary are frequently called on to make examinations, as parties insist that the inspector is in error, or has overlooked some matter, but in nine cases out of ten, he has been found right. The carelessness and indifference of many people in regard to their vaults and cesspools is simply astonishing, and we have found cesspools overflowing, and vaults full and the owners of the premises, or lessee would solemnly declare that it was all wrong to have them cleaned. We have accomplished a great deal in keeping these places in a sanitary condition, but eternal vigilance seems necessary to keep them right.

"5th. As to Green brook. We have detected persons sewering into the brook, and stopped them, but here again the work of the Inspector must be supplemented by that of the President and Secretary, for men will deny plain facts, and only yield when the superior officers warn them of their danger in violating the law.

"6th. As to ice. The President and Secretary, as well as the Inspector, have examined the ice ponds, and only after effort have they kept them from pollution. Vaults near the banks of the stream may mean typhoid fever, and they must be looked after, and the ice should be analyzed every summer.

"7th. As to Stony brook. Here again the President and Secretary have made examinations and found need for supervision.

"8th. As to wells. Frequent tests have made of well water and a number of wells condemned by the President and Secretary. There is great need of watchfulness and repeated tests will have to be made in the future.

"9th. As to the new mosquito law. Nothing has been done as yet but the Board has an important work before it in this matter."

In connection with his report, Dr Honeyman stated that he and the president, Andrew Love, had really been the borough health officers for years and that both had been roundly abused for doing their duty, and even threatened with indictment, etc. They had, however, he said, striven to be faithful and the secretary, at least, would have ten times more personal comfort when out, than in the position.

Announce Engagement.

Mrs. Henrietta Hetfield, of East Second street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jennie Hetfield, to George C. Conners, of Columbia avenue, formerly of Cheesequake.

FOR COUNTY FAIR

Former Mayor Fisk at Head of Big Undertaking for Hospital's Benefit.

CIRCUS NIGHTLY

All Trades to be Represented Booths for Business Houses — Attractions.

"The Dreamland County Fair," the biggest undertaking of its kind ever undertaken in this city, is now being planned by former Mayor Charles J. Fisk for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, and for the purpose of booming the city at the same time. The affair is to be held during the latter part of May at the Casino and in view of the fact that this place will not be large enough to successfully carry out the plans, Mr. Fisk is making arrangements with the Common Council for the use of the streets in the vicinity of the Casino which will be occupied with booths of every description. In addition to the booths it is also proposed to have a circus, merry-go-round and numerous other attractions, all of which will turn the city into a veritable "Dreamland."

There will be plenty of good music from concert bands and orchestras, while the hurdy-gurdy will have a place. At the Casino here it's proposed to have a vaudeville show each afternoon and night, and one night will be devoted to a charity ball.

One feature of the affair will be the plan to have every business and trade in the city represented, from the butcher to the baker and candlestick maker. There will be a sub-station of the postoffice, a branch of the banking institutions, telegraph and telephone companies, in fact anybody in the city desirous of being represented can do so by paying a fee for space privileges. If a sufficient amount of money can be realized from the sale of space privileges, all the receipts from the shows, and the percentage the various merchants will contribute from sales, will give the hospital a substantial sum.

If there is not room enough near the Casino to successfully carry out the present idea, another section of the city will be secured, where the circus and other proposed out-door amusements can be held. Already merchants are beginning to ask for space and the enthusiasm shown thus early indicates that the affair will be a rousing success and the advertising benefits to the city will be incalculable. The fact that Mr. Fisk is at the head of the scheme is assurance of its success and that it will be a go from the start.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN SOCIETIES ELECT

MISSIONARY ORGANIZATIONS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING.

An all day annual missionary meeting was held at the First Presbyterian church Friday, starting in the morning with a session of the Foreign Society and concluding in the afternoon with the home missionary department work of that congregation. These officers were re-elected by the Foreign Missionary Society: President, Miss Julia J. Neil; vice president, Mrs. M. J. Petrie; secretary, Miss J. Abbott; treasurer, Miss Addie Dedrick, and secretary of literature, Mrs. E. W. Pointer. The reports of the society were encouraging, showing an increase in membership, finances, and in amount of work accomplished.

Mrs. William L. Patton, of the missionary society of the Crescent Avenue church, made an address. She spoke on the missionary expeditions of the "Morning Star," a ship first sent out by the American Board of Foreign Missions to one of the Southern Islands. Miss Julia Neil, the president of the organization, gave a short talk at the conclusion of Mrs. Patton's remarks.

At the afternoon session, the Home Missionary Society chose these officers: President, Mrs. Howard A. Pope; vice president, Mrs. Julia Austin; secretary, Mrs. Alvin Hoagland; treasurer, Mrs. E. Shotwell; secretary of literature, Mrs. John Johnston; secretary of the sewing society, Miss Fannine Kendall. ## FRIGHTFUL BURNS PROVE FATAL

Three - Year - Old Theodore Cornwell Unable to Survive After Bon-Fire Accident.

HIS CLOTHES A TORCH

Boy's Father in the West on a Business Trip Receives the Sad News by Telegram.

After extensive preparations had been completed to begin a severe operation of skin grafting, Theodore Martin Cornwell, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Cornwell, of Clinton avenue, died early this morning, the result of terrible burns received last week. Assisting his mother to burn old papers in the yard preparatory to moving, he stood too near the fire and the flames communicated to his clothing.

Mrs. Cornwell had just entered the house and was recalled by hearing his shrieks. She found him rushing about, fanning the blaze to greater fury and when she finally caught him and rolled him on the ground, his body was deeply burned from the waist down.

Dr. Endicott was called, and after administering the usual remedies, saw that the child had a chance to live but that skin grafting would have to be resorted to. He was gradually restoring his strength in order that this might be done when death came suddenly at 4 o'clock today.

The burns were unusually deep and ordinarily would have caused death within a few hours. The little fellow retained consciousness all along and Dr. Endicott declares he exhibited wonderful vitality in remaining so.

The fatality is made doubly sad because of the absence of the boy's father. He is employed by a New York cotton thread firm and for the past two months has been in Ohio on business. Efforts have been made to reach him but it was only today that he received a telegram announcing the accident and death. No arrangements for the funeral will be made until his return.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornwell were formerly residents of the borough, having lived on Watchung avenue, near Codington avenue.

TAX LAW PASSES.

Measure Injurious to Plainfield Now Up to Governor.

Senator Hillery's bill limiting the tax rate in municipalities passed the upper house yesterday by a vote of 11 to 8. It makes several provisions, one of which is that in cities of less than 50,000 population the tax rate shall be $1 50 a hundred. This applies to Plainfield and will have material effect in making up the year's budget.

The local tax rate has always hovered about $2 50 for each $100 and it will mean a curtailing in every department. The bill is now up to Governor Stokes and if he signs it, will become a law at once.

Speakers at Memorial Service.

Services in memory of Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes will be held at the First Baptist church Sunday night. It is expected that several of the local ministers will speak, also Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, formerly of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and others from New York. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor, will be in charge of the service and there will be appropriate music by the choir.

Burning Grass Threatens Houses.

Burning grass in the meadows at Park and Woodbine avenues resulted in the fire department being called at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. The flames ran so high and dangerously near the residences that a line of hose had to be laid to put them out. Chief Doane has instructed the property owners to cut what grass remains as this made the third time that houses have been threatened in this manner.

Coal Stealer Fined.

Caught by Patrolman Higgins in the act of stealing coal from Jersey Central trains at Netherwood today, Joseph Dominge was fined $10 when arraigned in the city court.

Today a Record Breaker.

The local observer's official thermometer registered 80 degrees at noon today, the highest recorded for March 29 in fourteen years.

GRACE M. E. PASTOR TO GO TO RAHWAY?

REPORT THAT HE WILL BE ASSISTANT MINISTER THERE.

Rev. R. E. Diffendorfer, pastor of Grace M. E. church, it is reported will become assistant pastor of Trinity M. E. church, Rahway, it being said that the Newark Conference will appoint him to take up work at that place. Rev. S. P. Hammond, the present pastor at Rahway, intends to retire from the active ministry and Rev. Thomas O. Mayhew, of Paterson, will be his successor with Rev. Mr. Diffendorfer as assistant.

Rev. Mr. Diffendorfer is a young man and is popular with the members of his congregation. He has been temporarily in charge of the borough church since the resignation of Rev. E. L. Earp, who left to accept a professorship at Syracuse University.

Another well founded report has it that Rev. Mr. Diffendorfer will take up work in the missionary branch of the M. E. church with headquarters in New York. It is also stated that he does not wish to have a regular charge. Rev. Mr. Diffendorfer is at Madison today and could not be reached by telephone.

EDITOR ENTERTAINS G. A. R.

Alfred E. Pearsall at Winfield Scott Post, No. 73.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and its friends were treated to an enjoyable entertainment last night by Alfred E. Pearsall, formerly editor of the Westfield Standard. Miss Budworth, a talented pianist, varied the programme, which was largely taken up by Mr. Pearsall's readings and humorous stories. Mr. Pearsall's manner is funny, and his well chosen jokes and anecdotes never failed to provoke a laugh.

Commander James Atwood, of Trenton, at one time head of the local post, made a few remarks. The affair was order by and in charge of Commander McVoy and Adjutant Smith.

Watchung Mountain Blaze.

The Watchung Mountains were on fire north of Dunellen Monday night. Brush and timberland burned furiously for hours and hundreds of residents watched the snakelike lines of fire as they ate their way up the mountain side. The fire extended over at least two miles of ground, and in many cases seriously threatened farmhouses and out-buildings. Several of the families living on top of the mountain were up all night.

TO PENSION THE FIREMEN

Chief Doane Present When Governor Signs Bill.

PROVISIONS OF LAW

Fund to be Placed in Custody of Five Trustees—Benefits Plainfield.

Chief T. O. Doane, together with others interested in the firemen's pension bill, was in Trenton yesterday, when Governor Stokes signed the bill granting the right to all fire departments in the State to establish a pension fund.

According to the provisions of the bill the fund is to be established by taking one per cent. from the firemen's salaries, a sum from the city equal to this assessment and one per cent. of the money received by the Firemen's Relief Association from the insurance companies. Annually the fire insurance companies contribute two per cent. of the business in force to the association and half of this will now go toward the pension fund.

The combined assessment from the firemen's salaries and the city appropriation will amount to about $170 in this city, while the receipts of the Firemen's Relief Association are increasing every year and its expenses growing less. Last year they amounted to $1,634.17, while from a general fund of $5,912 08, a balance, collected over expenses, of $532.50 remained. As the fund will increase annually and the number of persons to be pensioned decrease, the pension will naturally grow larger each year.

Five trustees, one of whom shall be the chief of each city fire department, and who shall be a permanent officer, shall constitute a governing body of the fund. One member shall be retired each year, and a successor shall be appointed by the board of fire commissioners. Members of the department injured in service are to receive half-pay, as are those who have reached the age of sixty years, or have been in the service twenty years. Widows of firemen receive the same amount.

She's a Newspaper Woman.

She lectures on "Antony and Cleopatra" tomorrow afternoon at All Souls' church, her talk being the final in the Lenten series.

Drew a Knife for Fun.

Getting into a fight over a trivial matter, last night, Lewis Randolph and Eugene Brittin, both well known local colored men, were arrested by the police. Brittin declared that in the fracas, Randolph drew a long bladed knife and made a desperate attempt to stab him. To Judge Runyon, this morning, Randolph declared he had pulled a knife but that he did it only to frighten his adversary. He was given his preference of $5 or twenty days and sentence was suspended on Brittin.

MARTINE ASKS STOKES TO VETO CANAL BILL

FARMER-ORATOR TELLS GOVERNOR IT IS A MONSTROUS WRONG.

The Morris Canal abandonment bill passed the House, at Trenton yesterday. It is looked upon generally by the press of the State, irrespective of party, as a particularly vicious measure designed to help corporations. Union County's Assemblymen voted solidly for it.

James E. Martine, the "farmer-orator of New Jersey," who perhaps watches the doings of the Legislature better than any other person in this city and certainly is as well informed politically as any one in this section, sent the following letter to Governor Stokes last night:

Plainfield, March 28, 1905,
Cedar Brook Farm.

Hon. E. C. Stokes,
Governor of New Jersey.

My dear sir:

The infamous canal abandonment bill has passed the House of Assembly of this State. I sincerely trust that it may fail in our State Senate, but if through grave misfortune it should pass that body also, then the only hope the people have is in your sense of right and justice that you may interpose between them and this monstrous wrong by the veto vested in you. Never was a measure before our Legislature in which the veto power was more justified. The people look to you. Let their confidence be fully realized.

Respectfully,
J. E. Martine.

Slandered The Daily Press.

An employe of the Courier-News introduced another workman engaged on that paper, as a reporter for The Daily Press and both were accordingly admitted to an affair in Saengerbund Hall last night. Because of their boisterous actions and intoxicated condition, we understand, they were ejected. In justice to this paper we wish to say that neither has any connection with The Daily Press whatever. Furthermore the reporters for this paper are men of good deportment and are not addicted to liquor.

To Raise $500,000 Fund.

Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, is one of the committee appointed to interest Baptists in the raising of an endowment fund of $500,000 to extend the scope of the American Baptist Missionary Union's work in the East. The committee met yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Manhattan and last night a number of prominent and wealthy men were entertained at dinner at the hotel, incidental to interesting them in the plan. The party subscribed $60,000.

Plainfielders at Pryor Concert.

Probably fifty Plainfielders in all attended the concert given by Arthur Pryor's band in Jacobs' Theatre, Elizabeth, last night. The programme was made up of classical and popular selections and its rendition was perfect, the whole combining to make an excellent entertainment. Chris Sorensen, Jr., of this city, is in charge of the tour of the band, which lasts until the regular season begins at Asbury Park on May 30.

Circuit Court Open.

The March term of the United States Circuit Court began yesterday at Trenton, when Judge William M. Lanning called the list. The judge announced that his colleague-to-be, Judge Cross, president of the Senate, would hear arguments on demurrers in Newark on April 11. He added that no jury would be drawn in that city, and that Judge Cross would not always sit in these.

J. William Waters Returns.

J. William Waters, who suddenly left his home on Harrison avenue ten days ago, returned to the city last night. ## ANOTHER SKIRT FACTORY

M. Kahn to Locate a Plant in Schepflin Building.

LOCAL CAPITAL

Work at New Industrial Place to Begin Early Next Month.

Another industry will soon be located in this city. M. Kahn, of 137th street, New York, formerly engaged as foreman for Herzig & Kapp, of Watchung avenue, has about completed the arrangements for the lease of the building on West Front street, formerly owned by the late Christian Schepflin, where he proposes to manufacture women's garments on an extensive scale.

Mr. Kahn will equip the building with all the latest improved machinery for the employment of a large force of women. He is thoroughly experienced in the business and believes that Plainfield is especially well located for such an industry, it being close to New York, and possible to get a better class of employes. Mr. Kahn expects to be able to begin business sometime during April.

The building he will occupy is just suited to this business, it having previously been used for the manufacture of clothing. Mr. Kahn will use the entire second floor of the building.

Local capital is back of the concern.

LECTURED ON BIRDS.

Feature of Annual Meeting of Audubon Society in Crescent Avenue Church Last Night.

Herbert K. Job, an authority, writer and a lecturer, gave a talk at the annual meeting of the Audubon Society last night at the Crescent Avenue church before a good sized audience. A meeting of the executive committee was held before the lecture, at which these officers were elected: President, Alexander Gilbert; secretary and treasurer, Miss Julia Scribner.

Rev. Alfred C. Nickerson, as chairman of the executive committee, made a few remarks explanatory of the work of the society, after which he introduced Mr. Job, as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Job described mainly, birds which are not familiar, particularly those which are difficult to photograph. The pictures, beautifully colored, were attractive and true to nature. The pictures of the young quail, which Mr. Job said, particularly delighted President Roosevelt, when shown in a recent lecture at the White House, on account of their rarity, were realistic and vivid. Mr. Job gave the entire lecture before President Roosevelt's family, a few weeks ago, the Chief Executive being a great lover of birds.

M'DONOUGHS GET LUMBER YARD PERMIT

INSPECTOR GRANTS THE PETITION TO BUILD BUILDING AND SHEDS.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has granted a permit to McDonough Brothers to erect a lumber building and shed on their recently purchased property on West Third street, near Madison avenue.

This he was obliged to do as the plans and specifications accompanying the application conform in every respect to the building ordinance. Further than that, the firm has filed an affidavit that it will willingly make any changes suggested by the building inspector which will tend to make the buildings more safe and fireproof. In speaking of the matter this morning Mr. Doane said that the firm could not be asked to do more than it has already done.

The building which McDonough Brothers propose to erect will be about one hundred feet long, twenty-five feet wide and about sixteen feet high. It will be constructed entirely of brick and corrugated iron and will be as near fire-proof as possible. Owing to the limited height it would be an easy matter to fight a fire in the structure, and it would not be as hazardous as some other buildings of much larger proportions. It is expected that McDonough Brothers will soon commence the work of construction.

W. A. Coddington represented McDonough Brothers and convinced Common Council that it had no jurisdiction in the matter at all.

Indignant over the charge made by former Judge W. A. Coddington on the floor of the Common Council chamber that the lumber dealers in this city had a combination regulating prices and that rates for lumber here are higher than in adjoining places, Leizeaux & Company have sent the following letter to this paper for publication:

Referring to W. A. Coddington's remarks as attorney for Messrs. McDonough Brothers before the Common Council Monday evening, we beg to state that he had not the slightest basis for his charge that this company was "back" of the opposition to the application for these gentlemen for a lumber yard.

We have not in any way, or at any time, directly of indirectly opposed, or do oppose that application.

In reply to his remark "Why is it we can get cheaper lumber in Elizabeth, Westfield, Bound Brook, etc.?" we simply answer it is not true. The fact is, we have our teams constantly delivering lumber to Somerville, Bound Brook, Westfield, Scotch Plains, Garwood, Cranford, and even as far as Montclair; whilst no lumber is being brought to Plainfield from these places in competition. Common sense would surely teach that it is sold here as cheap or cheaper than anywhere in the vicinity, and will continue to be so as long as we are in the business.

Mr. Coddington will undoubtedly be glad to withdraw a slur that has no foundation.

J. D. Leizeaux Lumber Company.

Nineteenth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Stillman, of West Fourth street, were happily surprised last evening on the occasion of their nineteenth wedding anniversary. The affair was quietly arranged by their daughter, Miss Nettie Stillman, who was assisted by Mr. Toms and Miss Oakley. There were thirty guests. During the evening music and games were enjoyed, while at a late hour refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Stillman are well known, having resided here nearly all their lives.

Read Papers at Women's Meeting.

At the regular monthly missionary meeting of the Women's Association of the Congregational church yesterday afternoon, a paper on current missionary events was read by Miss Elsie Saffern. A book review of the life of Horace P. Pitkin, a young missionary martyr, who was killed in the Boxers' insurrection at China, also proved and interesting feature. Mrs. C. L. Goodrich presided at the meeting, which was followed by a social hour and tea.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Tugwell, of the New Madison, who have been visiting out of town for some days, are expected home soon.

C. J. FISK FOR SENATOR

Former Mayor's Name Introduced in Contest for Seat.

A STRONG CANDIDATE

Others Mentioned for the Nomination Include Buckle, Runyon, Ackerman and Newcorn.

The Elizabeth Journal introduces former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city, as a worthy candidate to succeed Judge Joseph Cross, of Elizabeth, as State Senator from Union County, and the suggestion has been received with much enthusiasm here, where Mr. Fisk is looked upon as the most progressive worker for the municipality's well-being. He is at present president of the local Board of Health and occupies the same position on the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Others who have been mentioned for the place include Mayor James F. Buckle, of the First ward; City Judge William N. Runyon, of the Second ward; Ernest R. Ackerman, of the Third ward, and former Assemblyman William Newcorn.

Should Mr. Fisk decline the honor, Judge Runyon will likely be the candidate for the honor and he will be the choice of the local Republican administration, which once before presented his name to the nominating convention. Mr. Ackerman would be strongly supported by the friends of United States Senator John Kean should he decide to enter the lists. Mr. Newcorn's friends count upon his record in the Assembly as a strong card for his approval by the voters.

"The next Senator from Union County will be a Plainfield man," says the Elizabeth Journal, the recognized organ of the party in this county, and it adds that it will be up to Plainfield to decide who will be its candidate.

PLAINFIELDER WEDS A SOMERVILLE GIRL

COUNTY SEAT SOCIETY PEOPLE SURPRISED AT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Considerable surprise was occasioned in the social circles of Someville, by the announcement today of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Mehlenbeck, daughter of Mrs. E. B. Mehlenbeck, of that place, and Harry Paulstone Mesler, of this city, which took place at the parsonage of the Second Reformed church, Somerville, Sunday night, Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, the pastor, officiating.

The engagement of the couple was announced a few months ago, but their friends had not the slightest intimation of the marriage. Both the bride and goom are well-known in this city. Miss Reimer, a friend of the bride, attended the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Mesler are now enjoying a honeymoon. Next week the bride, accompanied by her mother, will sail for an extended visit with relatives in Scotland.

CATHOLICISM IN FRANCE.

Subject of Lecture Heard by Knights of Columbus.

Prof. McAuliff, of New York, gave a highly instructive lecture at the meeting of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, on the subject of "Catholicism in France." He reviewed the history of Catholics from the early days up to the present time, relating many incidents about the leaders of the faith.

Following the lecture the members enjoyed a novel feature in the form of a prize-story-telling contest. Charles Ward and H. P. Greenwood were credited with telling the best stories. The rest of the evening was spent in a social way.

Plainfielders Won Applause.

The Metropolitan papers of yesterday devote some space to a reception and exhibition given Monday night by the Whipple Art School, which was formally opened at the studios, 900 Sixth avenue, and the programme included a delightful musical in which are mentioned Miss Florence C. Wehlfert, violinist, and Miss Etta Raybert, soprano, of this city. A number of society people of New York assisted in receiving.

Governor to be a K. T.

As soon as he can find time to lay down the cares of State for a few hours, Governor Stokes will journey to Millville where he will be made a Knight Templar by Olivet Commandery. He is a member of Shekinah Lodge, F. and A. M., of that place.

THE WINTER BIRDS

WHAT FEATHERED FRIENDS OF THE FARMER DO FOR HIM.

They Hunt Out and Devour Myriads of Insect Enemies of Orchard Trees—Even the Hawk Is Useful.

The intelligent agriculturist no longer allows prejudice and superstition to interfere with his interests; he desires in all cases to act from knowledge and reason, based either on his personal observation or on the experience of some one whose authority he knows to be reliable.

The easiest way for the farmer, or for anyone else for that matter, to find out in a general way, which of the birds are beneficial and which are harmful to us, is to write to the secretary of agriculture for free pamphlets on this subject. The best way for him to get the same information is to go out on his farm and into the country surrounding it, and watch the birds at their daily work; not just when they happen to be in the cherry tree or the poultry yard, but all through the year. He may not have time to do this during warm weather, but even in winter he can get some slight idea of the value of wild birds, by carefully watching those, which are on his premises at this season. Let him go into his orchard and see for himself what some of the birds are doing for his fruit trees.

Probably one of the first he will see will be a woodpecker of some kind, and in that case he is sure to see a very useful bird. Of the 40 odd species and subspecies of woodpeckers in this country, only one is sometimes destructive to the trees. This is the yellow-bellied sapsucker, but as he does not usually winter north of Virginia, it is not likely that he will be seen here. Ten to one it will be a downy or a hairy woodpecker. These two are much alike in general appearance, except that the latter is considerably larger than the former. In either case he will be found very busy searching for and devouring insects' eggs, larvae and adult insects of one kind or another, which have their home on, in or below the bark of the tree. Some of these insects are pests of the worst sort, and if they were not gathered up by the birds in the winter the trees would be alive with them in the spring, and in many cases they would destroy not only the fruit, but in some cases even the trees themselves. Of course these birds carry on their warfare all through the rest of the year, eating ants, caterpillars and crawlers of many kinds by thousands, but the farmer, being busy with other matters, will not be so likely to see them at it.

Perhaps the next bird to appear may be a nuthatch, a bird much smaller even than the downy woodpecker and quite different in appearance and manners. It may be a white-breasted or a red-breasted nuthatch, but in either case he will be seen to be a very important little personage; not a harder worker than the woodpecker, perhaps, but with a greater appearance of bustle.

Or our farmer may see a band of chickadees, of whose identity no one can ever be in doubt, since they repeat their own name over and over, wherever they go, as they swing, often head downwards, among the twigs. Very tame they are at this season, and with but little patience they will feed from one's hands or lips, as they did from mine more than a hundred times last winter. They are engaged in the same work as the woodpeckers and the nuthatches, viz., the extermination of myriads of insects, which if allowed to increase unchecked, would make the work of the fruit grower heartbreaking and unprofitable.

Let the farmer now look over the fields beyond the orchard and observe that clear-cut figure of a hawk, sailing in circles against the sky. If he will but believe it that is a feathered servant, working conscientiously from dawn until dusk, and without pay, to rid his farm of the rats, mice and other rodents which play such havoc with his property at all times of the year. It has been estimated that the hawk will destroy in one year 1,000 mice or their equivalent in noxious insects, and the farmer need not be told what a thousand mice can do to his fruit trees in the course of one severe winter. He knows, only too well, perhaps, that they can kill more than as many trees by girdling them with their teeth, as I saw many a hundred trees killed last winter in the same way. Now and then a hawk of some species will get a chicken from the poultry yard, but let him not be hasty to revenge the act. What other workman can he get to do so much honest work at so small a wage?

If the farmer will only study the habits of the birds he sees before undertaking to shoot any of them, and then shoot only those which he proves have done him more harm than good, his crops will be larger, and his bill for powder and shot will never keep him awake at night.

A GREAT CATHEDRAL

MAGNIFICENT STRUCTURE OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE.

Morton's $600,000 Gift Insures Completion of First Stages—Will Be One of Finest Church Edifices in the World.

New York.—The gift of $600,000 to the building fund of the great cathedral of St. John the Divine, now rising on the crest of Morningside Heights, overlooking the broad Hudson, brings within sight the completion of the first stage of the work on what will be one of the most remarkable church edifices in the history of the world. Former Vice President Levi P. Morton, whose identity as the donor of this splendid contribution has just been disclosed, divided his gift into $450,000 for the construction of the choir and $150,000 for the installation of the reredos, choir stalls and other furnishings which will finish that part of the structure. Of the $400,000 required for the "crossing," the trustees already have $150,000 outright, while $100,000 more is pledged to be forthcoming as soon as the remaining $150,000 necessary is raised. When this is done, in place of the irregular pile which is now all that is visible of the beautiful cathedral, there will be on the summit of Morningside Heights the largest church in the city of New York. Even this will be but a small part of the gigantic structure that is ultimately to stand there.

The statutes and canons of the cathedral of St. John the Divine were adopted on December 27, 1904, thus creating a complete cathedral organization—an organization which in the minds of most Americans is associated rather with some sleepy English provincial town than with the great business center of the new world. Just 13 years before these canons were declared in force Bishop Potter formally inaugurated the work on the cathedral on St. John's day, 1891. The visible results of these years of building seem remarkably small to the man who is accustomed to watch a modern skyscraper shoot 20 stories from the ground in the course of a few months. A better idea of the progress that has already been made is obtained when one stops to consider how different is the erection of a great cathedral and of a steel office building.

The Gothic-Romanesque cathedral of St. John the Divine, which will bear comparison in size as well as in beauty with the most famous edifices on the other side of the Atlantic, has already advanced an appreciable distance toward completion and three or four years should see the choir and the "crossing" ready for services. This will make the structure, in technical language, about 20 per cent. completed, but the rest of the work, it is believed, can be pushed far more rapidly. Even if it should be 40 years before the last stone is in place, St. John's would be among the quickest in erection as it is among the largest in size of the cathedrals of the world.

Towering above the heights along the Hudson, St. John's will occupy in the cosmopolis of America much the same position as St. Paul's does in London. Old St. Paul's, which took a matter of two centuries to complete, was burned in the great fire of 1666, and eight years were devoted to clearing away the rubbish. Of the new building, on which work was begun in 1675, only the walls of the choir had been finished by 1685, and it was 12 years later before any services were held in it. In 1710, 35 years after the beginning of the work, St. Paul's was finished. With the exception of Salisbury, it is the only English cathedral designed and completed in one style of architecture. The others, growing slowly from generation to generation, embody the changing taste of the men who worked upon them.

The most pretentious churches of the world are in large measure the result of civic pride as well as religious enthusiasm. To the burgher of the middle ages his city took the place of the nation and in no better way could he show his patriotism and his piety than by the erection of as imposing a cathedral as the city's wealth could produce. St. Mark's in Venice and the Florence cathedral, to cite two of many instances, are as thoroughly civic undertakings as the bridges now spanning the East river.

Wonders of Mining.

The deepest mining shaft has been sunk to a little more than a mile in Cape Colony, and the deepest bore hole has reached about the same depth in Silesia. It is said that there should be no insurmountable difficulties in carrying a shaft down 12 miles. An approximate estimate has shown that to reach a depth of two miles the cost would be $2,500,000. Ten years would be required and a rock temperature of 122 degrees Fahrenheit would be found; while to penetrate 12 miles would cost $25,000,000 and would take 85 years, the rock temperature expected being 272 degrees Fahrenheit.

Many Dainty Ways of Making Underwear—Embroidered Hats.

The nightgowns in lingerie sets have the sleeves set in with the tiniest of beading and the long skirt seams put together in the same way.

Some of the smartest nightdresses are embroidered in large sprawling designs not unlike those used on shirt waists.

The French are substituting the elaborate chemise in place of the corset cover, but here in America the corset cover is sharing honors with the chemise. Some of the new covers are marvels of fine hand work embroidery.

China silk slip petticoats are growing in favor. The prettiest of the new ones have shirring and lace and hand embroidered dots by way of trimming.

Lingerie blouses are things of beauty with their fairylike traceries of hand embroidery and fine inset laces. The sewing on these blouses is as exquisite as the materials.

Silk golf petticoats come very much frilled, and the short woman may profit by this elaborate golf finery and purchase them for ordinary wear.

Hats of hand embroidered linen and batiste are trimmed with liberty ribbon and flowers.

Fetching hats of embroidered batiste have wreaths of shaded roses around the crown.

The airy little toque illustrated is of swathed white tulle. It is dented into a becoming shape, with knots of the tulle holding a bunch of peacock feathers at the side.

PARASOL NEWS.

The Handles Are Things of Beauty. Animal Heads a Novel Design.

The parasols on view in the shops have elaborately carved handles showing animals' heads with jeweled eyes. Many of these handles may be bought separately and adjusted to odd parasols.

The handle on a white taffeta silk parasol is formed of a swan's long curved neck and head. The eyes are small black beads.

A stunning parasol is of black peau de soie, lined with white silk and trimmed with motifs of white lace. Violet silk treated in the same way is charming.

A scarlet parasol has a handle of black onyx, with a knob incrusted with mock rubies.

All the smart parasols have large bows tied about the handles.

A new automobile parasol of silk has a wide border of scalloped leather about the edge and a matlike piece at the top.

Little round French crowns appear on the new hats. A smart hat is called the "polo." It has charming little curves and is simply trimmed with a bunch of flowers or an aigret and chou.

Jaunty suits of checked tweed are shown in the shops for early spring wear.

A summer fad will be the wearing of colored silk girdles with hair nets to match.

Light blue linen for shirt waist suits will be very much worn. This linen sells for 50 cents a yard.

Heavy padded embroidery is used on light cloth and linen gowns.

The strapped shirt waist with a long silk scarf pulled down through the strap is a smart model.

Very good style is the envelope hat, its four corners folding over the crown and a long plume showing through the openings.

The tiny tot's gown illustrated is of heavy linen. The skirt is box plaited. The smart reefer jacket has inset cuffs and a collar of blue linen. Large pearl buttons fasten the coat.

Prominent Points In the Ever Widening Sphere of Woman

A curious thing happened recently. Under the "hypnotic" spell which comes from a long course of novel reading and a lack of useful and steady employment a girl married hastily a man whom she did not know well. Her family advised against the match, but, as usual, this rather hurried it on. The young woman, after a few months of matrimony, found that novels are not what they seem. Her husband was exactly the opposite of the fiction heroes she had adored. The husband who had seemed a hero became to her a brute and monster. He really treated her very badly, but kept "tab" on her so she could not get away from him. The law declared she was his property, body and bones. At length, in desperation, she ran away and returned to her family while the husband was absent from home. Her family made her welcome, especially two stalwart brothers. A continent now separated her from the ex-hero, but no sooner had he returned to his dismantled home than he loped off hotfoot after the wife who had found his society so undesirable. He drove in a carriage to the door of the lady's brother's home and "demanded"—demanded, mind you—that his wife should be turned over to him like a piece of luggage. For answer the big brothers handcuffed the assumed owner of that woman and took him to the police station. Now, here is the question; here are two questions: Has a man the right to break into his wife's presence whenever and wherever he pleases, whether she wants him or not? Does a wife, simply because she is a wife, lose that sacred right of privacy which belongs alike to all human beings?

When the race is truly civilized, disease and decrepitude will be wiped out. The glad years will come and go and leave no trace upon men and women except that they will become always wiser, stronger, more loving.

One effect of the continually advancing price of meat, poultry and even of eggs since the formation of the hen trust will be to drive housekeepers back upon fruit, nuts and vegetables. They will learn how many delicious and nutritious food preparations can be made without either eggs or meat. Take the single article of the banana. One can buy in the large cities excellent bananas for a cent apiece. They can be sliced with pineapple pulp and eaten raw for dessert, and they can be baked or fried. There is also now a banana flour made, which is useful and most palatable in various dishes. Americans are a nation of excessive meat eaters. If the high price of animal flesh shall turn them from necessity to a less heating diet and one more agreeable to the imagination, then it will be a blessing not at all disguised.

One of the most successful railroad contractors and constructors in the country is Mrs. Theodora Beacham, at present working on a road in Virginia. The railway company not long ago sent Mrs. Beacham a check for $15,000 for services performed to date. Once more, why not?

Do you know how to sign and indorse a check? So many women don't.

An enlarging field for women who can write grammatically and entertainingly is found among the advertising and trade papers. Mrs. Ada Crisp of New York is the editor of an interesting and attractive magazine giving news of the grocery and delicatessen trade. Miss Carmelita Beckwith has been for some years in sole charge of the advertising department of a leading gas and electric company in New York. She issues a handsome monthly bulletin for the company. In the same city Miss Florence Levy successfully established and conducts a periodical devoted to art matters. Many others might be named.

The king of Siam has six grown daughters, and they dress in a handsome uniform of white blouse, black knickerbockers, black stockings and buckled shoes. They are graceful and beautifully formed and look very attractive, with their dark hair and sparkling eyes. Their mother, the queen, dresses in the same way as the girls do. Their attire is the national garb of the Siamese women.

Miss Tremere, eighteen years old, is a girl who, with her mother, conducts a grocery in a certain big city. Not long ago she was robbed of several hundred dollars in property and money. The police were notified. They were supposed to have put their most foxy sleuths on the thief's track. These gentlemen did nothing. The prospect was the girl would never get any of her property back. She determined to hunt the thief herself. She evolved a plan which, perhaps because of its very simplicity, was overlooked by the astute masculine sleuths. She patiently watched and waited and at length ran the thief to cover and got back her money and jewels. Women everywhere are proving that they can attend to their affairs better than anybody else can do it for them.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

Gay and Brilliant Seasons at the National Capital.

Almost every American girl looks longingly forward to spending a winter in Washington. Her imagination paints its balls, its dinners, receptions and afternoon teas as scenes of enchantment in which she hopes sooner or later to appear.

The American girl's imagination does not lead her wrong. In no capital of Europe is the best social circle so democratic, therefore so attractive, as that of Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her aids as well as certain ladies of the diplomatic corps are interested in giving a dignified, somewhat conventional tone to Washington society. On the other hand, however, there is a dashing young set that wishes society to be gay and jolly, dignity or no dignity. Thus far probably the lively young set has the best of it, especially as one of its leaders is Alice, Mrs. Roosevelt's own stepdaughter.

Miss Alice Roosevelt.

but in the White House. Alice Roosevelt has her father's facile way of skipping from place to place. If he can attend two dinners and make three speeches in one evening, in like manner can Miss Alice go to three parties in one evening and then take a train for New York or California or the end of the earth.

She has a will as strong as her father's and is original in thought and action. A sufficient income, which she inherited in her own right, enables her to do in a great measure as she pleases. Being so like her father in will and courage, she naturally is little afraid of his "big stick."

On both sides of the Atlantic matchmakers have been busying themselves for two or three years to find a husband for Miss Roosevelt. Last summer during her visit to the St. Louis exposition Hon. Nicholas Longworth, the gallant bachelor member of congress from Cincinnati, made things specially pleasant for her by his courteous attentions, and at once there was forecast a wedding—which did not come off. Paris gossips have amused themselves by selecting for her any one of a dozen royal princes. But probably the president's spirited daughter will settle the matter for herself.

Mrs. Charles Warren Fairbanks.

A more important personage than ever in Washington society is Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of the vice president. She is more highly and solidly educated than almost any other woman in the capital's social circle. She is a college graduate and also studied law with her husband, in due time receiving a diploma as bachelor of laws. She has had a course in international and parliamentary law, the latter fitting her especially to fill the post of president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to which she was elected. When her children, four sons and a daughter, were little, she studied medicine that she might know better how to take care of them.

Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks will continue to live in the house they occupied when Mr. Fairbanks was senator from Indiana. It is adapted to large entertainments, and that commends it to Mrs. Fairbanks, one of the most hospitable hostesses of Washington. In the selection of her guests she is entirely independent, governed by no official precedent.

Young Members of Society.

Seldom has the national capital's social set contained so many beautiful and accomplished girls as have graced it the past two seasons. Two of the latest comers are Miss Pauline Morton, daughter of the secretary of the navy, and Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Elkins of West Virginia. Both these young ladies have mothers who, if possible, are even handsomer than their daughters. Miss Elkins is devoted to outdoor life and to horses, having three hunters of her own that nobody but herself ever rides. Many of the Washington society girls are of the athletic type.

Among scores of charming young American ladies in the capital set may be named the Misses McKenna, daughters of Justice McKenna; Miss Converse, Miss Mathilde Townsend and Miss Warren.

THE NEWEST WAISTS.

All That Is Novel Concerning This Important and Interesting Subject.

We scarcely know "where we are at" in the way of the styles, for in some places we find directoire suits of the most glaring colors, richest of materials and daring of shapes—daring, for in these suits we may find a leg o' mutton sleeve and a first empire waist, with still enough of the directoire form to be a saving grace. A flounce does not by right belong to that, but we may find not one, but two or three and several other caprices which seem to be iconoclast of a dressmaker so pretty that she adds them, and the whole is called directoire. The coat, however, is always in evidence and has something about it reminiscent of directoire days, and so long as the women are satisfied it is all right. Then, just as we begin to get it into our heads that the style mentioned above is to be the vogue, to the exclusion of everything else, we come suddenly upon a lot of costumes and separate articles—hats, gloves, coats and furs or something—which are distinctly of the time of the Louises.

NEW SPRING WAIST.

But nothing has or will have the importance of the shirt waist. This has evidently come to stay, for, no matter whether we are expected to wear directoire or Louis XVI. garments or the style so ingloriously named "shirt waist," we are not to be persuaded to throw aside so useful a thing.

The Paramount Waist.

The waist, then, being paramount, we will say a few words about it. In the first place, it is shown in every possible kind of material and form. Just now the silks and velutinas have it, but there are enough washable ones offered or making to encircle the globe, I verily believe. The best liked style is the plain one with plaits made large or small as the wearer's individual taste may dictate. The inch wide plait extending from shoulder to waist is the neatest and is the easiest to iron, and for that reason the waist made in this way gives the best satisfaction in the long run. Dotted swiss is very pretty and is suitable for the young, and in the picture it will be seen that over the shoulders of the wearer is the revived suspender effect. The suspenders are made of black velvet. Lace forms the cuffs and collar. Another waist shows how several tucks may be laid from shoulder to waist in clusters. The rest is finished in regular shirt waist design. Another one shows an application of white butcher linen over a polka dotted waist. Large white pearl buttons finish it. Still another has a yoke of lace with a tab down the front, to which is shirred pale blue India silk. The sleeves are plain leg o' mutton, with a hanging cuff of the lace. With this is worn a folded belt of pale blue taffeta.

French lingerie waists with the fronts hand embroidered, some with lace as insertion and edging, are especially elegant. Some very desirable ones are made of handkerchief linen, with old fashioned eyelet embroidery. There are many styles in oriental net and other lace waists, some made over colored taffeta and others with white. It would be impossible to do this subject justice, but this much may be said—the white wash waists and the figured percales and batistes and other cottons, madras, ginghams and the thousand and one other pretty and useful fabrics offered are all cheap and pretty as well as fast in color.

Braid as Trimming.

The trimming most often seen where embroidery is not applied directly on the material is braid. There are silk fancies, linen and cotton ones and the beautiful fancy mohairs. There is nothing made for which a suitable trimming cannot be found in these castle braids.

Among the handsome outdoor costumes for spring are the taffeta redingote suits. The finest of these are black, some of them having white satin vests, cuffs and revers. Others have stitched pongee trimmings. These suits are also made in colored silk. Some very neat and fetching suits on this order are made of shepherd checks in silk, mostly with blouse of the same with fancy vest and belt. Tailored suits of broadcloth have blouse waists with snug Eton jackets outside of them. Some have the redingote, which is a handsome and stylish garment and very becoming to nearly all figures. Walking skirts are very smart this season and are of sicilienne, broadcloth, cravenette, tweed, silk, voile, canvas, panama, heavy linen, nub cottons and cheviots.

Tsi An, Wonderful Old Dowager Empress of the Chinese Empire

From having been called for years the "terrible old woman of China" the dowager empress of that land may now well be named "the wonderful old woman of China." It has certainly come about that, with the exception of the empress of Japan, Tsi An, seventy years old last November, is the newest new woman of the far orient. It is coming to be understood that the best thing which can be for China is to have this iron old woman live long; that probably nobody but she would have been able to preserve the integrity of that empire.

Tsi An has abolished foot binding among the girls of her country. She has established schools and from her own private purse has contributed funds to build sixteen colleges in Chinese cities. She has given audiences face to face with foreigners, which no empress of China ever did before. She has even permitted her portrait to be painted by Miss Carl, an American. One of the notable sights of the St. Louis exposition was this picture of the wonderful old woman of China, with her gorgeous robes and distinguished finger nails three inches long.

Two persons are chiefly to be credited with the remarkable change for the better in dowager Empress Tsi An. One of them is her former adviser, brave old Li Hung Chang, General Grant's friend, and the other is a noble American woman, Mrs. Sara J. Conger, wife of the former United States minister to China.

The Gunmaker's Daughter.

At the death of her mother, Mme. Krupp, the richest woman in the world will undoubtedly be Fraulein Bertha Krupp, daughter of the great cannon builder of Essen, Germany. When her father died two years ago he left to Bertha, his eldest daughter, aged nineteen, property worth $75,000,000 and the responsibility for the conduct of his immense interests, gunmaking, shipbuilding, iron and coal mining, stone quarrying, miscellaneous iron and steel works and a line of ocean steamers. The executive business of these vast enterprises is superintended by Miss Krupp, with the aid of experienced advisers.

The young lady is a solid business woman, in her ability to manage large interests somewhat resembling the American Helen Gould. By the time she is as old as some of her counselors Miss Krupp says she hopes she will know as much as they do about business. On the death of her mother the fortune of the gunmaker's daughter will be greatly increased.

Mrs. Bandelier, Peruvian Explorer.

If for nothing else, Mrs. Fanny Bandelier deserves fame because, as she says, "I do not know what fear is."

When a mere child at school the things ordinary, silly, cowardly little girls scream at and run away from she did not mind in the least. No wonder, then, that when she became a young lady in her native Switzerland and was married to Professor Bandelier, the explorer, she went at once with him to Peru and began to rummage among ruins for relics of the Incas. The fruit of the united labors of the pair for eleven years, a rare collection of prehistoric Peruvian and Inca relics, has recently been placed on exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History in New York city. Mrs. Bandelier herself packed every article of the lot, besides having dug many of them.

Mrs. Jennie A. Maxim.

A notable practical philanthropist is Mrs. Jennie A. Maxim, art dealer and superintendent of the Union For Home Work of Pittsfield, Mass. One chief object of the union is to free Pittsfield from pauperism. Largely through the energetic and wise direction of Mrs. Maxim this has been well nigh accomplished.

The chief causes of pauperism Mrs. Maxim finds to be drink and laziness. She has concluded that the whipping post is the best medicine for brutal husbands. Instead of being fed up and fattened in a comfortable jail while their families, deprived even of their miserable support, become public charges, Mrs. Maxim would have wife beaters soundly lashed and sent back to their work.

SEND ENGINE TO STOP WILD TRAIN

AN UNUSUAL RAILROAD EXPERIENCE IN NEW JERSEY.

ENGINEER BLOWN FROM CAB

An Explosion Started the Runaway Freight—Its Perilous Race on the Rails—Tracks Cleared in Record Time.

New York.—Railroad men on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western are discussing with much interest the unusual and perilous method resorted to to stop a runaway freight train which rushed headlong at a furious speed for a distance of five miles without a guiding hand at the locomotive's throttle, after the engine driver had been whisked out of the cab window at a point five miles from Port Morris, N. J., by the force of an explosion.

Train No. 43, laden with milk, and bound west, was bowling along at a good speed when the accident occurrerd. Patrick Fortin, the engine driver was in his seat in a big camel-back engine, while his fireman was out on the tender, preparing to hook down a water spout into the reserve box when the train reached Waterloo.

Suddenly the joint of a big pipe leading from the engine's boilers blew out, and Fortin, enveloped in steam, was hurled with terrific force through the cab window. The rattle of the train prevented the fireman from hearing the sound of the explosion, so he remained at his place on the tender.

Fortin landed by the side of the track, scalded and bleeding, but he shouted to a trackman to take word to an operator that No. 43 was "running wild," and to telegraph ahead and clear the track.

Hoboken received the message and sent it on to Hackensack. There a fast engine, containing an extra engine driver, was started down the track ahead of the runaway train, and in the same direction as it was running. Instruction was given the engine's crew to brush ahead at a fast speed and gradually allow the runaway train to gain on them until their engine could slow down and allow the approaching train to jolt into it. Then the extra engine driver was to climb over the pilot of the freight engine, and, entering the cab, stop the train.

Meantime the train was plunging ahead at an increasing speed. A way freight got on to a siding at Waterloo in the nick of time to escape a collision.

The fireman on the tender kept his position until a point a few miles past Waterloo was reached, and, not understanding why the train hadn't stopped for water, went into the cab to learn the reason. When he failed to find the engine driver he promptly stopped the train and sent back a brakeman to search for Fortin. Then, taking the throttle, he pressed a brakeman into service as fireman and ran the train ahead and overtook the engine which had been sent out on the perilous mission of stopping the runaway.

Fortin was sent to St. John's hospital, Paterson. He resides at Scranton, Pa.

Used Music to Pull Teeth.

Paris.—A Paris dentist was fined 25f. (five dollars) for using music in extracting teeth. The ground was that such a specific was not contained in the pharmacopoeia. The dental surgeon thought he had discovered a way, both novel and ingenious, to lull nervous patients to insensibility by sweet strains of harmony and the striking novelty drew crowds of customers. But often, when the melodious anaesthetic failed, the doctor resorted surreptitiously to nitrous oxide or vulgar laughing gas. The court severely reprimanded the modern Orpheus.

Shot Five Boars in Ten Seconds.

Paris.—A remarkable shooting exploit is reported from Aye, Luxemburg Baron Alfred Coppens, with a repeating rifle, was posted at the edge of the forest when seven boars emerged in single file. The baron's gun being an automatic repeater, he was able to fire five times within ten seconds and brought down four of the biggest boars in their tracks, the victims remaining in line. The fifth one fell dead 10 yards further.

Kidnaped Boy Hunts Kin.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Marshall Smith Jr., aged 23 years, has arrived at Paris Ill., from Montana in search of his father, Marshall Smith, Sr., to verify a story recently told him that he was kidnaped from Paris when a baby. He has gone to Chrisman, Ill., where it is said his father now lives.

ADVICE FOR EVERYBODY.

It Is Given Gratuitously by a Young and Handsome English Nobleman.

London.—Though he is only 32 years old, the earl of Beauchamp—pronounced "Beecham," you know—is said to possess the distinction of having made more speeches than any other living Englishman. He takes himself very seriously and believes that it is his chief mission in life to set other people right by bestowing upon them unlimited advice and counsel. He never lacks an opportunity to ventilate his ideas, because lords are always in demand at public functions in England. It has not yet been noted that he has ever accomplishtd anything by his oratory, but he is still young and persevering.

(English Nobleman Who Has Advice for Everybody.)

He is very devout, and in his early youth he had decided to enter the ministry. He changed his mind on that point on succeeding to the ancestral acres and titles when only 19. He has, however, always shown keen interest in church matters, and only the other day he berated church choirs and organists for being more devoted to music than to religion and thereby sacrificing piety to art.

When he was 27 a conservative government whipped him off to New South Wales as governor of that colony. The Antipodeans, who have much less respect for hereditary titles than English folk, did not take very kindly to him. His state dances were derisively dubbed "Seidlitz Powder balls," because tickets of admission were blue and white. The holders of the blue pasteboards were entitled to a better feed than those who had been provided only with white ones, and had other exclusive privileges, too. To the democratic colonists distinctions of this sort savored of snobbishness, and they resented it. The earl did not mend matters any by taking them to task for their small families and declining birth rate. That sort of talk comes all very well from President Roosevelt, whose precepts are backed up by the example his own home furnishes of a large and healthy family, but Australian husbands and wives regarded it as sheer impertinence, coming from a young peer who was at that time still a bachelor, although he could well afford a wife.

In 1902 Beauchamp married Lady Lettice Grosvenor, a daughter of the late Earl Grosvenor and a sister of the second duke of Westminster.

The earl is a very good looking man, and he knows it, too. Likewise he is well aware that he has very shapely hands, and they always figure prominently in his photographs. He is considered the best dressed man in the house of lords.

New Spiritualistic Leader Is Attracting a Large Following in New York.

New York.—The strange mystery of Rev. May S. Pepper and her spiritualistic power is attracting great attention in Brooklyn. Mrs. Pepper does not pretend to read the future; she does not even enact the pretense of going into a "trance" state. Messages purporting to come from the dead are received through her in answer to questions placed in

IGNORANT OF WEALTH

CHILDREN WHO DO NOT KNOW THEY ARE RICH.

No One Allowed to Tell the Children of the Late J. Hooker Hamersley That They Are Worth Fifty Millions.

New York.—That the "simple life" is not of necessity restricted to the capacity of the slender purse, and that the living of it may under certain circumstances entail an infinitude of complexities quite undreamed of by Pastor Wagner, is being strikingly illustrated in the culture and rearing of two of New York's richest children.

The story of the little Hamersley orphans and the training which they are receiving is unique in the annals of millionaire life in this country.

These children, Master Louis Gordon Hamersley, aged 12, and his sister, Miss Katherine Livingstone Hamersley, aged ten, are the beneficiaries of several romantic, not to say quixotic, wills.

The "simple life," according to the tenets of which these children have been brought up since babyhood, was all planned out for them years before they were born. These plans were laid by men and women wise in knowledge of the world and of the people in it; by shrewd old lawyers, and by stately old dowagers. These plans, woven about the lives of babes yet unborn, had for their object the keeping of their innocent hearts untainted from any of the corroding influences of the great wealth which in the natural course of events would be theirs, and to this end the injunction was laid upon guardians and executors to bring up any and all of these hypothetical heirs in utter ignorance of the fact that they were ever to inherit a penny of money from any source whatsoever.

THE HAMERSLEY HOME.
(Here the Children Live in Ignorance of Their Vast Wealth.)

the small orphan boy and girl who were born to inherit the vast fortunes of these wise men and women live under the conditions imposed by their ancestors and relatives. Neither the boy nor the girl has any idea that the splendid house, with all its treasures in the way of pictures, engravings, bric-a-brac, silver and rare furniture, belongs to them. It is supposedly the property of Mrs. Sarah Lowrie. Mrs. Lowrie has been their nurse since babyhood—indeed, almost a mother—and it sems to the innocent orphans the most natural thing in the world that she should be the chatelaine of the great house and that she should love and care for them and share her fine home with them. So carefully, indeed, have servants, relatives and friends kept all knowledge of their great wealth from them that the orphans chatter ingeniously, as all children will, as to what they would do when they grow up, if they had "a thousand dollars."

The children are the son and daughter of the late J. Hooker Hamersley and Margaret Willing Chisholm Hamersley, and the geneses of the great fortunes to which they are the unwitting heirs are as interesting as they are complicated. They have to do with two most extraordinary legal documents, the wills of the Hamersley cousins, J. Hooker Hamersley and Louis J. Hamersley.

The will of James Hooker Hamersley, the father of the children, is one of the most curious documents ever offered for probate in this country.

After making provision for the division of the estate, the greater part of which goes to the children, there were many pages of detailed instructions for the bringing up of his children in the Protestant faith and every possible precaution to safeguard them from discovering the fact that they are among the richest children in the world until they reach their majority. The reason ascribed in the will by Mr. Hamersley for this provision was his belief that a knowledge of their true worldly condition would have a tendency to thwart the natural development, spiritual and mental, of his children.

But there was yet another strange will destined to shape the careers of these unknowing children. They were the heirs to the millions of the late Louis C. Hamersley, who was their father's cousin. By the provision of the latter's will the great fortune left by him became entailed to the Hamersley family so long as there remained a scion of it on the face of the earth, and at such time as there might be no legitimate heir to be given over to charity. Mr. Louis C. Hamersley died childless, and his widow, who had been Miss Lillian Price, married the duke of Marlborough and at the latter's death became Lady Beresford. The entire income of the first husband's fortune Lady Beresford enjoys, and will continue to enjoy during her lifetime, and at her death it will revert to the little boy and girl who are now living in what they think is Mrs. Lowrie's house.

SEARS HIS RIVAL'S FACE WITH ACID

SUCCESSFUL LOVER A VICTIM OF JEALOUS VENGEANCE.

PRETTY WOMAN THE CAUSE

Carbolic Acid Sprayed Over Husband's Face with an Atomizer by His Wife's Rejected Suitor—Had Former Troubles.

Chicago.—Using an atomizer filled with carbolic acid as an instrument of vengeance on Charles W. Corcoran, who married his schoolday sweetheart, Earl E. Thayer sprayed the fluid in the husband's face, disfiguring him for life. Fortunately Corcoran closed his eyes when the acid was thrown and his eyesight is uninjured.

The case was reported to the police of the East Chicago avenue station and Capt. Rehm detailed four officers, who searched the north side, but to no avail.

Corcoran, with his wife Lillian, 22 years old and pretty, went to the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. D. Parker, 203 Clark street, for dinner. Thayer, who works in a bakery shop across the street, saw and followed them.

He knocked at the door of the Parker flat and was admitted by Corcoran. Corcoran knew that his wife had been the sweetheart of Thayer and knew that he still was trying to force his attentions on her, but he greeted him cordially.

Thayer also tried to appear friendly with Corcoran and offered him a cigar. While Corcoran was lighting the cigar Thayer sprayed the contents of the atomizer in the young husband's face. In terrible agony, Corcoran shut his eyes and fought his assailant. They rolled and tumbled to the floor fighting desperately with their fists. A large lamp was knocked from the table, leaving them in utter darkness.

Mrs. Corcoran heard the noise, ran into the parlor where the men were wrestling and parted them. Thayer slapped his former sweetheart in the face and escaped down the stairs.

Until three years ago, when Mrs. Corcoran met the man now her husband, she had been keeping company with Thayer. After meeting Corcoran she refused Thayer's attentions. Two months ago Thayer attempted to commit suicide by taking carbolic acid and he was taken to the county hospital. He was discharged several weeks ago. The Corcorans live at No. 1276 West Madison street.

Ban on Number Thirteen.

Portland, Ore.—Because of the number of fatal accidents to trains bearing the unlucky number 13, orders have been issued on the Mountain division of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company which strikes that number from the train sheet. The tragic death of Conductor Charles F. Brown at Kamela in November was the climax. The last train order signed by Conductor Brown on that fatal trip was order No. 13 which he received at Bingham Springs, and which, in the usual jovial manner, he at first refused to sign for, telling the dispatcher to change the number. After a few joking words over the wires with the dispatcher, Conductor Brown took the order, and, in delivering a copy of it to Engineer Peter Theisen, said in fun: "That's a bad one, Pete. Look at the number and then look out." It was the last order Brown received, it being a "meet order" on train No. 1 at Meacham.

Held Up by Bearded Desperadoes.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—An unusual kind of assault was made by two men upon Mrs. Albert Wertman, of Mordansville, near here, the other night. She was going through a wood with her little boy, when two rough-looking men with heavy beards seized her and rubbed their beards over her face and neck until the skin was sore and inflamed. She managed to break away from them and after following her for a short distance, they turned and ran the other way. She is prostrated by the attack.

Woman Held Up at Midday.

New York City.—In New York's most fashionable thoroughfare, at ten o'clock in the morning, a woman was held up and robbed of several hundred dollars, the point of a revolver pressed against her temple warning that outcry meant instant death. So quietly was the whole affair conducted that not even the driver of the Fifth avenue stage in which the woman was robbed was aware that anything out of the ordinary had occurred.

RAISING THE MAINE.

GREAT ENGINEERING FEAT IS PLANNED TO DO SO.

The Company Undertaking It Expects to Reap Large Profits from the Venture—How It Will Be Accomplished.

Washington.—The wreck of the battleship Maine is a dangerous obstruction to navigation in the harbor of Havana, and it has been from the first a very serious problem what to do with it.

The navy department decided long ago that it would not pay to raise it, and relinquished all claims upon it. The Cuban government did not have the means to appropriate for the purpose, and several salvage companies, after inspecting the job, decided not to attempt it. At last a company has been incorporated in the District of Columbia under the name of the United States Battleship Maine Salvage company, which proposes to attempt the job and have set some of the ablest engineers in the country to work upon the plans.

As near as can be known at present, only about one-third of the battleship at the bow has been injured, and the rest is supposed to be in as good condition as its prolonged stay under the water will promise. The company believes that the ship can be raised, and will, after removing the bodies of the sailors and their personal effects, get a large sum out of the recovery of such valuable articles as arms, cannon, coal and machinery.

After floating the wreck, it will be exhibited for a fee at the principal ports in the United States. If it is possible to repair the ship, that will be done, and she be sold to one of the smaller countries for its navy. If it cannot be repaired, the bronze, brass and copper will be stripped off and manufactured in to souvenirs, the genuineness of which will be attested by certificates from American and Cuban officials. Photographers offer large sums for exclusive rights to take views of the wreck from time to time as the water is being pumped out.

RAISING THE MAINE.
(Diagram Showing Method by Which Work Will Be Done.)

In all, the company sees an opportunity for large profit after paying the very great expense which will be involved in prosecuting the work. The engineering plans which have been carefully worked out are of much interest, since they involve many new problems.

The main thing is the construction of the circular cofferdam around the wreck. It will have an inside diameter of 354 feet in the clear, thus providing a clearance of 15 feet at each end of the battleship. The dam will consist of two concentric timber walls, spaced eight feet apart in the clear, each wall being composed of three-inch planks dressed to a uniform thickness, laid flat and thoroughly spiked together. The walls are to be tied together at intervals between nine and ten feet by solid partitions. This will compel each wall to take a portion of any strain on the other.

The main problem is that of making the dam tight at the bottom, which is a serious matter, since little is known of the true bottom of the harbor, it being covered with a depth of soft mud and sewage. As the contract with the Cuban government compels the removal of all traces of the dam after the work is finished, ordinary piling and rock ballasting cannot be employed.

All the timber to be used will be longleaf yellow or Cuban pine. In order to give the timber its greatest strength to resist the waves it must be truly circular, which will be difficult to construct with straight planks. This has been worked out, however, and also that the planks will be laid in such a way that the principal strain will be in the direction of the grain. It is calculated that the maximum strain will be 1,600 pounds per square inch, and this only at the bottom of the dam. Tests show that this strain is far below the strength of seasoned yellow pine, which is about 5,000 pounds per square inch. In order to protect the dam against the toredo and similar destructive sea worms the plank will be covered with a protective liquid.

The battleship Maine cost the government $5,000,000. She had an extreme length of 324 feet, an extreme breadth of 57 feet, and a draught of 21½ feet, and a displacement of 6,650 tons. The machinery cost $735,000. She was protected for 180 feet amidships with 12-inch Harveyized armor, worth $500 a ton. The turrets were of steel, eight inches thick, and the barbets 12 inches thick. It is believed the steel and iron have not been materially corroded, owing to the protection of barnacles, etc.

A Big Disgrace.

A Venetian gondolier named Luigi Conderrani fell into the Grand canal for the third time in a month. As falling into the water is considered a disgrace in Venice, Conderrani's guild has expelled him, and he is in danger of going mad.

Didn't Make Good.

Hackenschmidt, the champion wrestler, failed, at Yarmouth, England, to throw in 15 minutes an artilleryman of the name of Pickford, who had accepted his challenge, and $125 was paid to Pickford.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

In discussing the style and form of foot racers recently, Fred Stone, one of the greatest sprinters in the world in his day, said there was little room for improvement. Stone is probably one of the best-known authorities on running in the world to-day, having competed in all the great races of the '80s in England, France, Germany and America.

A. A. Stagg.

"Foot racing, either in the form of sprinting or long distance running," he said, "has reached its highest perfection. Not since 1879 has there been a single improvement in form and if any records are lowered in the future, it will be due not to form, but to mere superior ability. Running has reached its zenith. But the field events, such as hurdling, jumping, pole vaulting and throwing the weights, have a brilliant future before them. Form in these events has nowhere reached a perfected state. With the exception of the crouching position at starting, no permanent change has been made since 1879, and even the crouching start is no better way of starting than straight up, knees bent, ready-to-go style. It was introduced solely for the sake of amateur sprinters, and was brought into active use by the colleges because there were so many novices at the game there. The idea in the crouching start is this; it serves only to steady the sprinter. It does not offer him position for a faster start. With amateur sprinters the old method of starting up was a hard one. They were naturally nervous, and it was hard for them to keep balanced. By the crouching start, they are given a better chance to steady themselves. This is the only reason why it is now so popular. Nearly all the shorter distance world's records were made with the standing start. The crouching start is one of the few innovations that have lasted. It has been a benefit in that it helps amateurs and novices and those new to the game. Professional runners, amaturs, trainers and coaches have worked on the stride, starting, finishing sprint ways of touching the ground, etc., but there is nothing new. 'Way back in '79 the sprinting game was perfected. So was it with the long-distance game. What records have been made since that time have been only the fruits of this perfection of form. I do not say that the records are at the lowest now. No; they may even go still lower. But it will be with the same form.

"In these last 20 or so years there has been a very rational change in training methods. A decade ago the sprinter and long-distance runner trained down to muscle and bone. Sometimes it was skin and bone. He believed that it was absolutely essential to train hard in this fashion. Now, however, it is vastly different. It is nearly the opposite. The athlete tries to build himself up—put on as much flesh as he can. I do not mean try to get fat. But he puts on weight, and when he begins training he is in what is commonly termed the 'pink of condition.' I believe in plenty of work for the sprinter. I do not think work will hurt any athlete; but work poorly directed will kill an athlete quicker than any other thing. Time trials every day, such as some coaches in the middle west here practice, is exceedingly bad for an athlete. It will ruin him in time."

In the recent figure-skating championships decided in New York city, Dr. Arthur G. Keane easily carried off the prize and is adjudged fairly entitled to the honor of being called the best figure skater in the country, if indeed not the best in the world. Dr. Keane held the championship in this country from 1898 to and including 1902, when, owing to ill health, he dropped out for two years. Dr. Keane won nearly all the points in the contest. He is one of the exponents of the American style of skating, as opposed to the Swedish style, which is now, according to experts, beginning to fall into disuse. The new American style, or New York style as some call it, consists in the figure skater holding his arms close to his sides and going through the different rolls and curves without any attention being paid to grace or ease. The Swedish movements insist upon the skater making longer and more graceful curves and at the same time keeping his body in graceful attitudes. The arms are continually moved into different positions at every stroke of the skates. Dr. John Sandbloom, of Chicago, who went to New York to take part in the event, says that the New York or American method is prevalent now in the east, and that the Swedish is dropping out of style. "Mr. Keane is one of the best figure skaters I have seen," said Dr. Sandbloom. "He is more graceful than many others who affect the American style, and seems to balance himself more by curving his body than by his arms. Many of the men who won points in the figure-skating contest went through the moves doubled up like jackknives, which, to a westerner or to one who has been used to the Swedish style, is not very pleasing."

LOVED HUSBAND BUT KILLED HIM

THE UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE OF A WIFE IN CHICAGO.

SHE LIVED IN FEAR OF LIFE

Story Reveals a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde Case—Wife the Victim of Untold Abuses Borne for Love's Sake.

Chicago.—Weeping in the hospital of the county jail, where she is held for murder of the one creature on earth she loved above all others, and whom, at the same time, she feared so much she lives with him in a continual dread of losing her life—this is the predicament of Mrs Harry C. Hopkins, who was held by a coroner's jury for the killing of her husband, "to await the due process of the law."

No one who talks with Mrs. Hopkins can have any doubt of her love for her husband. Neither can the deadly fear in which she held him be mistaken.

After a silence which she was advised by relatives to keep until her story could be told to a jury, Mrs. Hopkins discussed the events which led up to the shooting that resulted in her husband's death.

In the telling she has made known some things which even her relatives will be surprised to learn, things she has borne for years with a smile, giving outsiders the impression she was happy and contented with her husband, when really she was living a life of despair with anxious but vain hopes for a happiness that would come with the morrow. But the morrow never came.

A Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde is what Mrs. Hopkins calls her husband. When he was himself he was handsome, kind and loving. Then his wife loved him.

When he got the ungovernable fits of temper which precipitated the quarrel after the New Year's party, he was another man. Then his wife feared him.

STOOD OVER HER WITH REVOLVER WHILE SHE ANSWERED THE 'PHONE.

"He told me on our way home from dinner that I should never forget New Year's, 1903," said Mrs. Hopkins, and then, with a sob that was in pathetic discord to the strains of "Tell Me, Pretty Maiden," floating over from the woman's quarter, she added, "and I guess I never shall.

"I loved him, and when we were first married, he loved me," she continued. "The first day after we were married I went into his printing shop, and I have worked there every day from seven in the morning until 5:30 at night, missing only the day when his father was buried.

"I don't want to tell about the woman," she said.

"Another time maybe I shall. He never was away from me, never, until about a month ago, when he went hunting and stayed over night.

"On Thursday night before New Year I went to bed sure he would kill me. Because I had called my mother up to tell her about my sick sister he was angry.

"Then, when my sister called me up, he stood over me with a revolver when I answered the telephone. He beat me that night and told me he would brain me.

"He never gave me a cent for myself. His father often spoke to him about it, but that wasn't the cause of our trouble.

"But if he even smiled at me I was happy, I loved him so."

All through her story her love for her dead husband showed itself. Always she excused him. Always she did not want to blame him.

"I knew he would kill me some time, if I didn't kill him he would kill me. When I picked him up I thought at first he was fooling. I tried to get him to speak.

"I kissed him," she said, at length, and as she buried her face in her handkerchief some one across the hall was hammering out "Blue Bells on the piano.

Polly as Champion Swearer.

Baltimore, Md.—Poor little polly, a pet of Martin Krauter, of No. 1649 Barnes street, known to many residents of northeast Baltimore, died the other night of old age. Mr. Krauter conducted a saloon for about 18 years, and the parrot was a constant and conspicuous figure in the barroom and also a "good customer." The bird was never known to refuse to take a drink with anybody, and consequently frequently got drunk. In its hilarity it would strut up and down the bar, and when a customer would plank down his money the bird would go for it, carry it to some lofty perch and give its master the laugh. Polly was a champion swearer in four languages. The bird came from Luzon, Spain.

Castro is getting himself in shape for a good big licking and Uncle Sammie will not spare the big stick and spoil the child.

There's a great kick being made because Leader Duffield is not fit for the job of assistant attorney general of the State. Since when was merit a test in politics? Just spare a moment to consider how few of the men holding office in the Nation, State, county or city would be there if they had to display some sort of ability, other than that of a ringster, to land a job. Mortifying, but true.

State Superintendent of Schools C. J. Baxter has requested that the schools throughout the State observe next Friday as the centenary of Hans Christian Anderson. Death of Jules Verne suggests that he is also deserving of recognition and that it would not be a bad idea for the school teachers to tell their pupils something about that great man who has interested so many boys and girls by his fascinating stories.

Forty per cent. of the income of the average wage earner in the United States, says the Philadelphia Record, is spent in satisfying his appetite, and yet a very small percentage of the advertising in the leading newspapers deals with food products. This discrepancy points out a golden opportunity for dealers in the good things of this life; it indicates the existence of a fallow field that needs only to be scientifically cultivated to yield the richest returns. A skilled "ad." writer can make the reader's mouth water by a description of first-class food products—and when his mouth waters he can't help buying it. ## NO PLACE FOR JAIL IN FANWOOD BOROUGH

AUTHORITIES CAN'T FIND A HOUSE TO LODGE PRISONERS.

The Fanwood borough finds itself in a peculiar predicament over the question of a jail for the borough, the issue being, "Where shall the lockup be placed?" For several years Fanwood has been sadly in need of a place where the disorderly element and others could be placed for safe keeping until they could be disposed of by due process of law. At last the borough Council was prevailed upon to pass a resolution authorizing the purchase of a lockup. Collector Charles Sheelen was appointed a committee to procure estimates and secure a place for the cages to be erected. The estimates were secured without trouble, but when it came to securing house room trouble began. It was thought the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company would be glad of an opportunity to rent one of the rooms in the clubhouse now occupied by the Suburban A. C., at a fair rental.

When the proposition was made them they agreed that the borough could have space in the building, but the rent demanded was so high that it was considered extortion. Then they were asked to rent part of a stable near the depot, which is owned by them, they agreed to do this, but the question of rent brought up the same old figures as was demanded for space in the clubhouse. By this time the residents began to think the Improvement Company was either not in favor of the jail or were getting even for the sidewalk and other improvement taxes put upon the company in the past. The fire house was then suggested, but the fire laddies objected as the place, they claimed, was far too small to sublet, and as it was a favorite place for the borough society to hold its social functions, it would hardly be proper to have the building dubbed a "jail" or to find a refractory prisoner occupying a cell some night when a social affair was on. This leaves the borough in the predicament of practically having a "homeless jail" and as the matter has been standing this way for some time now, the jail question will remain unsettled unless the borough erects its own building for the purpose, as no one else seems to want it.

AMUSEMENTS.

Before the termination of Miss Ellis Jeffreys' engagement at the Knickerbocker Theatre—to which playhouse she removed "The Prince Consort" from the New Amsterdam, she will appear in a notable revival of "London Assurance." This famous old comedy by Dion Boucicault will be produced at the Knickerbocker by Liebler & Co., on Monday, April 3, with a special cast of stars headed by Miss Ellis Jeffreys. This plan is in line with the established custom of Liebler & Co. to make one or more special productions of famous plays each spring. The cast in its entirety, containing the names of some of the foremost players in America, is as follows: Sir Harcourt Courtley, Eben Plympton; Max Harkaway, William H. Thompson; Charles Courtley, Ben Webster; Dolly Spanker, Jos. Wheelock, Jr.; Dazzle, Henry E. Dixey; Meddle, Murray Carson; Cool, Herbert Sleath; Lady Gay Spanker, Ellis Jeffreys; Grace Harkaway, Ida Conquest; Pert, Kate Phillips. The production will be staged under the personal direction of Charles Cartwright.

"Buster Brown" continues to break records at the Majestic Theatre. The very first Saturday matinee this Lilliputian champion in the juvenile theatrical lists proceeded to beat the best record for afternoon receipts left on the books of this theatre during the long and phenomenally successful run of "The Wizard of Oz" and "Babes in Toyland." The second Saturday he broke his own record, and lastly achieved the apparently impossible by exceeding even this high-water mark. In this connection it is pleasing to note that merit is rewarded in the dramatic world, regardless of size; for Manager Raymond announces that, in consequence of his two season's success in the title role of "Buster Brown," of which role he was the originator on the stage, Master Gabriel, the "toy comedian," will next season be promoted to stellar rank in a new production designed especially to display his talents, musical and mimic.

The new comedy, "The Education of Mr. Pipp," at the Liberty Theatre, has entered upon the fourth week of its metropolitan run with every guarantee of popularity established. To the high class intellectual audiences which were attracted to the Liberty Theatre by the recent performances of Madame Rejane and Ada Rehan, the Thomas-Gibson comedy has added the distinctly fashionable element of New York society, until the nightly audiences comprise almost as representative a list of the Four Hundred as those of the grand tier at the Metropolitan Opera House. "The Education of Mr. Pipp" is, as the New York Herald succinctly phrased it, "a great, big, laughing hit," which verdict is given fresh endorsement every night by the prolonged outbursts of laughter and applause which punctuate frequently each of the three acts. Digby Bell, Kate Denin Wilson, Jennie Eustace, W. S. St. Clair, Robert Warwick, Fred Courtenay, Marion Draughn and Janet Beecher are among the clever people who "materialize" the personal essences of Mr. Gibson's delightful satire in black and white.

Once upon a time there were two little children, Alan and Jane, who were under the care of a very wicked old uncle who wished to get them out of the way and thereby get the fortune which was rightfully theirs. He sought by various underhand means to accomplish their destruction, but was foiled in the attempt, and came to a sudden and untimely end by drinking a draught of poison intended for Alan. Thus, freed from the persecution of the wicked old man, the children were at liberty to follow their hearts' desires, and they lived happily ever after. This is the basis of the story told in "Babes in Toy- whether the Casino or the Park Club will be used for the play, though in all probability the former will be the selection of the committee. Daily rehearsals in the various parts will be held, and it is likely that two performances will be given, as dress rehearsals, shortly before the date of the production.

Burton Holmes, the well known traveller, author and lecturer, is about to give a triple series of finely illustrated Travelogues, or "Travel-talks," in New York, each Travelogue being given three times—the first time at Carnegie Hall on Sunday evening, the second and third times at the New Lyceum Theatre, on Monday and and Tuesday afternoons, respectively. This is Mr. Holmes' eighth season in New York, he having succeeded to the mantle of John L. Stoddard, whose lectures at Daly's Theatre during Lent, were an annual event in the amusement and educational life of the city for nineteen years. For six years, Mr. Holmes annually delivered the Daly Lenten Lecture, but last season, the New Lyceum being built, at the suggestion of Daniel Frohman, moved to that handsome playhouse on Forty-fifth street, this being the second season there. The Sunday night course at Carnegie Hall was inaugurated last season in response to the demand of those who were unable to attend matinees. The three courses, exactly alike, will consist of five subjects, which will be given on five successive Sunday evenings, Monday afternoons and Tuesday afternoons for five weeks, which began March 19, 20 and 21.

For the first time on any stage, A. E. Lancaster's powerful four act drama, "Anna Karenina," based on Tolstoi's novel, is produced by the stock company at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre this week. Henry Woodruff, the Fifth Avenue's new leading man, heads the cast, assisted by Isabelle Evesson, leading woman, and the stock company. Theodore Roberts has been especially engaged to create the part of Count Karenin. The production of the play—by no means the first made at the Fifth Avenue under the Proctor's regime—was further signalized by the second souvenir matinee yesterday, at which a fitting and valuable souvenir was given. Old Procteritities know the advantage of purchasing seats early—thus making sure.

LITERARY.

In the novelette which opens the April Smart Set, Grace MacGowan Cooke has struck an entirely new note in fiction. It is a story of the West, so saturated with the atmosphere of that part of our country and so photographic in its depiction of ranch life that it will take high rank among the best tales of that class; yet it is more as a character study that "The Red-Headed Woman" will win praise. The heroine is the most original, the most human, the most refreshing woman who for a long time has stepped from a printed page. There is no reader who will not be fascinated by her vagaries and interested in her remarkable career.

The April number of Pearson's Magazine contains nine special articles, besides eight short stories, the leading article being a profusely illustrated one, "The Church of the Holy Sepulcher." "Fighting Fog by Electricity" is an account of the latest world-famous invention, which bids fair almost to revolutionize travel at sea. "Vaccinating the Ground" tells of the wonderful innovation by which the United States Agricultural Bureau expects to lessen the need for artificial fertilizers. One of the most stirring accounts of automobile experiences appears in this number, under the title "The Automobile Roughing It." "'The Music Master' and David Warfield," "The Self-Supporting Home," the baseball article: "The Men on Whom the Championships Depend," and Augustus Lerroh's final installment of "How a Big Newspaper is Conducted," complete the list of "specials." The number contains the usual assortment of bright, snappy short stories—love stories, stories of adventure, and detective stories.

Variety and value mark the contents of the April number of The Booklovers Magazine. There are a dozen or more contributions, and each one is strong in descriptive and critical features. Burris Gahan devotes his third article on "The Real Australia" to the labor leaders and their political policies, and graphically describes the rise and fall of the Watson labor cabinet—"seven horny-handed laboring men set in authority over a continent as big as Europe." Portraits and Australian views accompany the article. The paper by Harold Bolce on "Our Foreign Trade Fiasco" calls a halt on the jubilant optimism which has possessed the American mind on the subject of our commercial supremacy in the East, and gives the real facts in the case, compiled from official sources.

The British Army alone proposes to have a field gun of so powerful a character that it is not found possible or convenient to make it of the same caliber as the horse artillery gun, and most interesting will be to see whether foreign nations follow the example we are setting them in this matter. But in any case there will be no undue delay in carrying out this great military reform, not in getting to the stage at which we have already arrived has there been any undue carelessness or delay.—Britain's Prime Minister in The Metropolitan Magazine for April.

GIRL SEEKS LOST BROTHER

Her Father a Fugitive, Mother Dead, Florence Strauss Is Alone.

BALDWIN, JR., GONE

Pretty Girl Asks the Buffalo Police to Help Find Her Brother Who Disappeared Last August.

A pathetic letter, sent to the Chief of Police of Buffalo for publication, in the hope that her missing brother would see it, by Florence Strauss, nineteen years old, of No. 110 West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, New York, recalled today the case of the girl's father, Baldwin F. Strauss, once a prominent lawyer of Brooklyn, and a resident of this city, now a fugitive, charged with being a bigamist and an absconder.

His two children, Florence and Baldwin, the latter now twenty-one years old, both of whom will be remembered by people here, lived with their mother, after the disappearance of Lawyer Strauss. In August, 1904, Baldwin Strauss, Jr., disappeared as mysteriously as his father had done. Worry over the boy hastened the mother's death, and the daughter was left alone. Her letter follows:

My Dear Brother—Should you see this in the papers, do not try and stay away any longer. Come back to me, Baldwin, for I am all alone in New York. Mamma is dead. She died grieving for you, her boy, the idol of her heart, and on her death-bed she made me promise to find you.

Oh, Baldwin, think of the happy times we had together; think now of the misery we are in, motherless, worse than fatherless. Just you and I, dear—come back to me. Let us comfort one another, and do not harden your heart to me. Can you imagine me, a girl, my struggle in New York—how hard it is for me to get along?

Baldwin, as you loved your mother, come back to your heart-broken sister, Florence.

Miss Strauss is extremely pretty, of the dark-haired, blue-eyed type of beauty. She is self-reliant, has secured employment, and boards at the house in West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street. She said to an Evening Journal reporter:

"My mother, Baldwin and I lived together very happily after father disappeared in 1903, until August 28, 1904. Mother and I went to Atlantic City for a few days, leaving Baldwin at home. When we returned we could find no trace of him.

"We searched everywhere for him, but without result. We heard that he was in Buffalo working for the Erie Railroad, but when we sent there he had gone. Through the postal authorities we learned that he had left orders to have his mail sent to Dunkirk, N. Y. We wrote, but mail was never called for by him.

"I am all alone now, and I wish my brother would come back to me. I believe he will if he sees the letter I have written him."

Mrs. Strauss died in January last. Her husband disappeared April 26, 1903, and nothing has been heard from him since.

Before his difficulties he was one of the most prominent and prosperous lawyers in Brooklyn. He earned a large income, owned considerable property, including a handsome home, and lavished luxuries on his family. Mrs. Strauss parted with her home and sacrificed thousands of dollars worth of jewelry to help him.

DIAMOND DUST.

For the purpose of clinching the county championship, Manager Daab will probably give Rahway one game.

George Johnston, manager of last year's Plainfield team, is working very hard for the success of the Westfield team.

The Orange Field Club will hold its first baseball practice on Saturday. There are forty candidates for the nine positions on the team.

McManus will not play on the Westfield team this season. He has just joined the New York Fire Department, being a member of Engine Company No. 7.

The greatest secrecy is maintained regarding the short-stop and second baseman secured for Westfield. They are minor leaguers and of course are very fast.

The A. J. and G. team, of New York State, will do its spring training at Elizabeth, owing to the backward season in the Empire State. The nine will play several games at the county seat before opening its regular schedule.

"Jake" Wall, the mascot for the Westfield team, says that the aggregation will be fifty per cent. stronger than last year. To accomplish this the supporters of the association in that town have got to go down very deep in their pockets.

Connelly, who will play in the field for Plainfield this season, will be remembered as winning a game for Scotch Plains two years ago by making a home-run off "Warry" Mac Laughlin in the ninth inning. He put the ball over the left field wire fence, bringing two men as well as himself, home.

For the support of the institution's baseball team three high class entertainments will be given at the Y. M. C. A. Hall next month, the dates being selected for April 11, April 25 and May 4. The proceeds will be devoted entirely to the manager's expenses, as the use of the hall is donated. On April 11 the committee has arranged to have W. Paulding DeNike, of New York, a 'cellist well known in this city. Miss Catherine Lane, soprano, and Helen Mar Wilson, a fascinating reader, will complete the entertainment. The bill on April 25 will include Miss McClaren, reader, and Dorothy Johnson, harpist. The VanEps Brothers, of this city, banjo and mandolin players, will appear in the third entertainment. Edward Frye, a talented monologist, will be the other attraction. This entertainment will be given on May 4.

The City Beautiful.

Every American is proud of the nation's Capitol and in Washington wonderful and beautiful as it is the tourist finds a city than which no other is more interesting or grand. The great public buildings massive in their structure and imposing in appearance are gold mines of interest and curiosity. The city which is now blossoming in its spring garb is most perfect in its arrangement and its finely kept streets, its innumerable parks and pleasure places offer no end of amusement and instruction to the tourist and traveler. Much time can be profitably spent visiting the Treasury Building, the Congressional Library, Washington Monument, the Pension Building, Cochran Art Gallery, Smithsonian Institute, Public Printing Office and the like, while the side trips to Mt. Vernon, Georgetown and the National Cemetery are productive and valuable and interesting sights. Every American should visit the Capitol City and an opportunity to enjoy such a trip is offered by the New Jersey Central's popular spring excursion to Washington on March 30, when the rate including hotel and other expenses is $12. The trip is made on the famous Royal Limited trains and the intervening country traversed is unsurpassed from a scenic standpoint. The tickets include stop-over privileges at Baltimore and Philadelphia, both of which places have many historic interests. The New Jersey Central has issued an itinerary of the trip, which is sent free to any applicant by C. M. Burt, G. P. A., New York city. 3 25 4 c

The coal burning season is about over and grate wood and kindlings are needed. John Mebus, the Watchung dealer, sells both. Drop him a postal when needing any.

Spring is regarded as the season of pretty flowers but it produces none prettier than those at Charles L. Stanley's. Roses and carnations fresh from the greenhouses each day.

The Hotel Kensington will prove to you that Plainfield can offer good hotel accommodations either for the day or by the month. The service at the Kensington is of an excellent grade and will surely satisfy.

TRINITY REFORMED 25 YEARS OLD

Silver Anniversary of the Church Marked by Special Services.

DR. RAYMOND THERE

President of Union College Preaches at Night—The Pastor's Historical Sermon—Sunday-School Observance.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of Trinity Reformed church was observed Sunday by special services in the morning, afternoon and evening, the edifice being thronged with members and friends

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck.

throughout the day. The beautiful spring weather added to the great enjoyment of pastor and people in celebrating the happy occasion and it was with peculiar satisfaction that the excellent work performed during the past quarter of century was reviewed in an intensely interesting historical sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. During its existence the church has accomplished much in Christian effort and enterprise, more in fact than figures can tell. While many things are recalled at this time, a notable fact, one in which all rejoice, is that not one cent of indebtedness rests on the church.

Morning Celebration.

The church was appropriately decorated for the silver anniversary, the pulpit platform being banked with flowers, palms and ferns, while occupying a prominent place over the organ was the Scripture text "Didst Thou Lead Thy People," with the figures "1880-1905," in white. Suspended from each one of the many chandeliers was a small white silvery bell. On the platform was displayed the coat of arms of the church with explanatory notes. Those having charge of the decorations were Mrs. John C. VanDyke, Mrs. George W. Cole, Mrs. Henry C VanName and Mrs. W. C. Leek.

The morning service opened with an organ prelude, "Offertoire in F," by Batiste; invocation by the pastor; Scripture reading, hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name;" prayer by Rev. Daniel Rapalje, hymn, "Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken;" offertory, "Te Deum Laudamus," by the choir. Then followed the historical sermon by Dr. Schenck:

Trinity Reformed Church.

Text, Psalm 77:5: "I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times."

The Psalmist is looking back in a day of trouble for some proof, some sign, of God's goodness, some reviving incident in either his own life or that of the covenant people, whose light shall project itself into the gloom and dispel the darkness of despair.

To consider the days of old, the years of former times, is a healthful and helpful exercise in any event. It cannot fail to yield lessons of wisdom and encouragement and admonition, which we do well to learn.

The period of twenty-five years is not a long one, and if it were without relations, past and future, it would be unimportant. Time merely considered as continuity is not necessarily significant. But when the character of the present is largely determined by the past, and when to-day holds the key to to-morrow's position, then time assumes commanding value. "That which hath been, is now; and that which is to be, hath already been, and God requireth that which is past," said the Preacher in Eccle. 3:15.

When the life of the church covering any specified period is under review we are bound to regard its beginnings. The roots of growth strike deep into the past. It is because of this that every church of our Lord believes that it has some vital connection with its head and "is built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone," Eph. 2:20. Not always do those who claim the most strenuously, and as a sort of exclusive right, apostolic relationship, offer the clearest credentials of such connection.

The Reformed Church in America finds its ecclesiastical identity thoroughly established from the days of the great Reformation in the sixteenth century.

THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE NETHERLANDS.

The Reformed Church in the Netherlands, the mother of the Reformed Church in America, was born amid the storms of political revolution, and was trained in the school of oppression. The contest for civil and religious liberty began with the ascension of Charles V. to the throne in 1516, the hereditary monarch of Spain, Austria, the Sicilies, the Spanish possessions in America and the Netherlands. It continued with varying intensity for nearly one hundred years. The struggle attained its height in the reign of Philip, the son of Charles, who was a proud, gloomy bigot, reserved, cruel, revengeful. It was his settled purpose to extirpate at all hazards the Protestant faith from the Netherlands, being more willing, as he said, to be without subjects than to be a king of heretics. To the famous and infamous Duke of Alva he gave a free hand, and the devoted land was scourged with fire and sword. Every refinement of cruelty was practiced, and Alva boasted that in the space of seven years no less than 18,000 persons had perished by the hands of the executioner, beside those who had fallen in battle.

One hundred thousand houses were deserted, their inmates having fled for refuge to other nations. So calamitous was their condition during the protracted strife, that the Protestants gave themselves the name of the "Church under the Cross" and their symbol was a "Lily Amidst Thorns."

But every night is followed by its day, and every oppressed land has its Moses. The Washington of the Netherlands was William the Silent, Prince of Orange, who became under God the chief agent of their deliverance. One of the many historic reminders of the contest for freedom by brave little Holland, of which the Reformed Church in America is proud, is the coat of arms of William the Silent, the accepted emblem of our church. The mottoes on the shield in Dutch and Latin, "Een dracht maakt macht," which means, "Union makes strength"; and "Nisi Dominus Frustra," which signifies, "Without the Lord all is vain," show the spirit of the people. Occasional rest from persecution and the formation of the Dutch Republic gave opportunity for the organization of the church of Holland, which soon became famous for learning, soundness in the faith, practical godliness and Christian charity. The freedom of conscience, for which she had so long struggled, was sacredly guarded. While the Reformed faith was the national religion, by its side every form of doctrine and worship was freely tolerated, and the Romanist and Lutheran were each permitted in his own way to worship God. The Jew, hunted as an outlaw in every other country, was here welcomed, and Holland became the place of refuge for all who in any part of Europe were oppressed on account of their religion. Walloon churches were everywhere established by refugees from Belgium and France, using the French language; Scotch churches by the Presbyterian from Scotland; the Pilgrims of England dwelt in Leyden twelve years before they embarked for America; and the Nonconformists of England found, on the restoration of the Stuarts, a resting place in Holland.

THE REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA.

The Reformed Church was planted in this country by traders and settlers from Holland. In 1609, Hendrick Hudson, in the ship Half-Moon, entered New York Bay. He sailed up the river as far as what is now Albany. Later other vessels were sent out from Holland, and trading posts were established at Fort Orange, now Albany, and on the island of Manhattan, now New York, in the year 1614, six years before the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. In 1623, a permanent agricultural settlement was made, and these settlers brought with them the schoolmaster and the Krankbesoecker, or visitor of the sick. These latter met the people on Sundays in a room above a horse mill, and read the Scriptures to them. This mill stood where the Battery is now in Manhattan. In 1628, a church was organized of over fifty communicant members, many of whom had brought their church letters from the fatherland, by the Rev. Jonas Michaelius, a minister commissioned by the classis of Amsterdam, Holland. This church has had a continuous existence since, in what is known as the Collegiate Church of New York, and is with reason supposed to be the oldest Protestant church on the continent.

In the half century following the founding of New Amsterdam, immigration from Holland pushed its way along the Hudson and Mohawk rivers into New York and up the Hackensack and Raritan valleys in New Jersey. After New Amsterdam was surrendered to the British in 1664 it became known as New York. But this did not affect the rights of the church, which under the new government retained all its former privileges. English became the language of the government, and the Episcopal Church was introduced and was known as the English Church. For the sake of convenience, the word "Dutch" was therefore added to the title of the Reformed Church, to distinguish it from the other. In 1867, the word was dropped and the original title resumed—the Reformed Church in America.

Rev. A. V. V. Raymond.

Our growth, as a denomination, was for a time retarded by the falling off in the immigration from the mother country; by its dependence upon Holland for ministers till 1772, and by the retention of the mother tongue in public service, when English was generally and increasingly spoken.

Our church has ever been distinguished by a steady adherence to her doctrines and order, by a freedom from the religious vagaries of the day, by the spirit of fellowship with all who hold to Christ, the head, and by her missionary zeal, which enables her to stand next to the Moravians in percentage of her gifts for carrying the Gospel to every creature.

THE REFORMED CHURCH IN PLAINFIELD.

The Reformed were not the first to plant their stakes in Plainfield. They were antedated by the Friends, the Baptists, the Presbyterians, Methodists and Episcopalians. The earliest church of our order was the German Reformed Church, organized in 1858, with Rev. Jacob Neef as pastor, who served until 1864, when he was followed in turn by Revs. Wolff, Schweitzer, Schlieder, Koechli, Hauser, Justin. This congregation worshipped in a little frame structure on East Fifth and Washington streets, until its sale to the Crescent Avenue Church for the use of Bethel Mission. This building was later removed to the West End, and became the nucleus of that expanding growth, known as Hope Chapel. In 1887 the German Reformed congregation erected the neat edifice on Craig Place, during the pastorate of Rev. Frederick Koechli.

The Central Reformed Church was organized by the classis of Raritan in 1863, Oct. 12, and the Rev. John Simonson was pastor from 1864 to 1869. Mr. Simonson continued to reside here until his death in May (11th), 1889. As a preacher he was earnest, evangelical, scriptural. As a Christian, modest, unassuming, sincere. As a man, honest, honorable, high-minded. His character was transparent. He lived and breathed the Spirit of Christ.

The edifice of the Central Reformed Church was originally that of the Union Baptist Church, erected on th sisite in 1861 by the late Morgan S. Bird. The building was purchased by the Central Reformed Church, Oct. 1, 1864.

The Rev. Mr. Simonson was succeeded by Rev. Nicholas E. Smith, D.D., of Brooklyn, in 1870, and for two years he continued to serve as pastor of the Central Reformed Church, when, in 1872, Jan. 17, the church was transferred to the Congregationalists, and was thereafter known as the First Congregational Church of Plainfield, Mr. Smith continuing to act as pastor until 1878. He was followed in 1879 by Rev. William Manchee, who found the burden too heavy to carry, and in the autumn of the same year he and many members withdrew from the First Congregational Church and organized the Congregational Society, which now worships in Seventh street, and of which the Rev. Charles L. Goodrich is the esteemed pastor.

The Rev. Nicholas Smith died in Brooklyn, June 18, 1890. He was a man of brilliant parts, an engaging preacher and was warmly loved and trusted by many people.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

On the 16th day of March, 1880, at a special meeting of the classis of Newark, a petition was presented by Wm. Swalm, Wm. B. Stewart and Theodore Mace, asking that a Reformed Church be organized in Plainfield, N. J. A committe of classis, of which Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D.D., of Newark, was chairman, were appointed, and directed to visit Plainfield, and if the way were clear, take the proper steps toward effecting such organization. The committee met in Plainfield March 22, and after careful examination of the field, unanimously agreed that the petition should be granted. Accordingly on the 29th of March, 1880, the church was organized with fifty-five members, under the style and title of "The Trinity Reformed (Dutch) Church of Plainfield, N. J. After twenty-five years it will be interesting to read the list of the charter members:

Of the original fifty-five members, 17 are still connected with the church, 20 have died, and 18 have removed.

The service of organization and ordination was held in the building formerly occupied by the First Congregational Church. Henry Lindsley and George L. Van Emburgh were elected and ordained elders and David O. Kilbourn, deacon. The Rev. Dr. Taylor preached the sermon, the text being 1 Thess. 5:11-13; and the Rev. Henry Veghlage, D.D., and the Rev. F. V. Van Vranken, participated in the exercises.

The first consistory meeting of the newly elected officers was held at the house of Elder Van Emburgh, 84 East Second street, April 2, 1880. The weight of responsibility that rested upon these brethren made the opening prayer, which was offered by Elder Lindsley, especially earnest and importunate. How much they required that divine wisdom that is profitable to direct, and that divine power which is able to strengthen with might the inner man. There certainly could have been no contest for official honors, as there was an office for each member of the consistory. Elder Lindsley was chosen president, Elder Van Emburgh, clerk, and Deacon Kilbourn, treasurer.

The first Communion Service was held on the first Sabbath in May, when several new members were received. The Rev. Mr. Voorhees conducted the service. The original number of fifty-five was added to from time to time, until, at the close of the calendar year the membership had increased to seventy-nine.

In June (20th), 1880, the place of worship formerly used by the First Congregational Church was purchased at Sheriff's sale for $12,000. That edifice was enlarged to its present dimensions in 1872, by extending the sides and adding about forty feet to the rear.

DR. RAYMOND'S PASTORATE.

After several ineffectual attempts to secure a pastor, a call was made in December, 1880, upon Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, of the First Reformed Church, Paterson, N. J. He accepted and began his labors on the first Sabbath in January, 1881. He continued as pastor until Feb. 1, 1887, when he accepted a call to the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Albany, N. Y. That church he continued to serve until 1894, when he was elected to the presidency of Union College, which office he now holds and adorns.

During the six years of Dr. Raymond's pastorate here, the church was blessed with a remarkable growth in all departments. A large membership was gathered and consolidated. The religious activities of the people were cultivated and developed. Societies for Christian work were organized, and the church was given a standing in the community for consecration and comity. The grace of giving was especially fostered and the benevolent offerings of the people placed it among the first of the churches of the classis of Newark.

Jan. 1, 1882, a chattel mortgage of $2,800, assumed with the purchase of the property, was paid.

What seemed like a severe blow to the enterprise was a fire July 14, 1882, which partly destroyed the house of worship. Fortunately the insurance ($4,490) covered the cost of repair, and services were resumed in the restored building in October, the congregation worshiping meanwhile in the Lecture Room of the church. During Dr. Raymond's pastorate 354 were added to the membership, of whom 148 were received on confession of faith in Christ.

THE PRESENT PASTOR.

On May 13, 1887, a call was extended to the present pastor, who was then pastor of the Fourth Reformed Church of Philadelphia. He accepted and was installed June 30, 1887. The Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D.D., preached the sermon, Rev. David Waters, D.D., charged the pastor, and Rev. Henry Veghlage, D.D., charged the people.

The present minister has sought to carry the work forward largely along the lines followed by his predecessor. He may be allowed, without assumption, to refer to a few outstanding facts for the sake of "preserving the record." In 1889 the church property was improved at considerable expense. The lecture-room was neatly carpeted, the walls kalsomined, light, comfortable chairs took the place of the heavy benches, and an inside stairway was erected.

A red letter day in the history of our church was Sunday, April 23, 1893, when, all the mortgage obligations having been previously paid, the papers themselves were publicly cremated with much joy and enthusiasm. It was the culmination of a series of assaults upon a Port Arthur which at first seemed invulnerable. In 1882 the chattel indebtedness, assumed with the purchase of the property, was cancelled. In 1887 the attack was renewed upon the balance, $12,000, together with certain outstanding obligations amounting to $1,400; and was kept up almost without intermission until the citadel fell in 1893.

Meanwhile the church and Sunday School continued to grow, and the demands for room became so urgent that in 1897 plans for enlargement were accepted and actual work begun Sept. 1. The most notable change was the elevation of the structure several feet higher than it was formerly, so as to provide underneath by slight excavation capacious lecture and Sunday School rooms, ladies' parlor and other desirable conveniences. The rebuilding was so complete and extensive as to almost seem like an entirely new and harmonious edifice. On Sunday, Feb. 27, 1898, the remodeled church, new and attractive without and within, was formally dedicated according to the form and usage of our Liturgy. The Rev. Dr. Raymond preached the sermon from Psalm 27:4. The entire expense, not including the electric lighting, which was the personal gift of Mr. B. A. Hegeman, was about $9,000, one-half of which was provided for.

One year later, Jan. 18, 1899, through the beneficence of Mr. Hegeman, the balance, $4,500, was paid. The liberality and loyalty of Mr. and Mrs. Hegeman were a constant encouragement to our people, and a stimulus to effort and generous giving.

Marconnier Chapel, at Oak Tree, N. J., came under the care of our church March 25, 1900, and the transfer of property from the trustees of the chapel to the consistory of this church was made on the above date. A good work has been accomplished by those who have labored there in one capacity and another. Carriage sheds have been built, the grounds graded, the property improved, piano procured, and other conveniences have been added as needed. Services have been maintained and the means of grace provided.

The superintendents have been: H. W. Marshall, Steven Stover, Mrs. George Reighton and Mrs. J. W. Schenck, the present incumbent. The officers are: Mrs. Schenck, superintendent; Mrs. J. B. Randolph, secretary; W. E. Van Court, treasurer. The chapel has been supplied by Seymour Purdy and A. P. Tulp of New Brunswick Theological Seminary.

MEMBERS RECEIVED.

In twenty-five years 1,233 persons have been received into the church:

Before the coming of Dr. Raymond..... 79

During Dr. Raymond's pastorate: On confession, 148; by certificate, 206... 354

During Mr. Schenck's pastorate: On confession, 399; by certificate, 401... 800

Entire number received..............1,233

Losses: By death, 137; dismission, 310; suspension, removal and revision, 186; leaving a present membership of about 600. The number of baptisms: Adults, 212; infants, 351; total, 563.

The growth in the membership of the church has been steady, rather than spasmodic. Additions have been made regularly, although especially large accessions are noticed in March, 1885, when 42 were received on confession, and in December, 1890, when 86 were added on profession of faith.

The spirit of benevolence, which Dr. Raymond so successfully developed, has marked our people through all the years. For foreign missions alone you have raised $9,223.60, and for domestic missions, $7,995.78; a total of $17,219.38 for missions.

ORGANIZATIONS.

The life of a church expresses itself in many ways and forms. It takes to itself or makes for itself a body through which it operates.

CONSISTORY.

The governing body in the Reformed Church is the consistory, composed of elders and deacons elected by the congregation. To them are referred all matters pertaining to the spiritual and temporal welfare of the church. The success of this church is largely due, under God, to the men of character and Christian consecration who, from time to time, have been chosen to the honorable offices of elder and deacon.

ELDERS.

The following persons have served the church as elders: Henry Lindsley, died Oct. 10, 1893; George L. Van Emburgh; Daniel G. Van Winkle, died July 23, 1887; P. P. Van Arsdale, died Sept. 21, 1900; R. Titsworth, M. D., died March 8, 1890; W. D. W. Miller; B. A. Hegeman, Sr., died Nov. 2, 1903; E. R. Field, died March 18, 1892; A. Willett, J. H. Lesh, G. O. Dolliver, O. W. Dunham, John H. Van Winkle, D. Van Winkle, Robert Clark, Jr., J. P. Laire, F. E. Smith, A. L. Force, H. J. Martin, H. E. Gayle.

Smith, 1903 to the present time.

The school has grown from 64 in 1880 to an enrolled membership in all departments, including 190 in the Home Department, which was formed January, 1900, of 759. It has been remarkable from the beginning for steady growth in number and efficiency. Its leaders have been able, its officers faithful, and its teachers capable and conscientious. It has been a constant feeder to the church and has turned out a host of prepared workers. The present officers are: Superintendent, F. E. Smith; assistant superintendent, H. J. THE LADIES' CHRISTIAN WORK SOCIETY.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society was organized in April, 1881, and its continued usefulness has shown the wisdom of its founders. It has provided a field for the exercise of the gifts and talents of the women of the church. It has proved to be a most valuable auxiliary in all of the activities of the church. Its presidents have been: Mrs. A. V. V. Raymond, May, 1881-1885; Mrs. Charles D. Wadsworth, May, 1885-1886; Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, May, 1887-1888; Miss Nettie Haviland, May, 1888-1889; Mrs. Charles P. In the years since it has grown to be one of the largest and most efficient societies, bearing the name of Christian Endeavor in our State. KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters was formed Oct. 4, 1889 with Mrs. Charles P. Leggett as president, which office she still holds. It also makes an annual contribution to the board of Foreign and Domestic Missions.

The officers of the Circle are: Mrs. C. P. Leggett, president; Mrs. Leonard Smith, vice-president; Mrs. Will F. Williams, secretary; Mrs. Virginia Chickering, treasurer.

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

YOUNG WOMEN'S MISSION BAND.

The Young Women's Mission Band was formed February, 1897, and now has a membership of 50. It has raised hundreds of dollars in its short history, and is a most active missionary auxiliary. Its presidents have been: Mrs. C. P. Leggett, 1897; Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, 1898-1899; Miss Lillian A. Force, 1900-1901; Miss Mabel Woodruff, 1902; Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, 1903-1904; Miss Lillian A. Force, 1905.

The present officers are: Miss Lillian A. Force, president; Miss Mabel Wilson, vice-president; Mrs. H. F. Crawford, recording secretary; Mrs. William Olmstead, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank Pearson, treasurer.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

The Men's Association was organized January, 1904, and has an enrolled membership of 65. Its history, as yet, lies in the future. Its object, which is "the development of the social and fraternal intercourse of men throughout the church and congregation in a manly Christian way," would seem to justify the hope that the association will meet a need for closer contact and sympathy among the men of the church. Mr. H. W. Marshall was the first president.

The present officers are: Frank P. Story, president; R. Edwin Bohan, vice-president; Charles M. Dolliver, secretary; Manning F. Gano, treasurer.

MUSIC.

An essential part of worship is music. This feature of our service is under the care of the music committee of consistory. The efficient and genial chairman of the committee, Mr. Horace J. Martin, has formed a large chorus from among our own members, chiefly from the Endeavor Society, which is rendering splendid service. In one respect the musical history of our church is unique, in that for 23 years we have had the continuous assistance in this important constituent of public worship, of Mr. Arthur L. Titsworth, the present organist and choir director. The keen sense of fitness of times and seasons, the discriminating interpretation of the sacred sentiment of composers and hymn-writers, of Mr. Titsworth, have contributed largely to a worshipful attitude and action in the House of God.

CONCLUSION.

But we must forbear, lest we exceed the limits of time and patience. We realize that this review of the past is far from complete. The essential facts and figures may be correct as far as they go, but they do not tell of the sacrifice and services, the deeds and doings, many of which have faded from memory, the influence of which, however, still survives. God alone may be able to trace the connection between the prayers and consecration and piety of the fathers and the effects as they exist to-day. We do know that no pure word spoken, no humble deed done, is ever lost. After all, it is not the time we live, but how we spend it, that tells. Philip James Bailey, in "Festus," says truly:

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels noblest, acts the best."

And now whatever the past may reveal as we consider it; whatever lessons it may teach in the way of inspiration and instruction, our faces must be toward the future. The golden age is not in the past, the best has not yet been. Neither the church nor the world has reached its zenith; and as individuals we have not yet attained "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

How much there is in the glorious yesterday to inspire and hearten us; how much there is in the more glorious to-morrow to invite us forward. The opportunities were never so many, the way never so open, the calls never so imperious, as now.

While we would "consider the days of old, the years of ancient times," "lest we forget," heeding the injunction of Kipling; we would follow the example of a greater than he, the holy apostle Paul, who said: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

A feature of the services was the singing by the chorus choir of mixed voices, under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and director. The selections were rendered in a praise-worthy manner, largely assisting in making the celebration one long to be remembered. The morning service was concluded with a prayer by the pastor, the singing of a hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord," the benediction by the pastor, and organ postlude, "Festival March."

Sunday-School Observance.

In the afternoon the members of the Sunday-school, from the youngest to the eldest, joined in the celebration. There was a record attendance of 471. Superintendent F. E. Smith was in charge and the opening exercises consisted of Scripture reading, a song by the primary department, prayer by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, a selection by a male quartette, comprising W. G. Tunison, H. J. Martin, W. C. Leek and E. D. Young. After the usual time was allotted for the marking of books, Mr. Smith said that it was with pleasure that the former superintendents were present and W. D. W. Miller was the first speaker. He completed the term of Charles S. West in 1883, serving three months. He spoke briefly, referring to the early days of the Sunday-school, mentioning the names of Thomas Brown and J. Hervey Ackerman as prominent workers. He also spoke of the many changes effected and of the excellent record of the school which must make all feel encouraged to go forward.

The next superintendent, George L. VanEmburgh, now teacher of Class No. 12, contrasted the difference between a superintendent of a mercantile house and a Sunday-school. In the case of the latter he said that it was a service of love in a portion of God's vineyard and that a superintendent of a Sunday-school must have a soul of love and desire with no selfishness. He must watch over the teaching of every teacher and see that the pure and simple Word of God is taught rightly. He also referred to the fact that this child of twenty-five had outgrown its quarters and he hoped that more room would be allowed for the rapidly increasing numbers. Although he was superintendent one year, he added that he would rather teach. In closing he referred with pride to the fact that his son, Frederick VanEmburgh, was the first librarian of the school.

After the singing of a hymn, Edward E. Anthony, who served the school as superintendent for nineteen years, 1884-1903, was introduced. He said that he was in South Carolina four weeks ago when he received an invitation from Superintendent F. E. Smith to be present at this time and address the school, and it was with pleasure that he was able to attend. He referred to birthdays as great things, although some people will never tell you how old they are. In answer to a question, Mr. Smith said that he was fourteen years old as a Sunday-school worker, whereupon Mr. Anthony replied: "My, what a man he will be when he grows up." Mr. Anthony attributed the great success of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school to the words found in Nehemiah 4 6: "For the people had a mind to work," and he did not think that one single person would regret the years of service at Trinity. He spoke of the splendid force of workers in the church and school, graduates from the Christian Endeavor and other societies. He then paid deserving tribute to Mrs. J. M. Tier, Miss Mary Berkaw and other teachers in the school for faithful service. He expressed the thought that all had much to rejoice in at this time, yet the responsibility is greater for the future. He was glad that the school had outgrown its clothes and he hoped the Consistory would get bigger clothes for the healthy growing child.

There was another selection by the male quartette, after which Superintendent Smith presented some interesting facts and figures about the school during the past twenty-five years, showing the steady growth.

School's Work.

The school was organized April 11, 1880, and the attendance the first Sunday was sixty-four. At the close of that year it was 202. Last year the total number in the school was 759. The record attendance the first year was 109 and last year, 488. The offerings the first year were $195 97, and $587.28 last year. The offerings for the school during the twenty-five years amounted to $6,786.92. A total of $3,322.35 was given to missions, $1,534.77 toward a special fund. The grand total raised in the quarter of a century was $12,648.66. There were on an average of thirteen members of the school that joined the church each year. The honors for long service are divided between E. E. Anthony and Secretary E. H. Bird, both having served nearly nineteen years.

The officers the first year were as follows: Superintendent, Henry Lindsley; assistant, D. O. Kilbourn; secretary and treasurer, Alburtis Swalm; librarian, Frederick VanEmburgh; leaders of music, Miss Etta VanDuyn and Mrs. S. L. Stewart. The succeeding superintendents were Charles S. West, W. D. W. Miller, G. L. Van Emburgh, E. E. Anthony and F. E. Smith. The succeeding secretaries were Albertis Swalm, S. C. Baker, F. H. Martin, E. K. Anthony, H. E. Scott, P. H. Bennett, E. H. Bird. The treasurers in succession were Albertis Swalm, S. U. Baker, H. E. Gayle, W. F. Oliver, A. K. Willett, T. R. Van Zandt and H. E. Gayle, and the librarians F. H. VanEmburgh, E. B. Ackerman, J. Fred MacDonald, W. H. Hardy, P. H. Bennett, W. A. Woodruff, H. W. Marshall and H. C. VanEmburgh. The teachers were as follows: John Ulrich, Theodore Mace, W. B. Stewart, D. O. Kilbourn, Miss Vandenberg, Isaac Gaston, Garret T. VanWinkle, Miss Anna Garretson, Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mrs. S. C. Peck, George Gayle, John H. VanWinkle, G. L. VanEmburgh Mrs. Insley Gardner, Miss Ella Benedict, Mrs. W. E. Mattison, Joseph Maier, Daniel Van Winkle, T. A. Sofield, Miss Etta Van Duyn, Mrs. Anna C. Crawford, F. H. Martin and W. D. W. Miller, while Mrs. S. L. Stewart and Miss Nettie Mattison were in charge of the "Buds of Promise," the name given the primary department. Those now in charge are Mrs. J. M. Tier and Miss Mary Berkaw.

Dr. Raymond's Address.

The interest in the celebration was increased at the evening service, when Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, pastor of the church from 1881 to 1887, and who is now president of Union College at Schenectady, N. Y., spoke. He was the first pastor of Trinity Reformed church and under his guidance and help it steadily increased in membership and power. After the introductory services, including an organ prelude, invocation and prayer by the pastor, an anthem by the choir and an offertory solo, "Fear Not Ye, O Israel," by Miss Florence Bennett, Dr. Raymond gave a most interesting address.

After expressing great joy and pleasure in being present, and referring to the pleasant memories of former days, he took exception to the mathematics of Dr. Schenck, which made it appear that it was eighteen years ago that he was pastor of the church. He did not want anyone to think that he was so old. He always classed himself as a young man. He suggested that all come to Union College where mathematics are taught correctly. He said that Dr. Schenck's theology was all right, but he is poor in mathematics. He said that one would look long and hard to find anything better than friendship and he always found something drawing him back to Plainfield. He then stated that there were some things in the history of the church, not written in books, and which the pastor would not know unless told him. Dr. Raymond then reviewed some of the inside history of the church, relating many incidents in its formation, when the membership was less than sixty. He said that had he not been a young man the prospects would not have stirred his faith in the future.

Obligations amounting to $4 500 were assumed, while the estimated income that first year was less than $500, causing food for reflection. He was amazed in the large faith of the small consistory of three members, but the purpose was to make this church a true one for Jesus Christ to represent Him in this community and the members were impressed with the idea that the church must live for others and the world, that to seek first the Kingdom of Christ and His righteousness and all things would be added. It was decided to set apart a time for foreign mission collection and local charities and Dr. Raymond said that the first collection taken on a rainy Sunday amounted to $115, which surprised all.

Then the church was confronted with the problem of meeting its indebtedness and after receiving many suggestions relative to holding fairs, leasing the church for concerts, etc., the consistory adopted resolutions refusing to resort to such methods and decided to secure its financial aid in other ways. This announcement following a sermon by Dr. Raymond from the text "Grieve Not the Spirit," brought substantial subscriptions to the church at once and in that way it had no trouble in meeting its obligations.

In conclusion Dr. Raymond said that the chief aim of the church is to answer the deep need of the soul, to make it worth while to be alive. A church must be true to its spiritual mission, not only to preach it, but to live it and he felt sure that Trinity church was organized for a large enough work to justify its existence, which he hoped that God would continue to bless.

Hunt Club Did Not Ride.

On account of the wet condition of the fields Friday's rain the Watchung Hunt Club chase was postponed Saturday afternoon. A few of the members met and a discussion of the season's plans took place. No further arrangements were made, though the dates for next month were considered.

EXAMINED IN TRANCE

Alienist Place Wood Under Hypnotic Influence.

STICKS TO HIS STORY

Corroborates Tale He Told When Arrested for Killing Watchung Grocer.

In the presence of his counsel, Messrs. Swackhamer and Bird, of this city, and Prosecutor James L. Griggs, George H. Wood, the alleged murderer of Grocer Williams, was again put through a thorough mental test, Thursday, by expert alienists and physicians employed by the Somerset County authorities, among them being Dr. Pierce Batty, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of New York; Dr. Frederick Pearson, medical director of the Craig Epileptic Colony, of Sonyea, N. Y., and Dr. A. L. Stillwell, of Somerville. It differed from all other examinations in that Wood at the close was placed in a hypnotic spell by a New York medium and asked all manner of questions in connection with the tragedy.

Wood was first brought into the court house and divested of all clothing. The physicians pricked his body with needles and found him sensitive to pain. Then he was examined for more than an hour by the alienists, and the questions and answers were taken down by a stenographer. At the end of this examination Wood was placed in the trance and while apparently under hypnotic influence he told of his movements with his friend "Mack" the day he left New York for Pennsylvania. He went to the Cortland street ferry and took a boat for New Jersey, after which he got on a train and travelled to a railroad junction about thirty miles from the city, where he took another train, after which his memory became a blank. He revealed nothing of his actions on the day he killed Williams in the Watchung Mountains.

The story Wood told in the trance corroborated the story he told when he was first arrested, but the Somerset County authorities say now they have positive proof that Wood was in Plainfield at the time he says he embarked at the Cortland street ferry. They are not satisfied that Wood's trance was the real thing. Wood's counsel are highly pleased with the hypnotic part of the examination. Drs. Batty and Pearson will render an opinion as to Wood's sanity in two or three weeks.

NEWARK PASTOR'S TALK TO HOPE CHAPEL AUDIENCE

TALKS INTERESTINGLY ON THE "A B C OF MANHOOD."

Before a good sized audience in Hope Memorial chapel last night, Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, pastor of the Belleville Avenue Congregational church, Newark, delivered the third of special sermons on subjects. It was a strong address and was as fully enjoyed as was that of Dr. Richards last week.

The clergyman's theme was, "The A B C of Manhood" and in this connection he placed all men in three classes corresponding to the kindergarten, grammar and high school grades of the American educational system. The first, he said, never got beyond the "curious" stage, and remained at a standstill; the second were beginning to think and the third were those who were reaching out and attaining full beliefs. Man is not full grown, he asserted, until he has attained some belief. In this trend of thought, he said there were three essential points that man must realize: First, the absolute love of God; second, the necessity of seeking brotherly love and third, that God is related to him.

The fourth address in the series will be given on Friday night of next week by Major-General O. O. Howard, U. S. A. retired, of Burlington, Vt., an uncle of Rev. L. R. Howard His subject will be "Lincoln and the Mountaineers."

Toll for Autos.

The House of Assembly has passed the bill introduced by Assemblyman Hunt, of Salem County, to compel automobiles to pay toll on turn-pikes of the State. The rate established is one cent a mile for machines with two persons, and two cents a mile for machines carrying more than two persons. A bill is pending which prohibits the running of automobiles by children less than sixteen years old.

GAVE AWAY FRANCHISE

Piscataway Township Com.'s Action Arouses the Public.

WATER CO. SCHEME

Even the Alleged Agent of New Concern Professes Ignorance of It.

The residents of Piscataway Township are indignant over the recent action of the Township Committee in granting a franchise to the Piscataway Water Company to establish a plant and lay water mains throughout the township, and they are beginning to realize what a franchise has been given away for a mere nothing. Attention was called to the matter by the publication of an article recently in The Daily Press. An investigation was made and no one could be found who had any knowledge concerning the newly-organized company. Even David Lawson, in whose place of business at New Market, the company had established an office, was unable to give any information about the company or what it proposed to do, and as for the incorporators of the company practically nothing was known.

According to the terms of the franchise the company is given the right to lay water mains throughout the township and not a single provision is made that it shall put the roads in as good condition as found, neither does it specify when the work shall begin or end or where the water plant is to be located. All of these things are not agitating the minds of the taxpayers of the township and a prominent man who knows by what right the committee gave such a franchise without making a full investigation into the standing of the company.

In speaking of the matter yesterday a leading citizen of New Market said that he believed that the company was organized to secure such a franchise as it obtained and would then sell out at a good price to the Middlesex Water Company or some other company for a good sum. He believed that the Township Committee had been hoodwinked into giving valuable rights for practically nothing.

Those who are interesting themselves in the matter are still unable to ascertain where the company proposes to get its water and locate its pumping station. The franchise practically gives the company every good road throughout the township and it is at liberty to tear them up and leave them in that condition. A majority of the residents in Piscataway township would like to secure such a water supply, such as was under the control of the Watchung Water Company, now serving Dunellen, intended to extend its mains to New Market and surrounding territory, but nothing has been heard of that proposition lately. However, the residents want to know something about any company that plans to operate a water plant within their territory and it is quite likely that when the Township Committee meets again they may demand an investigation by those officials.

Several members of the committee, when questions about the matter have expressed entire ignorance and this has made the people curious to know more about the Piscataway Water Company.

BOY WONDER VIOLINIST.

Eleven-Year-Old Lad Whom Daniel Frohman Pays $1,500 Each Time He Plays.

New York.—Franz von Vecsey, the little Hungarian violinist whose performances have been the talk of musical circles of Europe, and who is to give a series of 30 concerts in this country under the management of Daniel Frohman, arrived a few days ago on the Lucania of the Cunard line, accompanied by his father and mother and by Herr Zilcher, a Berlin pianist, who is his accompanist.

Wrapped in a gray fur lined wister and wearing a small fur cap young Von Vecsey looked as bright and wide-awake as any ordinary 11-year old boy who doesn't know one note from another and thinks more of skating at this time of year than anything else, says the Herald. In fact, his chief concern seemed to be for a small camera which he carried with him. He is of good height and frame. He has large black eyes and a pronounced frontal development. The forehead is high and broad. In complexion the boy is dark. He is said to be of Magyar descent.

Franz was very hungry when the liner arrived, and when soon after he landed he started with his parents to leave the dock to get something to eat, a customs official "spotted" the camera and insisted on taking charge of it until an inspector had seen it.

"No, no!" cried the boy. "You must not take this. See, it is an American camera," and he showed the manufacturer's stamp to the customs man, who thereupon let him pass.

The youngster speaks English very well.

"I want to see Chicago and San Francisco," he said to Daniel Frohman, his American manager. "When are we going to those places? I have heard so much about them. I saw the Statue of Liberty and I know I got a good picture of it. No, I was not ill at all crossing. Mamma was, though, all the time."

The boy was delighted to learn that Wassily Safonoff, who conducted when he played in Moscow, was here. Franz has played at Buckingham palace before King Edward, as well as before the kaiser and the czar and czarina of Russia.

When he played a month ago at Berlin Joachim led the orchestra for him. His first recital was given in Carnegie hall the other evening. The 30 concerts for which Mr. Frohman has engaged the boy embrace Philadelphia, Baltimore, Brooklyn and Washington.

minister of finance, receiving much praise for his work in converting government rentes from a 4½ to the present 3 per cent. basis. The celebrated Mme. Rouvier, writer, sculptress and diplomat, who died six years ago, was his wife. She married M. Rouvier shortly after the death of the famous Abbe Constant, whose marriage to her had caused his expulsion from the church.

Foreign Labels for Sale.

Many have looked with awe upon suit cases and steamer trunks covered with labels of every size and color, and thought enviously of the advantages the traveled owners of such baggage had over the poor stay-at-homes. The baggage proclaimed that its owners had been from Sydney to San Francisco, from Copenhagen to Colombo, to say nothing of visiting half the capitals and health resorts of the continent. But the iconoclast has found shops where such baggage is sold, all shattered and battered and labeled with a score of foreign towns, although it may never have traveled two miles from the Grand Central station

THE NEWSBOY BABIES

SMALL LADS THAT BUY AND SELL AT A TENDER AGE.

PLACE IS HOME WITH A NURSE

Those of Chicago Mostly Italians and Jews—Work Long and Hard—Keen After Business—Do Not Lack Courtesy.

CHICAGO.—Such little midgets some of them are, the burden of damp papers bigger than the bearer. But such plucky, ambitious babies. They seem keenly to enjoy their place in the work-a-day world, there seems none of the "creeping like snail unwillingly" of the schoolboy; each little competitor in "Noos Alley" evinces personal interest in the strife of commerce.

There is one baby I am sure is not more than five, and many a six-year-old is numbered among the vendors that have not yet reached the dignity of a corner, the stand appearing to be on a high plane in this business. The small fry rightly begin at the bottom, serve an apprenticeship of wandering peddler and jumper on cars. By and by, when the boy sells 100 papers a day, his newspaper gives him a stand; and he is established, begins to dress like an aristocrat.

The babies dress in rags and sweaters, the sweater the backbone of the costume, the rags hanging on for decency's sake. Another distinguishing feature of the baby newsboy is a wool cap pulled down so only a fringe of hair shows at the back, the front almost covering the forehead. The youngsters, Italians or Jews, look out under the overhanging cape with eyes big and dark, and often very beautiful, childish, pathetic eyes, rather than the sharp ferret sort one would naturally expect in humanity so early sent out to struggle for existence.

In every case it is the babyishness that strikes the passer-by, the pale faces have such rounded contour, the small voices can scarce pronounce the words they try for so bravely. The puny legs, the elfin hands, betray the fledgeling, in spite of fledgeling's assertion that he is truly aged. One wishes he could sweep the whole bunch of them off the stony streets, send them all away where there is green grass and fresh air and rich milk and dogs to play with.

All in the Day's Work.

His smaller ones do not get up so early as the larger fellows, whoever it is that send such wee creatures out allows them a morning nap. They don't try to sell the morning papers that are distributed at two and three and four o'clock; it is the late-appearing "Murikin" and issues put forth at intervals during the day that the babies handle. About seven they make their appearance on the street, and for half an hour on till six they buy and sell. Every one I talked with was hoarse as a crow, from "hollerin' too much," this hoarseness and the foreign accent making it difficult for one to understand them.

That was in ordinary conversation. Their cries were audible enough, and distinct enough: "Twelve 'clock papy yeah. Twelve 'clock." "One 'clock. One 'clock." "Three 'clock Noos. Three 'clock." "Sportin' extry." "Evening papy yere."

About ten o'clock "Noos Alley" is filled with boys lounging in all sorts of attitudes against the brick walls; resting from the early onslaughts and waiting for fresh ammunition. They are not particularly talkative; perhaps, like prima donnas, saving their voices, and look as leisurely and unconcerned as though they had nothing to do, no bread to earn. But notice the miraculous change when the papers are at last handed out; what a scramble and hustle for first place, what a mad run to market the wares.

In the afternoon competition is fiercer in "Noos Alley," for what reason I am unable to say; then, indeed, one must have push and sturdiness to get hold of the coveted wares. No fighter cares to be late on the field. When we think of the coddling and protection the child in fair circumstances is surrounded with, what a contrast to the small, ill-fed waif that jostles and is jostled in the alley.

"Sangwiches and Pie."

I BOUGHT up one small boy's wares at a quarter, and got his reluctant consent to accompany me to my office and talk. He was Italian, spoke English with no great fluency, and for some moments regarded me with diffidence, not to say suspicion. But pretty soon he gave me a bit of glimpse into the life of his fellows, whom truly, he referred to as guys—the first time I had heard this word in its native heath.

I asked him where he got his lunch, and he replied: "I say 'bout a nickel. Get in Noos alley."

"What do you have?" I inquisitively asked.

"Two sangwiches and two pieces of pie, and a napple."

"Goodness," say I, "all that for five cents! Where do you get it?"

"In Noos alley. All they don't sells of the dime boxes they sells to the newsboys for five cents."

"What do you drink?" I asked.

"Water."

"Where do you eat at night? Do you get supper at home or down town?"

"I spend five cents. Two sangwiches and two pieces of pie and a napple."

I wondered what he had for breakfast. I wondered what Tony would be like after ten years more of such a rigorous diet of pie. At present he was chalk-faced, his big head rested on a neck too small for it, his wrists were thin, his ankles matched them.

Late Hours.

LAST night went to the theater to see Miss Patrick Campbell in barbarously splendid gowns in a barbarously splendid setting. On my way, just this side the theater, my attention was attracted by two small urchins, two of the newspaper babies that ever appeal to me, no matter how hurried I may be. They were wet, and so hungry; they sat on the steps of a brilliantly lighted restaurant and with appetite ate baker's cookies, those wan, substanceless things that are not even "filling." But they seemed satisfied with the world, and appeared to be enjoying themselves quite as much as though they were a couple of men dining at a social club.

It wasn't even a dinner of herbs, but there seemed not a little fellowship there, social exchange and courtesy of a kind.

When we got out there were the kiddies again, no longer inactive; all alert now the theater crowd was filing out and a few chance persons willing to pay a coin to see what had been happening in the couple of unrecorded hours. "Alxtry! Alxtry!" they yelled. And one of the mature age of 14 or so informed us "The czar yields!" But we had heard that sort of thing so often before we had grown hardened to all sensational reports, and since we would have heeded an announcement that Chicago was burning.

Still, the buying of the papers might mean that the tired, sleepy sellers could get to bed all the sooner. I am sorry I didn't.

The newsboy that granted me the interview told me his sister sells papers, that many girls do. "They can't jump cars; they sell round saloons. Sometimes they get pinched, if they stay out too late. They all work hard. One night whole bunch went to station. They sell many papers. Sometimes mens give money."

Manners and Customs.

WHILST I was pondering over the information gathered from the newsboy I quite forgot the passage of time, and was quite startled to hear the words: "Give my quarter; must go; 10 'clock." I came out of my absent-mindedness and said I would go a ways with him, would like him to point out "Noos" alley to me. My companion made no reply, but watched me closely as we traveled down in the elevator. When we reached the street he turned his head aside and drew his hand across his eyes. I investigated, and saw tears welling up in the black eyes, tears the lad endeavored to hide. What was wrong? Did he think he had lost the quarter? Did he fear he was going to be late at the alley? Quickly I handed him the quarter and urged my hurry on, assuring him I could find the place myself. He started ahead rapidly as soon as permission was granted, but second thought must have convinced him he was owing me guidance, for presently he slowed up and for blocks kept just a little ahead, turning constantly to see that I was not going astray. When we reached the alley, he jerked his elbow in its direction and called a hoarse: "Here." He evidently did not try to get something for nothing.

It seems to me, according to their light they are both honest and mannerly. Many a time have I seen a very busy newsboy patiently stop to give a street direction to a bewildered stranger, taking time to do it thoroughly, a sale.

The urchin with whom I held the long conversation told me "some guys got a home, but don't want to go there; stay out, sleep 'round the 'Murikin.'" I wondered if this was excess of business zeal, desire to get on the street early, or welcome at home was of such a character one would prefer the uncertain shelter of the street.

A pleasantly piece of knowledge learned was concerning the Christmas harvest. My small friend remarked that Christmas day he made three dollars. "One mans give one dollar, one mans a quarter, in one day, three dollars." The newsboy babies must wish it were Christmas every day in the year.

FIGHT OVER MILLIONS

Heirs of Wealthy Mr. Weightman Seek to Break His Will.

PLAINFIELDER'S SHARE

Grandson Married to Miss Fannie Cox, of West Seventh Street—Estate of $60,000,000.

Legal steps to break the will of the late William Weightman, the Philadelphia multi-millionaire who left his entire fortune to his daughter, Mrs. R. J. C. Walker, have been taken by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Wister. In her suit she will be joined by six grand-children of the dead millionaire, one of whom is Aubrey Weightman who married Miss Fanny Cox, daughter of Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street.

Weightman's fortune was appraised at $60,000,000 and the entire amount, together with the control of his immense chemical and drug business, was willed Mrs. Walker. She has since been conducting the latter and has been exploited as one of America's most remarkable women. Mrs. Wister contends that favoritism and testamentary incapacity were responsible for Weightman's action. She and the six grand-children were cut off with the proverbial shilling.

The documents Mrs. Wister has obtained as evidence are said to be sufficient to cause a genuine stir if the case is not settled before they are presented before the Register. Among them are letters seemingly showing that Mr. Weightman intended to remember his other heirs. There is a reference to a codicil to his will.

Some of the letters will be backed by evidence showing that they were written immediately after the millionaire had talked with Mrs. Walker, and their contents will be compared with letters and statements from him immediately before the visit.

READY TO MAKE WAY FOR TRUST CO. BUILDING

DEMOLITION OF OLD STRUCTURES BEGINS NEXT WEEK.

Commencing April 1, Alex Kane, who has purchased the old buildings on Park avenue owned by The Plainfield Trust Company, will begin to tear down the old structures. He will remove the building extending from Park avenue and West Second street to the brick building formerly occupied by Charles Schanz as a saloon. Mafford Giles, the butcher; William Randolph, the barber, and A. H. Enander and Andrew W. Johnson, plumber and tinsmith, are now the only ones occupying these stores and they will have to move before April 1.

Mr. Giles will move to a new store built for him on West Second street by W. R. Codington. William Randolph has leased one of Charles H. Bland's stores on Watchung avenue, near the trolley stand, while Mr. Enander and Mr. Johnson will move to Watchung avenue, near the borough line.

Mr. Kane has been given twenty days from April 1 in which to remove the old buildings and he promises to fulfill his contract with the Plainfield Trust Company. If the weather will permit, the trust company will begin operations on its new structure as soon as the old buildings are off the property. The architect engaged to draw plans has completed the same and they have been approved by the company.

With favorable weather the work of digging a cellar will require but a short time and then will follow the construction. In the meantime the company will complete the details of awarding contracts for the different branches of work so that there may be no further delay.

BUY BIG TRACT.

Syndicate Purchases Property in Business Section of City.

William R. Codington, F. A. Pope and Dr. Albert Pittis have just become the owners of the Thomas R. MacDonald property at 172 East Front street, opposite Woodhull & Martin's store. This property is one of the most valuable in the central part of the city. It has a wide frontage and its depth extends back to the fire department headquarters on East Second street.

Mrs. T. R. MacDonald has occupied the property for several years and there is no intimation that there will be a change in tenancy at present, the owners acquiring the property as an investment.

—Freeholder William A. Westphal has purchased of Dan H. Roberts his livery business on West Front street, and will hereafter conduct it himself. This is the first time in many years that Mr. Roberts has been out of business, but owing to advanced age he has decided to retire.

COL. E. F. SILL'S ESCAPE

Civil War Veteran Tells of His Thrilling Experiences.

ILL AND STARVING

Address Delivered Before Large Audience at the First M. E. Church Last Night.

Col. E. F. Sill, a Civil War veteran who suffered everything but death during the four years' struggle, gave his celebrated lecture, "In and Out of a Rebel Prison," before an audience which filled the First M. E. church to the doors, Friday. Commanding a ready flow of language and having his terrible experiences indelibly imprinted upon his memory, he held the tense interest of the gathering for two hours while he graphically related his escape from prison and his flight through North and South Carolina and Tennessee for 600 miles to the lines of the Union army.

As a member of Major-General Butterfield's staff during the Atlanta campaign, Col. Sill had been directed to deliver dispatches some miles out of camp one stormy night in May, 1864, following the battle of Dallas Woods, Ga., and was returning when Rebel scouts foiled him with a sword and made him prisoner. The force of the blow fractured his skull and he was otherwise injured but he was dragged to his feet and made to walk his way to their camp. From there he was transferred to Marietta, Ga., and thence to Atlanta, where with 1,500 other Northerners he was penned up in what was known as the "Dull's Pen." He was there a month, suffering terribly from illness, starvation and the blistering sun and was then transferred to Charleston and kept in the top of an old building for five months. In November he was taken to Macon with the intention of being exchanged but only to be placed in a stockade at Columbia.

In this place he saw many hundreds of fellow Northerners die from disease and starvation and was about to succumb himself, when by cleverly bribing a sentry with a forged pass, he and two companions made their escape. They travelled by night, crossing ice-laden rivers and over mountains, dodging Rebels and savage bloodhounds and subsisting on tree bark and berries until they were reaching friends when on December 29 they were again captured and lodged in jail at Pollytown, N. C. A second time they escaped and then without shoes or clothing they continued the flight, their torn and bleeding feet leaving a trail of blood behind which aided him to escape in following them. On many occasions they had to lie down in frozen clothing, but not to sleep, as it meant sure death, and they would spend an hour or more in rolling over the snow just to relieve their aching limbs. Rebel scouts continued to harass them and bloodhounds were placed on the scent time and again but they threw them off by rubbing their feet with turpentine, a trick taught they by slaves. Finally on February 7, 1865, the colonel and his friends reached the Union lines at London, Tenn., where they fell senseless from joy. Because of their wild, haggard appearance and the almost unbelievable story they told it was at first thought their reason had fled and they were sent to the guard house. In the end, however, they recovered fully and were sent to their homes.

Col. Sill has a way of interspersing dry humor in his narrative and there were times when he had his hearers laughing at some funny incident in connection with their meeting with negroes who were taught that Yankees were horns.

At the close of the lecture, Miss Etta Bayliss sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," with the gathering joining in the last chorus. The Young Man's Brotherhood of the church [had charge of the affair and Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass introduced the speaker.

Demolli's candy and ice cream please every one who has been fortunate to try them. He is an expert caterer and insures perfect satisfaction.

When you get ready to move give William Hand & Sons, of East Second street, the contract for the work. It will be done carefully and with entire satisfaction.

Spring is now almost a week old and Plainfielders who intend beautifying their grounds should lose no time. The Bellevlew Nursery is closing out its full stock of trees, plants and shrubbery. Nuf Ced.

Fred Endress has an especially attractive line of choice meats on sale this week. The stock has all the specials which Endress is noted for, including the finest cuts in all varieties of meats, steaks, ham, bacon and liver.

Kirsh, the North avenue tobacconist, does not confine his business to the retailing of cigars. He also sells them at wholesale and has one of the largest lines of pipes, cases and holders to be found in the city. The prices can't be beat even in New York.

NEW BRIDGE PROBABLE

Improvements on West End Avenue a Certainty Now.

WIDENING THE STREET

Thoroughfare on City Side to Remain As It Is—Storm Sewer Is Needed.

While no official report has as yet been made regarding the proposed new bridge to be erected over Green brook on West End avenue, it is understood that the Somerset County Board of Freeholders has decided favorably in the matter and there seems to be every reason to believe that the Union County members will also agree to the improvement. It was agreed by the Somerset County board that it would vote for the new bridge provided the owners of adjoining land in the borough made the improvements proposed. This has been done, it is said.

The new bridge will be sixty-six feet wide, the same as West End avenue in the city, and will be an iron girder and concrete structure. Many persons have wondered whether the city would widen the avenue to one hundred feet to correspond with the proposed width in the borough. A city official in speaking of the matter says that he can see no necessity for widening the avenue in the city, when that thoroughfare is now of greater width than West Front street. Besides it would cost a large sum to effect such an improvement. It would necessitate the removal of several houses on both sides of the avenue and this would mean the paying of damages to the property-owners.

There is no doubt but that the city should improve West End avenue and provide proper drainage for surface water, and interested persons are hoping that the borough improvement will bring this about. At present during every hard rain, the avenue catches all of the top dressing from adjoining streets until the gutters are filled up to such an extent that they will not properly carry off the water. With the building of the new bridge there will probably follow the laying of a proper sidewalk on the northside of the avenue in the city, between the bridge and the house now occupied by Mrs. Huff.

Before any considerable sum of money is expended in fixing the road bed or gutters the city should build a storm sewer on the southside of West End avenue. This would greatly relieve the present trouble, as the sewer on the opposite side would not be obliged to carry so much surface water from Grant avenue, East and West Front street. The lake proposed to be established in what was known as the Cadmus property will no doubt help to relieve matters in the rainy season, for the course of the brook will be straightened, and a small dam built. The plan is to excavate to the level of the bed of the brook and build a lake fifteen hundred feet long and three hundred feet wide. Provisions will be made to prevent as far as possible the flooding in high water.

At the next meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders action will be taken regarding the bridge and the Union County members will also take similar action. Then bids for the work will be advertised, so that operations can be started early in the summer and completed while West End avenue is being widened in the borough.

VISITS LOCAL PLANT TO GAIN INFORMATION

EXPERT SPENDS SOME TIME AT SEWAGE DISPOSAL BEDS.

George W. Fuller, of the partnership of Rudolph Herring, the well known hydraulic and sanitary expert, who was consulting engineer for the city in the building of the Plainfield water works, has been examining the sewage disposal works. Mr. Fuller is conducting experiments on sewage disposal at Columbus, Ohio, that city having appropriated $30,000 for experiments to extend over a year.

The results of the first six months' experiments will be completed early in April, and Mr. Fuller has invited Street Commissioner Gavett to visit his office in New York and look over figures, thus giving Plainfield the benefit of the elaborate tests being carried on at Columbus. Mr. Herring as well is interested in watching the workings of the local plant, which is the largest of its kind in this country.

Adopt Communion Cups.

Woodhull & Martin have received an order to furnish the individual communion outfit for Faith chapel. The service is a duplicate of that used at the First Baptist church and will be used for the first time on Sunday, April 2.

CHURCHES REVIEW WORK

Annual Sessions Held by First and Park Ave. Baptists.

REPORTS EXCELLENT

Officers Are Chosen and Plans for Ensuing Year's Work Are Discussed.

Dr. J. B. Probasco, H. E. Needham and Frank W. Jones, whose terms as deacons expired, were re-elected for five years at the business meeting of the First Baptist church, March 22. Dr. Probasco expressed a desire to retire from the board of deacons, but he was persuaded to continue. Mrs. Jenn D. Runyon declining to continue as a member of the Board of Managers for the Old Folks' Home in Roseville, her place was filled by the election of Mrs. J. A. Chambliss for a term of three years.

Dr. Probasco presented the report for the deacons. This showed receipts of $1,150.49 and a balance of $128.49.

O. B. Leonard, clerk of the church, presented an impressive tribute to the memory of Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, which will be spread on the minutes. He referred to his godly life and devotion to his work while pastor of the church for thirty-nine years. During this time 1,651 persons were received into the membership of the church, and of this number 977 were converted through his instrumentality and were baptised by him.

It was stated by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, who presided at the meeting, that there would be baptism on Sunday night, there being several candidates received during the past few weeks and now await baptism.

Several members were received by letter from other Baptist churches, including Mrs. Capron, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, who resides in the south.

Encouraging reports from the various societies of the Park Avenue Baptist church made the annual meeting of that church March 22, a decidedly gratifying one. Rev. A. E. Finn, astor of the church, presided and Charles Dayton acted as clerk.

The first report was read by Harry Cumming as secretary of the Sunday-school. The membership at the present time is 185, an increase of 19 over last year. Of this number the average attendance during the past year has been 100. The receipts of the Sunday-school for the last year have amounted to $461.05, while the disbursements for missions and for general expenses were $63.25 and $386.63 respectively. A general outline of the work was given showing what has been accomplished in a routine way.

The Ladies' Aid Society report showed a membership of 20 with an average attendance of 12 at the monthly meetings. There is a balance of $35 in the treasury at present. During the past season, the Women's Foreign Missionary Circle took in $114 48, from which $97.80 was expended in current expenses. The balance on hand is $16.68. Mrs. Nelson Runyon read the report for the Women's Home Missionary Society, telling briefly of the work of that organization, emphasizing the fact that $180 has been raised during 1904-05 for the support of the work.

One of the most interesting reports was that of Miss Florence Hawkins for the Y. P. S. C. E. The membership of the society is 58, a gain of 7 over last year. The total receipts were $122 87, of which $105.41 was spent in carrying on the work. The meetings have been held weekly and have been largely attended. Under the auspices of the senior society, a junior organization with 13 members is in operation. The King's Daughters have a membership of 13, and have donated $85 toward the support of Home and Italian missions and the local baby camp.

Following the reports of the various societies, the pastor, read a general announcement of the work of the year, in which he described in brief the different organizations and their work in the church. In his report, Rev. Mr. Finn expressed the thanks of the church to the Plainfield Symphony Orchestra for the concert rendered Monday night. He announced that a series of evangelistic meetings will be held at the church beginning April 24, to last for one week.

Charles Dayton declined to serve as clerk of the church for another year and in his place was elected Harry C. Runyon. The treasurer was elected in the person of B. F. Vail. The deacons all received re-election as follows: William F. Tallman, J. H. Giles and T. H. Cuming.

Approaching Nuptial Event.

Miss Kate Graves, daughter of Mrs. Charles Graves, and Mortimer Givens, of Westfield, will be married at the home of the bride's mother, 208 Liberty street, Wednesday night, April 5, at 8 o'clock. Rev. Robert Walker, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will officiate. Mr. Givens will soon engage in the grocery business in the West End.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 2.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The making of a Christian; his food.—II Tim. iii, 14-17; John vi, 47-58.

In the making of a Christian we have already considered his birth and speech. We come in this topic to his food, a very essential element in his development. No sooner is a child born into this world than it must be fed. The unfed child would soon languish and perish. This is essentially true also of the child born into the kingdom of God. Its life will be supported and sustained by that which nourishes and develops spiritual life.

Growth, whether physical or spiritual, is gradual. Therefore food to produce the desired results must be regularly partaken of and be adapted to the age and condition of the one for whom it is intended. Irregularity in eating is very injurious to physical health. So it is to the spiritual life. We must be regular in the exercise of the means of grace by which the soul grows if we are to produce the best kind of spiritual life. Adaptability is also an essential factor in the development of spiritual as well as physical life. Each age has that which is more particularly adapted to it. We do not feed meat to a babe, but milk. In the spiritual realm also there should be "strong meat for men and milk for babes." This fact is sometimes overlooked and the good things of the gospel are indiscriminately dispensed. But this is unwise and unnecessary. God's word is a storehouse in which suitable truth may always be found. Here young and old, weak and strong, wise and unwise, may find the word in season that will meet the want and need of the soul.

But of what does the Christian's food consist? (1) He feeds upon the Scriptures. The Bible is the inspired word of God and is "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." (2) He feeds upon Christ. "I am the bread of life," says Christ. That is, what bread is to the physical life Christ is to the spiritual life. He is our model, and to become like Him we must have constant fellowship and communion with Him, must daily sit at His feet and study His words and acts and work them out into our own lives.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xvi, 11-15; Ps. lxxviii, 23-25; cxxxiii, 1-3; Isa. iv, 1-3; Matt. iv, 1-4; Luke xi, 1-3; John i, 4; iv, 5-15; Rom. xii, 1, 2; Heb. x, 5-10.

Rural Endeavor.

In the December Chat, sent to New York state Endeavor workers by John R. Clements, state secretary, he gives an interesting account of success in a new line of endeavor which he is pushing in his state and which is adapted to all states. He says:

"As showing what may be done, only this afternoon it has been my great joy to aid in the foundation of a Junior rural family Endeavor society. There are three members in the society in addition to the mother, who is its superintendent. A little lad of nine summers is its president. For half an hour on Sunday afternoon they hold their meeting. They sing; they pray; they recite Scripture; they plan benevolent work; they give money. Once a month they send the money and a written report to the Junior society of the home church. The membership of that Junior society was increased 5 per cent by the formation of this one Junior rural family Endeavor, an increase it could not possibly have had but for the 'R. F. E.' idea. You see its possibilities, I am sure. Now let us push it with all our God given wisdom and strength."

Invocation Hymn.

The following invocation sung at the fifteenth international Christian Endeavor convention, held in Washington in 1896 and written for the convention by the Hon. John Hay, who has become so famous as secretary of state, will be sung to original music at the Baltimore Christian Endeavor convention in July:

INVOCATION.

Lord, from far severed climes we come
To meet at last in Thee, our home.
Thou who hast been our guide and guard,
Be still our hope, our rich reward!

Defend us, Lord, from every ill,
Strengthen our hearts to do Thy will.
In all we plan and all we do
Still keep us to Thy service true.

Oh, let us hear the inspiring word
Which they of old at Horeb heard!
Breathe to our hearts the high command,
"Go onward and possess the land!"

Thou who art Light, shine on each soul!
Thou who art Truth, each mind control!
Open our eyes and make us see
The path which leads to heaven and Thee!

A Suggestion.

Societies that wish recognition at Baltimore should keep in front of the members during the meetings a placard with a plain statement of the objects sought, together with the achievement thus far made. For example:

WANTED:
A 25 per cent gain in new members.
OBTAINED:
A 15 per cent gain.
Who will bring in one new member?

—Christian Endeavor World.

Fifty Per Cent.

A systematic, personal, friendly canvass for new members is needful. No society has attained its maximum membership. Far too many make a sad showing, and the largest churches usually have the smallest proportionate enrollment. Why? We can, if we will, increase our membership 50 per cent this year. A failure to do so will indicate our lack of interest and effort. —Lyman S. Stone, President New York City Union.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

C. M. Anderson.

Chicago bowlers captured a considerable share of the honors at the fifth annual bowling tournament just closed at Milwaukee. It was anticipated that several records would be broken, and although conditions were favorable the anticipations were not realized. To the Gunthers, No. 2, of Chicago, went the five men championship with a count of 2,795, which is second to the 2,819 made by the O'Leary's at Indianapolis three tournaments back; Rolfe and Stretch of Chicago won the doubles with 1,213, which is third on the list, the 1,237 of Steers and McClean at Buffalo in 1902 being high; while individual honors went to C. M. Anderson, of St. Paul, with 651. The last named mark is a creditable one, but Daniel Jones put up 683 at Indianapolis. One record, that for high game, was tied by Williams of San Francisco, who scored 269, a total made at Indianapolis by Kettenacher of Cincinnati. While the winning of any championship is to some extent a matter of luck, it was in general results that the great strength of the representatives from Chicago were seen. Landing no less than 16 prizes in the five men event, they took away $1,747.50, nearly 40 per cent. of the whole amount. In doubles they annexed 34 of the awards and a total of $1,595.83, or 43 per cent. of the total. In the individuals 45 prizes were won, amounting to $1,211, or 35 per cent. of the total. Chicago's nearest competitor was Cleveland, which carried away $975.75. Detroit won $685, Milwaukee $440, Philadelphia $387.50 each, Toledo $380, Cincinnati $387 and Louisville $344.25. Plans were laid at the tournament that will undoubtedly bring back New York city into the congress next year, and the next tournament should be larger than ever. New Yorkers were granted the terms they asked in nearly every respect, only the rule providing against loading balls being denied them. As a result, beginning next September, square gutters from the head pin back will be regulation. Balls must weigh not more than 16 pounds, but may be composed of any substance. New York gets home rule and Louisville was awarded the 1906 tournament after it had been granted to Philadelphia, while New York has been indorsed for 1907.

The University of Michigan has a student from the far distant orient who ranks with the best in class work, oratory and athletics. He is K. S. Inui of Japan, at present a junior "Lit." Inui is candidate for pitcher on the 'varsity team, and twice each day he reports to Coach McAllister, and under the leader's instructions he has developed more speed than any other twirler in the squad. Inui has also acquired some curves and shoots that are likely to prove puzzling to opposing batsmen. His great difficulty, however, is lack of control. Owing to his wildness few of the 'varsity players care to attempt to receive his delivery, as the ball he throws is too speedy to handle with safety when the catcher doesn't know just where it is going. Inui is also versed in the science of jiu-jitsu. Several of the students here have taken lessons from him in the Japanese system of physical culture, and as interest in it is growing among the students it is likely that regular classes will be formed soon. Not only as an athlete, however, is Inui gaining a reputation. He is also an orator of no mean ability. Last year he was second in his class contest, and this winter he took first honors in it. This achievement puts him in the finals from which the representative of the University of Michigan in the Northern Oratorical league is to be selected. He has delivered over 100 lectures in various parts of the state on the causes of the Japanese-Russian war. The young foreigner has also mixed up in student politics at the university. He has taken a lively part in several of the elections recently, and is now a candidate for the office of president of the Students' Lecture association next year. This place is considered one of the "fat" ones of college life. The young Japanese is thoroughly Americanized except that he still prefers the flowing robes of his native land to the close fitting garments of occidental civilization, and wears them whenever opportunity offers.

K. S. Inui.

The California assembly, by a vote of 43 to 20, has passed Espy's bill prohibiting pool selling or wagering on a horse race and providing a fine. The Ralston anti-prize fight bill has been passed by the senate, on reconsideration, by a vote of 23 to 11.

Albert Herrnstein, of Chillicothe, O., former halfback of the Michigan football team, has been elected as coach of the Purdue university team for the coming season. He has been coaching the Haskell Indians for the last two years.

James Smith, known widely to Yale graduates and followers of Yale sports as "Pop," died suddenly at his home at New Haven, Conn., of heart disease. He was 87 years old. For a quarter of a century or more he figured as a mascot at various Yale athletic contests, traveling extensively with the football and baseball teams especially.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 2: "The Making of a Christian: His Food"—John vi, 47-58; II Tim. iii, 14-17.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

"As the living Father sent Me, and I live because of the Father, so he that eateth Me, he also shall live because of Me."

Five thousand hungry people had been fed in picnic style, with bread and fish, free of charge to them, when they had stayed all day in the country by the lake side listening to the traveling preacher who was making such a sensation by his novel way of stating things.

Of course they were up early the next morning and out at the same place looking for another day like yesterday. Any man who will do that sort of thing will have that sort of a crowd. Entertaining talk and free feeding will always draw.

But the preacher is not there. He went over to the other side last night while they slept. They will never meet him again where they saw him yesterday. Manna in the wilderness forty years, free for the picking up! That is in their minds, but that is not to His mind. He knows them. They will never know Him. They will see Him on the other side today.

They find Him and ask, "When did you come over?" He goes straight to the heart of the matter. "Ye seek Me because you ate and were filled, not because ye saw signs." The only sign many had seen was that of a life without labor, bread without toil, entertainment without pay. That is the life they desire. They have not seen the sign He made yesterday, so they shall not eat today of the bread He shall break nor obtain the life He will offer.

He broke bread that day and said of it, "He that eateth this bread shall live forever."

But many when they heard Him said. "This is a hard saying, who can hear him?" and many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him.

It was best so until some life should stir in them other than that which is fed by loaves and fishes. He has no more of these to give. He had but five loaves and two fishes at the best, and these were borrowed of a little boy. The supply is exhausted. That is why through all the years since the seekers for loaves and fishes have found so little to satisfy their hunger in His service.

But the Christian—his food? That is in abundance. His meat was to do the Father's will. The life he had of the Father He gives to His own, and they find their strength in doing the good pleasure of God. It is better than Elijah's bread brought by ravens or the meal in the bottom of the widow's meal barrel. It is better than manna in the desert. It is like the continual shewbread in the temple, ever laid on the table in the presence of Jehovah. It is the ever present and satisfying Spirit of the God of all life replenishing with His fullness and imparting of His power.

This Christ promises to give all those who desire and seek it. He promises to come in and sup with those who will open to Him and to abide with us to the end of this world age.

He has kept and is still keeping His promise. This is not by visible and outward manifestation of physical wonders. If you are looking for that kind and must have that sort of evidence of His divinity I fear you shall never have it until you get other eyes.

The world's hunger is being relieved this day and all the days by His invisible bread of heaven.

We taste Thee, O Thou Living Bread,
And long to feast upon Thee still;
We drink of Thee, the Fountain Head,
And thirst our souls from Thee to fill.

O Jesus, ever with us stay!
Make all our moments calm and bright.
Chase the dark night of sin away;
Shed o'er the world Thy holy light!

Doing God's Will.

I do not ask, nor does any one ask, for this form or that of work in charity. But I do ask, because God demands, unselfish life somewhere in His service. His will be done, not yours, not mine. And when you tell me that communion with God seems vague and that heaven seems distant you only tell me what the Son of God best beloved told you long ago. He told you it was not enough to repeat His sayings, but that you must do as He did. He told you that you would not enter the kingdom unless you enlisted in God's service. That is the whole of the "follow Me." And the man who makes his own comfort and ease his first object in this life pays for that ease and comfort by this heavy sacrifice—that he begins perhaps to doubt with Mr. Mallock whether life is worth living and to doubt with Mr. Spencer whether he may have any hope of a life beyond.—Edward Everett Hale, D. D.

MISSION NOW A BRANCH

First Baptist Church Grants Request of Rev. Mr. Musson.

THE PROVISIONS MADE

History of the East Third Street Congregation Which Has Reached a Turning Point in its Growth.

In response to a request from Rev. John W. Musson, pastor of the East Third Street Mission, in behalf of the congregation under his charge worshipping in Faith chapel, the First Baptist church at a regular business meeting, March 22, the members of that mission were constituted a branch of the First Baptist church, bearing the title of Faith chapel, under the pastoral care of Rev. John W. Musson. Charles W. McCutchen, chairman of committee appointed to effect a reorganization, presented the communication from Mr. Musson, and then followed with a presentation of the committee's report, which was adopted.

The resolutions effecting this change provide that the members of the First Baptist church now engaged in religious work in connection with the mission, known as the East Third Street Mission, be and are now constituted a branch of the church. That the members so constituted are authorized to select from the membership of the church three deacons to serve five years, who, as well as their successors, shall be elected at a regular or special meeting of the church, and who shall, together with the pastor, Rev. John W. Musson, or his successors, have charge of the religious work in connection with the said branch. That the pastor and deacons of Faith chapel are hereby authorized to administer the ordinances customary in Baptist churches, namely the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper. That this branch is authorized in the manner customary in Baptist churches, to receive and enroll into the membership of the chapel, who by virtue of such enrollment, shall become de facto members of the First Baptist church; and it is also authorized to dismiss members from said enrollment of the chapel.

The branch is further authorized to call and appoint a pastor at any time when there shall be a vacancy in the pastorate, provided that there shall be first secured the approval and consent of the First Baptist church at a regular meeting called for the purpose. The salary of the pastor shall be fixed only by and with the consent of the Board of Trustees of the East Third Street Baptist Society. The finances of this branch, including all receipts and disbursements of monies, shall continue to be administered by the Board of Trustees of the society, who shall be, or originally provided, nominated by the First Baptist church, and elected in due form.

The report received the hearty endorsement of the church as well as the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss.

The East Third Street Mission was started in the summer of 1891, under the auspices of the Young People's League, of the First Baptist church, services being held in a tent on East Third street. In September, 1891, the work was recognized by action of the church and the deacons comprised a committee to make arrangements for carrying on the same. A dwelling in the vicinity was leased and in January, 1892, it was decided to continue the work and lease the dwelling for a year, and subsequently the lease was renewed for the years 1893, 1894 and 1895. On March 27, 1895, the committee recommended that the mission should be in a chapel building owned by the church. This recommendation was followed and the chapel now used for religious worship was erected within the succeeding two year, after which trustees were chosen and articles of incorporation filed on February 27, 1897.

The mission has continued to prosper and much good has been accomplished under the faithful services of Superintendent L. W. Randolph, Messrs. Conger, Crane, Stewart and other members who have devoted their time and means to the work. It was finally decided that the work was growing to such proportions that a permanent pastor was needed and Rev. John W. Musson was called as minister in charge of the chapel work. Since his coming he has administered the affairs of the chapel with marked success. The plan of re-organization will take effect Sunday, April 2, when the first communion service will be held.

STUDYING OUR SCHOOLS

British Educational Commissioner Visits Schools Here.

HE MAKES A SPEECH

W. V. Pearson, a Sheffield Head Master, Escorted About the City by Dr. H. M. Maxson.

W. V. Pearson, of Sheffield, England, head master of one of the largest boys' schools in that country, who is on a visit to the United States as special commissioner of the British Government's Educational Department to study school questions in this country, made an address at the Plainfield High School Thursday. He said incidently: "When commissioned to this country, I stated to the educational department that I went not to make a report, but for enlightment. And since my visit, one of the last and best memories of which will be my delightful reception to this school, I have been greatly enlightened."

Mr. Pearson did not dwell at great length upon the differences in methods in this country and England, but illustrated the value of sports. The speaker said that he always pitied one who was content to be a spectator. On the other hand, he admired the player who can find his place in the game and play that position, whether it be on a baseball team or in the world of business, with all his might, doing his part to help the whole team, but not trying to be the whole team. He emphasized the importance of finding the particular position to which one is qualified, and to study that position and work in that position thoroughly. Mr. Pearson said that the American scholastic games are of great value because of the fact that they teach a thorough and hard persistence in the right direction.

Referring only briefly to his work in the English schools, Mr. Pearson said that the great contention of the masters there is to convince parents of the importance of school education. "Higher education in England," Mr. Pearson said, "is not only slighted; it is despised."

Upon his return to England, Mr. Pearson will establish a normal school with model schools in Sheffield. After an inspection of the High School, he visited the grammar and primary grades under the guidance of Dr. Maxson, looking into the written work, drawing and other manual work of the Plainfield school system.

ARRANGE RACE MEETS

Plainfield Driving Association Plans Numerous Events.

PRIZES ARE OFFERED

J. Wesley Johnston Re-Elected President and He Will Appoint Special Committee.

Following a re-organization of the Plainfield Driving Association at a meeting held in the Casino, Thursday, plans for a busy season at the Driving Park, which it controls, were made by the members. It includes an invitation matinee meeting to be held in June and a professional meet to be held on July 4, similar to the successful affair conducted last year. In addition other events are to be arranged for later so that the association will have one of the busiest summers it has has enjoyed in a long time.

In the re-organization the following officers were elected: President, J. Wesley Johnston; vice president, W. F. Williams; secretary, Adam Blair; treasurer, Harry F. Johnston. To draft a constitution and by-laws this committee was appointed with instructions to report at the next meeting: W. F. Williams, J. H. Green, Jr., and Edward H. VanBuren. The president was also authorized to appoint a committee of fifteen to include prominent horsemen of Plainfield and vicinity, for the purpose of taking all plans for the matinee meeting in hand and carry them out. It was declared that invitations would be extended throughout the surrounding counties and that many valuable prizes would be offered.

The professional meet to be given on the Fourth of July will be conducted on a large scale, the success of previous affairs demonstrating that the Plainfield public is interested in the sport. The plans are as yet immature but they will be carefully worked out by the various committees to be appointed later. The Driving Park and the grandstands are all to be thoroughly overhauled and every convenience provided for crowds, particulary as the coming horse show and Watchung Hunt Club steeple chase races are to be held there.

The opportunity is especially open to Plainfield young men and Mr. Fowler asks that they take the examination.

DOMINGO OUTBREAK

General Barba and Exiles Land at Monte Cristi.

ROOSEVELT SUPPORTS MORALES.

Government Accepts Proposal of Republic as Conveyed by Dawson's Cablegram Pending Senate's Action on Treaty.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Advices received from Monte Cristi via Cape Haitien, Haiti, on the northern coast of the republic of Santo Domingo, announce that General Barba and a number of Dominican exiles have landed at Monte Cristi and that the inhabitants have risen against President Morales.

"Down with Morales!" is the cry.

The president is blamed for causing the present difficulties with foreign countries.

It is added that the district of Monte Cristi is ready to begin a revolution in favor of President Jiminez and is only waiting the signal to take up arms.

Announcement was made at the state department that a decision has been reached regarding Santo Domingo finances by the terms of which commissioners who are to be responsible American citizens designated by this government will collect the customs of the southern ports of the republic, deposit 55 per cent of them in a New York bank, to be held for the different foreign creditors, and turn 45 per cent over to the Santo Domingo government itself.

Assistant Secretary Adee has made a statement of the proposed plan following a conference between the president and Secretary Taft at the White House.

The attitude of the United States government is shown in the following instructions given to Acting Secretary Adee by President Roosevelt:

"I have carefully considered the following cablegram from Minister Dawson:

"'Under pressure foreign creditors and desire [illegible] Dominican government [illegible] a citizen of the United States receiver southern ports pending ratification protocol, four northern ports to be administered under the award. Forty-five per cent total shall go Dominican government, 55 to be deposited New York for distribution after ratification. Creditors to agree take no further steps in the meantime and receiver to have full authority to suspend importers' preferential contracts. Italian, Spanish-German and American creditors except the Santo Domingo Improvement company accept unconditionally. Belgian, French representatives will recommend acceptance. Some modus vivendi absolutely necessary. I am ready if desired start Washington 28th to explain details and modifications to plan obtainable. Whole matter can be held open during my absence.'

"I direct that the minister express acquiescence in the proposal of the government of Santo Domingo for the collection and conservation of its revenues pending the action of the United States senate upon the treaty, to the end that in the meantime no change shall take place in the situation which would render useless its consummation or bring complications into its enforcement. The secretary of war of the United States will present for nomination by the president of the Dominican republic men to act in the positions referred to in both the northern and southern ports. The utmost care will of course be taken to choose men of capacity and absolute integrity who if possible shall have some knowledge of Spanish. All the moneys collected from both the northern and southern ports not turned over to the Dominican government will be deposited in some New York bank to be designated by the secretary of war and will there be kept until the senate has acted. If the action is adverse the money will then be turned over to the Dominican government. If it is favorable it will be distributed among the creditors in proportion to their just claims under the treaty. Meanwhile Mr. Hollender will thoroughly investigate these claims, including the claim of the American Improvement company, and will report in detail all the information he is able to gather as to the amount actually received by Santo Domingo, the amount of indebtedness nominally incurred, the circumstances so far as they are known under which the various debts were incurred, and so forth.

"This action is rendered necessary by the peculiar circumstances of the case. The treaty now before the senate was concluded with Santo Domingo at Santo Domingo's earnest request repeatedly pressed upon us and was submitted to the senate because, in my judgment, it was our duty to our less fortunate neighbor to respond to her call for aid inasmuch as we were the only power who could give this aid and inasmuch as her need for it was very great. The treaty is now before the senate and has been favorably reported by the committee on foreign relations. It is pending, and final action will undoubtedly be taken when congress convenes next fall. Meanwhile Santo Domingo has requested that the action above outlined be taken—that is, she desires in this way to maintain the status quo, so that if the treaty is ratified it can be executed.

"With this purpose in view I direct that the proposed arrangement be approved. It will terminate as soon as the senate has acted one way or the other."

Intimations of a projected movement against President Morales of Santo Domingo fomented by exiles from that country have reached the state department. The affair, however, is not giving the officials here any uneasiness, as they now feel free in view of President Roosevelt's acceptance of the Dominican government's proposition to control the finances of that country to assist and, it is stated, will assist President Morales if requested by the latter in putting down any movement which is a menace to its best interests.

The district of Monte Cristi is known to be the hotbed of the revolutionists in Santo Domingo, and it was believed Barba and his associates would head for that section. The navy department has several vessels in Dominican waters and under directions from the state department if requested to do so by President Morales will lend its cooperation in preserving the peace of the country, so that its finances may be restored to a settled condition.

WHO PAID FOR THE HYDE BALL?

Petition Asks Removal of Some Equitable Life Directors.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 29.—Senator Edgar T. Brackett of Saratoga filed with Attorney General Mayer a petition asking leave to begin an action in the name of the people for the removal from office of James H. Hyde and Jacob Schiff of New York and such other directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society as may be proven guilty of misconduct toward the interests of the policy holders of the Equitable. The petition is brought in the names of Senator Brackett himself, Mary S. Young and others from Saratoga as policy holders.

The petition alleges, on information and belief, against Mr. Hyde that the ball recently given by him in New York was really at the expense of the Equitable society rather than of Mr. Hyde himself and against Mr. Schiff that he sold bonds to the society while himself a director.

It has been held by the courts that in such case policy holders may not bring action in person, but must proceed through the attorney general, as in the present case.

Attorney General Mayer last night declined to discuss the matter.

PRISONERS ON A BIG ROCK.

Metropolitan Holiness Church Members Quarantined.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Duke M. Farson, a Chicago banker and religious enthusiast, and forty members of his Metropolitan Holiness church are prisoners on a big rock in the middle of the Illinois river valley, with no means of communication with the rest of the world except by telephone.

The usual residence of Farson and his followers is Holiness home, Franklin boulevard, this city. In the home at present are ten suspected smallpox cases, closely watched and guarded by the police. The church does not believe in medical aid, and when the authorities of Ottawa, Ill., were notified that Farson and forty of his adherents were on the way to Buffalo Rock farm, near Ottawa, prompt action was taken to head off the band. The pilgrims avoided a conflict with the Ottawa authorities by stopping the train a mile from town and walking across the country. Two of the disciples were sick and went in wagons.

A strict quarantine has been established about the farm, and the Rock Island road has been notified to stop no trains either to discharge or receive passengers.

Boiler Explosion at Car Shops.

ROCKEFELLER GIFT.

Decision by American Mission Board Today.

BARTON DECLINED ALL DISCUSSION

Gladden's Protest Scores Standard Oil Methods, Using Words "Injustice, Oppression and Iniquitous Control of Railroads."

BOSTON, March 29.—Rev. Dr. James L. Barton, secretary of the American board, when he came out of the committee room last night stated that the committee had unanimously voted not to announce its action with reference to the Rockefeller gift until today, when a formal statement will be issued. He declined to discuss in any way the attitude of the committee.

President Washington Gladden's protest to the American board against the acceptance of the gift of $100,000 from John D. Rockefeller is as follows:

"I must ask the privilege of expressing as explicitly as I can my surprise and regret that the officers of the American board have accepted a large sum of money from Mr. John D. Rockefeller. I object to this because the money thus bestowed does not rightfully belong to the man who gives it. It has been flagitiously acquired, and all the world knows it.

"It may be difficult in many cases to judge of the methods by which wealth has been gained. The operations are complex, and we may be in doubt respecting their honesty. It is no doubt impracticable to undertake the investigation of the sources of all the gifts that are offered to us. But when the investigation has been thoroughly made and the case is clear we are bound to guide our conduct by the facts made known.

"In this case the investigation has been thoroughly made and the facts are known. The legislative inquiries, the records of the courts, have given the reading people of this country the materials for a judgment upon the methods of Standard Oil, and there never was a day when their minds were as clear on this subject as they are now. They know that this great power has been built up by injustice and oppression; they know that its immense gains have been made by forcibly despoiling citizens of their honest gains and shutting the doors of opportunity upon them.

"It has been forcibly done, I say. It has been done very largely through illicit and iniquitous control of railways."

MRS. HALL'S LECTURE

She Talks on Gothic Architecture in France.

DESCRIBED CATHEDRALS

Daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe Delivers Third in Series of Lenten Addresses.

"Gothic Architecture in France," was the subject of a lecture given at All Souls' church, Thursday afternoon, by Mrs Florence Howe Hall. The lecture was illustrated with fine views and was of special interest as Mrs Hall, accompanied by her husband, visited the world-famed cathedrals about which she talked, during the summer of 1902, and she was thoroughly conversant with every phase of her subject. She is an entertaining lecturer and held the closest attention of her large audience from beginning to end.

Among the cathedrals and churches described were The Abbey Church of St. Denis, Cathedrals of Notre Dam, Chartres, Amiens, Beauvais, Rouen, Rheims and the Church of Saint Ouen at Rouen. Mrs. Hall said that on the best of authority the French Gothic architecture is considered to be the most original and the finest in the world. It has been imitated extensively in England, Germany and other countries. The cathedrals about which she spoke were built between the twelfth and fourteenth centuries, and were largely the work of the people as they gave freely of their times and means. Some of the pictures displayed rich works of art, various parts of the Bible being illustrated with handsome figures and sacred vessels.

Mrs. Hall said that the Gothic architecture was despised for a time but that in the nineteenth century there was a revival of interest in it and lovers of this art devoted a great deal of time to a study of it. During the thirteenth century there was a most wonderful revival of this work and a great many cathedrals were built.

The devotion to the work was shown in the way the people carted stone for the construction of the cathedrals, and while they were largely the property of the clergy, the common people had more than usual interest in them and they learned to look upon them as their own. This architecture has been considered the most beautiful since the time of Greek art and that was pronounced to be the most wonderful in history.

Several views shown by Mrs. Hall gave those present an idea of the difficult work in executing this style of architecture. Various figures were used in interpreting scenes and incidents in the Bible and in some cases the figures were so small that they could scarcely be seen.

Considerable interest was shown in the views of the interiors of some of the largest cathedrals. The massive and stately columns, spacious auditoriums and entrances were much admired. In her description of stained glass windows and other ornaments, a clearer conception of the grandeur of these structures was obtained. Mrs. Hall also read extracts from Lowell's poems describing eloquently this style of architecture.

At the close of the lecture many of the women remained and examined more closely some of the pictures of these cathedrals. The next lecture in this course will be given at All Soul's church on Thursday afternoon, March 30, at 3 o'clock, by Miss Katherine Johnston on "Antony and Cleopatra."

FALLING GIRDER DEALS DEATH

Fatally Crushes John Kennedy, of Dunellen, in Accident at Newark.

TWO OTHERS HURT

Charles Wyhuskey Battling for Life in Hospital, and Walter Blair Suffering From Cuts and Bruises—Employes of Jersey Central.

One Dunellen man was killed and two others hurt, one dangerously, as the result of the fall of a fifteen-ton girder at a bridge the Central railroad is constructing on a branch line in Newark, at noontime yesterday. The dead man is John Kennedy, fifty-two years old. The injured are Charles Wybuskey, who had an arm and a leg broken, and Walter Blair, who was bruised and cut. Wyhuskey is in St. James' Hospital, Newark, and the doctors are not sure that he escaped internal injuries of serious character. Blair was not badly hurt, and was able to return to his home near New Market a couple of hours after the accident.

The accident occurred at one of a string of bridges the road is building on what is known as the merchants' or Feigenspan branch, a spur that runs to the Feigenspan Brewery, Newark. The bridge crosses Schalk street. It is located between the old Plank Road and the canal, a little north of the East Ferry street station on the Elizabethport-Newark branch.

Kennedy, Wyhuksey and Blair were all members of the gang constructing the bridge. Just before noon orders were given to lower one of the big spans into place. An iron chain, held taut by a steam derrick, was fastened around the steel girder, and the three men went in among the false work beneath the span to knock down the temporary wooden structure on the concrete pier for which there was no further use.

Without any warning the chain that held the span broke suddenly, and the steel girder, seventy feet long and ten feet wide, crashed down on the false work. Kennedy was pinned by one corner of the girder, and Wyhuskey was caught by the crushed false work, Blair was struck by flying chunks of wood and debris.

Kennedy was so badly hurt that there was never any hope for him after the girder caught him. The corner of the steel mass tore through his side, and laid open the stomach and abdomen in a sickening manner. He died three hours later in St. James' Hospital, Newark, to where the three men were carried with all possible speed.

Wyhuskey's left arm and left leg were broken, and it is feared that he sustained internal injuries that may make his recovery doubtful. The fractures are compound.

Blair was taken to the hospital with the others, but examination disclosed no more serious injuries in his case than cuts and contusions. He went home on the train, stopping in Dunellen's central section long enough to tell of the accident.

Kennedy's body was brought to Dunellen last night.

He is survived by a widow, and three children. The latter are Stephen, William and Lily, all grown. He was one of the borough's most highly respected citizens, and his tragic death has spread a tinge of sadness over the whole place. He was a member of the Methodist church choir and of the Junior Order United American Mechanics.

Test Police Law.

The constitutionality of the bill passed at the last session of the Legislature, under which commissioners to govern the police departments in cities of less than 100,000 population have been appointed in Bayonne, Orange, Passaic, Paterson and Camden, similar appointments being in contemplation in other places, is to be attacked in the courts by the local Democratic organization.

Knight of the Key.

"Fritz" Harding, chief junior plate passer at Clevely's restaurant, has resigned to become a telegrapher in the employ of the Central railroad. He studied the code and key tapping during his spare time, and took the test at the railroad office in Jersey City last week. He passed with honors, and was placed on the staff at once.

PREPARING TO RETURN TO CHILDREN'S HOME

IMPROVEMENTS TO THE INSTITUTION PRACTICALLY COMPLETED.

The improvements at the Children's Home practically being completed, it is the purpose of the association to move back to the commodious quarters about May 1. The handsome and well-appointed dormitory which has been made possible through the benefactions of friends, will be greatly appreciated. It will accommodate many more children and provides separate quarters for the treatment of the children when ill, as well as comfortable rooms for the matron and her assistants.

The many improvements made about the Home on Jackson avenue establishes the institution as one of the best in the State and will make it possible for the association to carry on its work with greater success than ever.

Mrs. Kimball, as president of the association, is planning for an informal opening of the Home after possession is taken and at that time all friends will be invited to inspect the new and improved quarters. While the changes have been underway the association has cared for the children in the old Nurses' Home on Muhlenberg place and the work has been allowed to continue with good success.

JURY NOW CONSIDERING BOXING INVESTIGATION

MATTER RESTS WHILE TESTIMONY IS BEING SIFTED.

After examining twenty or more witnesses, the Somerset County Grand Jury adjourned hearing in the North Plainfield boxing investigation, yesterday afternoon, and probably nothing further will be heard from it until the usual report to the court is made. Speculation is rife as to whether indictments will be returned but there was nothing in the questioning by the jurors to verify opinion either way. There were still ten or more of those subpoenaed in waiting when adjournment was taken. The witness fees paid in all by Sheriff Cooper amounted to about $20.

This morning the jury began considering the Williams murder case. Practically the same witnesses who appeared at Coroner Toms' inquest have been called and the testimony of each will be taken. Several alienists will also testify to the condition of George Wood, the man accused of the crime, as the claim has been advanced that he is mentally irresponsible. If an indictment is found, his case will probably be the first to come before the court at this term.

Begins His Pastorate.

Rev. F. E. Whiteside, formerly of this city, will begin his pastorage at the East Norwich, L. I. M. E. church, to which he was appointed by the recent meeting of the New York East M. E. Conference at Waterbury, Conn., next Sunday. The East Norwich is a suburb of Oyster Bay, where President Roosevelt's home is situated. It is, like most of the Long Island towns and villages a summer resort to a certain extent. The appointment is regarded as a good one in the Conference.

Building Five Houses.

William Jeffery, the local real estate specialist, has begun the erection of five houses in the vicinity of West Fourth street, Rock and Rushmore avenues, for clients. Building operations are booming in that section and in the event of the proposed Piscataway township school being located there, many more houses will go up. The electric system will be extended there within a short time.

Acknowledge Donations.

The furnishing committee of the Children's Home acknowledges the receipt of twenty dollars from the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church for the establishment of a bed at the Home, and ten dollars from the infant department of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church towards another bed to be completed later.

—The Plainfield High School will present "The Rivals" at the Casino on Saturday night, May 13.

BOLD DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

Thieves Ransack T. R. VanZandt's Home This Morning.

FAMILY ALL AWAY

Discovery Made at Noon—The Chief and Force Now Making Investigation.

Thieves gained entrance to the home of T. R. VanZandt on Madison avenue, this morning, and ransacked nearly every room, getting away with a large amount of jewelry, silverware and other valuables.

The members of the family had been absent since 8:30 and the robbery was not discovered until Mr. Van Zandt went home for lunch early this afternoon. He was attracted by a hole in the front glass door and on entering the hall found everything topsy-turvy. A hurried examination showed the same condition of affairs in the rooms on both upper and lower floors.

The police were apprised of the affair and Chief Kiely and Detective McCarthy are now conducting a personal investigation. As yet they have gained no clue as the neighbors noticed no strangers about the place during the morning.

The VanZandt residence is located near many others and the thieves had to stand in plain view in order to get the glass out.

FEAST OF PASSOVER BEGINS AT SUNSET

SERVICES IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL.

Today at sunset the Hebrew feast of Pesach, or Passover, will begin. In the local synagogue, the Congregation of the Children of Israel, will observe the feast as usual. The festival lasts seven days, during which unleavened bread (matzos) is eaten. The orthodox Jews celebrate an extra day. The festival is to commemorate the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage under Pharoah.

The orthodox Jews will celebrate the first, second, seventh and eighth days as holidays, although there will be special services every day during the feast.

The orthodox Jews will at different periods of each day hold services in their homes. Those who keep the Passover strictly do not take anything that is leavened (chometz) for seven days. This includes beer, candy, bread, cake and spirituous liquors.

Today the head of the house gathers together all chometz, which is burned the following morning. It is also customary for a firstborn to fast on the day before Passover, in memory of the miraculous redemption of the firstborn children of the Israelites and the destruction of the firstborn of the Egyptians.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH RAISED $20,000 IN YEAR

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CONGREGATION LAST NIGHT.

Encouraging reports of the past year's work from a financial point of view and the election of trustees, occupied the attention of the congregation of the First Baptist church at the annual parish meeting, held last night. L. V. F. Randolph presided at the meeting.

The report of Alex Gilbert, treasurer, showed that the total receipts for the year amounted to about $20,000, and in addition the board of trustees presented a very full and comprehensive report in detail of the financial situation. There is no church deficit and the condition is gratifying spiritually as well as financially. Plans are now underway to increase the revenue from members of the church and congregation.

L. V. F. Randolph and C. B. Leonard were re-elected trustees to succeed themselves. The election was unanimous. Their terms are for three years.

—Power's has just received a fresh shipment of Huyler's candies for Easter.

—Strawberries and cream conjure a delicious combination. Neuman Brothers have the former, nice ones; they arrive each day. Big display to select from tomorrow.

LIMOGES STRIKE IS WATCHED HERE

Edwin Haviland, of East Second Street, for 50 Years Agent of China Factory.

PLAINFIELDER CONSUL

Rev. Mr. Griffin Has Represented American Government at That City for Many Years.

The French government at a Cabinet meeting held at the Elysee Palace yesterday was occupied with the Limoges strike and resolved to accept the interpellations in the Chamber for immediate discussion.

The condition at Limoges has a local interest inasmuch as Edwin Haviland, of East Second street, was the American agent of the Haviland factory for fifty years, and Rev. Walter T. Griffin, of Watchung avenue, is the American consul at Limoges. Mr. Haviland recently retired as agent for the firm owing to advanced age, but still takes a deep interest in its business.

The strike riots at Limoges are developing international features, as the Haviland facory, employing six thousand persons, of which Theodore and Charles Haviland, Americans, are the chief proprietors, is the centre of the disorder.

Accordingly the American Ambassador, General Porter, is taking active steps to insure the protection of American interests against violence and to secure an adjustment between the proprietors of the factory and the workmen.

At M. Delcasse's request, General Porter used his good offices with the Messrs. Haviland. The latter, however, maintained that the workmen were no justified in demanding the discharge of the foreman of the factory, and therefore, his efforts to effect a reconciliation were unsuccessful.

PLAINFIELD TEAM READY FOR STARS

ELIZABETH NINE SCHEDULED FOR SATURDAY AT OVAL.

The Elizabeth Stars, one of the best baseball teams in the State, will have its first clash with the Plainfield team at Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, and a battle royal is expected. Manager Frank Burke has heard all about last Saturday's game on the oval and he proposes to prepare himself for a hard fight. He will select "Flick" Luyster or Duke to do the pitching and either one can be depended upon to deliver the goods, while with Poole behind the bat that position will be well taken care of. Stallings will cover first base, Foster will be on second, Flynn at short and Curley at third, all well-known players of ability. In the outfield will be Bertwhistle, Finn and Middleton, fast fielders and good stickers.

Manager Daab will present his same lineup to oppose the Stars and there is every reason to believe that his players will turn the trick as they did in the initial contest. Now that local fandom has had the opportunity to see the locals against an Eastern League attraction, it has a good idea of their ability and has confidence in the team to win out.

The Stars will be accompanied by a large crowd of rooters and they will make things lively at one end of the stand. The local fans are anxious for the contest and the indications are that with a warm day, the attendance will far exceed that of last Saturday. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock. In providing more bleacher seats better accommodations will be planned for the horses, carriages and automobiles.

The lineup for Saturday's game will be as follows:

Plainfield—Cosgrove, cf; Oldring, 2b; Kiernan, ss; Leonard, 3b; Driscoll, 1b; Cregan, lf; Connolly, rf; Lamar, c; Linderman or Beisel, p.

Stars—Bertwhistle, cf; Foster, 2b; Flynn, ss; Curley, 3b; Stallings, 1b; Finn, lf; Middleton, rf; Poole, c; Luyster or Duke, p.

Party for Miss Weeks.

Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, of West Seventh street, will give her daughter, Miss Martine Weeks, an Easter party on Tuesday afternoon, April 25, from 3 to 5 o'clock. About thirty young people have received invitations to the affair.

HOME FOR ORPHANS

Dr. Coles Improving His Gift to Newark Institution.

AT MOUNTAINSIDE

Alterations Being Made and Building Will be Ready for Occupancy June 1.

Having purchased the property known as the Fowler farm, at Mountainside, Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, has ordered the building of a large extension to the former residence in order to make it large enough for the Newark Orphan Home. The well known philanthropist will give the place to the Home officials to enable them to carry on their good work. He secured possession of it nearly a year ago but when he made known his intentions it was found that numerous alterations would have to be made which would entail an expense the Home believed it could not meet. The doctor at once had the plans drawn and is now bearing the cost, the work to be completed by June 1.

The property until recently has been occupied by St. George Rathbone, the writer, and is an ideal place for an institution of this nature. It is situated upon a knoll, surrounded by large and spacious lawns, shade trees in abundance and spring water.

A short time ago, Dr. Coles also paid off the mortgage on the Newark Fresh Air Home, situated on the road leading from Westfield to Mountainside.

TO STAY AS HEAD OF COUNTY COMMITTEE

JACOB SHURTS' CHANGE OF MIND MAY STOP FACTIONAL FIGHT IN SOMERSET.

After three unsuccessful attempts to have his resignation as chairman of the Somerset County Democratic Committee accepted, Jacob Shurts announced last night at Somerville that at the behest of many leaders from different sections of the county, among whom Senator Childs, of the State committee, was the most prominent, he has decided to reconsider his resignation and continue as chairman of the county committee.

Mr. Shurts explained that he was in ill health several months ago, when he resigned, but that he was much better now and in compliance with the request of county leaders would continue as the party's head.

Three meetings of the committee have been called since Shurts resigned on January 14 last, for the purpose of accepting his resignation and electing his successor. At each of these meetings bitter factional controversies arose, and at the last meeting, held two weeks ago, the remarks of members of factions favoring the election of Major Nelson Y. Dungan and John A. Frech became so personal that some members of the committees abruptly left the meeting declaring they would have nothing more to do with the matter.

Mr. Shurts's decision to retain the chairmanship is considered by those in a position to know the situation as the only means of preventing the party from having a factional fight on its hands next fall.

Series of Lecture Readings.

A series of lecture-readings will be given in this city by Mrs. Helen Weil, of Cambridge, Mass., as follows: Monday, April 24, "Pippa Passes," at Mrs. D. H. Rowland's; Thursday, April 27, "Pompilia," at Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers'; Monday, April 30, "A Blot in the 'Scutcheon," at Mrs. George P. Mellick's. The lectures will be given at 11 o'clock in the morning. Referring to Mrs. Weil, the Washington Post, says: "The Russian Embassy was thronged yesterday morning with prominent residents from official and private circles to listen to a reading by Mrs. Helen Weil, of Cambridge, Mass. The subject was Stephen Phillips's 'Paolo and Francesca,' the story of whose tragic love was told with a depth of expression and artistic conception that marks Mrs. Weil first among her profession."

Free Oratorio.

A musical Lenten service will be given at the First Baptist church tomorrow night when the choir will render Stainer's "Crucifixion" and other suitable selections. No cards of admission will be required. E. J. Fitzhugh will conduct the choir and Howard Case will preside at the organ.

PLAINFIELD TWINS ARE GRIEVING

MISSIONARY TEA AT MRS. F. A. WEEKS'

REV. DR. CHAMBERS TALKS TO CONGREGATIONAL WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Under the auspices of the Women's Association, of the Congregational church, a missionary tea was held at the home of Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, of West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon. In addition to an interesting address by Rev. Dr. Robert Chambers, of Turkey, there were soprano solos by Miss Etta Haybert; contralto solos by Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell and piano solos by Miss Alberta Waterbury.

Dr. Chambers talked in a general way of the progress being made along missionary lines in Turkey. The Congregational church has special interests in Aintab, Turkey, and Dr. Chambers related incidents of that work.

Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich, as president of the Women's Association, presided at the affair. After the address and the musicale, tea was served and a social time followed. Mrs. William McIntosh and Mrs. John V. Beekman poured tea and they were assisted by the members of the recently-organized Girl's Club, of the church. The table decorations comprised yellow jonquils. There were seventy persons present and about $70, representing the Lenten offering for missions, was received.

CENTRAL FOREMAN ACCUSED OF "GRAFT"

LABORER DECLARES IT COST HIM MONEY TO KEEP HIS JOB.

Charles Tilton, a former well known Dunellen resident, now foreman of the Jersey Central working force at the Elizabethport shops, secured a non-suit in the District Court, yesterday, in a suit brought by Alexander Techinsky to recover money which he alleged he paid over as "graft" to Tilton.

Techinsky, who was getting $1.35 a day in the shops, testified that he paid $2 and $3 each month last summer to keep his job, giving Tilton in all $12. He was threatened with discharge if he failed to "divvy up," he declared.

Tilton denied the charges, and intimated that he was the victim of a blackmailing scheme. He said that he had discharge Techinsky last March because he had refused to work at nights without an advance in wages.

New summons have been issued and the case will be re-opened Monday.

EXEMPTS ELECT.

Former North Plainfield Firemen Complete Their First Year as Organization.

The North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association held is first annual meeting, last night, at which the following officers were elected: President, Charles Keller; first vice president, J. J. Stahl; second vice president, A. D. Pope; secretary, David Bodine; collector, William Debele; treasurer, J. M. Higgins; trustees, William Ricketts and William Mills.

In its one year of existence, the association has prospered in many ways and at the present time is exceptionally strong. Its club rooms at Somerset street and Manning avenue are finely fitted up and the social features are the means of keeping the members interested at all times.

Postoffice Case.

The United States Grand Jury, sitting at Trenton yesterday, examined Postmaster Bird, Chief of Police Kiely and Postoffice Inspector Cortelyou in relation to the charge of abstracting money from the mails against Letter-Carrier Frank Clarkson. Clarkson, who is in the Hudson county jail, has admitted his guilt, and the examination was brief. If indicted and convicted he is liable to imprisonment for from one year to five.

J. M. Hawkins Will Recover.

Joseph M. Hawkins, who was struck by a local passenger train at the North Avenue station, Monday morning sustaining severe injuries, was declared today by Dr. G. W. Endicott, the attending physician, to have passed the danger point. His recovery is now only a matter of a short time.

Their Pretty French Nurse in Prison for Grand Larceny.

DRINK, HER RUIN

Downfall of Refined Young Woman Employed As a Nurse by W. B. Smith, of Washington Avenue.

Refusing to be comforted, their chubby faces stained with tears, William Benjamin and Wilmina Benjina Smith, twins, of two years, born in North Plainfield, are mourning in their handsome home, at No. 68 West Sixty-ninth street, New York, for the French nurse who has been their constant companion almost since their birth, and whom they have not seen for two weeks.

On the verge of collapse in a Tombs prison cell, awaiting sentence today on an indictment for grand larceny, to which she pleaded guilty, is Emily Leutner. She is a refined and accomplished young woman, born and educated in Paris, and speaks three languages. She had been governess in one home for nine years before she entered the employ of William B. Smith, who formerly lived on Washington avenue, in the borough, president of a half dozen companies, with a downtown office at No. 14 Church street, soon after the birth of the Smith twins in the borough. Afternoon visitors to Central Park around the West Seventy-second street entrance have seen Emily Leutner and her remarkably pretty young charges, who, dressed exactly alike, have been much admired. So constant has been her attendance upon them that their first words were lisped in French and their English has a piquant accent.

A few months ago, when Mrs. Smith found a black flask hidden in the nursery, the nurse was instantly dismissed, but was reinstated before she had left the house, upon her promise never to drink again and because her devotion to the twins and their love for her.

The end came two weeks ago, when Mrs. Smith, her suspicions again aroused, searched Emily's belongings in the fear of finding a bottle. Instead she found a pawn-ticket for a pearl-set locket belonging to one of the children. It had been pawned for $3. Fowler, the butler, was dispatched for a policeman, and Emily was arrested. She confessed that she had previously pawned two pins. Arraigned in the West Side Court, she was held for the Grand Jury, indicted, pleaded guilty in General Sessions and will be sentenced by Judge Foster today.

"I know I did wrong and that I should be punished," sobbed the young woman in the Tombs yesterday. "But I am not a thief and I did not mean to steal. My wages would have been due in a few days, and then I meant to take the things out.

"After I pawned the pins the nursery was moved upstairs, and I could not find the tickets, and did not dare tell. If I were a thief, there were Mrs. Smith's diamonds on the dresser, there was a $5,000 pearl necklace. It was to get the drink only and the drops from the druggist, so it would not be on my breath."

For several days last week the prisoner was under the care of the Tombs physician, threatened with nervous prostration. An effort will be made today to save her from a prison term and a suspended sentence, under conditions which will involve a complete mastery of the drink habit. She had perfected plans for a visit to her home in France next June.

Attachment on House.

In the attachment proceedings of Currin & Conover, grocers, of Somerset street, against Carrie S. Wheeler, the house and lot owned by the latter on West Third street, near Lee place, is set for sale at the sheriff's office this afternoon. I. P. Runyon is counsel for the grocers and C. M. Dolliver is auditor.

Miss Haybert Entertains.

Miss Etta Haybert, of North avenue, entertained some of the members of the choir from Trinity Reformed church, last night. There was an informal programme of vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served.

MODES OF SPRING.

A New Skirt Model—Some Leading Ideas In Waists.

The newest spring skirt is a resurrection of one that was a novelty a dozen years ago—the bell or umbrella skirt. It is very slightly eased in at the waist, with the fullness set into plaits behind and falling in folds at the feet, where the skirt measures about eight yards.

In waists there are three leading ideas—the carefully draped bodice which is tucked across the upper part of the figure, the crossover blouse bodice above a well boned high corselet belt and the jacket, by which the Frenchwoman means any of the highly decorative variations of the Louis XV. coat.

These Louis coats are very useful, as they permit the wearing of one jacket with different skirts, provided there is an affinity between the two.

The Louis coat may be of brocade, voile, taffeta or lace. It may be close fitting, with shaped basque, or it may be blouse, with a deep belt and full basque.

Sleeves have reversed the order of arrangement. The puff has mounted from wrist to shoulder, all fullness coming once more from the armhole. This fullness in some instances is so great that whalebone epaulets are used to support the fullness. Elbow sleeves are used for all except tailor made and morning gowns.

The gown in the picture is of chine silk of a pale mode color, flowered over with thistles. The skirt is gathered three times down its length and falls full at the feet in a deep ruffle. The attractive little coat is laid in folds about the figure and shirrs across the shoulders, forming a ruffle over the tucked sleeves. About the neck and down the front is a trimming of embroidery motifs edged with lace. These are mounted over pale green velvet, which also forms the girdle and cuff, both of which are fastened with large jade buttons. JUDIC CHOLLET.

ATTRACTIVE STYLES.

Fashions For the Wee Folk—How to Make a Lawn Skirt.

Pongee coats for the little tots are made up in the quaintest kind of fashion and are both practical and smart. They are cool and clean.

Smocking done in three points is an inexpensive trimming for a two-year-old infant's morning dress.

Tucks on the skirts of grownup gowns are larger and in groups of two or three. A simple way to make a white lawn skirt is in three ruffles. Each ruffle has at the bottom two rather large tucks. The depth of the flounces are regulated by the height of the wearer.

Corset covers with several lace trimmed ruffles hold out the thin waists beautifully.

Amethysts are in vogue now and come in all sorts of attractive settings.

ANGLAISE BRODERIE WAIST.

Very stunning are belt buckle and necklace carried out in amethysts in a dull silver design.

All over anglaise broderie makes the fetching waist seen in the cut. A ruffle of the broderie is put on to form a vest effect in front widens out over the shoulders into a pretty shoulder ruffle. The sleeves puff to the elbow and there meet a deep cuff made on the cross of the all over. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FORECAST OF FASHION.

Percales Are Among the Novelty Cotton Fabrics of Spring.

Flowered percales are among the new offerings and are a nice innovation.

Any girl handy with her needle can make a Du Barry hood. This hood is the furore now and is made of gauze lined with soft silk.

On many of the dressy green spring gowns will be applied a band of ivy leaves. These leaves are made of silk and formed into bands, each leaf having around it a delicate tracery of braid.

Foulard silk is not the top notch of fashion, but so serviceable and dainty is a gown of this material that few women will be without at least one dress of this kind for summer wear.

Madras for shirt waist material will take the place of the heavy cheviots of last year. The new tailor made shirt waists have sleeves quite full at the top, but at the bottom they fit into the cuff perfectly plain.

A lovely tea gown is of tomato colored chiffon taffeta. A high draped band of taffeta in a paler shade passes under an overcoat of lace. The terminations of this resemble stole ends in front, and quite a Louis effect is gained in this way. The sleeves are rather small, finished just below the elbow with ruffles of lace.

A Parisian model gown is here illustrated. It is made of a new shade of cloth called coral pastel, which is a somber shade of coral pink. The long redingote of plain cloth is of this color, while the plaited skirt is of dull coral and white check. Black taffeta composes the revers, collar and deep waist belt. JUDIC CHOLLET.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

Tailored Gowns to Have a Touch of Lace About Them.

All the smart tailored gowns will have a touch of lace about them, especially the collars and cuffs. A pretty innovation for the tailored dresses are the lace cuffs, which are deep and bordered with frills of mull both top and bottom.

There is a new material for the lingerie shirt waist called Paris muslin, which, together with organdie, will be very much used. China silk is another favorite material, and the new designs are blurred and striped very like the chine silks. Korean pongee is a smart fabric for thin silk waists, and under these will be worn colored silk slips.

The dressy waists will all have short sleeves, which is sad news for the woman with a badly turned waist.

The festoon idea of trimming made famous by Marie Antoinette is reproduced in trimmings made of braid and lace.

Lace will be everywhere on dresses. Irish crochet and valenciennes are the favorite makes. On many frocks the two laces are mingled. A new way of applying all over lace is to use it in bands edged top and bottom with a narrow ruffle of val lace.

The waist pictured is of pale mauve crepe de chine. A deep V shaped yoke of lace filled in with a chemisette of embroidered mull is introduced back and front. The puffed sleeves are gathered into tight cuffs of lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MILLINERY HINTS.

The New Modish Hats Tilt at an Alarming Angle.

The new hats are an entire change from anything we have been accustomed to of late. Instead of the dead level at which the flat shape was supposed to maintain itself on our heads it is now tip tilted over the face at a somewhat alarming angle by means of a bandeau of ribbons or flowers.

Much prettier is the watteau toque, with its saucy angles and curves and its dainty bouquets of flowers.

The cavalier hat with one upturned brim is the best type of the large hat.

GIRL'S LINGERIE HAT.

But bear in mind, whether hat or toque, if it is not tilted up behind it must be tilted at the side. Fashion abhors anything in the millinery line on the straight at present.

Blue, green and lavender roses may wound one's artistic sense, but they are lovely just the same.

Dead roses were never so pretty as the artistically crumpled and withered brown roses on the new hats.

In the spring modistic dispensation of things sartorial ribbons are to be allowed full play. They riot over frocks and hats alike as artful bows, as stiff cockades, as meandering ruches or flying streamers.

Creamy pink and white carnations are new in millinery.

The girl's hat illustrated is a French model. It is composed of fancy crin bordered with a ruching of gathered mousseline de soie, beyond which are set in on the brim motifs of embroidery. About the crown is a wreath of small roses fastening at the side with a satin chou. JUDIC CHOLLET.

NEW MATERIALS.

Veilings Very Smart—New Designs In Pale Blue and White.

The very best materials for the serviceable shirt waist suits are the new veilings, which are thin enough to be comfortable on cool summer days. Many of the prettiest examples are of iridescent colors.

Then there is veiling in black and white squares with dots of crimson, pink or pale blue over its surface. In shepherd plaid the smartest design is in the tiniest check imaginable. The coloring is in pale blue and white, with the white so blurred that it only shows in certain lights.

A modish way of making a gown of this plaid is with a skirt box plaited in groups of three stitched almost to the knee. At this point of vantage are put in at intervals plaited panels finished with a stitched band across the top. The coat is long and almost tight fitting, reaching to the knee. It is single breasted and has a smart shawl collar and cuffs of blue and white embroidery. A white china silk blouse is worn with the coat and skirt, and the waist is finished with a girdle formed of three shades of blue ribbon toning from pale to medium blue.

A white sailor hat bound with blue silk and trimmed with cornflowers is the accompanying hat for this costume.

The latest idea of fashioning a summer silk dress of hairlines, fine check or changeable effect is to trim it with pipings of pure white taffeta. No matter what the blendings in the silk employed, pipings of white, and only white, are the proper caper.

The charming frock illustrated is of oriental lace. It is so put together that the waist and skirt have the appearance of being made in one. This effect is gained by rows of shirring which exactly match. The skirt is formed of three lace ruffles. The waist is shirred at the neck into a deep round yoke edged with a lace bertha. Heading the bertha are round lace motifs. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SUMMER MATERIALS.

Flowered Net a Pretty Fabric—Chinese Linen Is Modish.

Nothing is prettier for a summer frock than a flowered net which in most of the shops is selling for 50 cents a yard. A dress of this kind is charming when a net sprinkled with apple blossoms is selected and made over a foundation of apple green. The bottom of the full skirt might be trimmed with three ruches of the net and then up and down in a crisscross design. The bodice would be lovely made with a fichu trimmed with net ruches. The girdle could be of apple green and pink shaded silk.

Chinese linen in pale shades will be used for summer dresses and for separate waists. This material comes either plain or embroidered. Yellow Chinese linen embroidered in white is perfect for a summer gown; also a pale blue worked in daisy pattern in heavy white silk.

Among the attractive ribbon displays of the season are Roman stripes, which are revivals of a decade ago. They come in all the soft colorings and in the stronger tones.

Extremely dainty to wear with a navy blue gown is a stock done on an ecru ground in Bulgarian colors.

The black and white check promises to be almost too popular this season.

One of the millinery novelties of the hour is creamy pink and white carnations.

The round hat illustrated is of pale yellow satin straw trimmed with a wreath of button roses and myosotis flower. An enormous chou of tulle covers the high bandeau at the back of the hat. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION HINTS.

Irish Lace Is Always Used on Nice Linen Gowns.

On linen gowns of every description Irish lace plays a very important part. Some skirts are so elaborately trimmed with the lace that it is difficult to discern any other texture, while the perfection of happiness is reached by the woman who can possess a charming little bolero jacket made entirely of Irish point to be worn with the linen skirt.

Broderie anglaise comes in taffeta silk, and the eyelet holes are very effective in this material.

Pavement gray is one of the new shades for cloth gowns, especially of the coat and skirt order. It is very smart and English.

Long branches of oak leaves half curled by frost make a lovely trimming for a large hat.

The present modes offer an excellent opportunity for using up scraps of lace, velvet, brocade and fancy buttons.

Very narrow belts are to share honors with the girdle this season.

Baby dresses built on old time lines are made dainty with narrow laces. For the tots who cannot wear short sleeves and low necks come guimpes of lace insertion to wear with these dresses.

The child's frock pictured is of finest organdie. The skirt is shirred several rows about the waist, and lower down it is tucked in groups. Over the bloused bodice is a deep collar formed of all over lace crossed with bands of the lawn. The band holding the lace ruffle in place is dotted with French knots. The sleeves are tucked and fulled into an embroidered band of organdie. JUDIC CHOLLET.

CHIC STYLES.

Pale Shades of Eolienne to Be Worn; Also Rich, Deep Red.

Some of the most charming dresses of the season will be made of eolienne in pale colors as well as in the rich, deep shades of red and golden brown. Eolienne is nothing more than another name for light silk poplin.

Canary eolienne makes a lovely gown for restaurant wear built in accordion plaits as to the skirt. The waist, a simple bloused affair, has a stiff girdle of three shades of pale blue ribbon. The girdle runs halfway up the back of the waist and three inches below the belt in front and is heart shaped at the top. It requires an experienced person to make a success of a girdle of this sort. The becoming stock is of white lace edged with a quilling of narrow lace.

All lace trimming the smart summer thin gown will be quilled and not gathered, as it has formally been manipulated.

A pretty white handkerchief linen skirt is made in three pieces. The top part is shirred several rows deep about the waist and is gathered at the lower edge into a band of insertion. Another similar piece of material is put into a second row of insertion, and the third tier is formed into a gathered ruffle tucked at the bottom.

There is a revival of the semi-low necked frock for summer wear. The V surpliced neck is a favorite style trimmed about with quillings of lace or ruffles of the material.

The gown pictured is of the new shade of red veiling. The skirt is shirred on cords about the waist and finished with nun's tucks at the bottom. Heading the tucks are two waved quillings of plaid ribbon. The bodice is tucked to match the skirt from yoke to waist line and outlined with the plaid quilling. The attractive sleeves have tucked cap pieces trimmed with quilling and shirred into the arm's eye, with an underpuff of veiling reaching to the elbow. JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Braided Robes Are Very Smart For Spring Costumes.

The correct separate blouse is either extremely plain or very extravagantly elaborate.

Robe gowns of braided canvas will be very smart for spring wear.

A skirt that will be a favorite model as the season advances is a gathered affair, the sides and back surrounded with two flounces graduating in height from front to back, leaving the front breadth, panel fashion, quite plain.

Shirt waist sets in anglaise embroidery, consisting of belt, collar and cuffs, are being made by clever girls for summer wear. The belt will be held together with an oval or square mother-of-pearl belt.

Tartan plaid skirts worn with a tight fitting short basqued jacket of plain black cloth will be modish for morning toilets.

Veilings are very much worn this spring. These veilings come both figured and plain, but the plain are more serviceable for hard wear.

The summer girl will have for her white linen dress three sets of buttons, three hats and parasols and make this frock one of infinite variety by wearing first one set and then the other.

The spring blouse illustrated is of white china silk. The dainty little vest and collar are of spotted net edged with an insertion of lace bordered with a tiny china silk quilling. The cuffs are formed of rows of insertion, as is also the high necked collar. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FACTS AND FANCIES.

Embroidered Muslin Frocks Are Dainty, Made Over Lawn Slips.

Heavy linens are in the shops for those who want them, but the daintiest white dresses will be of embroidered muslin. All over embroidery comes for the gown itself and ruffles in every depth for the trimming.

The muslin foundation is as sheer as a pocket handkerchief, and eyelet embroidery is the kind preferred for ruffling these gowns.

This summer the embroidered muslin gown will be considered smarter than the lace frock. It is not mounted on silk, but on fine muslin trimmed with val lace and ribbon.

PALE BLUE CRIN TOQUE.

Muslin gowns do not need a lining, as they can be worn over a pretty lawn petticoat and corset cover. The newest corset covers are made of vertical strips of beading every two inches apart, through which is run colored ribbon matching the girdle worn with the dress.

In hats there are many delightful new ideas. The ruffled lingerie affairs made of rows of quilled lace on a net foundation are very chic. This foundation is mounted on any becoming shape one may fancy.

The charming toque shown in the picture is of pale blue crin dented into an attractive little shape. The trimming consists of bunches of forgetmenots and pale tea roses. It tilts at the back, as do all the modish spring models. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Ribbon Ruffling Bought by the Yard. Mohair Is Modish.

Ribbon for ruffling thin summer gowns and for quilling on hats has a thread run through it so that it can be shirred by pulling.

Mohair for morning and traveling suits will be very popular, not in plain colors, but in tiny checks of blue and white, green and white and black and white. Often this material has a hairline of another color barring off the check. These suits are usually made with a bolero jacket. The skirt has a deep hem, which is turned up on the right side and stitched or hemmed nun fashion. Above the hem are applied three bands of bias plain cloth, toning in with the prominent shade in the check. The jacket has revers and cuffs of plain cloth and is further elaborated with braid and buttons.

Sheer hand embroidered linen such as the daintiest lingerie shirt waists are made of can now be bought by the yard. This embroidered material will be made up into smart little coats to be worn with sheer linen skirts lined with a pretty china silk.

To wear with the silk shirt waist suits, which will again be in evidence, there are elaborate blouses of net trimmed with hand work and two or three different kinds of lace.

Blouses made of gray lace and net are smart to wear with the new gray suits.

Blue in rather bright shades promises to be a popular color for spring. The shops are filled with beautiful gowns and hats made up in this becoming tone.

The gown illustrated is of old rose cashmere. Around the full skirt is a trimming formed of bouillonnes of taffeta edged with a narrow band of the silk embroidered in dots. This trimming adorns the waist, outlining the yoke and vest and making bretelle-like pieces over the shoulders. The sleeves have small puffs above a deep cuff. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Concerning Women

Feminine "Savers" and False Economy—Success For Men and Women

"Oh, no; I never throw away a thing!" remarked Mrs. Saveall virtuously. "I think it is a sin. It might come in useful one of these days?" And she put another broken chair in the already overcrowded garret.

"Scuse me, ma'am, but has you any old clothes you wants to git rid of?" asked her colored laundress.

"Let me see," remarked Mrs. Saveall, going into the closet with difficulty owing to its overcrowded condition. "Dear me, Judy, I'm afraid we'll have to take larger quarters next year. We haven't enough closet room. Why, yes; here are three old suits. This brown one—oh, but I might want to wear this in the mountains this summer. With a yard or two of new cloth it would be all right. No, I guess I won't give you this one, Judy. It's too good. Now, this blue one—oh, well, I mustn't part with that. It will go with a blue hat that I may buy myself soon. And this old purple one? Oh, it will be just the thing for some awfully wet day next winter, you know, to wear instead of my real rainy day suit. No, I'm sorry, Judy, but there is nothing today. Oh, here; take these old gloves."

And the next year Mrs. Saveall added another hundred to their rental because they hadn't room in the old house.

False Economy.

"Oh, no," remarked Miss False Economy; "I can't do any more writing just now. I must make my summer clothes!" And she sewed for forty days and forty nights till she had to call the doctor in, and he charged her $10.

"Why didn't you have less and earn the money to have them made properly?" remarked her friend as she beheld one botched garment after another.

The hats looked painfully homemade, the skirts were skimpy, and one of expensive material was cut on the wrong bias. There was hardly a thing that could be worn the next season.

THE OVERCROWDED GARRET.

"You are a writer, not a dressmaker," the friend went on. "Why didn't you have less, earn enough to have it made properly and leave to the dressmaker her trade while you did what you really know how to do?"

The Causes of Failure.

"What is the secret of most of the failures in this world?" I asked the successful business man.

"Lack of originality and lack of initiative."

"And originality?"

"Well, our training is somewhat responsible for that. When we are small we are more or less taught to be 'copy cats,' and I suppose it is good for us to a certain point, but after that—and the point is reached very early in life—it is individuality, and the stronger the better, which counts. The man who feels that the world is his apple and that he is going to cut out a pattern of his own in the peeling is the man who is going to succeed, and no one will be able to do more than trip him temporarily. So great is the power of originality that the knowledge alone that a man possesses it even in embryo form will make others treat him with more consideration. You can't treat a free brain as if it were a slave any more than you can treat a free man in the same way. And what I have said about men," he added, "is equally true of women."

Spring Charity.

Charity begins at home. Let the heathen take care of themselves a little. Spring is a hard time for every one, even for those with money. How much more so for the poor! Empty your closets of all superfluities when you do your spring cleaning. By superfluities I mean things you will not want right away—every old saucepan, every bit of lace, of ribbon, even spools of silk whose colors you have no further need of. Give them to some woman with a large family, where those bits will come in handy. Give particularly to those who have known better days and whose refinement and perhaps artistic sense suffer for being without a bit of something fresh with which to liven up their spring wardrobes. BEATRICE MILLER.

JUST A SAMPLE HAILSTONE

Man from "Dakoty" Was Not to Be Downed by Any Ordinary Visitation.

"You take a man from Dakoty and you can't surprise him with any play o' the elements—wind or storm or what not," said Mr. Boggs, reminiscently, relates Youth's Companion, "and there's other things a man raised out in Dakoty takes mighty calm, too."

"Such as what?" demanded the postmaster, with whom Mr. Boggs was whiling away a hot afternoon.

"Well," said Mr. Boggs, slowly, "I could tell ye plenty of incidents, but I'll jest select one that occurred in the streets o' New York city when my cousin Joshua from Dakoty was on, and we were seeing the sights together.

"We were walking along a street one day on our way to the Battery, and stopped to look into a window. A woman that was investigating the contents of a tin pail that she was trying to freeze some ice cream in lost her holt on it, and it fell off the window ledge three stories up, and lit plumb on Cousin Joshua's back as he was stooped, looking in at the shop. I heard it coming, but too late to warn him.

"Well, the pail, ice cream and all, slid off his back, and skeetered out acrost the sidewalk into the gutter. Joshua straightened up and looked at me. He didn't see it go, but he heard it. He never turned round at all, but just began to rub his back with both hands.

"'We have 'em as large—about as large and hefty as that—our hailstones—in Dakoty,' he said to me as he was rubbing, 'but I don't recollect their ever coming single that way; not more than once or twice, at any rate.'"

FINE ARTIFICIAL DIAMONDS.

Carborundum, Produced by a New Method, Rivals the Jewel in Hardness.

Utilization of waste products has taken a long step forward, according to the inventors of a new furnace, as by their method of combustion the well-known abrasive, in its present chemical combination of silicon and carbon, is simply a by-product, and until its identity with the commercial product was established was given away for ornaments, valued because of their attractive crystalline formation and peculiar coloring.

Since its value was indicated, says the New York Tribune, the waste has been subjected to all sorts of tests, and in some instances has shown a slightly greater degree of hardness than the carborundum produced by means of the electric current applied at enormous voltage for a number of hours, which is slightly less than that of the diamond.

This fact has started investigations which lead to the hope, based, it is said, on good foundation, that the silicon may be entirely eliminated from the product, leaving it pure carbon, chemically the counterpart of the diamond. It is asserted that with a proper selection of materials for combustion in the furnace this result can be obtained, and while the carborundum at present produced has a high commercial value, the inventors are not inclined to rest content with that if anything more valuable is in sight.

GRUBS FOR FISHING LINES.

Silkworm Substance Employed with Excellent Result in Making Them.

It has been found that silkworm gut forms the best line for fishing purposes, partly on account of its great tenacity and partly because it is so transparent. Every year a sufficient number of Spanish silkworm grubs are selected for this purpose. After they have eaten enough mulberry leaves, and before they begin to spin, they are thrown into vinegar for several hours. Each insect is killed, and the substance which the grub in the natural course would have spun into cocoon is forcibly drawn from the dead worm in a much thicker and shorter silken thread. The threads are then placed in pure water for about four hours and afterward dipped for ten minutes in a solution of soft soap. The fine outer skin is thus loosened, so that the workman can remove it with his hands. The threads must be dried in a shady place, and are often bleached with sulphur until they acquire the bright appearance of spun glass.

Perishable Currency.

Eggs are current coin in Mayo, Kerry, Donegal and Latrim. They are everywhere received over the country in payment for tea, sugar, meal, oil, bread, tobacco, patent medicines and general haberdashery. Accounts are kept open and goods supplied on credit in eggs. Predatory agents traveling through the wilds with worthless teas, itinerant tinkers and musicians, Polish Jews hawking tinsel jewelry and holy pictures all accept this current coin, generally unloading it at the nearest railway town.

School Excuses.

The excuses which children bring to school furnish no end of entertainment. Here are a couple which were recently presented to a teacher who is employed not many hundred miles from Troy: "Please excuse Sallie from a boil on her nose." "Please excuse Willie for being late. He fell in a puddle on his way to school. By doing the same you will oblige." It is unnecessary to say Sallie and Willie were duly excused.—Troy Times.

Nice Way to Treat a Guest.

Fred—What! Fight a duel on account of a woman? No, sir! If I caught a man flirting with my wife I'd invite him to come over for a day's shooting—just as I've invited you—and then, if an accident were to occur—

John—Good gracious! I hope you don't suspect me?—Stray Stories.

WOMAN'S CLUBHOUSE

FIRST ONE TO BE BUILT IN NEW YORK.

MEN HAVE A GREAT MANY

Probably Will Be on Conservative Lines—Gotham Clubs for Women and Those Open to Them—The Chief Men's Clubs.

NEW YORK.—The first clubhouse to be built in this city for women—in five years there will be as many more—will be known as "The Colony." Appropriately, it will be in colonial style, and it will be the one clubhouse of New York which will in appearance mimic a real home, a house built for one family.

Of course, the size will be considerable, 50 feet front, as many in height and nearly 100 feet deep, but, surrounded by buildings of great height, it will look like a modest two-story-and-a-half colonial mansion, with the hall in the middle, in the good old village fashion. There is even the semblance of a "front porch" and upper veranda running along the entire front. But the rooms are unusually large and lofty, two stories nearly equaling four in the adjoining brownstone houses, and the dormer windows cunningly conceal the fact that there are four stories in front, not three and five behind.

Is it strange that New York should be so slow to possess a clubhouse built for women? I am not sure. In the first place, not every organization is rich enough or sure enough of permanent life to put $500,000 into land and building, and it is hardly feasible in a good quarter to do with less. In fact to attempt to do with less would be to invite failure from the start, for the woman who would take to club life in any form wants nothing less in the way of accommodations than she sees in the men's clubs. There is really a matter of competition among clubs as in other lines.

And then—women are conservative! They really are. Never mind if Mrs. Wharton, in her new serial, does represent a society heroine as soothing her nerves with an occasional cigarette. There is less smoking among women than there was ten years ago. There was always less than many writers tried to make out. On the other hand, there will be wine on call in the new club, just as there is in the men's clubs. I do not believe that it will be obtrusive. For that matter, even of wine drinking there is less in society now than formerly. And as the "wine room" is to be about six feet square and dark except for electrics, it is easy to see that the design is rather a butler's pantry, whence to dispense cellar stores, than anything in the nature of a "barroom."

Will the Example Be Followed.

A FEATURE of the club which is almost absolutely unique in New York—as the front is also—is a great side balcony — in the rear, recalling the "galleries" in Charleston and other southern cities, where the ladies can sit in pleasant weather. The only thing in clubdom of like pleasantness is the roof garden of the New York Yacht club, with its pergolalike effect of overshadowing vines.

There are several clubs that admit men and women to equal membership, of which the Fine Arts club is at the moment the best known, owing to the constant stream of visitors who have gone to its pretty rooms on Thirty-fourth street to see the alleged Praxiteles Aphrodite, about whose genuineness there has been such a war of the critics. This club is very modest, with a cheap restaurant for members—in a word, a great convenience for men and women of simple tastes.

That the membership of this club is large is not to be wondered at, for there are thousands who appreciate the refining influences which it offers. This membership is recruited to a large extent from that element in New York's population which comes from the smaller towns, and especially those of the central states. Young men and women who come to New York to study or to engage in literary or art lines take naturally to the Fine Arts club.

The Women's University club, a very conservative and wisely managed organization with a limited membership chosen along scholastic lines, is likely to build a clubhouse within a year. For economic reasons, if it does so, it will erect a building of eight stories, of which the lower five may be rented for business purposes or for casual meetings of women's organizations. Probably the majority of the members are teachers in public and private schools.

The Brooklyn Woman's club, one of the largest in the country, and the oldest except Sorosis in this vicinity, has a number of very wealthy women members, and could have had its own clubhouse long ago, at a cost much cheaper than in Manhattan, owing to the lower price of land, but it has always held that it was more conservative policy not to challenge scoffing by making its meeting place conspicuous.

The venture of a New York club as a householder is pretty safe. Even if the original organization does go to pieces, those who have put money into the building are safe as investors. The growth of the city does that. Years ago the Reform club (men, of course) bought what was then a modest site just north of Madison square. A few months ago, after a long and slumberous existence, it sold out for half a million dollars and went off flush with prosperity to find new quarters.

The Great Clubs of the City.

THE Union club has just suffered a severe loss in the death of its president, Edward Cooper, son of Peter Cooper and ex-mayor of New York, a dear white-haired old gentleman if ever there was one. This club more nearly than any other in the city answers the London idea of such an institution. Its new house on Fifth avenue supplies me with an occasional practical joke on visitors from my old home in the country. It is three stories high, has three windows on Fifth avenue on each floor and twice as many on the side street.

"How wide do you suppose it is?" I casually ask the visitor, after naming it.

"Oh—three windows, three stories—perhaps 30 feet," he replies. It is really 75 feet wide, 150 feet deep on the side street and enarly 100 feet high. The three stories in front are divided into nine behind, where are cozy rooms for resident members and for the servants who live on the premises. It is as big as 30 small two-story houses in Brooklyn; but it doesn't look it. The average Union club member does nothing for a living. He proposes his son for a membership as soon as he is born. Under this system the waiting list is long. Yet the membership and other fees are not so high as those of the Metropolitan, commonly called the Millionaire's club, farther up the avenue.

The University club is about the same size, but looks bigger because there is no such attempt at a calm exterior. There are more and smaller windows, and the number of stories is apparent. Its membership is larger, but not less select, scholarship being a rough test. The Union League club, founded by Frederic Law Olmstead, head of the sanitary commission during the war, take rank among social organizations, though it has not altogether lost its political purposes. The Calumet, Lotos, Century, Aldine, Players, have social and literary or artistic lines. The Grolier club, membershiped by lovers of rare books, is a type of a hundred special organizations. Its rooms are very beautiful, but do not supply "home comforts." Even the Engineers' club has a beautiful house, built by Carnegie. The St. Nicholas has a local habitation as well as a name; its annual banquets are the finest in New York, and it is a type of a hundred lesser organizations, including gatherings from half the counties of the state and from as many colleges, which meet only for an anual banquet. At the banquet of the St. Lawrence club this year 350 persons of both sexes were present. Such a rush of the country people as it has taken to fill New York!

In the Amen Corner New York has an organization similar to the Washington Gridiron and the Philadelphia Clover club. The first "Amen Corner" was the sofa in the corridor of the Fifth Avenue hotel, where Senator Platt received the confidences of his leaders of a Sunday night. Started as a joke by "Eddie" Riggs, the New York Sun's political reporter, it has proved too good to die. For two years now its meetings have been of almost national scope in the number and quality of the guests.

With the Mysteries.

NEW YORK has been interested more or less in the agitation over Mrs. Pepper, who for many years has held high place in what we may speak of as the "spirit world." The press has periodical attacks of Mrs. Pepper discussions, many staid gentlemen gravely give testimony of the remarkable powers of this medium; she not infrequently has been looked upon as the shining example of honest spiritualism.

And now again there is a rally to her defense; again the public is called upon to weigh evidence regarding her manifestations—we are not quite sure of the technical terms of this profession. A Brooklyn gentleman whose name is by no means an obscure one, in behalf of Mrs. Pepper recently sent a challenge to an ex-medium whose declarations that he could equal the lady if he wanted to, called forth the "dare." With these words, the gentleman from Brooklyn bids the bold declarer make good: "W. S. Davis announces that he is an ex-medium, and that if given a chance he will duplicate through fake methods all that Mrs. Pepper does, and then will explain the process. This, if sincere, is a move in the right direction. (Dr. Funk belongs to the Society for Psychical Research, and is avowed to the pursuit of Truth).

"As to Davis' challenge, I will agree to pay all the expenses for the hall in which he may give such a public demonstration, on the single condition that he practically will duplicate the tests made last Saturday evening in the presence of a committee, say of seven, who shall determine the arrangements and pass judgment of success or failure of the tests. Three of this committee will be selected by Davis and three by Judge Dailey, if he be willing, and these six to agree upon a seventh."

We cannot truthfully say a waiting world watches. So many, many things happen nowadays.

WHIRLED THROUGH AIR BY TORNADO

THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF A PREACHER IN INDIANA.

HAS A MARVELOUS ESCAPE

Rides on Barn Roof for Half a Mile and Finally Lands in a Creek—Victim's Story of His Adventure.

Richmond, Va.—To ride half a mile through the air on a cyclone and live to tell the tale is a unique experience. Yet that is precisely what happened to Rev. A. N. Somers, Unitarian minister at Highland Springs, a suburb of Richmond. Following is Mr. Somers' own story of his adventure:

"I had read and heard much about cyclones, but my information was conflicting and far from satisfactory. Had resolved if I ever got near enough to one to investigate for myself. Don't know that I ever prayed the good Father to send one my way, but was willing He should.

"My opportunity came. It was in Randolph county, Ind., in the month of September. The farmer with whom I boarded was building a barn, and I went out to assist the carpenters, it being Saturday afternoon and nothing doing.

"One of the workmen remarked that it was good cyclone weather, and just as we finished shingling one side of the roof he shouted:

"'Look out, boys, there's a cyclone coming!'

"Glancing hastily in the direction he pointed, I saw on the horizon, some five or six miles distant, a monster as black as ink and as clear cut as an Egyptian pyramid, bowling along at terrific speed.

SHOOTING TO EARTH HEAD FOREMOST.

"There was an old track to the west of us, and as we watched the cyclone advance it was plainly evident that it was following the course of its predecessors.

"Meanwhile, the funnel-shaped mass of dust and debris grew momentarily larger. Fascinated, I watched it, and listened spellbound to the crash and grind of the debris in its swirl. Fences, fragments of buildings, cattle, grain, timber, haystacks, and, for aught I knew, human beings, enveloped in the sable mantle of dust, pounding and sweeping along with lightning rapidity.

"My interest was roused to the highest pitch, when suddenly a chill ran through me. The raging demon, now almost opposite us, had suddenly tacked, and, leaving the old track at right angles, was headed toward us. There was no time left to get down, and I was too far from the ground to drop. So, burying my hatchet in the shingles in such a way as to get a hold on one of the laths underneath, I stretched myself flat on the roof and awaited the shock.

"I was none too quick. For immediately the roof rose on the rim of the cyclone and sped majestically on its way in a spiral course till it reached the top of the swirl—150 feet from the ground, according to the estimates of the onlookers. The roof remained intact until it had reached its greatest altitude, and had traveled on the rim of the cyclone proper nearly half a mile, when the corner opposite the one I was on sank into the inside current of the swirl, and the roof, with a great crash, went to pieces.

"I had lost my support, and was afloat in midair, the victim of the most terrific power I had ever encountered. During all this time, and it was probably only the fraction of a minute, though it seemed an age, I was fully conscious of my position, and was calculating on how it would terminate. The roar was deafening, and I realized that if I was drawn into the swirl I would be ground to pieces like the grist in a mill. I also speculated that if I dropped to the ground I should be asphyxiated before reaching terra firma. To my surprise I did neither, but kept drifting around what seemed a circle of 100 yards in diameter, until I settled down to about 75 feet from the ground.

"Then I recognized that I had been released from the hold of the cyclone and was shooting to earth like a rocket, head first. I expected to be dashed to pieces, but suddenly the top of a tree swam before my vision, and as I plunged into it I seized hold of a limb.

"The force of the fall was so great and my grasp so strong, that the branch was torn from the tree and carried with me to the ground, a distance of 30 feet. My hold on the limb had reversed my position and I struck the ground on my feet, sinking deep into the mud and gravel of the creek. The cyclone had swept the water before it in its passage a moment earlier.

"Pulling myself together I took an inventory of my injuries. Both legs were broken in two places between the ankle and knee, and my feet were horribly mangled. There were 18 fractures at least. Dragging myself to the bank, I cut the boot from one foot with a pocket knife, and was making a compress to stop the flow of blood—using pieces torn from my shirt—when friends came up.

"One of the men attempted to remove the other boot, but was so excited he cut my foot as much as the boot. There was no surgeon near and I was beginning to feel the loss of blood. So I took the knife and finished the job myself, and also set my own broken bones, the carpenters making the splints, having had some little experience along this line. Strange to say, I felt no pain for a week, though after that I suffered acutely.

"During my ride on the cyclone and for hours after I seemed to be under the influence of an electric shock, which probably paralyzed the nerves of feeling. For the same reason I was unable to let go the hatchet until I reached the ground, though I tried from the moment the roof went to pieces. Looking back over my experience, it was a miracle I was not killed. The roof to which I clung rested mainly, I think, on the anti-cyclone, which consists of heavier, colder air moving in an opposite direction from the warm light air of the cyclone proper. It was probably this fact which prevented me from being drawn into the vortex and crushed to bits.

"It was years before I recovered entirely from my injuries, and I have been in the track of several cyclones since, but was not frightened in the least. Still, I have been content with second-hand information since that first experience, and so far as cyclones are concerned I shall never again attempt original observations. I am interested, too, in aerial navigation, but prefer a more docile airship than a barn roof on the bosom of a cyclone."

DROVE OF PIGS MAKE ST. LOUIS BALL GAY.

Bunch of Squealing Porkers Introduced to Dancers at Swell Society Event.

St. Louis.—Members of the Union club, at their annual masquerade ball, outdid the most sensational effort ever undertaken by Harry Lehr for the jaded social appetite of Newport's 400.

A drove of pigs was introduced on the dancing floor while the maskers were whirling in the waltz. For a time confusion reigned. Women mounted chairs. Their escorts at once joined in a pig hunt. Screams, squeals, laughter and the stamping of many feet were the only sounds heard for 20 palpitating moments. Even the orchestra was stilled.

The porkers were smuggled into the ballroom by a coterie of "farmers," each of whom bore a carpet bag. Within each bag three smothering porkers were concealed. At a given signal they were released.

One woman, disguised as a washerwoman, stood in the middle of the ballroom floor, petrified with astonishment. Then suddenly she screamed.

"Take it away! Take it away!" was her plaint, in high falsetto. Her skirts were visibly agitated by a small porker which had sought refuge there. Then she fainted.

Other women climbed to chairs while their laughing escorts joined the scramble. The pigs had been greased, however, and their capture was difficult. Eventually they were driven into a dressing-room, where they were corraled, and the dancing resumed. The dance was voted a huge success.

Colt's Peculiar, Appetite.

Swedesboro, N. J.—Louis Schoener, a farmer near here, has an eight-months-old colt that has developed a freak appetite. The animal takes very kindly to bread and butter, is very fond of mashed potatoes and gravy, dotes on cakes and pie, revels in pickles, smacks its lips over sauerkraut and pigs' feet and takes coffee like a veteran.

Spirit Tips Proved His Undoing.

St. Joseph, Mich.—William Abernathy, a local spiritualist, has squandered a fortune of $50,000 in business deals, which, he says, were directed by his dead son, with whom he claimed to hold daily communication. The former wealthy man was declared incompetent to handle his money, and the probate court appointed a guardian for him.

A WEEK IN CHICAGO

VARIED MATTERS THAT CALL FOR PUBLIC CONSIDERATION.

LITTLE ITALY RESTRAINED

The Prospective Child-Wife Must Go to School—An Ambitious Youth—The Little Ones—More Civic Pride.

CHICAGO.—Our superintendent of compulsory education has discovered a rather startling condition of affairs in the Italian quarter of the city, and immediate steps have been taken to change conditions obtaining there. The superintendent, Mr. Bodine, reports that in the last six months he has been called upon to stop three child marriages, the prospective bride in each case a school child under 14 years of age.

Investigation has brought to light that there is carried on in the Dante and Dore school districts what may be called a wholesale traffic in child wives. Girls are brought from southern Italy and Sicily by fathers who act as matrimonial agents. In explanation of the child marriages, the Italian colony say they are customary in the home land. In reply to this naive excuse, Superintendent Bodine remarks that this is America and not Italy; the girls must stop work on the trousseau and go to school.

The fathers literally sell the girls to men the children have never seen; the prospective son-in-law pays for the girl's transportation, for her wedding finery, and pays the wedding expenses—a no inconsiderable sum, for the Italians make a great show of marrying and funerals. We wonder what the little tossed-about maid thinks of all this; whether she prefers the schoolbooks or the husband?

Whatever her choice, she is not to indulge it; this strange new government under which she has come is looking after her with a different paternal care than that naturally hers; very carefully is little Rosina Montini and her sisters to be watched hereafter. Superintendent Bodine has detailed an officer to investigate every child marriage. Fathers are apt to give the age of the little brides rather carelessly when the marriage license is asked for, and to offset this the Italian consul will be asked to have the birth records forwarded from Italy of girls whose youthful appearance brings age into question.

Spirit Pictures.

CHICAGOANS are supposed to be hard-headed, materialistic to a degree. It turns out that, if not spiritual, they are spiritualistic; if materialistic, they long for the so-called "materializations."

It has just come to general notice that two women, the Bangs sisters, carry on a thriving trade in spiritualism among people of high commercial and social standing; that "people you wouldn't have believed it of" consult them as oracles, believe in their utterances, in the pictures they bestow upon those favored by the spirit artists.

As I understand it, the Bangs sisters are supposed to be in communion with departed artists, and these shades of painters once dwelling on this mundane sphere obligingly reproduce, without paint or brush, the desired portraits. It is said spirit-painting and spirit-photography is a flourishing business in this city.

Who buys them, or rather who pleads for them and, incidentally, pays for the medium's troubles? Well, such as these: doctors, lawyers, and women, of course. What do they pay for these works of art?—we do not say whether the art is black or white—Anywhere from $15 to $150.

We saw one of the spirit pictures once, and really it was quite a shivery looking thing, though the shade that executed it could never have been otherwise than a very crude worker. We remember, in spite of ourselves, we were much impressed with the intangible quality of the portrait, which seemed to appear and reappear in a decidedly uncanny way.

It is reported that one of the patrons in the picture line of the Bangs sisters is Dr. Funk, of Brooklyn; in fact, it was because of the connection of this well-known man with their spirit portraits that the Bangs sisters are again brought to public notice. Our lake sailors are said to be addicted to a class to spiritualism, the men frequently consulting a medium before starting out on the rough waters of Michigan. We wonder if she ever tells them the probabilities are they will not return; or does she confine herself to words of cheer?

Aspiring Young Men.

PERHAPS as popular a romance as any in the present day is that with a hero handsome, athletic, possessed of an almost impossible sum of manly virtues, falling in love with a fair lady much his superior in station. In days gone by we had King Cophetua stooping to the beggar maid; now it is the "poor but worthy youth" winning the affections of a great princess. In Chicago recently this tale was told with sad variations on the original theme.

We speak of the strange case of the paroled policeman and the wealthy young woman of Michigan avenue; the hapless girl shot down by the man whose attentions she would not listen to. We cannot help wondering if the tragedy had its beginning in the wild romances of princesses mating with humble citizens.

Herman, the would-be lover, was a man that appeared enamored of himself to no small degree, and doubtless thought in the end he would prove irresistible to any girl. He was well built, and paid the greatest attention to his clothes. Diamonds shone from his shirt front, a diamond sparkled on his finger; an advertisement that the wearer was no mere nobody. This, it seems to us, was his attitude.

Was Herman in love, or was Herman merely ambitious? The latter, surely. Associates say, knowing the young lady, Miss Mulvell, a possessor of wealth, he deliberately sought to win her regard; he chose a lodging near her home, took to church going at the St. James' church, where she was one of the most regular workers. His first advances repulsed, the man's inordinate vanity kept him from discouragement for even a term of years; but at last he must have realised that all his patience and efforts were in vain; and in a moment of frenzy took the life of the young woman whom everyone says was a very lovely character, a very useful member of society, her only crime, failure to appreciate an aspiring young man.

For Hungry School Children.

THE Salvation Army has about concluded that its plan to give a good breakfast to illy nourished children at certain Chicago public schools has not proved a success. It maintains that there is utmost need of such a charity, to get better work from the pupils, to diminish pilfering by them; but the difficulties seem insurmountable in the way of carrying out the work.

The school authorities refuse to have anything to do with the matter, and, lacking their assistance, the Army finds itself at a loss how to proceed. It was thought the teachers better than anybody else would be able to point out the needy ones, those too poor to help themselves; because of lack of this aid on the part of those informed, the Army has been feeding children whose parents are perfectly able to take care of them themselves. But, in adition to the impostors, there have been many worthy cases.

At the Army headquarters, in the lower part of the business portion of State street, in the heart of a congested district, the Army has been entertaining at breakfast from 80 to 100 children a morning, and have allowed the guests to eat as long and as much as they wished. One boy—the place is carried on on the cafeteria plan—was noticed to take to his end of a table coffee, doughnuts, rolls and frankfurters; an officer noticed he drank the coffee, but stuffed the food into his pockets. He was asked if he was not hungry, and replied that the coffee was enough for him, he was going to take the rest home to his mother and sisters, who had no breakfast. The family was visited and found lacking both coal and food. But this is one instance; the unworthy cases are said to be of such numbers as to discourage the work until some suitable system for dealing with the matter of feeding the really needy children can be worked out.

A City Clean.

A CITY clean and a city beautiful is interesting many earnest people in Chicago, in spite of the fact that these that know us say we are more lacking in civic pride than any of the large cities.

Just at present there is being carried on an active war upon persons guilty of that habit Englishmen from Dickens down have called by the name of "disgusting American habit." We scarcely know how to explain in polite words, and will enlarge no farther upon the matter, save to say that wonderful results are being brought about in what we had come to look upon as hopeless. The papers agitate the matter daily, and, what is much to the point, men and women, too, are being arrested in a wholesale fashion, walked off to near-by police stations, and obliged to hand over a fine and promise reform for the future. In one day alone 154 offenders were arrested. Notices meet the eye everywhere, detectives are watching everywhere. It is a step in the right direction.

A city beautiful we are working for with might and main. This week saw the opening of our "municipal museum," which occupies a suite of rooms on the fourth floor of the public library. There is now in progress there a loan exhibition, thus classified: Municipal administration, public art and recreation, sanitation, housing, street cleaning, intramural transportation, school extension, education and libraries, charities and correction, civic literature and statistics.

Perhaps the center of attraction is the New York street cleaning exhibit, included in which is a working model driven by electricity of the municipal garbage incinerator. Of interest to many are the cardboard models of tenements. Relief maps of St. Paul show the park scheme of that city, there are plans of Berlin and other German parks, and very attractive pictures of recreation grounds for the benefit of children dwelling in crowded portions of a city. When a Chicagoan sees what has been done, it is to be hoped civic pride will arise in him and abide with him.

A physician reports that fresh meat causes spring fever. Guess we won't get spring fever.

The man who believes in steady advertising and distributes his appropriation judiciously throughout the year will meet with greater return than the chap who spends the same amount in two or three big plunges and then lies back to regain his wind. This is no mere theory.—Ex.

Thanks to the Federal Postoffice Department, there is hope that in the near future one will be saved from receiving a lot of worthless stuff when he buys a copy of a Metropolitan Sunday paper. An order has been issued from Washington to enforce the postal laws regarding "illegal enclosures in newspapers" and after September 1 newspapers sent through the mails as second-class matter must not contain extraneous features. In an effort to promote their sales, New York papers, of the yellow type especially, have been working a sort of trading stamp inducement for all that it is worth, departing radically from the purpose of a journal, which is primarily to supply the news of the day. This scheme is perpetrated in the shape of a supplement. Calendars, pictures, card-board spectacles, sheet music, patterns, blocks of postal cards, dishes of soluble paints, and goodness knows what not, have been used to catch the masses. The newspapers of high standard have not been guilty of this offense but they have not suffered materially because of the catch-penny device of the other papers for their readers would not be attracted by such methods.

The Elizabeth Journal, the recognized spokesman for the Republican party in Union County, very wisely takes exception to the Jersey City Journal's declaration that Randolph Perkins has already been selected to succeed Joseph Cross as Senator from Union County. Some kind friend of the Westfielder has evidently been magnifying his political importance in the eyes of the Jersey City paper. Mr. Perkins may be a very nice man but he stands no more show of being nominated for such high office than Jim Martine does being named for President of the United States. When Assemblyman Embree died, the Re*publicans of the county very naturally* and rightfully decided that his official position should descend to another Westfielder and Mr. Perkins wanted it and got it. Mr. Perkins is no doubt aware of the fact that Charles J. Fisk, of this city, will succeed the honored Joseph Cross, if he desires the place. If he does not, some other Plainfielder will. The Elizabeth Journal sums it all up in this fashion: "Our Hudson County contemporary says many nice things about Mr. Perkins, all of which are well deserved, but its positiveness in asserting that it is in order to speak of him as 'Senator Perkins, for a nomination in Union is equivalent to an election,' will amuse the politicians in this county. There is good senatorial material aplenty in the Republican party of Union County, and a number of gentlemen have been honored by a mention, but from present indications, the honor is likely to go to one of Plainfield's favorite sons."

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Education of Mr. Pipp" continues to be one of the most consistent successes of the season in New York, and well filled houses are the rule at the Liberty Theatre. The Gibson comedy reached its fiftieth performance on Monday, April 10, and will remain on 42d Street for the rest of the season. Since the play is from the series of pictures which Charles Dana Gibson drew, it is very necessary that close similarity be followed between the played characters and the Gibson idea. Everyone who has seen the performance concedes that Digby Bell is the most perfect "Mr. Pipp" that could be imagined. His quiet, resigned manner and easy reading of the laughter-producing lines which have been given him by the brainy Augustus Thomas are very amusing.

"Florodora," the most successful and popular musical play ever produced in this country, is presented at the Broadway Theatre, New York, for a limited engagement. In preparing for the revival of this most delightful of all musical plays, Messrs. Fisher and Ryley spared no expense and it will be with new costumes and scenery, as elaborate in every detail as they were when this now famous musical play was originally produced at the Casino, almost four years ago, that "Florodora" will be given at the Broadway. "Florodora" is presented upon this occasion with a specially selected cast, which will include Miss Adele Ritchie as "Lady Holyrood;" Cyril Scott as "Lord Abercoed;" Phil K. Ryley as "Tweedlepunch;" Miss Elsa Ryan as "Angela Gilfain;" Henry V. Donnelly as "Gilfain," the millionaire; T. A. Kiernan as "Leandre" and Miss Lillie Collins as "Valleda." Aside from the story cast and the "Pretty Maiden" sextette, there will be a beauty chorus of 100 that is everything the word means; each member of the chorus can sing and the chorus of "Florodora" has been pronounced by all who have seen the play since the revival as the best singing chorus ever gathered together on any stage.

Jefferson De Angelis, in a great big production of musical comedy called "Fantana." *Mr. De Angelis is sur*rounded by one of the best musical comedy organizations in our land, and is playing to capacity nightly. The attraction at the Princess, 29th street and Broadway is "Frenzied Finance," a timely farce which portrays a bell boy climbing the ladder to riches in the truly Wall street fashion of the day. The Sun says it is uproariously funny. Evenings at 8:30.

Henry W. Savage's "Prince of Pilsen" has long since earned the title of the perennial musical comedy. Backed by a verdict of favor from every city in these United States, and with the British stamp of approval, too, the tuneful Pixley-Luders piece is now in New York for a return engagement. Since "The Prince's" metropolitan debut at the Broadway Theatre, this attraction has played twelve engagements in Greater New York—a pretty fair record. The present company contains many of the original cast, which contributed to the phenomenal success; and includes Jess Dandy, Ivar Anderson, Arthur Donaldson, Louise Willis, Jeannete Bageard and J. Francis Sullivan.

Ordinarily it is a hard matter for the average theatre to secure a proper attraction for Holy Week. In the olden days actors accepted half salary, and the magnates walked gloomily around shaking their heads and deploring the existence of such a week. Those conditions however have materially changed, and a good play acted by a good company, can pile up results during Holy Week, as at any other time. The engagement of Charles Hawtrey in "A Message From Mars," means only "another two-dollar show for a dollar" at the Grand Opera House, and from advance inquiries, it would seem that the Holy Week attraction will draw the usual crowded houses.

CRESCENT AVE. MUSIC.

Quartette Choir to be Re-Engaged With Some Changes.

The arrangements for music at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church for the year ends May 1, and is now known that the quartette choir will be practically the same as last year. The quartette will continue under the leadership of Rhys Thomas, choirmaster. Miss Carrell, the favorite contralto, will continue, as will also the bass, Mr. Grienert, of New York. Miss Davis, whose voice has been appreciated, has accepted a more attractive position in Brooklyn. Her position will be taken by Miss Sims, of Newark.

Arthur G. Drake, who was obliged to give up his position as organist, owing to eye trouble, will later on go to the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick. He will be succeeded by William P. Dunn, a freshman at Princeton, who has already won attention from the congregation by his masterly playing. Mr. Dunn is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Dunn, of Park avenue.

LITERARY.

Anticipating the coming camping season, the leading article in Recreation for April is "Summer Camps and Campers," by Arnold Bartlett Parker. The story is filled with illustrations and contains many practical hints for the tenderfoot and his wife in the woods and on the waters. "In the Country of the Black Sheep" is a story by B. H. Brown, covering a trip through British Columbia, after the Ovus Stonei, the so-called American black sheep discovered by Andrew J. Stone several years ago.

While not expressly planned as a special Easter number, there are in the May issue of The Metropolitan Magazine several distinctive features which give to it a strong flavor of the approaching springtime holiday. The cover design of this number is relevant to the Eastertide and is reproduced in full color from the painting made for the magazine by Blendon Campbell. Both in drawing and color this cover effect is masterly. It is perhaps the most beautiful exterior adornment ever put upon any magazine. A frontispiece in full color by the same artist represents the "Easter Girl" in a setting of cool, springtime green. The article of foremost interest in the May Metropolitan is from the pen of Colonel C. W. Larned, of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Contents of the April "The American Boy." The front cover, showing boys shooting at a mark, will prove of fascinating interest to every boy. This number, by reason of its varied and interesting contents, is one of the best yet published: Chapters XI and XII of "For the Mikade," by Kirk Munroe, is full of interest; Chapters II and III of the English school story, "A French Frog and an American Egle," telling about the initiation of new boys into a secret society, are full of fun; "Turkey-egg and Skuck," another school story, with its apt illustrations, will also make the boys laugh.

This tiny commonwealth has come to see the arteries of her political life deliberately poisoned by those who profit most by her large industries. When their names are called in public there is not even spirit and moral sensitiveness enough to answer. Here is all the political rottenness with less excuse than Colorado can offer in its recent stress. Her great possessions were immediately in jeopardy, which can not be said of Rhode Island, New Jersey, or Pennsylvania. If any humbling lesson is to be drawn from the turbulent days in Colorado, it is one which our people, as a whole, should set themselves to learn.—Collier's for April 8.

Gelett Burgess's novelette, which opens the May number of The Smart Set, will surprise his admirers, for in "The Visionists" he has entered an entirely new field and produced a story which is not only timely but powerful and absorbingly interesting. He has gone to London for the locale of this tale. The heroine is a young girl who, through force of circumstances, becomes a member of a society of socialists who call themselves "visionists." Her adventures are wonderfuly exciting and the tragic denouement is unforeseen. This novelette will win new laurels for Mr. Burgess.

TOM LAWSON ASKS NEWSPAPERS' AID

HAS SPENT $700,000 IN HIS FIGHT AGAINST TRUSTS.

Thomas Lawson, millionaire, author, broker, etc., has sent the following communication to The Daily Press:

"To the Press of America and Europe:

"'The 'system' has Lawson of Boston just where it wants him—short up to his ears of Amalgamated and Steel Preferred. They'll now break him. Good-by, Tom, good-by!' The expense of carrying on my 'Frenzied Finance' campaign, which has now been running ten months, has averaged $70,000 a month, but I regret to say that owing to the above misfortune I will be compelled to cut it to $80,000.

"In arriving at this decision my friends and enemies will know I now realize that while my spirit is willing my bank account is weak.

"Trusting that the ever-generous sports of the press will bear in mind that I toed the mark and asked no favors while I lasted, and that it is now their turn to come to the front with that of which they have no overplus—free space—I implore them to allow me to remain,

"Very truly and sincerely their busted co-worker,

FR. BOGAN IN CHARGE

New Pastor at St. Mary's Addresses His Parishoners.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Great Welcome Extended to the Priest, Church Being Thronged at Five Masses.

Large congregations, moved by a very manifest spirit of cordiality, greeted Rev. Father Bernard Bogan, successor of Rev. Father Andrew M. Egan, as rector of St. Mary's church, at all the masses Sunday, when he assumed formal charge of the parish for the first time.

At each of the masses Father Bogan made the announcement of his appointment by the bishop. His pulpit presence and delivery produced a pleasing impression, and his personality made itself felt as one of the most winning with which the members of St. Mary's have ever come into contact in a parish head.

The size of the congregations was marked. Yesterday was Palm Sunday, and with Father Bogan's first appearance in the pulpit as a feature of the day there were practically no stay-at-homes.

At the Children's mass, 9:30 o'clock, the church was crowded to its limits. Special benches along the outside of the sanctuary rail were needed to seat all the worshippers. There were five masses—6:30, 7:30, 8:30, 9:30, and 10:30 o'clock a. m. Father Bogan preached at the 10:30 mass, the most important of the day. He spoke to a congregation that filled the church.

His announcement preceded the sermon. It was as follows:

"My dear brethren,

"In assuming the duties of pastor of St. Mary's parish, I assure you it is with the deep realization of the responsibility that comes with my position. To the priesthood is applied, by the dominant spirit of Catholicity, the words of our Divine Lord—'You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you.' Commissioned by Christ, through the right line of the Episcopacy, to 'go and teach,' the priest enters upon his work, and is unquestionably welcomed to his pastorate, as a delegate presenting the credentials of the sacrament of Holy Orders. With delegated jurisdiction and canonical faculties for the proper exercise of spiritual power, through the medium of authority—his bishop—his confidence in his flock, and their trust in him, depend not upon personal qualifications but upon the fact of his priesthood.

"This it is that brings the sense of responsibility to the position I have been sent to fill in St. Mary's parish.

"Vain indeed would be that authority were it ever wielded for aught save the greater glory of God and the edification of a neighbor—to bring souls for whom God's Eternal Son gave up his life, nearer to the Divine Ideal in their living, and creating a standard of citizenship, whose moral excellence would impress all fair minded thoughtful people. This has been the spirit of my remarks to the four different congregations that have crowded this edifice before this mass today. You know wherein I put my trust in you and whence comes your confidence in me. So evident has the spirit of Catholic Christianity in your co-operation with my precedessors that I enter upon my work with reasonable hope of following at least in modest distance the standard of excellence that proceeds me.

"In my labors among you I am fortunate in the fellowship of Father Delehanty and Father Frederici. In the former you have found a zealous priest whose heart is already yours and whom I hope we may keep until permanent honors may come to him."

Father Bogan's theme for his sermon was the authority of the church as it applies to pastoral appointments. The priest, he pointed out, is sent by the constituted authority of the diocese, and the appointment is sufficient credential; the question of loyalty and acceptation on the part of the people is not one to be decided by them—the pastor is sent and they, as faithful members of the church, must accept him who is sent, with no thought of "calling" or rejecting parish heads.

At the 10:30 o'clock mass the ceremony of blessing the palms was gone through. The blessing was followed by a solemn palm procession by the chancel choir and Fathers Delehanty and Frederici, the assistant parish priests. Father Frederici celebrated the mass.

During the day a number of parish members called on Father Bogan at the rectory, to welcome him. In the afternoon the new rector conducted the Sunday-school service for older children, and went into the meetings of the Immaculate Conception Society, League of the Sacred Heart, and the Temperance Cadets.

With masses, announcements, sermons, visits to the various organizations and calls from his new parishioners, Father Bogan had a busy and a tiring day. But by night time he had met most of his parishioners, young and old, and won their friendship and sympathies. As he frankly told those who came to greet him, he had spent so pleasant a time in the Rahway parish that he regretted leaving it, but he confessed a high appreciation of the honor involved in the appointment to St. Mary's, and the pleasure was increased by the warmth of his welcome.

PARK GOLF CLUB PLAYERS BEGIN REGULAR SEASON

POINTS SCORED IN THE TWO COMPETITIONS FOR CUPS.

Under the most favorable circumstances the Park Golf Club began its active season on Saturday with play for the President's and Park Golf Club cups, weekly competitions, the former a scratch event, and the latter handicap play. The course was in the pink of condition, it being possible to use all of the putting greens, something unusual for this time of the year.

The course was well filled with players throughout the afternoon, although the number of entries in the two competitions were not so large. Charles B. Morse scored the first three points for the President's cup with the good score of 95, while J. B. Betts finished second with a 98, followed closely by Rev. J. O. McKelvey with a 99, giving him one point. For the other cup, Mr. McKelvey received the first three points, with a gross score of 108. Charles B. Morse won the two points with a score of 110 and S. St. John McCutchen secured the one remaining point with a score of 112.

The best scores returned for the two cups are as follows:

Charles B. Morse, 110, 15—95; J. B. Betts, 127, 29—98; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 108, 9—99; Charles W McCutchen, 118, 15—103; S. St. John McCutchen, 112, 9—103.

The regular play at the Plainfield Country Club will not begin until Saturday, April 29, but a large number of players were on the course Saturday, and some good scores were made.

BEER WAGON WRECKED IN EXCITING RUNAWAY

TWO MEN THROWN OUT AND HYDRANT SMASHED.

While Peter Trainor, driver, and Peter Blaich, helper, were lifting a box of beer from one of the delivery wagons belonging to Mrs. Lena Hoerster, owner of a North Plainfield bottling works, on Cottage place, early Saturday night, the team took fright and bolted. Trainor and Blaich were thrown and the wheels rolled over Blaich's legs. He wasn't hurt worth mentioning. Trainer was bruised.

At Richmond street and North avenue one of the front wheels hit a fire hydrant. The hydrant was smashed, and the wagon broke in two. At Second street the horses ran the pole into a tree, and Officer Nicholas Myers held them. The wagon was badly wrecked.

This Church Free of Debt.

Sunday morning, Elder Robert Clark, Jr., representing the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church, read a carefully prepared detailed statement to the congregation, giving the receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ending April 1. The receipts were between $5,000 and $6,000, and after all bills are paid the church starts its fiscal year with a small balance in the treasury. As regards benevolent contributions Mr. Clark stated that Trinity church and is auxiliaries were doing finely, having contributed $1,615 to foreign and domestic missions during the past year.

"Nigger's" Last Game.

A spaniel belonging to Frank Parsons, of East Front street, was killed by an automobile at the corner of Washington and Front streets Saturday afternoon. "Nigger," a dog, liked to run at autos, and when a big red machine flashed into view down the block he ran out to play the old game. "Nigger" miscalculated a little, and the front of the machine hit him squarely. He died of internal hurts in the road, feebly wagging his tail whenever sympathetic passers-by spoke to him, until the end. The Parsons grieved over "Nigger's" death, the womenfolk shedding tears of tribute to his kindly nature and faithfulness.

Wins Athletic Honors.

At the annual inter-class track meet of Brown University, held April 12, Arthur L. Denton, of this city, carried off the honors for his class, 1908. Denton received first in the high jump, 5 feet, 7 inches; third in the broad jump 19 feet 4 inches and first in the pole vault 10 feet 1 inch. Denton is in training and hopes to compete in several more track meets.

HOSPITAL LOST BEQUEST

Court Upheld Codicil Retracting Lydia Colton's Legacy.

CAVEAT HAD BEEN FILED

Children's Home Got $1,000—Decision Handed Down by Judge Schenck.

A decision of the Somerset County Orphans' Court before Judge Schenck at Somerville, Saturday, following the admission of the will of the late Lydia Colton, of North Plainfield, upholds a codicil she made retracting a $2,000 legacy to Muhlenberg Hospital.

The original document made the bequest but it was taken back in one of two codicil but the court decided that Miss Colton was in her right mind when she made it and that she had the privilege of leaving her money as she wished and to change her mind at any time she pleased.

There were numerous bequests made in the will among them being $1,000 to a church at Kinderhook, N. Y., $1,000 to the Children's Home Association, $2,000 to Mrs. Kate Curried, of Dunellen and others to relatives and friends. The estate is quite a valuable one.

PAID LAST RESPECTS TO FORMER PATROLMAN

LOCAL DELEGATIONS ATTEND FUNERAL OF LATE GEORGE W. LUNGER.

In the Methodist church at East Whitehouse, Saturday afternoon, funeral services were conducted over the body of George W. Lunger, for seven years a member of the local police force, who died last week after nearly two years illness. They were in charge of Rev. S. B. Decker, pastor of the church, and were attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, including delegations from the city police department and Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P. Both of these contributed large floral pieces, the one from the patrolmen being an immense pillow.

The interment was made in the Whitehouse cemetery, where the Pythian burial service was conducted by Chancellor Commander Elmer D. Cutting. The pall bearers were Doorman Thomas McCue and Patrolmen Morris Higgins and Nicholas Myers, from the policemen, and Elmer D. Cutting, Thomas M. Muir and Thomas Osment from Perseverance Lodge. Sergeant Christian Fredericksen, Patrolman Arthur McGinley, Patrolman Andrew Saffron and Asa D. Pope acted as flower bearers entering and leaving the church.

NOT SAFE AND SANE SAYS ALVAH A. CLARK

SOMERSET'S DEMOCRATIC LEADER DOES NOT FAVOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

In discussing municipal owership of public utilities with a reporter, former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, the Democratic leader of Somerset County, declared that he regarded it as ideal, but that he thought it afforded opportunities for public plunder. Asked what he thought of the question being made a permanent issue of the Democratic party, Mr. Clark expressed himself as follows:

"Municipal ownership is Utopian. Public ownership would be an open chance for public plunder. So long as universal suffrage prevails no public enterprise is created without brains and money. If successful financially, its creators are rewarded for their venture. If the powers which give authority to create by appropriate legislation control those to whom power is given under our system of government, what hope would there be for more beneficial management by the public at large whereby good results would be derived by the public generally?

"It does not seem to me safe and sane as a dominant issue for the Democratic party."

Volunteers Want Pay.

In place of the tax exemption, taken from them by the recent ruling of the Supreme Court, the Dunellen volunteer firemen want $12 a year from the borough. Their exemption amounted to about $13 annually. The company is allied with the State organization in its effort to get a salary bill for volunteers through the Legislature, but the Dunellen men are thinking of petitioning their own Council for independent action.

Bank for Metuchen.

It is understood that the application for a charter for a bank at Metuchen, the first institution of that kind for the place, with a capital of $25,000, has been approved by the comptroller of the currency at Washington.

"Bob" Davis Sees Local Team Wallop the Visitors in Good Shape, Score Being 7 to 1.

BIG CROWD AT OVAL

Team Work a Feature of Plainfield's Play—Mayor Buckle Pitches First Ball—The Story by Innings.

(By the official scorer, Charley Dixon.)

The opening of the local baseball season on Saturday under the auspices of the Plainfield Baseball Association, was a great success. Fandom, from the smallest boy, who likes to view the game from the branch of a tree, to the more pretentious crank who prefers a particular seat on the grandstand, gave nothing but praise for the management and the strong team that will represent the city this season. Despite the chilly air, tinged with frost, fully one thousand lovers of the game wended their way to Crescent Oval. Included in the crowd were to be found a number of city and borough officials, while all the way from Hudson county, came that noble chief, "Bob" Davis, and his coterie of friends.

Just before the game started Mayor James F. Buckle walked to the pitcher's box, from which position he threw the first ball, amid the applause of the crowd. The ball did not go over the plate, but "Pete" Lamar was there to catch it. After His Honor's performance, Lee Johnson stepped out on the diamond and on behalf of the Timbo Social Club presented Mr. Buckle with a handsome bouquet of flowers, which he accepted gracefully.

Manager Daab selected the Jersey City Club for the opening attraction with a view to making his team play the best ball and that his hopes were realized is shown by the score of 7 to 1. It was a narrow escape from a good coat of whitewash for the Hudson County leaguers, and there was nothing but gloom in their camp. Every member of the local team played gilt-edge ball and they received the support of the crowd, which was unusually large for such a cold day.

Linderman cleverly fooled his op*ponents, allowing them but four hits,* while Pfanmiller was touched for eleven singles and a double. But one error was charged each team. Reliable "Pete" Lamar worked like the veteran that he is behind the rubber, and he was a terror to base-runners. As for the infield, it was perfection. Captain Driscoll on first sustained his reputation by taking care of everything coming his way, while "Rube" Oldring, at second, "Happy" Kiernan at short and "Mike" Leonard at third, showed up in mid-summer form, both at the bat and in the field.

The old favorite, "Pete" Cregan, received a warm welcome and he with Cosgrove and Connolly, took care of the field to the satisfaction of everyone. The Jersey City Club had its strongest lineup, but was unable to overcome the masterly pitching of Linderman and the fine support given him.

Following is the detailed score and the game by innings:

GLIMPSE OF HOLLAND AT LOCAL CASINO

WOMEN OF GRACE CHURCH UNDERTAKE THE ENTERPRISE.

Holland in miniature and in all its glory will be seen at the Casino on Saturday, May 6, when the Grace Church Lenten Sewing Class holds its annual affair, which this year takes the form of a Dutch fete. A May pole dance in the afternoon and a first-class vaudeville show at night are not the only attractions, for the women of the parish interested in the event have planned to outdo all former efforts and will have unusual things to please the patrons.

Miss VanBoskerck has charge of the silhouette booth and others have been selected to take charge of this and that attraction. A Dutch garden and kitchen, with all the women in the quaint costumes of Queen Wilhemnai's country, will be a feature. Refreshments will be served at small cost.

Among those who are interested in the success of the enterprise, which is undertaken for the benefit of Grace church chapel, are Mrs. Timpson, Mrs. Barnhart, Mrs. Delafield, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Drayton and Miss VanBoskerck.

No More "Car Ahead."

The Public Service Corporation has made an order that a run once begun must be completed, so that passengers will not have to take the car ahead. There has been considerable grumbling by the public over the necessity of changing cars, particularly when the lines have been blocked by deep snow.

CO. K BOYS' BANQUET

Fourth Annual Feast is Held at Truell Inn.

J. E. MARTINE SPEAKS

Jolly Good Time and a Splendid Menu—Capt. Martin Toastmaster.

The successes of Co. K during the past four years of its existence were happily recalled at the annual banquet held at Truell Inn, last night, when the active members, honorary members and guests joined in the festivities of the occasion. After enjoying a dinner that was declared to be par excellent, the rest of the evening was devoted to speech-making.

Seated at the head table in the commodious dining-rooms, were Captain W. B. Martin, of Co. K; James E.

Captain W. B. Martin.

Martine, Freeholder E. K. Adams, of Cranford; L. B. Woolston, Captain John M. Wherley, of Co. M, Somerville; Lieut. John P. Mosher, Stanley Mosher, Freeholder William A. Westphal, Lieut. W. Kempton Browning, Collector Robert L. Lee, W. R. Coddington, county attorney and Major Nelson Y. Dungan. The members of the company were seated at numerous small tables.

At the outset Captain Martin reviewed the history of the organization from its inception, February 27, 1901. With considerable pride he said that last year the percentage of attendance was 76 and this year it was 86.7 per cent., all of which he added was due to the good work of the men. He stated that in 1902 the company stood first in rifle practice, and after dropping back to fourth place, last year, was this year in first position again. He paid the company the compliment that it is one of the most efficient in the State and in good condition as to deportment, rifle practice and financial standing. At the recent inspection of the company, Gen. Gillmore said that Co. K was one of the best drilled of any in the State.

Captain Martin, acting as toastmaster, then introduced the speakers of the evening, the first of which was W. R. Coddington. He said that he was glad to get better acquainted with the company and learn that its members stand so well. He added that while monuments are speechless and trophies are useless it is the patriotism in the heart that counts and in this respect he felt sure that every member of the company would respond as one man to the call of duty.

Collector Robert L. Lee, as an honorary member, expressed his pleasure in being present and congratulated the company on its fine showing. He said that he was glad to be able to deduct from each man's tax bill $1, but he said that the State should be thanked for that.

Major Nelson Y. Dungan was the next speaker. He began by saying that as a result of last year's banquet he had learned that a member of the National Guard must be very circumspect. At that time a little entertainment was magnified by the press and called forth much criticism. A few days ago, he said, an innocent entertainment was provided in North Plain*field and the papers magnified it by* calling it a prize-fight and the affair is now bothering the county authorities. If the newspapermen were not here, added Major Dungan, in an amusing manner, I might feel free to speak.

Continuing, Major Dungan remarked that he was gratified to learn of the attainments of Co. K and said that it made him feel proud of the organization. Not since the Spanish-American War had the term tin soldier been applied to the State militia and he said that the National Government at Washington thought so well of the militia after that war that through the Dick bill it had been made a part of the regular army.

Referring to the real duties of a soldier, he said that the heart-breaking time comes when he has to leave home, mother, wife, sister and one's best girl to answer the call of duty. When the Government wanted men in a hurry in the last war, the militia responded, fully seventy per cent. of the National Guard answering the call. He congratulated Co. K on the completion of its fourth year and paid deserving tribute to Captain Martin, who in 1901 won the Whimbleton cup, making him champion shot of the United States. Concluding he said that he hoped that when Captain Martin is promoted to a colonelcy, Co. K would still be in first place.

L. B. Woolston was then called upon, and stated this his first duty was to apologize for the absence of Mayor Buckle, who being very tired, was unable to attend. He said that there was no need of having two "Jims" present and had decided that Jim Martine would fill the bill. Mr. Woolston spoke of his early connection with Co. E, under the leadership of Gen. Madison Drake, in 1872, and how he helped to organize the company. He dwelt briefly on the company's trip to Washington after the Grant election to the Presidency, and how all the members were provided with red blankets, which afterward got Gen. Drake into trouble.

It happened while the company was the guest of the 8th Regiment in New York, that Gen. Drake was arrested, it being learned that the red blankets had not been paid for. He expressed his admiration for the local company and congratulated it upon its fine standing.

Freeholder Westphal said that he was glad to be present and as a citizen was proud of the company. "Everything that's good comes from Plainfield," said Mr. Westphal, "but our next sheriff is coming from Cranford." This called forth much applause for Freeholder Adams.

Captain Martin said that while Co. K is second to none in th State it was not the only company, and he called upon Captain Wherly, of Co. M, Somerville, to prove his statement. Captain Wherly expressed his feelings of fraternal interest in the local organization, stating that he helped to form it and muster it into service and he felt sure that he had the good will of every member. He was confident that the batallion, of which Cos. K and M are members is the best in the State. He added that inasmuch as New Jersey is to have a rifle team in the National shoot at Sea Girt this year, he hoped that Co. K would be represented.

Upon the introduction of James E. Martine as the next speaker, three rousing cheers were given and wild applause followed. After expressing appreciation of the words of Captain Martin in referring to him as the Democratic candidate for Congress during the last election, Mr. Martine gave an eloquent talk. He said that he was in no sense a military man, that he knows as little about military affairs as about Heaven, and that is little. "While your company has attained such excellence, I pray God the time may come, when our country will need no armed forces to settle its differences," said Mr. Martine. "But to safe-guard our Republic a well-organized militia evdently is necessary and God speed your organization. On principle I am opposed to a large standing army, believing it is prejudicial to a free government, but I am proud of our militia. The ruling powers, and I hope that I may not be court-marshalled for saying so, prevented our company from going to Washington to participate in the ceremonies attendant upon the inauguration of our President. The powers said nay and denied the boys the privilege they desired which would have cost our State nothing."

Mr. Martine then referred to the possibility of drafting 3,000,000 men if necessary to defend the country's interests and under such conditions he said that there was no telling what our country might accomplish. He paid just tribute to Marquis De-Lafayette and Rochambeau for their assistance in averting starvation among the New Jersey troops during the Revolution when New Jersey's lot was a terrible one. He spoke of the true patriotism of this State through its history and believed it to be the duty of every citizen to perpetuate the glorious Republic until time immemorial. In conclusion Mr. Martine recited that impressive writing of Longfellow, "Sail on O Ship of State," amid the hearty applause of everyone.

The other speakers included Lieut. John P. Mosher, Sergeant Pearsall, who spoke for the ranks, and at the close Mr. Martine moved that a vote of thanks be given to Mrs. Truell for the excellent dinner provided and the superb service. In connection with this vote, which was a standing one, Mr. Woolston spoke of Mrs. Truell's patriotism, how she helped to nurse wounded soldiers during the Civil War.

The banquet came to an end with a short speech by Sergeant Littell, who told how he won his gold medal for fine marksmanship, by persistence and good coaching on the part of Captain Martin.

200 TREES MAKE TROUBLE

Question As to Whether They Encroach on the Sidewalk.

THE ISSUE DODGED

Chairman Schneider Raises a Point That Compels Dunellen Council to Hold a Special Meeting.

Two hundred trees, all on one property, were reported as encroaching on the sidewalk of the Dunellen main street at a special meeting of the Dunellen Council last night. The problem involved in the legal question that grows out of the encroachment was too great for the Council to solve, and the body appealed to the law and ordinance committee to straighten out the matter with the advice of the corpora*tion counsel.*

The trees, sturdy young ones, planted not very long ago, stand in a row on the property of William Sanford, on North avenue. They stretch for about a quarter of a mile along the main thoroughfare.

Councilman Schneider, chairman of the street committee, discovered the encroachment by accident in taking a general survey of the sidewalk situa*tion at the beginning of the new fiscal* year. He reported to the Council that the trees, on careful investigation, were found to lie two feet inside the sidewalk line, which is set twelve feet from the curb.

He said he called the attention of Mr. Sanford to the encroachment, but the latter insisted that his trees were in their proper places. He told Mr. Schneider that there could hardly be any doubt of that, because he hired an engineer to survey the place before placing the trees, and he planted them where the surveyor put stakes as a guide for the purpose.

Mr. Schneider said he asked the engineer about it and the latter said he put the stakes where Mr. Sanford told him to drive them.

Mr. Schneider appealed to the Council to tell him whether Mr. San*ford had any right to keep his trees* where they were. The Council found the question too much. The member want the borough to have all the sidewalk to which she is entitled, but they don't know whether tree rights are paramount to sidewalk rights or not.

After struggling with the question for a time, the members dodged the issue by referring it to the law and *ordinance committee for investiga*tion. Corporation Counsel J. Brewster Willis, of New Brunswick, is expected to work the question out. The Council will act on his advice.

In the meantime the trees hold their ground, and dig their roots deeper for a firmer grip on the sidewalk subsoil.

JUDGE GARRETSON CHARGES GRAND JURY

CALLS ATTENTION PARTICULARLY TO WILLIAMS MURDER CASE.

In delivering his charge to the Somerset County Grand Jury, this morning, Judge Garretson spoke on other matters beside the North Plainfield boxing investigation. He informed the jurors that the most important case that would have to be considered by them was the murder of George Williams, the Watchung grocer, for which George Wood has been arrested. He recited the case from start to finish and said the details would be given by witnesses later.

He also spoke of the shooting at Raritan of John Stevenson, a former Plainfielder, for which Charles Kisconack is being held. Stevenson, while intoxicated, attempted to enter Kisconack's saloon in Raritan at 3 o'clock in the morning and was mistaken by the proprietor for a burglar. He was shot and badly injured and will be brought before the jurors on a stretcher.

Of the Supreme Court cases, there are only two of interest to Plainfielders. The first is that of Justus H. Cooley against James B. Wilson, trustee, and is to be heard by the court without a jury. The other is the suit brought by William Barry, in behalf of his son, Francis Barry, against Frederick O. Hinni, Jr., of East Orange. The latter, while running an automobile on Somerset street, knocked the Barry boy down and injured him severely. The plaintiff is represented by Craig A. Marsh and the case will be called tomorrow.

North Plainfield is represented on the Grand Jury by Justus H. Cooley and J. Worth Codington.

H. Russell Voorhees, traveling manager and a member of the advertising firm of Voorhees & Company, New York City, has been away for the past three weeks, in Pittsburg, Scranton, Allentown and other cities in Pennsylvania. At present he is at Hazelton. Mr. Voorhees' home is in Carlton avenue, Plainfield.

MORTGAGE ON HIS AUTO

"Mayor Bill" Smith to Lose $900 Devil Wagon.

SALE WAS POSTPONED

Bubble will be Sold by Constable Next Week—Attempted Secrecy.

"Millionaire Bill" Smith has been running a mortgaged auto. Since October last Andrew Wilson, with whom Smith was associated in the defunct Plainfield Auto Garage, has had a lien on the Oldsmobile tonneau car in which the New Market celebrity has been wont to flit over the countryside.

Worse than that, Smith stands a good show to lose the auto entirely. Wilson has foreclosed on it, and the machine will be offered for sale under a constable's hammer. The sale was to have been held yesterday, but on account of the death of Mrs. Hannah Nelson, Smith's mother, the sale was postponed. It will probably be held next week.

The machine was worth, when new, $900. Smith borrowed $450 on it. The loan was made just about the time Wilson and Smith launched the garage concern.

An effort was made by Constable Pierce, who has the sale in charge, to keep the matter quiet. He refused all information regarding the identity of the owner of the automobile. A notice of the sale, posted in Dunellen, did not give the name of the automobile's owner. R. P. F. VonMinden, lawyer for Smith, refused to give out any information regarding the case when questioned by a reporter this morning.

THIS CHURCH RAISED $33,672.25

Crescent Avenue Presbyterians Review Year's Remarkable Work.

IN OTHER CHURCHES

First Presbyterians and Park Avenue Baptists Also Hold Their Annual Meetings.

The meeting of the Crescent Avenue church congregation was held in the church chapel and was very largely attended. The reports presented included every department of the organization, comprising the home church and Sunday-school and those of Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie acted as moderator and Dr. Ellis W. Hedges as clerk.

Probably the most important of the reports was the one read by the clerk, detailing the financial side of the year's work. I showed that the congregation in the twelve months had raised a total of $33,672.25, for all purposes. This was expended as follows: For home missions and the support of chapels, $6,492.96; foreign missions, $5,336.12; miscellaneous, $629.37; ministerial relief, $885.63; education, $335; church erection, $750; aid for colleges, $482.93; freedmen, $131.23; publication and Sabbath-school work, $103.30; Bible Society, $58; Synodical aid, $501.13; Plainfield charities, $611.12; temperance, $10; general assembly, $127.30; deacons' fund, $1,455.91. The total benevolences were $19,289.79, an increase of $1,400 over last year, while the congregational expenses were $14,382.46.

Another report read by the clerk showed that the total membership of the home church and its branches is 1,628 divided as follows: Crescent Avenue, 913; Bethel chapel, 75; Hope chapel, 371; Warren chapel, 264. The total Sunday-school membership is 1,696, the home school having 394, Bethel chapel, 269; Hope chapel, 618 and Warren chapel, 415.

Each of the chapels was represented by the pastor and the superintendent of the Sunday-school, each of whom detailed the work in his care. For Hope chapel the speakers were Henry C. Squires and Rev. L. R. Howard; for Warren chapel, Frederick H. Andrews and Rev. J. O. McKelvey; for Bethel chapel, A. W. Duxbury and Rev. F. J. Tilden. All spoke of having had an encouraging year and of bright prospects for the future.

The home departments were reported for as follows: Sunday-school, George A. Strong, membership 394, receipts, $405.45, for missions, $518.84; deacons' report, S. H. Whitney; trustees' report, Charles F. Abbott; Ladies' Aid Society, Foreign Mission Society, Home Mission Society and the Sunshine Mission Band were all reported for by Dr. Zelie. These organizations raised during the year a total of $8,990.

The only other business of the evening was the election of Leander N. Lovell, Henry C. Squires and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges as elders and Dr. William H. Murray and T. F. Budlong as deacons, the latter succeeding James F. Kimball, resigned.

Park Avenue Baptist.

Very complete reports showing a gratifying condition spiritually and financially were presented at the annual parish meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church, April 12, and trustees for the coming year were elected. Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor, was chosen moderator, and Harry C. Runyon, as clerk, occupied his position. The terms of John H. Doane, L. R. Schofield and C. K. Compton as trustees, expired, and Mr. Doane and Mr. Schofield were re-elected. Mr. Compton declined the office owing to a pressure of other matters, and it was with sincere regret that his resignation was accepted after many years of faithful service.

A very comprehensive report was presented by Roland C. Treadwell, as president of the Board of Trustees. During the past year a special effort has been made to increase the revenue of the church. The result has been quite satisfactory, there being a net increase of about $600. The arduous duties of Mr. Treadwell have been appreciated as was shown in an expression of thanks by all those present.

The financial statement of the church was presented by Frank T. Ostrom, treasurer. This showed the receipts to be nearly $4,000 and the expenditures have been such as to about balance this sum. Certain improvements have been made and the church has been quite generous in its contributions to various benevolent objects, including foreign and home missions. The new year is started with bright prospects for a successful one. The labors of Pastor Finn have been fruitful and all seem prepared for the series of evangelistic services to be held soon.

First Presbyterian.

The reports presented at the annual meetings of the First Presbyterian church and congregation, April 12, gave evidence of a successful year in all departments. The church meeting was held first, the chairman being E. M. Cave. J. B. Bettman was the clerk and Howard A. Pope, assistant secretary. Robert H. Radford and W. H. Shotwell were elected elders for three years and E. D. George a deacon for three years.

The financial reports presented by W. H. Shotwell, treasurer, showed that during the year $1,500 was raised for benevolent purposes and $4,650 for congregational purposes. A year ago there was an indebtedness of $1,000 and $500 of this has since been paid.

Reports were received from the home and foreign missionary societies, the Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies, King's Messengers, Sunday-school, and the Little Light Bearers. All showed an increase in membership and receipts. The church membership at present is 382.

Following the church meeting the congregation meeting was held. Mr. Cave continued as chairman, and Mr. Pope as secretary. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring, was called from the city and could not attend. J. B. Hill was elected a trustee for two years, H. A. Pope and William Shotwell for three years and David K. Young for two years to fill an unexpired term.

It was decided to make no change in the pastor's salary for the coming year and the music for the year was left in the hands of the music committee with the understanding that the present arrangement is satisfactory and should be continued.

ORANGE HORSE SHOW.

Annual Exhibition on May 15, 16 and 17 at Clubhouse on Halsted Street.

Among the post-Lenten affairs of interest to horsemen in this part of the State will be the annual horse show under the auspices of the Riding and Driving Club, of Orange, to be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, May 15, 16 and 17 at the clubhouse on Halsted street, Orange. The programme includes horses driven single and double, in tandem, four-in-hand, women and men's saddle class, same for ponies, jumping contests for green and qualified hunters, each night, contest for driving through obstacles for coachmen employed by residents of the Oranges.

The committee in charge comprises Ira Kipp, Jr., Esq., chairman; G. H. Betts, treasurer; W. S. Miltz, secretary; L. W. Baldwin, W. D. Grand, Charles Hathaway, Ernest Hopkinson, Earl Milliken, Charles F. Rand, Tonzo Sauvage, W. Anderson Walker.

Lawyers Will Have to Shout.

Despite all the study and forethought spent upon the plans of Union County's court house, just completed, it has been found that the acoustic properties are very poor in the rooms where the courts are to hold sessions. It has been apparent from the time the walls were enclosed and it will require something akin to stentorian tones for a plea or an address to be heard. The architects are now considering plans to remedy the trouble.

Lecture on the Federal Constitution.

David Prescott Hall, of the New York Bar Association, will give a lecture on "The Origin and Nature of the Federal Constitution," at Tracell Inn, Park avenue, on Monday afternoon, April 24, at 4 o'clock, under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield. The annual meeting of the League will be held at the same place at 3 o'clock.

Candidates for LL. B.

Joseph Pemberton and Welles Taylor, of this city, are among the New Jersey students who are candidates for degrees at the New York Law School.

Mrs. J. F. Emmons' Niece Wed.

The many friends of Miss Evelyn Staat, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Staat, of Chicago, and niece of Mrs. John P. Emmons, of Prospect place, will be interested to learn of her recent marriage to J. Frederick Wolff, vice president of the L. Wolff Manufacturing Company and member of the Union League and Chicago Athletic Clubs. The wedding took place in Chicago and was a quiet one, only members of the respective families being present at the ceremony, after which the bride and groom left for Hot Springs, Va., for a stay of three weeks, preparatory to a tour of Europe.

MEN AT WASHINGTON

NEW SENATORS SMALL IN STATURE, BUT BIG BRAINED.

LA FOLLETTE OF WISCONSIN

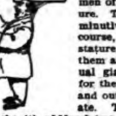
Passing of John H. Reagan, of Texas, Old-Time Democrat—Wearers of Gray in Public Life—Progress in Philippines.



WASHINGTON.—The United States senate is acquiring a large number of men of small stature. They are diminutive only, of course, in physical stature, as most of them are intellectual giants, famed for their ability in and out of the senate. There came in on the 4th of March two or three additions to the corps of little men. One of these, George S. Nixon, of Nevada, is probably the smallest man in stature in the senate. He is even smaller than Allee, of Delaware, and that is saying a good deal. Mr. Nixon comes to the senate, however, bearing a reputation of unusual ability as a lawyer and a man of affairs, and he is counted on to take a place in the front rank of the strong men in the senate.

Another short man who has just come in is "Bob" La Follette, of Wisconsin, the strenuous governor and the successful fighter of the stalwart wing of the republican party. He matches his colleague in stature, as Senator Spooner is also below the normal height of man. If La Follette had had two or three more inches in height he would never have been heard of in the political world and would never have come to the senate. His earliest ambition was for the stage, and he developed histrionic ability of rare quality, but as he wished to play tragedies, his diminutive height was an insuperable bar to a career in that line. A hero on the stage of some five feet four inches in height would have a hard time to achieve success, no matter how fine his elocutionary qualities. La Follette gave up the idea of going on the stage and went into state politics, and he is now pretty nearly the top of the heap.

Other small men in the senate are Piles, of Washington; Martin, of Virginia; Allee, of Delaware, and Knox, of Pennsylvania. The latter has always been represented as an extremely diminutive man, physically, but he overtops in stature at least four of his colleagues in the senate.

Passing of Historic Southerner.

THE recent death of John H. Reagan, of Texas, removes another of the old-time democrats who made an impress on public affairs in Washington and elsewhere. Mr. Reagan was well known in Washington, where he served in the house and also in the senate. He had as his colleague in the senate Mr. Coke, and they were a picturesque pair, both being large, massive men physically, and very ponderous in their manner of speaking.

Mr. Reagan will be remembered more particularly because he was the last member of the confederate cabinet, and on his death all that body have passed away. He was postmaster general under Jefferson Davis, and was the only one of the cabinet who was captured with Jefferson Davis. He was confined for many months in the military prison at Fort Warren. He had many conferences with President Johnson, Secretary Seward, Henry Wilson, afterwards vice president; James Speed and others on the subject of reconstruction. In the light of the history of that period and of the years since, the wisdom of many of Mr. Reagan's suggestions is apparent. He wrote an open letter to the people of Texas advocating laws for the protection of negroes, which should grant them civil rights and limited political rights, with an educational qualification. His own people misconstrued his ideas, and he was retired from politics for several years, but was elected to congress in 1874, and for the two succeeding terms.

Mr. Reagan had many friends in public life in Washington, and old colleagues in the senate, like Morgan, of Alabama; Berry, of Arkansas; Gorman, of Maryland, and Bate, of Tenenssee, are profuse in their eulogies of his strong character.

Wearers of the Gray.

WHILE the death of Reagan wiped out the members of Jefferson Davis' cabinet and the death of Senator Vest a few months ago took out of public life the last member of the confederate congress, there are still in the house and senate quite a coterie of public men who wore the gray and served with distinction in the confederate army. Nearly all of the southern states have representatives or senators in congress who were confederate soldiers. Alabama contributes in the senate two distinguished brigadier generals of the confederacy in the persons of Senators Pettus and Morgan. They both served in Alabama regiments and have been highly honored ever since.

From Arkansas comes the one-legged confederate veteran, Berry, while Florida furnishes two ex-confederate soldiers in Senators Mallory and Taliaferro. Senator Mallory saw service in both the confederate army and navy. He was a comparatively young man when the war broke out, but went into the war early, and near the close was appointed a midshipman in the confederate navy. Senator Bacon, of Georgia, served all through the war, most of the time as a captain on general staff duty. Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, served throughout the war, as did Senator McCreary, of the same state. The latter attained the rank of lieutenant colonel of the Eleventh Kentucky cavalry.

Senator McEnery, of Louisiana, had his full share of the war, serving in the confederate army as a lieutenant. Money, of Mississippi, entered at the outbreak of the war, and continued in the army until 1864. Senator McLaurin, of the same state, enlisted as a private when only 16 years old, which was in 1864, and served until the end of the war. Bate, of Tennessee, became a major general in the confederate army, and Daniel, of Virginia, had reached a majority when he was crippled by severe wounds in the battle of the Wilderness. His colleague, Martin, was a cadet at the Virginia military institute during the war, but spent a good deal of time in the military service in the confederacy with a battalion of cadets.

Veterans of the Mexican War.

WHILE the veterans of the civil war of both the confederate and federal armies are still found in public life doing splendid service, although 40 years have passed since the close of that conflict, they seem as boys, almost, compared with veterans of the Mexican war, which was waged nearly 60 years ago. And yet there are two veterans of that war who are doing full service in the United States senate and affording irrefutable argument against Dr. Osler's theory that man's greatest achievements occur before he is 40, and that men are useless at 60 and should be chloroformed. These two interesting characters are Senators Pettus, of Alabama, and Senator Bate, of Tennessee.

Senator Pettus will be 84 years of age on the 6th of next July, but is still hale and hearty and mentally and physically strong. He is only two removes from the revolutionary war, as his mother was a daughter of Capt. Anthony Winston, of Virginia, a famous revolutionary soldier. On the breaking out of the Mexican war, Mr. Pettus entered as a lieutenant and did valiant work. He came back from Mexico, and just to show the stuff he was made of and the hardy life that men of that period delighted to live, he joined a party of his neighbors and rode on horseback to California. He was 40 years old when the civil war broke out, and entered the confederate army as a major, rising in rank to a brigadier general of infantry.

Senator William Brimage Bate, of Tennessee, will be 79 years of age next October. He was quite a young man when the Mexican war came on, but enlisted and served as a private throughout the whole contest in Louisiana and Tennessee regiments. He had a great record in the confederate army, which he entered as a private, rising to the rank of captain, colonel, brigadier general and major general. He was three times dangerously wounded, and surrendered with the army of the Tennessee in 1865.

Progress in the Philippines.

THE progress of American civilization in the Philippines is well exhibited by the enactment of a law by the Philippine commission authorizing the incorporation of the Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the Philippine islands. This is a long step in the progress of humanity, when the habits of the orient in the treatment of animals is remembered. The natives have always regarded the dumb brutes as legitimate objects of torture and abuse. Now that the better class of these natives are beginning to appreciate the barbarity of such conduct, the advance of American ideas becomes apparent.

The incorporators of the society include ladies and gentlemen, both native and American, who occupy prominent positions in the social life of Manila, and a good degree of authority has been granted them in order to further the objects of the society. The organization is authorized to appoint five agents in the city of Manila and two in each province of the archipelago, who shall have full police authority to make arrests for violations of the laws enacted for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and they can also call upon the regular police force to aid in enforcing the law.

The society is required to make a full annual report of its transactions to the governor general each year, and shall maintain a principal office in the city of Manila, but has authority to establish branch offices in other parts of the island. One half of the fines imposed are collected through the efforts of the society shall belong to it, and be used to further its objects. The diligent application of the laws is expected to be productive of considerable revenue at first, as there will be no lack of material on which to work.

LIVED HER WHOLE LIFE AS A BOY

GIRL REVEALS REMARKABLE STORY ON DEATH-BED.

20 YEARS IN MALE ATTIRE

Went to Boys' Schools, Was a Jockey and a Helper in a Barroom—Confesses Strange Tale to Hospital Nurse.

Cincinnati.—By the death of Miss Frances Lamouche in a hospital here a strange story of adventure is brought to light—a story that must have gone to the grave with her had she not confided it to her nurse.

The girl was 20 years old. She was admitted to the hospital several weeks ago as Frank Williams, clad in male apparel and appearing to be a boy. Her brown hair was cropped close and there was nothing in her manner to indicate her sex.

As Frank Williams she was placed in the male ward and there the physicians found that she was suffering from a fatal form of paralysis. The day following her admission she confessed to the nurse that she was not Frank Williams, but Miss Frances Lamouche. She was immediately removed to the female ward.

She could not recall the time when she did not masquerade as a boy. She was born in a little village not far from Paris. Her father, she told the nurse, was a comedian, and her mother a Parisian dancer and singer. She said she could not have been more than five years old when she donned knickerbockers and began the masquerade that was to end only with her death.

While she was still a mere child her parents came to America. Her father, she said, was killed in Chicago about ten years ago. Her mother continued to dance and sing in concert halls and the little girl was wont to go with her to the theaters and wait for her in her dressing-room. But the passing years brought no change in the girl's garb.

"Remember, little one, you will be left alone in the world some day," her mother would tell her, "and you will find it much easier to make your way as a boy than as a girl."

Mother and child drifted to Keokuk, Ia., and there the girl was placed in a school for boys. She attended this school for months before her secret was discovered and she was sent home. Her mother at once took her to another boys' school. A year or two later Frances was sent to a small college for boys in Iowa to be prepared for a professional career.

But there again her sex was learned and she had to leave. Then with her mother she took up the problem of earning a livelihood. For a time the girl was a "newsboy" in Chicago. Then she tried her hand at bookkeeping. Finally she and her mother decided to return to France. Soon after their arrival in Paris the girl went to one of the race-courses. There she applied for a license as a jockey. A French nobleman became her sponsor, and as Frank Lamouche the girl carried the colors of her benefactor for several months, then gave it up and returned to America with her mother. From that time on mother and daughter suffered many hardships.

Four years ago the mother died and then Frances Lamouche become a mere vagabond and wanderer. She slept in barns, halls, anywhere, but at last, in despair, she went to the Convent of the Good Shepherd, at Columbus, and, confessing to the sisters that she was a girl, begged to be admitted. Life in the convent became irksome and she left to become a wanderer again.

The girl drifted to this city last November. She looked like a boy of 18 or 19. She worked first at one thing and then another, rarely remaining in one place more than a week. At first she got employment in the barroom of one of the large hotels. She served drinks and performed the tasks of a boy-of-all-work. There she fell ill and was sent to the hospital.

But even to the nurse Frances Lamouche did not tell all of her life-story. After her death a little package was found tucked away under her pillow. In it were letters from a young Frenchman in New Orleans, in which he begged to be permitted to come to her rescue and take her back to France. Other writers too offered to help her. Another letter was from Dr Mary Walker, of Oswego, N. Y., inviting the girl to come to her.

MEET WAS A FIZZLE

Only One Outside Association Team at Y.M.C.A. Last Night.

SEVEN WOULDN'T COME

Contest Boiled Down to Dual One Between Plainfield and Newark—Locals Swamped.

Of the nine organizations represented in the organization, only two took part in the inter-association gymnastic meet at the Y. M. C. A. last night. When the meet was decided upon at a meeting of the Physical Directors' Association of Northern New Jersey it was expected that Newark, Jersey City, Montclair, Orange, Morristown, New Brunswick, Passaic and Summit would join with Plainfield in a contest for the State championship. Newark's team was the only one that turned up at the gymnasium, besides Plainfield.

In the dual meet into which the affair degenerated through the circumstances in force, Newark took practically everything. Plainfield had a little look-in through Walter McNaughton, who was third in two of the three events. The latter carded were work on parallel bars, horizontal bar and side.

Four men teams competed. In the horizontal bar work, E. Kettner, of Newark, was first; G. E. Ketcham, of Newark, was second, and Walter McNaughton, Plainfield, third. On the sidehorse, Ketcham was first; F. Presch, Newark, second; D. C. Long, Newark, third. On the parallel bars, Ketcham was first; Presch, second; McNaughton, third.

Considerable disappointment, to describe his feelings mildly, is felt by Physical Director Henckel, over the fizzling of the meet. His feelings are shared by the members of the team. The officials who accompanied the Newark team were just as disappointed.

"What those fellows need," said one of them to a reporter, after the meet, "is a roast and then a boost."

No word of explanation or regret was received from the non-appearing associations. They simply abstained from entering their teams. The entries closed Tuesday, and when Mr. Henckel saw that Newark was the only association entered, he understood then that the meet was not to be more than a dual affair.

The Physical Directors' Association held a similar meet in Montclair last year. All the associations took part.

BOROUGH AGITATING SEWER SYSTEM PLAN

MR. ARNOLD'S REMARKS IN THE COUNCIL LEAD TO POSTAL CARD CANVASS.

Acting upon instructions from the Borough Council, Collector George F. Brown is conducting a postal card canvass of one district in North Plainfield, in order to obtain a comparison between the cost of the cesspool system now in use and the cost of a sewer system, if such should be installed. Every real estate owner within the territory bounded by Somerset street, Greenbrook road, Grove street and Green brook has been asked to give the amount he has expended during a stated period, both for cleaning and for building or repairing cesspools. The aggregate is to be compared with the amount the borough would have to expend in maintaining bonds to cover the cost of a sewer system for the purpose of showing that the latter is much the more economical without taking its advantages into consideration.

The subject of a borough sewer system was broached at the last Council meeting and there is a growing sentiment in favor of it. Chairman Arnold, of the street committee, declared the matter is one that demands immediate attention and the postal card canvass is one of the direct results of his remarks. Several other plans are in contemplation for fact-learning and it is hoped to have them in shape previous to calling a public meeting to discuss the subject.

Minister Refuses Call.

Rev. Lester Girard Leggett, formerly of Plainfield, now located at Nebraska City, Neb., has just refused a call to a large Presbyterian church at Girard, Kansas.

In reply to inquiries we have pleasure in announcing that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is like the solid preparation of that admirable remedy in that it cleanses and heals membranes affected by nasal catarrh. There is no drying or sneezing. The Liquid Cream Balm is adapted to use by patients who have trouble in inhaling through the nose and prefer spraying. The price, including spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

MERCHANTS' BAN ON "ADV." GRAFT

Agree Not to Take Space in Programmes, Circulars, Cards, Etc.

USE NEWSPAPERS ONLY

Druggists and Lumber and Coal Dealers Lead in Crusade Against "N. G." Advs.

Firmly convinced that they derive no benefit from the practice, local druggists and the dealers in lumber and coal have agreed among themselves to "taboo" all advertising schemes that practically amount to graft for organizations or individuals. Hereafter they will discard all programmes, circulars, cards and similar affairs and depend upon the newspapers alone to keep their business before the public eye. Their action will undoubtedly be followed by many local merchants in other lines as they have it under consideration.

The programme and circular form of so-called advertising has gone almost to extremes in this city and it has become so costly that it demanded attention. Almost every society or organization that plan an entertainment or dance arranges to have part of the expense borne by the merchants by having friends of the different ones secure an "ad" from them for a programme. It is always stated that there will be so many hundred or so many thousand of the programmes printed but nine times out of ten a few dozen is all that is gotten before the public. In nearly every instance the merchant is unable to refuse as it is generally a customer who makes the request for the ad. and to say "no" would be to lose that much trade.

The druggists have been especially bothered in this way and the soliciting of advertisements became such an expensive nuisance that the matter was taken up at their last meeting.

All agreed to have nothing more to do with these floating schemes and to devote the money thus saved to legitimate newspaper space. The coal and lumber dealers followed suit and every line of trade will be included before many months.

EDMUND YOUNG WEDS MISS FLORENCE BENNETT

CEREMONY TAKES PLACE AT THE HOME OF THE BRIDE'S PARENTS.

With only relatives and near friends in attendance, Miss Florence Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett, of Norwood avenue, and Edmund D. Young, of South Second street, were married April 12, the ceremony taking place at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was the officiating pastor.

Miss Eva Dunavan, of East Second street, acted as bridesmaid, and John Young, of Westfield, brother of the groom, was best man. Beyond these there were no attendants. Miss Bennett and Miss Dunavan were both gowned in blue silk, trimmed with cream lace and satin. The former carried bride roses and her attendant pink roses. Decorations of smilax and greens were in the parlor and dining room, the bridal party standing beneath a floral bell.

The ceremony was followed by a reception, during which Mr. and Mrs. Young were the recipients of hearty congratulations. They will make their home on West Front street in a house recently purchased and furnished by the groom. Both young people are widely known throughout the city, principally through musical talents. They have been members of Trinity church choir, Mr. Young as tenor soloist and his bride as soprano. The numerous presents they received included a handsome McKinley rocker, the gift of the choir.

Military Tournament.

The ninth annual tournament of the Military Athletic League will be given at Madison Square Garden, New York, the week beginning Monday, May 8. The military programme will include all the attractive features that each year has increased the popularity of the Military Show and made it a feature of public interest. The athletic committee, of which Captain John J. Dixon is chairman, has, under instructions from the board of governors of the league, established the following standards for the athletic events: 100-yard run, 11¾ seconds; 220-yard run, 26 seconds; 440-yard run, 59 seconds; 880-yard run, 2 minutes, 15 seconds; 1 mile run, 5 minutes; and 1-mile bicycle, 2 minutes, 35 seconds.

DIVIDE ON PEW RENTS

Lively Discussion at Meeting of Congregational Church.

WILL RENT SITTINGS

President of the Board of Trustees Opposes Plan to Charge for Seats.

Pew renting was established at the Congregational church by a divided vote of the Congregational Society, in annual session April 12. This is the first time in the history of the church, which was started twenty-five years ago, that a rule setting a price on the sittings has been put in force. The proposition to establish the renting system was vigorously opposed by J. E. Morse, president of the Board of Trustees and a third of those who voted on it supported him when the ballot was taken.

The proposition to rent the seatings was embodied in a report made by the committee appointed last year to put the finances of the church society on a basis of firmer character. Alexander Millar, chairman of the committee, read the report. It recommended that the society "place a reasonable valuation on all sittings in the church," because that seemed the best way of providing an adequate income of steady character. For several years, Mr. Millar explained in expatiating on the report and its recommendations, the Board of Trustees have had to face a deficit before each yearly meeting, and it was felt that something should be done to bring the regular receipts up.

"Before we go any further," said Mr. Morse, after Mr. Millar had paused for questions, "let us get one of the rules of this church out of the way. In 1895 the first rule put on the list prepared then read 'No pews shall be rented in this church.' That hasn't been repealed, and I don't see how you can consider this proposition until it is."

J. M. Whiton, in the chair, ruled that the adoption of the recommendation would, or could easily be made to wipe out the rule.

To draw discussion on the proposition, Mr. Millar moved the adoption of the recommendation.

"Well, I for one am opposed to the committee in this thing," said Mr. Morse. "I am opposed to pew renting on principle. In this case I can see no reason for it. I don't think the proposition to establish renting is fair to the Board of Trustees. If they can't be trusted to manage the finances of a little $8,000 corporation turn them out and put in others. But don't call in seven or eight different members of the congregation to 'assist' them."

W. B. Wadsworth spoke after Mr. Morse, in a conciliatory strain. He said he felt it was ethically right to keep the sittings unpriced, but consideration of the difficulties which faced the church society in in its yearly financing compelled him to side with the committee. He begged the congregation to consider the question in a spirit of harmony, and accept the result of the vote without bitter feelings.

E. L Suffern spoke in a similar strain. After Mr. Millar had made a half a dozen explanations of the recommendation, to make it clear to questioners, the question was put.

Thirty-one votes were cast for it and fifteen against.

According to the committee's figures, the rentals will yield $3,800 a year. A number of the congregation now pay, in voluntary subscription, more than their sittings would bring in rents. It is understood that these contributions will continue, and they are figured in the total of expected income.

The sum named is believed to be adequate for the needs of the church through the year. Treasurer M. C. VanArsdale reported that $4,231 was spent last year, but the church made unusual expenditures last year in painting and redecoration, and that is about $1,000 more than the normal yearly expense. The income last year was a little more than enough to cover the expenditures.

The sittings will be assigned by a committee of five. W. B. Wadsworth, E. B. Morgan, M. C. VanArsdale and Miss Jessie McIntosh were appointed for the committee. The fifth member will be named later. A committee of three, consisting of Alexander Millar, F. A. Weeks and Alonzo Weseman, will seat the seating committee to prevent possible criticism of the former on the score of self-favoritism in allotting pews. This second committee is the continuance of an old Congregational custom.

When the pew question had been decided, Mr. Morse, as chairman of the committee of three appointed to consider ways, means and plans for the enlargement of the church, one of three sets prepared by Architect C. P. Karr, of Netherwood, was too expensive to be considered. It is estimated that the work would cost $25,000. The committee felt it could not recommend that plan.

The report halts the enlargement project for the present, at least. It is considered possible that the church will vote later on the enlargement to the northward. Mr. Karr was voted $100 from the building fund for expenses incurred in drawing the plans. The members of the committee besides Mr. Morse were F. A. Weeks and M. C. VanArsdale.

The elections at the society meeting were as follows: Trustees, E. L. Morse, J. U. Freleigh and Charles Steiner; clerk, Roland D. Rice. After the meeting the board organized as follows: President, J. M. Morse; secretary, E. L. Morgan; treasurer, M. C. VanArsdale. Mr. Morse and Mr. VanArsdale were re-elected.

At the brief meeting of the church, preceding the society meeting, the following elections were made: Deacons, for two years, E. K. Fowlison, H. B. Morgan; members of the Official Board, H. C. Nomer, G. P. Fisher, Curtis Bates; trustees, E. K. Fowlison, J. M. Morse; clerk, Roland D. Rice.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor, presided over the church meeting. He made a brief but very optimistic report.

FORMER PATROLMAN DIES AT WHITEHOUSE

END COMES TO GEORGE W. LUNGER AFTER TWO YEARS' ILLNESS.

George W. Lunger, for six years one of the best known and most popular patrolmen on the local police force, died Wednesday April 12, at his home in Whitehouse. Death was due to a complication of diseases from which he had suffered for nearly two years.

He was born at Cherryille, Hunterdon County, forty-two years ago and lived there the greater part of his life, being engaged in farming. He then moved to this city and was appointed to the police force, serving with a clean record until ill health compelled him to resign. He was of a genial disposition, always fond of a joke and he was highly thought of by his fellow-patrolmen and numerous friends.

Mr. Lunger was twice married. His first wife was killed by lightning while letting down a window sash during a heavy thunder storm. Two children survive him by this union, Harry and Raymond Lunger, both of Plainfield. He afterward married Miss Maria Swackhamer, sister of former Assemblyman Swackhamer, of the borough, who survives him. Some time ago when Mr. Lunger believed his end was near, he made the request that after he died, an autopsy be performed so the physicians might know the direct cause of his death. This was done Thursday.

The funeral services were held from the home at Whitehouse Saturday afternoon at 3:15 and were in charge of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of this city, of which he was a member.

MISS YOUNG WEDS.

She Becomes the Wife of Sidney E. Frazee, of West Front Street.

Miss Nettie M. Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Young, of Central avenue, and Sidney Eageltou Frazee, of West Front street, were quietly married April 12 by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street.

The only attendants were the Misses Lizzie and Viola VanWickle, of Central avenue. After a short wedding trip, the couple will reside with the bride's parents. The bride is a member of Trinity Reformed church and Sunday-school.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 23: "The Power of His Resurrection"—Rom. vi, 3-13; Phil. iii, 10.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

Selection for Easter.

"That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection!"

That is the aspiration of Paul before which all other ambitions are forgotten. He thinks of Christ in the flesh as learning obedience through the things which He suffered, but now that He has accomplished redemption is seated at the right hand of God on high in a different mode of existence.

The earthly life of suffering has led to the glorified life above through resurrection. The one is the result of the other. Christ has found the secret of living. Man can live the God life here on this earth. One has done so. He has found the way to endure pain and privation. More than that, he has discovered that these are not fatal to happiness, but that the path of life leads through the midst of tribulation. Even death itself cannot keep the soul from its intended possessions. Death has been endured and it cannot extinguish life. Rather it is the gateway into larger existence.

Other men have died, but none as this Christ died. Other men have come back to consciousness after they had passed into the realm called death, but none ever came as this Christ has come. For them it meant only a few years of the same old earthly life and a final sleep, with no awakening here. This man has known to the full all there is in death and then has appeared among men with transcendent power of unending existence. He has penetrated the mystery that has held all men lifelong in bondage to fear. Death is not the end. Life lies the other side, and that life larger and fuller and freer.

This fullness of life which the Christ has found on the other side the grave and which He now lives at the right hand of the Father He calls upon all his followers to share now with Him.

Baptism, according to the notion of Paul, is the assuming of this new life and a dying to the old desires and aims of mere worldly living. We have in the baptismal washing done away with all the old and have risen with Christ into the new realm. Life has changed its meaning for us. We are no more to obey the lusts of the flesh, but to bring all powers under obedience to Christ, as He brought all His powers into subjection to the Father Eternal.

This is transformation indeed. It is not visionary, though based on vision. Others had testified that Jesus had died and most surely risen from the dead. If true, this carried with it the most tremendous consequences of any fact the world ever had proclaimed to it. It was revolutionary of all life and religion. It made a different world for men to live in, and they could no longer go on doing as they had done before. None saw this more clearly than Saul of Tarsus, but he had not seen the risen Christ. No man's word could make this credible to his mind. Whoever declared it was worse than any other deceiver, for he was unsettling the foundations of the world and overturning all its settled facts.

One day, mind filled with the wild impossibility of such a thing and soul stirred to resentment of the attempts of men like Stephen to throw religion into new channels, he saw the Christ. His own eyes beheld. Vision, do you call it? Why, yes, to be sure it was vision. That means eyesight, but not illusion, not hallucination. No matter what any other man of the company saw or did not see, he knew to his dying day what he saw at that time and place. He knew that Christ was living.

That fact changed all the currents of his life. No other explanation of the subsequent career of Paul is possible. No soberer man ever gave testimony among men. No man ever backed up his knowledge more persistently or consistently. He becomes the great witness to the whole non-Jewish world of the fact of supreme importance to every man—that Jesus Christ was dead and is now alive, nevermore to die.

Eyesight is not enough to establish such an incident. To that must be added insight or spiritual vision which penetrates below the surface and finds the essence of things. Whoever had this power in greater measure than he except that same one who now becomes his Master?

Have you seen the sight yourself?

You may know the certainty that He has risen if you will. This shall be Easter indeed to you if in your inmost soul you do cry "that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings."

Its Own Best Evidence.

Biblical truth, shining in its own light and made living by the power of the Holy Spirit, is itself its own best evidence. Historic and other arguments are of great service in the refutation of objections and in certain lines of defense, but the truth itself, and that alone, is likely to produce conviction and persuasion.—Sunday School Times.

AUDUBON SOCIETY

HISTORY OF ORGANIZATION DEVOTED TO BIRD PROTECTION.

Friends of Feathered Tribe Eager to Make Stand for Their Defense—Enthusiasm Dies Out—A Present Revival of Interest.

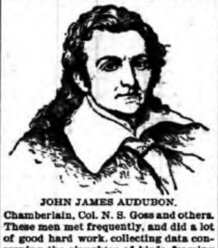
It is now more than 19 years since the original Audubon society was formed. Even as early as 1883. Forest and Stream was calling attention of the public to the fact that myriads of swallows and other small birds were being killed to supply the milliners with material for hat decoration, and urging the necessity for bird protection in America. During the next two years, this subject received the close attention it deserved, from many members of the newly-organized American Ornithologists' union, and others now famous in one department of natural history or another. Among these men were the late Dr. Elliott Coues, Dr. C. Hart Merriam, Dr. George B. Grinnell, William Brewster, Eugene P. Bicknell, William Dutcher, Dr. A. K. Fisher, Dr. J. A. Allen, George B. Sennett, Frank M. Chapman, Montague



JOHN JAMES AUDUBON.

Chamberlain, Col. N. S. Goss and others. These men met frequently, and did a lot of good hard work collecting data concerning the slaughter of birds, framing laws for protection, writing strong articles, securing appropriations from congress to further the cause of bird protection, and in a score of ways awakening an interest in the feathered population, which they found to be so rapidly decreasing.

George Bird Grinnell, editor of Forest and Stream, was among the most actve, and the columns of his paper were always open, as indeed they are to this day, to writers able to preach the gospel of the preservation of birds. To the untiring efforts of this publication was due in no small measure such success as attended the early efforts to prevent the slaughter of birds for mercantile purposes. On February 11, 1886, it published an editorial entitled: "The Audubon Society," one paragraph of which ran as follows:

"We propose the formation of an association for the protection of wild birds and their eggs, which shall be called the Audubon society. Its membership is to be free to everyone who is willing to lend a helping hand in forwarding the objects for which it is formed. These objects shall be to prevent, so far as possible (1) the killing of any wild birds not used for food; (2) the destruction of nests or eggs of any wild bird, and (3) the wearng of feathers as ornaments or trimming for dress."

Six months after the appearance of the famous editorial in Forest and Stream, the Audubon Society for the Protection of Birds was incorporated in the city of New York, with a membership of 11,000. The incorporators were George Bird Grinnel, Edward R. Wilbur, Charles B. Reynolds, Joel A. Allen and William D. Page.

In January, 1887, additional impetus was given to the great movement by the appearance of the Audubon Magazine, a periodical published by the Forest and Stream company, and expressly designed to be the organ of the new society.

In 1888 interest in the movement began to wane. The novelty had worn off, the press devoted little space to the subject of bird protection, and many people became discouraged because, in spite of the good work which had been done, birds were still slaughtered by thousands to satisfy the demands of fashion. Subscriptions to the Audubon Magazine fell off to such an extent that, on the completion of the second volume, in December, 1888, it was discontinued, and organized effort for the protection of American birds was for the time being at an end.

One of the first results of the revival of public interest in birds was the organization, in January, 1896, of a State Audubon society in Massachusetts.

In the fall of the same year a similar society was organized in Pennsylvania, and in the following year Audubon societies were organized in New York, Illinois, New Hampshire, Wisconsin, the district of Columbia, New Jersey, Iowa, Minnesota, West Virginia and Rhode Island. All the states east of the Mississippi are now represented, except Alabama and Mississippi, and in the whole country there are only about a dozen states and territories which have not thus put themselves on record as being in favor of the protection of our wild birds. As an interest in the welfare of birds is a certain indication of the intelligence of the people of the community where the interest is manifested, let us hope that the few remaining states and territories will not long remain conspicuous by their indifference in this matter.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 23.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The power of His resurrection.—Rom. vi, 3-13; Phil. iii, 10. (Easter meeting.)

The resurrection of Christ was a glorious manifestation of divine power. In his salutation to the Romans (i, 4) the apostle Paul says of Christ that He was "declared to be the Son of God, with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." And Paul desired to know Him and the power of His resurrection. The resurrection of Christ was not only a manifestation of divine power, but that resurrection inevitably became a great power in the life of Christ's church and of His people.

Christ's resurrection is a power as a testimonial. It was God's crowning testimony that Jesus of Nazareth was His Son and that the gospel was the power of God unto salvation. An unrisen Christ would have meant a vain faith. "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." But a risen Christ means an established faith against which even the gates of hell cannot prevail. Therefore "thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory" over all doubt and opposition, for "Christ is risen from the dead."

Christ's resurrection is a power as a symbol. It symbolizes spiritual resurrection and stimulates it. Man is dead in trespasses and in sins. Christ's resurrection from the dead is a type of man's resurrection from spiritual death. "We are buried with Him by baptism into death; that, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." "Let not, therefore, sin reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof; neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin, but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God."

Christ's resurrection is a power as an assurance. "It is the center of our most cherished hopes, the evidence of our immortality and the earnest of the resurrection of the body." "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." Christ the first fruits, and after Him those that are His. Blessed hope! It is not all of life to live nor all of death to die. With the setting of life's sun the star of immortality rises to dispel the darkness of the tomb.

Christ's resurrection is a power as a comfort. Paul used the fact of a future life with Christ after His second coming as a comfort for the Thessalonians concerning their departed loved ones. At such times we may apply the same balm to our wounded hearts. He is risen. He lives. Our loved ones, gone, live with Him, and this joy awaits all who live a life of faith and service in Him. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

BIBLE READINGS.

Job xix, 26, 27; Ps. xvii, 15; Isa. xxvi, 19; Dan. xii, 1-3; Matt. xxii, 31, 32. Luke xiv, 1-14; John xi, 19-27; Rom. vi, 1-11; I Cor. xv, 12-220; I Pet. i, 1-9.

An Ardent Endeavorer.

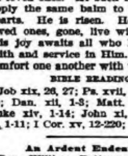
Rev. William Patterson, D. D., the pastor of Bethany Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, often spoken of as "John Wanamaker's church" by reason of the large part the merchant prince had in its establishment, is a long time Christian Endeavor enthusiast and a preacher of Christian Endeavor principles for many years. Dr. Patterson is much in demand at Christian Endeavor conventions and not infrequently has been a speaker at the monster international gatherings.



REV. WILLIAM PATTERSON, D. D.

Forward.

I for one feel that we should put aside dress parades and frills and furbelows and get into what some one calls "downright, upright, outright, all right business" during these months ahead. Our enlistment in the ranks calls for this. Christian Endeavor is not a playground, nor is it a comfortable place in which to dream, nor yet a gently flowing stream on which we may drift. It is a battlefield; it is a sphere for toil and sacrifice. Larger unions, increased membership, better service, more Quiet Hour Comrades and Tenth Legioners—the common words have already turned into music. Let them sing for us the battle hymn to the melody of which we shall march forward to a splendid victory.—Rev. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck, D. D., in Christian Endeavor World.

Endeavor In the Navy Yard.

For ten years Hollond Memorial Endeavorers, Philadelphia, have been holding services in shine and shade in the barracks at League Island navy yard, on the ships, and in the camps Sundays and Thursdays without an omission. They have spent $100 a year in car fare alone. They have distributed great quantities of good literature. It has been a splendid service, most thoroughly enjoyed and greatly blessed.

The Spirit of the Leaders.

It ought to be known to Endeavorers everywhere that on the recent trip in the interest of the World's Union work Dr. Clark and Mr. Shaw paid their own traveling expenses. Every penny of more than $7,000 which they raised for the foreign work will go directly to the object for which given.

SHE WASN'T KIDNAPPED

Thrilling Mystery That Fizzled Under Investigation.

TWO KATE FINNS

Cincinnati Authorities Thought Missing Irish Girl Was Clue in a Personal.

On April 11 Chief Kiely received a telegram from the Cincinnati authorities asking him to unravel the mysterious disappearance of Kate Finn, an Irish girl who arrived on the Oceanic in New York the Wednesday before, and who was supposed to have gone to Plainfield with a woman posing as her sister. The telegram said the Finn girl had sisters in Cincinnati, and was expected there. The woman she went away with, the telegram said, could not by any possibility have been a sister. Deep mystery surrounded the case, and a peculiar kidnapping affair seemed to have happened.

The night before the telegram arrived Chief Kiely had noticed a personal in the paper to the effect that Miss Kate Finn, of Ireland, was "visiting her sister on Somerset street." He remembered the personal, and sent Detective McCarthy to sleuth around the borough main street for Kate Finn.

McCarthy found Miss Finn. He also found three bona fide sisters, and an undoubted aunt. Miss Finn was quite certain that she was with her sisters, and had come to the place she set out to reach when she left Ireland. She didn't know anybody, sister or no sister, in Cincinnati.

Chief Kiely telegraphed to Cincinnati as follows:

"Finn girl here. So are three undoubted and bona fide sisters. Miss Finn doesn't know anybody in Cincinnati and wouldn't go there if her fare was paid."

Twenty minutes later he received this:

"Drop Finn case. Mystery cleared up. Another Kate Finn on the same boat with yours. She was lost in New York. She is hustling to Cincinnati as fast as she can travel."

Miss Finn is staying with her aunt, Mrs. William White, of Somerset street. Two of her sisters are the Misses Margaret and Annie Finn.

The Colonel Escaped.

Colonel Edwin Hine, general manager of the Public Service Corporation, heard an ominous cracking of the ceiling in his office at Newark Thursday afternoon, and sprang from his desk just in time to avoid a large section of the plaster falling on him. The plaster is supposed to have been weakened by the constant vibration of the building, as the offices are over the trolley terminal. A heavy safe was recently placed in the office room above that occupied by Colonel Hine. This, too, is thought to have contributed to the breaking of the plaster. Metal ceilings will be placed in the building.

BIG DEAL IS HELD UP

Judgment Against Heir Prevents Transferring of Title.

IMPROVEMENT STAYED

Title to Cadmus Tract Cannot be Obtained by Borough Syndicate at Present.

The extensive improvements planned for the West End of the borough by a syndicate, of which Charles W. McCutchen and Mayor Newton B. Smalley are among the partners, is likely to be held up for an indefinite time through legal complications arising over the passing of the deed which is delayed owing to the settlement of suit against Abram L. Cadmus, one of the heirs of the Cadmus estate which is involved in the deal.

The syndicate purchased among other property a large part of the Cadmus estate for $17,000, including the raceway, and it is planned to locate a lake thereon. There is still left of the estate property valued at $30,000, which is owned by Abram L. Cadmus, Miss Susie Cadmus and Alvin K. Hoagland.

The Fidelity Trust Company, of Newark, has been issuing the title for the transfer of the property and several appointments have been made to pass the deed, something interfering each time. It appears that Craig A. Marsh, Esq., some time ago secured a judgment of $5,000 for William B. Shafer, a miller, employed by Abram L. Cadmus, against the latter, and the mater is now in the Supreme Court on a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted. James P. Powers, Esq., and Robert McCarter, attorney-general, represent Mr. Cadmus, and they have asked Mr. Marsh to release his lien on the Cadmus property so that the deal can be closed with the syndicate, but Mr. Marsh has refused to do so, until the judgment for his client is satisfied.

Mr. Shafer's suit was the outcome of an accident he had at the Commercial Mills, owned and operated by Abram L. Cadmus, in which he claimed damages. Mr. Shafer won his case, but a new trial has been asked for, the decision of the Supreme Court now being awaited.

In the meantime, S. St. John McCutchen, Esq., representing the buyers, threatens to sue the Cadmus estate if it fails to transfer the property according to the terms of the sale. The heirs are willing and anxious to comply with the terms, if permitted to do so, but cannot until some disposition is made of the other matter in the Supreme Court.

Mr. Cadmus is reputed to be worth $50,000, in addition to interests in valuable property and it is claimed that he is many times worth the amount of the judgment. The heirs feel as though an injustice is being done them in tieing up the property in question, when there is enough besides to satisfy the judgment if enforced. W. S. Angleman, Esq., is looking after the interests of the Cadmus estate.

ELIZABETH PYTHIANS PLAN A BIG RALLY

PARADE TO BE A FEATURE OF CELEBRATION NEXT MONTH.

A movement is on foot among the Elizabeth K. of P. lodges of District No. 34, to holding a big Pythian rally in Turn Hall, in that city, the eve of Decoration Day, May 29. Committees from the three K. of P. lodges, Harmony, Olive Branch and Volunteer Lodge are making arrangements.

It is expected that there will be more than 1,000 knights from the surrounding counties participating in the event. The rally will be patterned after that which was recently held a Madison Square Garden in New York by the combined K. of P. lodges of Greater New York, an event which had no parallel in the history of the New York knights.

One of the features of the proposed rally will be the parade, which will take place on Monday afternoon, May 29. All the K. of P. companies of the Uniformed Rank from the surrounding counties will form a line of march, probably at Union Square, and march through the principal streets of the city. The parade will also be participated in by the members of the out-of-town lodges and there will be at least 500 men in line. All the State officers of the Knights of Pythias who were elected at the recent convention of the State lodge, will be present and will also take part in the parade. The evening will probably be set aside for the banquet and for the holding of exhibition drills. Handsome prizes for the companies giving the best exhibitions will be awarded and it is expected that there will be seven or eight companies competing.

NEW APARTMENT HOUSE

Handsome Big Structure is Planned for the East End.

BY IRA L. LaRUE

To be on Cottage Place—Purchase of 161 Feet of Land for Site.

The East End is to have a modern apartment house, the first of its kind. Ira L. LaRue, the real estate broker, is having plans for the structure drawn.

The house is to be built on Cottage place, just west of Washington street. He has purchased 161 feet of land there for the purpose.

The house is to be one of the handsomest of its kind in the city. It will be built of cement building blocks, like the kind used in the new building of VanZandt & Voorhees, on Park avenue.

It will contain eight apartments, of eight rooms each. The building blocks look like brownstone, and the structure, in its general effect, will be striking.

The appearance of the house will be especially attractive in the neighborhood selected. Cottage place has never been known for its aesthetic ensemble, and property owners will receive the news of Mr. LaRue's plans with a lot of pleasure.

It is expected that the house will be ready for occupancy early in the fall, if not sooner.

TOM HANNA NAMED BY THE COUNTY COMMITTEE

ACTION ON CENSUS SUPERVISORS NOMINATIONS—FIVE ENUMERATORS HERE.

The four supervisors of the State census in this county were named by the Republican County Committee at its meeting in Elizabeth Friday. Thomas Hanna, of this city, was awarded the Plainfield plum.

The supervisors will be appointed on the committee's recommendation, by the Secretary of State.

The supervisors will have the naming of the enumerators, through the Secretary of State. Mr. Hanna will name the men recommended by the city committee. As there will be an enumerator for every 4,000 people, estimated, Plainfield will be entitled to about five census takers.

Little else besides routine business, apart from the nomination of the supervisors, was done by the committee. The outing committee reported the signing of the contracts covering the steamer and the grove.

"Feet Washing" Needless.

Rev. Dr. E. E. Jackson, pastor of Mount Olive Baptist church, delivered a strong sermon Sunday, on the needlessness of "feet washing" as the beginning of religious gain. # NEW PASTORS GREETED

Rev. A. C. McCrea at First M. E. and Dr. Parsons at Grace.

HEARTY RECEPTIONS

Both Divines Make Favorable Impressions on Their Large Congregations.

Large congregations attended the services at the First M. E. church, Sunday, when the new pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, occupied the pulpit for the first time. He was cordially received by everyone, and at the close of the services he was surrounded by the members and friends of the congregation. Mr. McCrea has an attractive personality, is a strong and impressive preacher and is destined to be a successful pastor of the local church.

In the morning Mr. McCrea's sermon was appropriate to Palm Sunday, dwelling on the kingliness of Christ. His text was taken from a portion of the nineteenth verse of the twelfth chapter of John: "Behold, the World Has Gone After Him." The preacher dwelt upon the right of Christ to rule the world and of His spiritual life, and if He has this right to rule, he believed that all should be loyal to Him and give our love and tribute to Him. He also referred to the triumphal entry of Christ into Jerusalem and how He was worshipped and loved by many. He hoped that all would receive Christ into their hearts and homes and pay the homage due Him.

During the service the choir sang "The Palms," appropriate to the day. It has been arranged by the officers of the church to give Pastor McCrea and his wife a reception in Vincent chapel on Friday night, April 26, when all will be given an opportunity to meet them. The pastor and his family will take possession of the parsonage on Thursday, Dr. Snodgrass and his family leaving it the day before.

DR. PARSONS TAKES CHARGE.

The pulpit of Grace M. E. church was also occupied by a new pastor, the incumbent being Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons, at present residing at Newark, but who came East from the First M. E. church, Minneapolis, Minn. As a clergyman, he has had wide experience and is a man of exceptional ability. He at once impressed the congregation favorably through his forceful manner and convincing way of speaking.

In the morning, Dr. Parsons devoted the hour usually allotted for sermon to a talk, outlining the duties of the pastor and the attitude of the congregation in church work. At night he delivered an excellent sermon, dwelling on the relationship of God and His people.

Following both services, Dr. Parsons greeted all the members of the church and a formal reception will be held later. He has made arrangements to move here from Newark on Wednesday or Thursday.

JOHN GOODWIN LOSES AGAIN ON APPEAL

CONVICTION IN BOROUGH RECORDER'S COURT IS AFFIRMED.

Justice Pitney, of the Supreme Court, has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the verdict of conviction in the case of the Mayor and Council of North Plainfield against John Goodwin, charged with violating the borough ordinance in preventing the removal of obstructions from the highway, when Street Commissioner Barry ordered that the street be cleared. The trouble in question occurred near the Grove street bridge and in front of the Christian church, while Charles Bebring was attempting to move a house from the city into the borough.

The decision of the Supreme Court puts the costs of the appeal on the defendant.

Inspecting Roads.

Elijah C. Hutchinson, State road commissioner, and Robert A. Meeker, of this city, State supervisor of roads, have begun the inspection of the macadam roads in Mercer County. The roads were built under the State-aid law and are viewed for the purpose of ascertaining what repairs are needed. Under the new road law the State may withhold aid from those counties which fail to properly repair the roads already built. Commissioner Hutchinson will inspect the roads in every county in the State. Yesterday in company with Supervisor Meeker, he went through Morris County. Essex, Monmouth, Middlesex, Burlington and Cape May Counties have already been viewed.

—There are thirty-three patients at Muhlenberg Hospital at present under treatment.

HAD BIG BEAR'S HIDE

Courier From President Comes Through Deep Snow.

LOEB GONE OUT FOR CONFERENCE.

Hunting So Far Enjoyable and Successful, but Snowstorm Holds Party to Their Original Camping Ground.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo., April 19.—Dispatches from President Roosevelt's hunting camp on the Charles Penny ranch, twenty-three miles southwest of Newcastle, reached Secretary Loeb last night. Elmer Chapman, the courier selected to bear messages between the president and his secretary, has arrived over the Colorado Midland railroad at Glenwood Springs.

It was learned from him that the president's hunting trip so far has been successful, for strapped across Chapman's saddle was a fresh bearskin which was brought out by the courier. Chapman said that this pelt was the only one that had been taken, but he would not say the animal had been brought down by the president's gun. It was taken for granted that this was the case, for otherwise it was not believed the skin would have been sent to Glenwood Springs.

Representatives of newspapers at Newcastle at once prepared to accompany the courier to Mr. Loeb's headquarters. The president's party has not yet shifted camp from the place where it was first located.

A fresh trail had been found, and the hunters had taken it up before Chapman's departure for Newcastle. Because of the heavy snow east of the camp it is not likely it will be changed for several days. The indications are that plenty of sport will be found in the present surroundings.

The courier remained here overnight, and Secretary Loeb has accompanied him to Newcastle, and together they will ride to the hunting camp. He has a number of matters to lay before the president which his signature is needed to important documents.

Follows Roosevelt's Example.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 19.—President Diaz and a party of friends left here last night on a special train for Paruque Station, on the Cuernavaca branch of the Mexican Central, where they will begin a week's deer hunt in the mountains. The president is in excellent health and counts on a week of good sport.

HISSES FOR HYDE.

General Agents of Equitable Uphold Alexander.

NEW YORK, April 19.—After a meeting in which James H. Hyde, in the face of pronounced hostility and without a single supporter, defended himself and assailed his enemies, the general agents of the Equitable Life Assurance society in session at the Hotel Savoy unanimously passed a resolution upholding President James W. Alexander against the young millionaire who called for his resignation.

James Hazen Hyde was hissed when he got up to make a speech at the meeting. When the hissing quieted down he turned to the crowd and said:

"I consider that the greatest compliment that you could pay me, for the man who led you in your hisses is not considered a good man at all. If I have done wrong, kick me out. If Mr. Alexander or Mr. Tarbell have done wrong, kick them out. That is what you are here for. You are to decide."

Mr. Hyde then left the meeting, saying as he left the elevator:

"If they want me they can send for me. They know where to find me."

Mr. Tarbell looked much perturbed, although he would not give his reason for leaving.

Want Paul Jones' Body.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 19.—Commander Charles J. Badger, U. S. N., acting superintendent of the Naval academy in the absence of Captain W. H. Brownson, superintendent, has expressed the hope that the plan to give the remains of Paul Jones a final resting place in the Naval academy may be consummated and said that this is, in his opinion, the most appropriate place in the country for the last resting place for the body of the father of the American navy.

Vanderbilt's Grandson Dead.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 19.—Oakley Parker, a grandson of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, died suddenly last night of heart disease in his apartments in the Carlton hotel. # FORMOSA CABLE CUT

Japanese Flotilla Reported Off Sampaloc Point.

TOKYO RESENTS CONDUCT OF FRANCE

French Aid to Russian Fleet May Call Britain's Assistance For Japan In Terms of Their Treaty of Alliance.

LONDON, April 19.—A Singapore dispatch this morning says that Russian agents have cut the cable between Pachau and Formosa.

A dispatch from Manila says, "Six-teen Japanese cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers have been seen scouting off Sampaloc point."

A Manila special dispatch says that three war vessels were sighted at Batangas at 4 o'clock this morning. Their nationality is unknown.

Discussing the presence of Russian warships at Kamranh bay, the press of Tokyo declares that the use of the island of Madagascar by the Russian squadron was a direct and prolonged violation of the principle of neutrality, but on account of the distance Japan in that instance simply lodged a protest.

They, however, insist that Russia is now using Kamranh bay as a base for action against Japan and says she intends to use it as the point for effecting a junction with the remaining division of the squadron.

If the use of Kamranh bay is continued Japan must regard its neutrality as completely ignored, and Japan will not be obliged to respect its neutrality.

Violations of neutrality in distant ports are not important, but when close to the zone of war it is impossible to view them with the same leniency.

The newspapers further declare that France is lending the Russians efficient assistance, thus actually joining issue with Russia against Japan, and that it is now necessary for Japan to notify Great Britain and obtain her cooperation according to the terms of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

"Protests," the papers assert, "are unavailing. The time for action has come."

A Paris dispatch says that the French government has taken every precaution to secure the observance of neutrality in French waters in Indo-China.

At St. Petersburg a mounted police squad attempted to suppress a demonstration of employees of the Putiloff Iron works after they had attended the funeral of a victim of a crane accident. A conflict ensued, the workmen firing revolvers and the police using the flats of their swords. Many were injured and arrested.

Lieutenant Leontieff, an officer of the aristocratic Preobraiensky regiment and brother of Mlle. Leontieff, who was arrested for connection with a terrorist plot, has been buried at St. Petersburg. The officer was exiled by his brother officers to resign after the arrest of his sister and thereupon committed suicide. Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch attended the funeral.

THE REAL MRS. HOCH.

Katherine Von Palo Claims to Be the Original Wife.

CHICAGO, April 19.—A claim to be the original Mrs. Johann Hoch was made by Mrs. Katherine von Palo of Wisconsin. She identified Hoch at the county jail as the man who married her in Germany in 1875 and twice deserted her. The woman says Hoch's real name is Karl von Palo. Before a word was said when the woman confronted him at the jail Hoch threw up his hands, crying:

"Gott in himmel! She is a fraud!"

"Come here, Karl," said Mrs. Von Palo in German. "You are my husband. Come here."

Hoch shrugged his shoulders, turned about and walked away.

"That is the man who married me in Germany thirty years ago," said the woman. "We were young and happy then. Karl was twenty-two and I was nineteen. I loved him, and I believe I could love him again. Ach, my poor Karl!"

Three Wounded at Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Three persons are seriously wounded, one of them, it is believed, fatally, as the result of a shooting and an attempt at self destruction which occurred here. The injured are Rutledge Robinson, aged sixty-two, an inmate of the Soldiers' home; Kate Norbeck, single, aged twenty-eight, and Frank Jones, white, aged fifty-two years.

Death to Mosquitoes.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 19.—The local health department has begun a war upon mosquitoes to prevent if possible a repetition of the malaria epidemic here last year. Experts have been engaged to treat breeding spots on swamp lands with oil, and every citizen has been called upon to kill mosquitoes which spring about their houses or dooryards.

James I. Raymond Dead.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 19.—James I. Raymond, head of the house of A. A. Vantine & Co. of New York, who was operated upon for appendicitis last Saturday night, died at his home here last night. Mr. Raymond's condition somewhat improved, and it was believed he would recover, but a relapse came last night, and he died suddenly.

A New Zion City.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 19.—John Alexander Dowie of Chicago has closed negotiations and obtained options on a tract of 2,000,000 acres in the state of Tamapias, where he proposes to found a new Zion City.

DEATH FOR KALEIEFF

Assassin of Grand Duke Sergius Secretly Condemned.

PRINCESS SHOT AT GENERAL TREPOFF

Russian Women of High Rank, Converts to Terrorism, Attempt Life of St. Petersburg's Governor, but Design Failed.

MOSCOW, April 19.—The assassin of the Grand Duke Sergius has been tried by the supreme court here and sentenced to death. The trial was secret.

The only persons present through the trial were members of the entourage of the late Grand Duke Sergius and counsel, of whom two were assigned the accused assassin, Kaleieff. The prisoner's mother was not admitted, but remained in the corridor. Senator Dider presided. Senator Shchegiovitoff, procurator general of the department of cassation, was the senate prosecutor. When Kaleieff was arraigned he replied: "I am not a criminal, and you are not my judges. I am your prisoner. We have a civil war. I am a prisoner of war, not a criminal."

Twelve witnesses were examined. Prior to passing sentence the president asked Kaleieff if he would repeat the action if he were given his liberty. He replied, "Without doubt I would repeat it if ordered by the revolutionary committee, to which I am attached."

When sentence of death was passed Kaleieff shouted, "Execute your judgment as openly as I have acted before the eyes of all."

The date of execution has not been specified.

The identity of Kaleieff was established through the discovery of a photograph belonging to Savinkoff, who had been his comrade both at the university and in exile. When Kaleieff was charged with his identity he admitted it, saying immediately, "Savinkoff has been arrested."

The police later thought they had captured Savinkoff, and so announced publicly, but it turns out that the man held under that name was another and that Savinkoff, to whom Kaleieff evidently confided his intention of killing Grand Duke Sergius, is still safe abroad.

Alfred Henry McCullough, the man killed March 11 by the accidental explosion of a bomb at the Hotel Bristol, whose real name was Bauman, was the chief of the terrorists, having in charge of the manufacture of bombs. Kaleieff, who killed Grand Duke Sergius, also belonged to the same group.

After Bauman's death his duties devolved upon Mlle. Leontieff (daughter of General Leontieff, who recently was appointed governor of Yakutsk, eastern Siberia), who became a convert to terrorism during her stay at Lucerne, Switzerland.

Perhaps the most romantic feature of the incident is the fact that Mlle. Leontieff converted two nieces of Governor General Trepoff, Mlle. Trepoff and Princess Denisheff, to the doctrine of assassination and after the arrest of her mentor Mlle. Trepoff actually attempted the life of her uncle, firing two shots at him, both of which missed. Thereupon the two girls became panic stricken and attempted suicide, Mlle. Trepoff throwing herself under a train and Princess Denisheff shooting herself. Neither of them succeeded in their design.

SCHANZ LOSES LICENSE

By a Vote of 6 to 5 An Excise Muddle is Ended.

MR. TYLER'S MOTION

His Plan to Refuse Application Supported on Vote by Bullock, Daniel, Hibbard, Murphy and Wilson.

Charles Schanz, who has had considerable trouble in securing a renewal of his saloon license for the building on Park avenue, owned by Mr. Gilbert, was refused a license at the meeting of the Common Council, last Friday, and his fee, $1,000, was returned to him. Mr. Tyler, chairman of the police committee, introduced the matter by moving that Mr. Schanz's license be refused. He made no explanation in offering the motion. Mr. Gilbert immediately entered a motion that the license be granted.

The vote stood six to five for refusal, Councilmen Bullock, Hibbard, Murphy, Tyler, Wilson and Daniel voting in the affirmative, and Councilmen Gloak, Higham, Charles C. Randolph, Frank DeW. Randolph and Tolles voting against Mr. Tyler's motion.

Then the question of returning the $1,000 license fee to Mr. Schanz arose, and Mr. Tyler moved that the sum be refunded. Councilmen Gloak, Charles C. Randolph and Frank DeW. Randolph voted no, while Councilmen Bullock, Hibbard, Murphy, Higham, Tyler, Wilson, Tolles and Daniel supported the motion.

This action settles a matter that has been under consideration since March. It was Mr. Schanz's proposition to erect an iron gate at the entrance to the driveway adjoining the building he proposed to occupy at No. 216, if granted a transfer from No. 136, which is to be torn down, but he met opposition on the part of the property-owners nearby who objected to having the driveway closed. The matter got into the courts and at the solicitation of Mr. Schanz the Common Council petitioned to have a writ of certiorari set aside which had been obtained by Mrs. Mary G. Hatfield, owner of adjoining property.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reported on the settlement of this matter, stating that while the defendant in the action paid the costs, the city was re-imbursed by Mr. Schanz's counsel. Mr. Marsh's report was filed.

GOVERNOR STOKES WILL HEAD JUNIORS

AND PLAINFIELDERS WILL BE IN LINE AT ELIZABETH CELEBRATION.

The Junior Order United American Mechanics will endeavor to have a division of their own in the parade on the occasion of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown at Elizabeth on June 8, and the Plainfield Councils will be asked to take a place in line. Governor Stokes, the most distinguished "Junior" in the State, will be present, and if the "Junior division" is arranged he will ride at its head.

A committee of five has been appointed from each of the five Elizabeth councils—Orient, Elizabeth, Scott, Unity and Mack—and they are busily engaged in making preparations for the event.

The combined membership of the Elizabeth councils numbers over 1,000 and there are several hundred living in Elizabeth who are affiliated with out-of-town councils.

The councils at Rahway, Roselle, Cranford, Westfield, Scotch Plains, New Providence and Summit will also be largely represented, while the combined councils of Newark will send several hundred. It is expected that the Junior's demonstration will be the biggest they ever made in this section.

Senator Smith's Fees.

United States District Court Judge William M. Lanning has fixed the fees for former Senator James Smith, Jr., as special master in the two foreclosure suits brought against the United States Shipbuilding Company by the Mercantile Trust Company, of New York, and the New York Security and Trust at $55,000. The court fixed the allowance for the receiver's counsel fees at $50,000. # TAX BUDGET PRESENTED

Exclusive of State, County and School $69,500 is Wanted.

SOME INCREASES

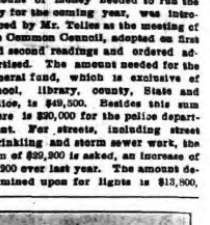
Fire Department Gets $29,200—Police, $20,000—Library, $4,700—Lights, $13,800.

The tax ordinance setting forth the amount of money needed to run the city for the coming year, was introduced by Mr. Tolles at the meeting of the Common Council, adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. The amount needed for the general fund, which is exclusive of school, library, county, State and police, is $49,500. Besides this sum there is $20,000 for the police department, $6,400. For streets, including street sprinkling and storm sewer work, the sum of $29,200 is asked, an increase of $4,300 over last year. The amounts determined upon for lights is $13,800,



COUNCILMAN R. I. TOLLES,
Chairman of the Common Council's Finance Committee, which made up annual budget.

an increase of $300 over last year. The principal on sewer bonds, $4,000 is the same, as is also the amount for the interest on the sewer obligation, $6,400. For the police department $6,500 is asked, an increase of $600. Included in this is $1,000 for the care of the indigent poor at the hospital, the contract for which has already been made.

The Public Library and Reading Room receives $4,700, an increase of $100 over last year, and the fire department $28,000, an increase of $1,200. The rest of the budget includes $6,700 for the interest on the issue of school bonds, $700 for the principal on the bonds for the purchase of the garbage plant and the dog tax for the year is made $3. The Board of Assessors will be asked to assess according to these amounts. It is the opinion of Mr. Tolles that the tax rate for the coming year will not be increased materially, if at all.

ICE TO BE ADVANCED TO 40 CTS. PER 100

PLAINFIELDERS MAY HAVE TO TREAT IT AS A LUXURY.

Notwithstanding the fact that last winter yielded a large crop of ice and that every ice-house in the city and vicinity is well stocked with frozen water of good quality and thickness, there is every indication that the price will be increased this summer from thirty to forty cents a hundred for family use, while an increase of from twenty to twenty-five cents will likely be made to business houses. This is now the plan, unless some dealer decides to fight the combine.

Many of the dealers say that they lost money last summer selling ice for thirty cents a hundred, that it did not begin to pay them for their time and labor. Two years ago the retail price was twenty cents a hundred and then followed the jump to forty cents. It is now said that some of the dealers are in favor of making the price thirty-five cents retail.

The crop this year was fully as large as last, and many persons are at a loss to understand why the price is advanced when the commodity is plentiful.

Col. Tyler to Speak.

ADVS. COME TO LIFE

Step From the Pages of a Magazine at Trinity Reformed.

EASILY RECOGNIZED

Delighted Audience Had No Difficulty in Picking Out Representatives of Famous Advertisers.

Many of the well-known advertisements which one reads in nearly every magazine and sees scattered about in every prominent place throughout the country, came to life in an enjoyable entertainment given at Trinity Reformed church, last night, under the auspices of the Whatsoever Circle, of King's Daughters. The affair was cleverly arranged and afforded much amusement for the large gathering in attendance, in addition to adding to the treasury of the Circle between $40 and $50 which will go toward the support of the King's Daughters city nurses.

Miss Margaret V. Leggett opened the programme with a piano solo, which was particularly well executed. This was followed with the representations of various advertisements, the first of which was that of the automobile by Mrs. F. S. Cutter. In one corner of the platform was a huge representation of a magazine, the covers being adorned with advertisements. These taking part in the entertainment were supposed to represent the advertising pages and being tired of travelling about they took this opportunity of resting and at the same time entertaining their friends. In turn each one stepped out of the magazine and performed his or her part. She entered complaining about that tired feeling due to travelling about the country in magazines. She was met by "Jap Rose Soap," Miss Grace Emmons, and "Violet Cologne," Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, who also had a similar complaint and an interesting dialogue followed. The "Kodak," girl, Miss Bertha VanDyke Willis, sang a pleasing and appropriate song in which she told of the advantage of the Kodak. The "Piano Girl," (Steinway,) Miss Lillian A. Force, was also weary of going about the country in magazines and to relieve the monotony she rendered a delightful solo. The familiar advertisement of "Baker's Cocoa" was represented by Mrs. J. P. D. Kirch, and that of "Horlick's Malted Milk," by Miss Mabel Geno. Clarence Bittenhouse provoked much laughter by representing the "Cream of Wheat" advertisement, the artist present carefully carrying the dipper on his shoulder. He sang a song praising the virtues of this article.

Then appeared a quartette—"Sunny Jim," Robert A. Meeker, Jr.; "Omega Oil," Charles M. Dolliver; "Hans," and "Lena," (VanCamps,) Irving Martin and Miss Emma Line. Each sang a song typical of the article represented, which was very amusing. The "Rueber-Hampden Watch," was faithfully portrayed by William Trembath, and then followed a song by all the "advs."

A bit of the evening was the topical song by "Sunny Jim." The words were composed by Charles Marvin Dolliver, and the tune was that of "Tammany." Mr. Meeker sang the verses, and "Lena," and "Omega Oil," joined in singing the chorus. "Hans" accompanied on the piano. The popular words and song were so well received that a repetition was called for.

Advertising is a business which pays very well,
Listen to me and I'll tell you how your goods to sell,
How some good and worthy churchmen got me on their side,
Told me I must tell about them, and their goods describe:
Grocers-ies, groceries,
Elder Smith has some to sell,
Jacob K. Arnold and Newell.
Grocers-ies, groceries,
Buy 'em, but be sure and get your trading

"Sunny Jim" eats "Force" for breakfast, and
It helps him work,
Feeds his system, and from duty he will never shirk,
But there are some other Forces which are here tonight,
They have played upon your feelings in a manner quite Forcefully, Forcefully,
If you want to read the news, buy a "Press," and it perme
Carefully, carefully,
And be sure and read the advertisements.
There are many others whom I cannot tell about,
But I know, they know, you know their business without doubt.
For the people are observing, and of you can tell,
More about your "inside" matters, than you know, so well.
Rubbernecks, rubbernecks.
If you wear an Easter bonnet, they can tell you just what's on it.
Rubbernecks, rubbernecks.
Stretch 'em, crane 'em, have a look, oh rubbernecks.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE

Couldn't Reach a Verdict in $10,000 Slander Suit.

OUT FOUR HOURS

Action Brought by Elizabeth Woman Against Plainfielder for Alleged False Accusation.

Before Judge Heisley in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth, Monday, action began in a slander suit for $10,000 damages brought by Mrs. Kate Brennan, of Elizabeth, against Samuel Rosenbaum, of this city. Many witnesses were produced on each side and the matter went to the jury at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They returned at 6 o'clock last night without reaching a verdict, ten standing for the defendant and two holding out for six cents damages, to save the plaintiff from the cost of action.

Mrs. Brennan boarded the 8:29 train from Plainfield, at the Spring street station, Elizabeth,, on April 10th of last year. She occupied the seat next to Rosenbaum. After passing the station Rosenbaum missed his pocketbook and noticing alleged suspicious actions on the part of Mrs. Brennan, told the conductor of his loss, saying at the same time that he thought Mrs. Brennan must have had something to do with the matter. Nothing further was done until Jersey City was reached, and then the conductor called a policeman. Mrs. Brennan, according to Rosenbaum, hurried off the train and, according to the testimony of witnesses who saw her, she was very excitable, and sobbed when stopped by the policeman.

Rosenbaum was told by the officer that if he desired to have the Brennan woman apprehended, he would have to accompany them to the police station. This he was unwilling to do and the matter dropped. The pocketbook, however, was never found. At that time Mrs. Brennan remarked, "I'll make you suffer for this," hence the suit. William Newcorn, of this city, is defending Rosenbaum and Edward Nugent, of Elizabeth, represents the Brennans.

SMITH AUTO SOLD TO A MAN FROM NEWARK

BIDDING ON MORTGAGED MACHINE WAS LIVELY—BROUGHT $400.

"Mayor Bill" Smith's mortgaged auto was sold yesterday. The storied and harried machine finds a secluded nook in Newark, the purchaser being J. W. Gifford, of that city.

The sale was held in the backyard of Constable Pierce's house in New Market, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There was a large attendance of curious people, attracted by the newspaper stories of the sale and recollections of some of the things that have happened to the machine since Smith got it. Several Plainfielders were among the onlookers. George Veohl, of West Front street, went in on the bidding.

The machine was sold ten minutes after Constable Pierce opened the proceedings. A half a dozen different men tried for the auto, and the bidding was lively. It started at $50, and shot up in quick time to $400. The contest for possession simmered down to a duel between Mr. Gifford and Mr. Veohl, and the latter dropped out at $390.

Neither Smith nor Andrew Wilson, of this city, who held the mortgage, were present, and no one offered bids in their interest. It is understood that "Mayor Bill" is glad to get rid of the machine, and intends to buy a bigger, finer one. Mr. Wilson has had enough of automobiles for a time, and only wanted the money he loaned Smith. R. F. V. VanMinden, lawyer for Smith, watched the proceedings for both sides.

The money realized will just about cover the mortgage and costs of the sale. The machine is a 1900 one, about a year old and in pretty good shape. It was on exhibition in the constable's yard during the sale.

Wife Wants Divorce.

Mrs. Fannie Perkins, of this city, has sued her husband, John Perkins, for divorce on the ground of desertion. The latter is required to file answer to the petitioner's plea by June 21. Counselor Newcorn is the latter's lawyer.

Fred Dunavan, of L. W. Randolph's drug store, who is detained at home by a severe illness, is convalescing.

VILLAGE POSTMASTER CONFRONTS BURGLARS

Pistol Battle With 4 Men Who Attempt to Rob Martinsville Postoffice.

BULLETS FLY WIDE

No One Hurt in Fusilade—Two Men Were Drilling Postoffice Safe—All of Them Made Their Escape.

Caught in the act of robbing the postoffice at Martinsville at an early hour yesterday morning, four men opened fire on Postmaster H. S. Zimmerman and made a determined attempt to shoot him. The plucky official met them at their own game and though bullets whistled about his head, he emptied his revolver in their direction, forcing them to take to their heels just in time to escape the crowd of awakened residents that hurried to the scene. The postmaster was unharmed and it is believed none of his shots took effect as all of the four got away.

Mr. Zimmerman's home adjoins the postoffice, only a narrow alley intervening. Mrs. Zimmerman was awakened about 2 o'clock by a slight noise in this alley and arousing her husband he cautiously looked out of a window. He discerned a man patrolling up and down and almost at the same time saw another one in the road. Zimmerman raised the window and challenged the men, at which both gave a signal and the remaining two of the gang ran out of the office where they had been drilling the safe. One of them took aim at the postmaster and fired point blank, the bullet just grazing his head. Zimmerman jumped back in the room and grabbing up a weapon blazed away at the gang. Each one was armed and the lead from their revolvers struck the window repeatedly. Zimmerman's bold stand evidently disconcerted them and they fled just as help was coming. Some of the robbers took up the pursuit but stopped after going a short distance toward Round Brook.

The gang had entered the postoffice building by cutting a panel out of the door and would have had the safe opened in a short time, although it contained but a small amount of money. Before making the attempt they robbed the hotel in the place kept by John Taylor and secured a quantity of whisky and cigars.

GEORGE W. CABLE TO GIVE READINGS

UNDER AUSPICES OF MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB TOMORROW NIGHT.

The members of the Monday Afternoon Club, will have their annual spring evening reception tomorrow night at the Casino, and they and their invited guests will have the pleasure of listening to a reading by George W. Cable, who is a familiar figure in the literary world for years through his Creole stories and novels. The recent visit of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie to Northampton, Mass., to witness the dedication of a building given by them to the Home Culture Clubs, has served in larger measure than any previous agency to turn the limelight upon one of the country's most progressive institutions for popular education and betterment.

The founder and presiding genius of this institution, George W. Cable, a southerner of rare temperament; some twenty years ago, seeking a northern home, was attracted to Northampton because of its scenic setting, its culture, its historic past, and its educational atmosphere, and he settled with his family in the Jaz Meadow City. As a writer Mr. Cable had become an earnest student of social and industrial problems, and his interest from generalities and "foreign missions" to centre his attention and energy upon home needs and duties.

During his stay in Plainfield Mr. Cable will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick.

Jerseyman Mustn't Carry Pistols.

Governor Stokes has signed the bill increasing the penalties for carrying concealed weapons, which was passed by the last session of the Legislature. Any person carrying a cutting weapon more than five inches long or a fire-arm concealed, unless he be a police officer or has a suitable permit, is made liable on conviction to a fine which may reach $200, or two years in prison or both.

SUMMER CONCERT FAIR

Authors of "Blue Bell" and Other Popular Songs There.

BIG CROWD PRESENT

Seven Nights Entertainment at Baengerbund for Benefit of Open Air Band Concerts.

With one of the largest initial attendances ever noted at a similar affair the second annual fair for the benefit of summer band concerts, opened in Saengerbund Hall, last night. Fully 400 people were present and enjoyed the various attractions until shortly after 12 o'clock.

From early until late, dancing was the main feature but there were others, one of the them the entertainment in which Theodore Morse and Jack Drislane, two of the best known song writers in the country, made their appearance. Both are members of the Morse Trio which completed a tour of the Keith circuit last week, giving a musical and humorous sketch. Drislane sang "Good Bye, Sis" and "Keep a Little Cozy Corner in Your Heart for Me," accompanied by Mr. Morse on the piano and slid illustrations. He has a strong voice of exceptional sweetness and made a decided hit, as did the accompanist also, the piano figuratively "talking" beneath his deft touch. Morse is the composer of "Blue Bell," "A Little Boy Called Taps" and many other songs that are whistled the world over, while Drislane has a score of successes to his credit, the latest being "That's What the Brass Band Played."

Throughout the hall there are numerous booths, attractively arranged, presided over as follows: Fancy goods, Mrs. Charles Steiner, Mrs. Edward F. T. Smith and Miss Shepherd; candy, Mrs. Frank Manchester and Mrs. Johnson; books, Mrs. Baglin. Below stairs in the supper room, refreshments are served by Edward F. T. Smith, F. Mortimer Slater, Miss Eldora Beekman, Miss Bertha Beekman, John and Will McCullough. In charge of the dancing floor is a committee composed of Walter Emmons, Joseph O. Martin and J. H. Hardcastle.

The committee which has general charge is composed of Ben LaVere, chairman; H. P. Greenwood, treasurer; Charles Steiner, tickets; Charles Greer and J. D. Smalley at the door.

The feature of tonight's entertainment will be vocal solos by Lew Leever, late of Dockstader's minstrels, who will give several new songs, all illustrated. Tomorrow night Theodore Morse will again appear to accompany George Offerman, who is well known in the city and borough as a singer of "coon" songs. For the remaining nights other vocalists have been provided, all of whom are well known on the vaudeville stage.

Frelinghuysen's Guest.

Governor Stokes will start Sunday afternoon for the Adirondacks, where he will be the guest of Colonel Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, chairman of the Somerset County Republican Committee, at a private club. Trout fishing is the particular form of recreation promised to the Governor for the next two days. He will return in time for the session of the Board of Pardons on Thursday morning. Should any contingency arise demanding immediate executive action, President Bradley, of the Senate, will have his first opportunity to try his hand as Acting Governor.

Gas Employes Overcome.

While repairing a leak in one of the pipes in the basement of the East Fourth street gas plant, yesterday afternoon, Martin Finley, Peter Bamford and Henry Kearns, three employes, were overcome by fumes. All three dropped to the floor and had to be dragged out by other men. The usual restoratives were applied and they soon recovered.

"Doc" Doyle Visits.

Dr. Lawrence Doyle, of Woodbridge, once captain of St. Mary's nine, and a star of the old City League, visited his old friends here yesterday. ## DR. PARSONS WELCOMED BY GRACE M. E. PEOPLE

CONGREGATION TENDERS NEW PASTOR A PLEAFANT RECEPTION.

In order to formally introduce him to the congregation of which he has assumed the pastorate, the members of Grace M. E. church tendered Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons a reception last night. It was largely attended, the members of other local Methodist churches being present. Dr. and Mrs. Parsons received with the assistance of Dr. H. K. Carroll, E. E. Winckler, Mrs. John Valiant and Mrs. Carroll.

The welcoming address to the new pastor was made by Dr. Carroll while Dr. Whitney, in behalf of the First M. E. and Monroe Avenue churches, extended greetings. Dr. Parsons responded with an address in which he expressed pleasure at coming to Plainfield. He felt especially honored, he said, from the fact that it was in this city that the First Epworth League chapter was formed and that it was known in many States as possessing active congregations. He declared the field so be large and hoped for advancement in no small sense.

During the evening vocal solos were rendered by Miss Winifred Carroll, accompanied by Miss Alice Carroll and in conclusion a social session was enjoyed. The affair was directly in charge of the Ladies' Aid Society with Mrs. John Valiant acting as chairman. The church was prettily decorated with Easter lilies and other flowers.

PLANS FURTHERED FOR COMING HORSE SHOW

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE DECIDES TO INCREASE NUMBER OF CLASSES.

The executive committee of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Association met last night at the home of the president, Lewis E. Waring, and furthered plans for the coming horse show. The prize list was discussed and it is expected it will be completed within a few days. It was decided to increase the classes this year to thirty-two, six more than last year. There will be two more jumping classes, two more local classes and two more open classes.

In the open classes it was decided to increase the first cash prize from $40 to $50 and second prizes from $10 to $15. The prizes, a silver cup, will remain the same for the local classes. These include entries from Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties From present indications the show will be a large and successful one and the entry list promises to be one of the largest yet received in this part of the country for a similar show.

ON A NEW TACK.

Another Change in Drawnout Smith-Hand-Herring Case.

Another move was made by the plaintiffs in the bitterly contested suit brought by F. H. Smith and C. H. Hand against Dr. G. D. Herring, for rent of a house on Watchung avenue, yesterday.

Two weeks ago the case was brought to a pause by Counselor Swackhamer, for the defendant, who secured an order bringing office furniture, levied under a judgment for $65, into court for trial of right of property. Almost as soon as the order was secured, the plaintiffs announced that attachment proceedings were dropped.

Yesterday the reason for the change of base was disclosed when Counselor Newcorn, lawyer for the plaintiffs, secured an order bringing Dr. Herring before Supreme Court Commissioner John H. VanWinkle in supplementary proceedings. The hearing will begin tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The plaintiffs now seek to discover just what Dr. Herring does own, and how they can get at it.

TRACED THE BRAWLERS

Woman Runs Down Men Who Attacked Her House.

NOCTURNAL ASSAULT

Roysterers Threw Stones, Smashed Windows and Scared Family—Mrs. Becker as a Sleuth.

Drunken roysterers made an attack with stones on the house of Martin Becker, of Rock avenue, late Monday night, frightening the family, and doing some damage to the house. At the time the attack was made none of the members of the family had any idea of the identity of the men in the party, but Mrs. Becker cleared away the mystery in that direction yesterday by a little sleuthing. The men will have to settle for the damage or suffer at the hands of the law.

The attack was made at 11 o'clock, when the family were in bed. The men came down the road shouting and hooting, and making general nuisances of themselves. They stopped in front of the house, but the Beckers had no idea that they saw anything in it to attract their attention. Suddenly a shower of stones flew against the house. Windows crashed, and clapboards rattled. Mr. and Mrs. Becker and their daughter were startled, and when another fusilade began, the woman and girl were on the verge of panic. Mr. Becker sprang out of bed to defend the house, but when he got to the window the men were disappearing down the road. They didn't return.

In the morning, Mrs. Becker's nerve came back, and a lively desire to know the names of the men who attacked the house replaced fear in her bosom. She started right in to sleuth.

Kerwin's hotel is a short distance below the house, on the same street, and she figured that the resort was just about the place to begin the detective work. She put the hotel people through a third degree session, and got the names of all the men who left the place the night before at about the time the attack was made. The trial led her to Dunellen, and there, she says, in a store, she ran down the ringleader of the crowd. He is an employe of the storekeeper.

From him she learned the names of the men in the party. Steps have been taken to bring all the hoodlums to book.

DR. CLAWSON BUYS F. A. POPE RESIDENCE

NUMBER OF REALTY DEALS MADE BY ALBERT LEDERER.

The F. A. Pope residence at Park avenue and Fifth street has been sold through the Albert Lederer agency to Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, who will occupy it. The property directly back of it, occupied by W. W. Dunn, was included in the sale and it is said that the consideration was between $30,000 and $35,000. It has a frontage of 100 feet on Park avenue and 215 feet on West Fifth street and the sale includes the brick stable. Mr. Pope will build a residence on the opposite corner.

The T. A. Kurshals property, in West Second street, including the brick stable in the rear and a right of way through the driveway on Park avenue, has been purchased through Mr. Lederer by Mrs. Lena Hoerster. The consideration was about $8,000. Mr. Kurshals has purchased Mrs. Hoerster's property on Dner street, near Linden avenue. Mr. Lederer has also sold the property on Dner street, near Craig place, owned by Mrs. Ametta Adams, to W. W. Corlett and James L. Love. The consideration is reported to be about $5,000.

Secured Conviction.

S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, assisted the Hunterdon county prosecutor in a criminal case yesterday. The defendant was convicted. In a previous trial the jury disagreed, standing 11 to 1 for acquittal.

Bridal Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Runkle, whose son, Daniel Runkle, will be married to Miss Helen Dunbar Talmadge, this afternoon, entertained the bridal party at dinner last night.

Some Feminine Work In Fields of Philanthropy

The movement which has given the American Indian a chance for his life among the white people was inaugurated by women. Two women, Miss Mary L. Bonney and Mrs. Amelia Stone Quinton, started it. Miss Bonney, a busy teacher in Philadelphia, had long beheld with profound sorrow the ever increasing degradation and consequent gradual extermination of the red men of this country. They were cheated right and left, and they were tempted by all the vices that the white man brought among them. They were simply turned loose on reservations, and supplies were given them from time to time with no particular concern as to whether they lived or died.

Miss Bonney had little time to work personally for the rescue of the red man, but she warmly interested her friend Mrs. Quinton in the matter. That was in 1879. Mrs. Quinton began by preparing and circulating for signatures a petition to congress in behalf of the Indian. The petition really contained the framework of all the civilizing and philanthropic measures from time to time passed by congress to aid the American aborigines.

Year after year Mrs. Quinton memorialized congress till that body enacted the laws suggested by her petitions. Mrs. Quinton and Miss Bonney founded the National Indian association, of which, except during one year when she declined the office, Mrs. Quinton has been president for eighteen years.

American Woman's Work In London

Some years ago Alice Smith, a lovely Philadelphia Quaker girl in London, was married to an Englishman, Hon. Bertrand Russell. Something, perhaps an invisible power, called Mrs. Russell's attention to the deplorable drunkenness among British factory girls. This was actual and no fancy. Mrs. Russell, in order to study conditions, dressed herself as one of the working girls and really labored in the factories at times.

Occasionally, clad in her working garb, she watched where the girls went on receiving their wages on pay day. Once in less than half an hour she saw forty-seven girls go into drinking saloons from their factories. In the saloons of one neighborhood she found 118 women, and fourteen of them had babies in their arms. Girls seemed to glory in getting drunk.

Shocked at such revelations, the Quaker soul of Mrs. Russell began to devise means to check the intemperance of London factory women.

One Russian Hebrew Girl.

Tyna Heiman, a Russian Jewish girl from Kishineff, came to this country to Boston about four years and a half ago. She had some education in Russian, but none at all in English. In her fourteenth year she entered the Boston public schools and was put in the primary department, lowest grade, First Reader. She remained there two days; then her teacher, seeing she was misplaced, promoted her to the third grade, skipping the second. The promotions came so rapidly that Tyna Heiman appeared to be a marvel. In ten months this young Russian Hebrew girl accomplished six years' work of the Boston public school course. Next she took in three years the prescribed four years' instruction of the Boston girls' high school.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton's Granddaughter.

Leader and champion of the 600 women students at Cornell university is Nora Stanton Blatch, the handsome, athletic and gifted granddaughter of the famous champion of woman, Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

Miss Blatch is this year to be graduated from the Cornell course in civil engineering. She is the only woman who has ever finished that course. She is extremely athletic, having swum Cayuga lake, nearly three miles wide. The young lady is one of the best students in her class and stands up valiantly for equal right and opportunity for the feminine sex.

SPRING HOUSE CLEANING.

System and a Regular Programme Make It Easier.

To begin, take one room at a time, commencing with the top floor. Remove from it all that is movable—bric-a-brac, draperies, curtains, bedclothes, chairs and table. So far as possible, give everything a royal old sunning and airing, even to the bed mattresses. Lay papers or a large cloth upon the ground in the yard, then carry your mattress out and lay it thereon. Let the warm sun beat upon it all day. This has a purifying and cleansing effect on a mattress upon which human bodies have been sleeping all winter. Pillows may be fastened by a corner with clothespins and hung from lines.

Hang upon the line in the yard and fasten thereto with pins rugs and all the draperies that are not to be washed. Bedquilts, comfortables and blankets that do not need washing should also hang in the sunshine. Then if a girl or woman wants some physical culture that will give her fine lung power and noble biceps let her take an ordinary beater, such as is used for whipping the dust out of heavy garments, and go at those articles upon the lines with a will.

The clothing beater is an invaluable implement in a household. It can be bought in any shop that keeps house furnishing goods. It consists of a long, limber bamboo doubled over into an oval or round loop at one end. The loop is crossed with interwoven slats of bamboo, the whole constituting a light, flexible implement that when applied to any textile fabric or rug makes the dust fly out in clouds.

House Cleaning Programme.

Take down the smaller pictures and clean them. The ones that cannot be moved cover with paper. Cover all heavy, immovable articles in the same way. Next sweep the floor. Tie a cloth over the end of a broom and wipe the walls till they fairly shine. Next whiten the ceiling if it needs it and wash all windows and woodwork.

A word concerning window washing: Soap and wash powder leave a smear upon the glass. Use clear, warm water, to which has been added just two or three drops of kerosene, not more. Kerosene is eminently cleansing, yet if too much of it is used it, too, leaves a smear because of its oily nature. Have plenty of clean, soft rags. After the washing and drying of the windows is finished polish with a good sized piece of chamois leather, which should be in every household. It can be washed like a cloth when it becomes soiled. It and the drop of kerosene in the wash water make the windows shine like crystal. Be particular to get window sills and casings pure and clean inside and out.

Last of all, the floor. For cleaning a floor nothing better than a scrubbing brush, washing powder and plenty of clean, warm water has ever been devised. To use the scrubbing brush it is not necessary either to get down upon one's knees. The woman who has kept her back as limber as all women can and should do can stoop to scrub a floor with far less fatigue than she can do it upon her knees, rubbing the skin off them and getting her skirts wet in the dirty water. After the floor has been scrubbed with the brush it should be thoroughly wiped with a cloth and clean rinse water. Those who have tried it say that if a little turpentine is added to this rinsing water it will leave a fresh, fragrant odor in the room.

For work like house cleaning one's skirts should be quite short and scant.

Renovating Carpets.

Cleaning heavy carpets is a man's work rather than a woman's unless she be one of these new women who have developed more muscle and athletic strength than the old time woman considered "ladylike." After the men have shaken a carpet thoroughly they should hang it upon a line and beat it with sticks till every particle of dust is out of it. Thereafter it should hang in the full sunlight for a whole day to get the microbes out of it and life giving radiant matter into it. Kitchen carpets will be much improved by hanging in the rain, several rains indeed, and being allowed to dry upon the line.

Woman's work in renovating a carpet begins after it has been shaken and beaten and tacked upon the floor again. Then let the woman take a pail of warm water into which some liquid ammonia has been poured in the proportion of a teaspoonful of ammonia to a gallon of water. Let her dip a clean cloth into the ammoniated water, wring it out well and wash that carpet all over. This will brighten the carpet till it looks like new. The water should be changed frequently.

IRRIGATION IN THE EAST.

Benefits Derived from Water Source in Regions That Have Irregular Rains.

That irrigation may be employed as usefully in the humid portion of the United States as in the arid section is announced by the department of agriculture. A bulletin has been issued, showing the results of many experiments in this field, in which a steady water source was drawn on as an auxiliary to an irregular rain supply.

Near Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where rain is ordinarily bountiful for the crops, a grower of strawberries has found that the addition of a plant for irrigation enables him to insure a perfect stand and rapid growth of new plants. Spraying, and irrigation between the rows, put in fine condition for marketing a crop of berries which for lack of rain at the critical moment had colored and hardened without sweetening.

Market gardeners in many other parts of the east are having similar results. The experts at Washington believe that as the country becomes more completely settled and more intense gardening is required it will be found necessary to depend more and more upon irrigation as an insurance against drought and consequent crop failure.

BASEBALL TILL MIDNIGHT.

People of Dawson Went Wild Over the Game During the Season Last Summer.

"The Yukon country went wild over baseball last summer, and crowds attended the games at Dawson twice a week between eight p. m. and midnight, from May 31 to August 25 last. There were between 3,000 and 4,000 persons at each game, and I take it that nowhere else in the world has the game ever been played at night from eight o'clock on toward the midnight hour."

So says Sheriff R. J. Eilbeck, who is in California spending the winter, says the Port Townsend Call. Mr. Eilbeck's home is in Dawson. He is sheriff of the Yukon territory. He is as enthusiastic about baseball as any irrepressible bleacher, and in the summer time in the land of the midnight sun he says there is a good article of the game produced and some very clever players are developed.

Sheriff Eilbeck says that Yukon territory authorities appropriated $12,000 for fine baseball grounds and the great American game has entered the Yukon permanently as a night pleasure during the summer months.

AND HE SAWED THE WOOD

Veteran of Sixty-Two Celebrates His Birthday and Surprises His Friends.

The other day in the blacksmith shop occupied by Jasper Brown a crowd of men were indulging in good-natured banter, says a Penacook item in the Concord Patriot. Among the number were Dudley L. Smith, a veteran of the Twelfth New Hampshire volunteers, who lost a leg at Gettysburg, and Samuel G. Sanborn, a retired blacksmith, who is living on the old home place.

The subject turned to sawing wood, and Farmer Sanborn claimed that Veteran Smith could not saw a cord of hard wood in three days. As Smith weighs 256 pounds, the odds were on Sanborn.

If Smith sawed the wood in the required time Jasper Brown was to have it as a gift. Smith commenced sawing at six o'clock in the morning and finished about five the same day. This is the way that Smith celebrated his sixty-second birthday. J. C. Farrand is thinking of hiring Smith to take the place of his engine in the wood yard.

SIDE LIGHTS ON FLAMES.

Ice Formed on Firemen's Clothes Protects Them in Extremely Cold Weather.

"Pity the poor firemen," said the citizen who watched the ice-coated relays of men fighting a stubborn blaze in a Chicago street the other day, reports the Post. "They are animated icebergs."

"But the fellows don't mind that a little bit," said Chief Campion, as he broke a stalactite five inches long from his mustache and slowly bending his arm, cracked off several square feet of ice from his rubber coat. "The cold water is a help to a fireman in the extremely cold weather, provided it does not form ice too thick on him. The coat of frigidity keeps him warm.

"But it is the deluge of hot water that comes when a man is working in a basement that causes the suffering. Hot water goes through—penetrates to the skin—and the moment the deluged fireman goes into the zero weather, he gets the full benefit of the cold."

Oldest Fort.

The oldest fortress in the United States is Fort Marion, on the Matanzas, in Florida. It has seen many bloody frays in the opening up of what is now the paradise of the south. The land around this ancient place has been watered by the blood of men who have fallen in conflict, but to-day it is a peaceful, picturesque spot, full of charm and serenity.

Suicide by Shooting.

An Austrian student of the phenomena attending suicide says that of those persons who try to take their life by shooting themselves only one-third succeed in attaining their end at once. Another third die from a long period of suffering from the wound inflicted, while the remaining third survive.

Heading Him Off.

"So you wish to marry my daughter? Can you support a family?"

"No, sir; but I can support your daughter."—Houston Post.

SOME UNWORKED FIELDS.

Much Wealth May Be Gained from Mineral and Other Deposits Yet Untouched.

In spite of the enormous inroads made on this earth's great store of wealth, diamonds, gold, oil, gas, coal, iron and other materials, recent investigations have brought to light the interesting fact that treasure fields containing fabulous wealth still remain intact, states the London Chronicle.

Investigations have proved, for instance, that huge areas of the floor of the Pacific are strewn thick with immense deposits of nodules of pure manganese. Invent a practical and economical method of recovering it, and the individual who does so will at once become rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

The most crying need to-day is a substitute for Para rubber. It is certain to be discovered sooner or later. Celluloid and oxidized linseed oil are useful for some purposes for which rubber is used, but for cycle and automobile tires real rubber is the only material with the necessary elasticity. The inventor of a substitute would soon become a multi-millionaire.

RARE OLD TOKAY WINE.

Nearly Three Hundred Years Old and Worth on the Market $30 a Quart.

"I visited a cellar of Tokay lately," said a hotelkeeper, according to the Washington Post. "Tokay is the only wine that keeps on improving indefinitely. There was wine nearly 300 years old in the cellar. Its price on the market would be easily $30 a quart.

"The cellar was very carefully kept. I seemed to inhale cool, velvety whiffs of rich fungus at every step. A slight haze hung along the top of the passages—a haze that seemed to be made of the visible aroma of rare wine.

"I was surprised to see that the bottles were kept upright and that the corks were very loosely inserted. Old Tokay must be kept like that to maintain a perfect condition for it, and, thanks to the loose corks, a sample, even of the oldest vintage, may be taken out and tasted at any moment. A bottle of Tokay may be shaken without risk of its turning turbid.

"Nobody knows why old Tokay is so good. It is no longer made—just as genuine Madeira is no longer made. The secret is lost, like the secrets of the old Persian rugmakers."

AGE IN NAVY OFFICERS.

Commanders of American Gunboats Older Than Those of Other Nations.

The youngest rear admiral in the United States navy is older than Admiral Togo. The four Japanese vice admirals are all younger than the youngest of our captains, says the Independent. The Japanese rear admirals' average age is 59, captains' age 44 2-3, and commanders' 40 2-3. The average age of our captains (57 1-2) is 13 years beyond that of the Japanese captains, nine years beyond that of the English and German captains, and seven years beyond that of the Russian captains. The youngest English captain is aged 33, is 20 years younger than our youngest, and Japan has deemed it wise to intrust her battleships to men of age 36. The average English and German captain is scarcely older than our junior grade captain (commander), and our youngest commander when he reached his rank was older than the average Japanese captain. If our youngest captain were in the Japanese navy he would have been retired for age some time ago.

SILK HAT SELDOM WORN.

Its Passing But a Mere Whim of Fashion and It Is Sure to Return.

"The silk hat," said the manager of a fashionable hat store, reports the New York Sun, "has about run its course for day wear. Only elderly men, and comparatively few of them, wear it in the day time.

"Fifteen years ago we often sold more silk hats in a day than we now sell in two weeks. Young men wore them then both day and evening. You could see processions of silk hats on Broadway and all the down-town streets.

"But the silk hat will return. Its passing is merely a whim of fashion. It is the most dressy hat a man can wear, and also the most economical. A good silk hat will stand more wear and tear than three derbys or fedoras. It can be ironed to look like new, no matter what has happened to it.

"Most of our customers are well to do, but lots of them in the old days wore silk hats for economy's sake. A few do yet, for that matter, but they are men past middle life."

International Boat Stamp.

Four countries—Bavaria, Austria, Wurtemberg and Switzerland—border on the lake of Constance. Passengers on the boats have heretofore had much trouble in finding out what stamps to use on their letters. It has now been decided that letters mailed on the boats may bear the stamps of any one of the four countries named, as well as German imperial stamps.

English in Paris.

Anglomania is still increasing in Paris. Formerly one used to hear of la belle, le jeu de paume, la raquette, le ballon, etc.; to-day everybody says "nous faisons du sprot, du rowing, du yachting, du football, du tennis, du golf;" etc.

MODEL WIVES AND MOTHERS

Sometimes the World Is Inclined to Exaggerate Their Goodness.

"Ah, she was such a good woman!" they said of Mrs. Blank when she died.

"Model wife and mother!" put in another enthusiastic friend.

And I thought over that quite a bit. Was she such a success as wife and mother?

Her two sons, it is true, were now honored members of the community, but they had certainly had a wild and foolish youth. At one time it was even whispered that the youngest— Well, boys will be boys! And yet it was strange, considering that he had such a good home and such a good mother.

"Was his mother aware of what he was going through?"

"Oh, dear, no. She hadn't even an idea that such troubles existed in the world! She was a saintly woman. It would never have done to tell her anything about it. She never suspected a thing. Arthur would have died rather than confide in her anything more intense than his progress in his studies and his work. Oh, dear, no! He fought it out alone. It was the same thing with her daughter Alice. At sixteen she knew more about the world than her mother ever did.

READING ABOUT A BOXING MATCH.

"Alice used to go to the mother of one of her friends for advice. She was a rather frivolous, worldly minded woman and entirely without Mrs. Blank's saintly character and spiritual nature."

"Did the children love their mother?"

"Oh, yes, indeed; they had the greatest respect and admiration for her—much the same feeling they had for the beautiful bit of porcelain china in the parlor which was meant to look at, but never for use."

"And her husband?"

"Oh, well, he had such a model home that whenever he wanted to put his feet up on a chair or do anything disgraceful like that after a hard day's work he used to go to the club. Oh, no; he never smoked at home! You couldn't associate anything so vulgar as smoke with Mrs. Blank's gentle, refined nature. Why, she was as dainty and pure minded as a flower. Mr. Blank was not fit to be her husband. He was made of much coarser clay. Why, he used to read the sporting page and go occasionally to a boxing match! Of course he never told her these things, but once she came in suddenly and found him reading a dreadful large typed account of a prize fight in a paper, and, my dear, it almost killed her. She wasn't herself for days afterward."

Ah, yes, she was a wonderful soul, a model wife and mother!

And yet of the inner life of her husband and her children, of their likes, dislikes, struggles and inward cries for help, this model wife and mother knew not one blessed thing.

A NURSERY VESTIBULE.

How to Decorate the Otherwise Unattractive Top Floor Hallway.

In most houses the top hall is not very attractive.

Why not furnish it as the picture suggests? The walls may be papered in plain color or painted. The frieze will be of nursery rhyme pictures, which may be obtained at any interior decorator's or cut from magazines and framed in passe partout. If there are enough, paste them continuously. Some long poster pictures framed simply in green wood hang on the walls, and an old lounge is neatly covered with an art cretonne slip, or it may be reupholstered with the assistance of fine tacks and a long upholsterer's needle threaded with twine. The floor is pretty stained green, and the matting may be of the inexpensive Japanese kind, green and white. Thus the approach to the children's nursery or to their bedrooms can be made attractive and the house will be beautified at the same time.

R. DE LA BAUME.

SPRING FASHIONS.

The Proper Things to Wear Just Before Hot Weather.

The array of beautiful things in the stores now is simply bewildering, not only because there are so many of them, but because the styles are so diverse. We find strictly tailored suits with the seams most perfectly made and pressed or with stitching so close and neat that it becomes an ornament as elegant as it is refined. These suits have coats long and voluminous or wrought into the form of a dress, like the illustration, laid in deep plaits to fit it to the figure and belted in. The design is particularly well adapted to rain coats of cravenette, as, while dressy and handsome, the material is waterproof. And there is something about the cravenette that sets it one peg above covert or cheviot or, in fact, any other of the materials suitable for such wear, for the weave is close and silky and there are always the two colors interwoven, but so closely that it looks all one color until seen near. Black and white make the gray, while the other colors are evolved by the admixture of two threads, each different. Dresses are made of this as well as rain coats, and the material always gives satisfaction. It will wash too.

Tailored suits may also have a blouse waist instead of the coat if preferred. But some of the coats are very stylish and much more dressy than the bloused effects. For those with too slender figures the looser shapes are best, while the woman who has reason to be proud of her figure can revel in the comfort of wearing a fashionable suit which also shows off ... her special beauty.

Sleeves vary quite as much as skirts and full suits. The princess shape of gown is in vogue again and is expected to have great popularity. Skirts are made almost circular again for some tastes, and for others there are skirts with one to five flounces. Silks of all kinds, but preferably crisp, strong taffetas, are made with bias bands or flounces, while others are laid in plaits or shirred. The wearer's own taste governs this.

Very many of the wash frocks, particularly those of linen and the rather thick weaves of cotton, are laid in kilts from top to bottom, which is a little better for the laundry. These are simply hemmed around the bottom. Blouse waists and wide sailor collars are almost always seen with these, sometimes of the same material with braid as trimming and again of heavy white linen.

Cute little sunbonnets are being brought forth by the thousand to wear with these suits. They are most frequently made of pink or blue batiste, with bows and strings of the same. They cost from $2 to $5 at the stores, but any clever woman can make one so easily at a cost of not over 50 cents that I am going to tell them that they can buy the ready made foundation for a trifle and the batiste or mull will be but 15 cents a yard, and two yards are plenty. The rest is easy. Just hem a piece across for the cape, tear the strings from one side to get the selvage and shirr the rest to the foundation. Hem the strings, make a pretty bow of part of the strip, sew that and the strings on, and there you are. These hats are very pretty and dainty alike for women and children. To have one to match each suit is the height of style.

Sleeves are anything and everything. The leg o' mutton is the favorite for thin and fine goods, but there are so many variations that woman can do about as she pleases and still be in fashion. Many of the thin goods have puffed sleeves coming to the elbow and finished off there with lace. The shirt waist sleeve, with its cuff and few tucks at the top, is often seen, but the leg o' mutton, with the lower portion formed by close tucks to the wrist, is a great favorite. Another plan is to have the sleeve narrow to the wrist and very long, with the superfluous length gathered along the outside of the arm in butterfly style. Collars are high as ever for those who have ugly throats, but those who have pretty necks are forcing the style for gowns without high bands.

A pretty suit in one place showed a ten gored skirt of ecru voile over blue silk. The blouse waist was trimmed with ecru motifs of braid over brown silk. The hat was, of course, brown straw with a trimming of coral pink taffeta ribbon, with a few lilies of the valley among the bows.

Do Mothers Train Their Children to Be Savages?

A bachelor of observation is authority for the statement that no more than half the mothers in civilization bring up their children properly. Does a mother slap, cuff or jerk the tender little beings confided to her care? Does she use abusive language to them? Does she break her promises to them? Does she scare them into fits by telling them the policeman or the big, bad man will come and carry them off if they do not obey her? Does she ever tell them a lie? Does she allow their sweet little bodies to become untidy? Then that woman is not fit to have children, no matter who or what she is, declares the bachelor. Boys learn rudeness and violence from their own mothers. How can they be other than ill bred, destructive young savages? Little girls hear their mothers tell petty falsehoods; they hear her scold violently; they see her rude, impolite and untidy in her own family circle. How, then, can these little girls become sweet tempered, sincere, neat and high bred women? Are the sons of Quaker mothers ever found among the gangs of young street ruffians? I am reporting still the opinions of the wise bachelor. So fully convinced is he of the truth of all this that he is sure it would be a step forward for the race if the training of little children were taken out of the hands of their mothers and given to women who have made a scientific study of it. The scientific rearing of children is quite compatible with love and tenderness, with good manners, good temper and good morals. So says the bachelor.

Don't let us put on airs, not any of us. It is quite possible if we could trace our distinguished family back only two or three removes that we would come upon a grandfather who picked his teeth with a fork.

Nothing will wake the women of Russia to the need of their sex participating in public affairs like the inhuman war against Japan, with grand dukes driving women's best beloved to be slaughtered for a quarrel whose cause they do not know. Not long since the women of Moscow sent to Empress Alix a petition begging her to try to stop the war. It is one of the most pathetic documents on record. "Oh, sovereign," it said, "mothers whose hearts are breaking cannot remain silent. Our best forces are perishing."

The Russian revolutionist party in its manifesto to the emperor made demand for a "universal equal and secret ballot for male and female citizens." Put that down to the credit of the Russian revolutionists.

Italy has a woman orchestra leader of distinction. Her name is Palmira Orso. Recently she led the orchestra during a great performance of the opera "Ernani" at Livorno.

I don't know who wrote the story or I would give her credit. I am sure it was a woman. Once a gentleman and his wife spent considerable time studying American Indian life and customs. During a walk they saw an Indian chief's family "moving." The chief himself stalked ahead, majestic as an eagle. He was an exceedingly chesty chief. He stuck up his chin and threw out his breast as if he owned the universe. "See how splendidly that chief carries himself," said the gentleman. "Yes," replied the lady, "and see how splendidly his wife carries that stove!"

In the vast and varied field of industrial electricity are many openings for women. From the running of an electrical engine to the manufacture of electrical instruments there is employment for the woman who has qualified herself to do it.

Have you noted recently the number of alleged wise men who feel a call to lay down the law as to the proper sphere and duties of women? Such would be authorities on women folk are plentiful as grand dukes in Russia. How many years, pray, have these men been women that they should know all about it? Let them wait till they themselves have been women awhile before taking it on themselves to instruct the feminine sex as to what its sphere is. Stupendous is the conceit of the masculine being!

One of the most promising signs of the times is the sight of young, wealthy and beautiful women on every hand turning from the empty pleasures of fashion and society to take on themselves solid, useful work for the ignorant and unfortunate. Never before were so many rich women engaged in real philanthropic work, not mere ostentatious charity. Early these have discovered that no lasting happiness can be found outside of useful work.

Note.—Professor James H. Tufts of the co-ed University of Chicago asks his class in ethics the following pertinent questions: "Do you tell white lies?" "Do you tell harmless but outlandish and untrue stories?" "Do you hand your fare to the conductor after he has passed you without seeing you?" Do you?

SOME TAME REINDEER

INTERESTING HERDS FOUND IN HIGHLANDS OF NORWAY.

Lapps Care for Them and with Them Lead a Wandering Life—Beasts Let Camera Man Advance at Pleasure.

A vast expanse of rolling hills, sparsely inhabited in summer, in winter wholly deserted by man, a land destitute of trees, where patches of coarse grass and creeping shrubs alternate with tracts of stony desolation, a land of barrenness and utter solitude, and purest, most invigorating air—such is the country known as the "Vidden," or Highlands of Norway. Stretching inland at an average altitude of 2,000 feet, they are seldom visited by the ordinary travelers, for the simple reason that there is little or no accommodation for tourists.

Here the wild reindeer roam at their will. And here also the Lapp with his tame herd drifts and wanders to and fro all the summer long. A primitive nomadic life is his. He carries on his back all the clothes that he possesses, sleeps under the open sky ... made of reindeer skins, and ... of coarse bread, coffee ... teeth by catching occasional ... from the nearest stream. All his worldly goods are comprised in the forest of moving horns, which he follows so patiently over hill and dale. In a large herd only a portion of the 300 or 400 beasts belong to the Lapp. Some are the property of a company, and others are owned by private persons.

In summer there is no difficulty in keeping the herd together. A man, a woman and a dog are in attendance. One wonders what they would do if the animals chose to stampede; pursuit would be useless, as anyone can realize who has ever seen the wild reindeer bounding lightly up the hillside. Fortunately, the tame herd seem quite contented with their lot. In the winter, when the Lapp is unable to follow so closely, and frequently loses them for days at a time, they do break away, and now and again a strayed one joins his wild brethren and returns to a life of freedom.

It was a grand sight to see the herd coming over the brow of a hill above the river where we were fishing. Suddenly the whole hillside seemed to be in motion, and the effect was enhanced by the fact that the dusky forms of the brown deer were scarcely visible, and the white ones moved like stately ghosts amid a swaying mass of vague, indeterminate forms.

"It is the reindeer herd," said our Norwegian fisherman; "now you will get a 'hync' (chance) to photograph them."

We did not anticipate how easy this would be, and scrambled breathlessly up the hill, snapping shot at impossible distances, till we found that our approach created no disturbance in the herd. The Lapp was friendly and cordial. He was also very drunk. He offered to lasso a "meget storbock" (very big buck) and hold him in a good position to be photographed. For this purpose he produced a piece of rope two yards long, and, singing a doleful ditty, attempted to capture the beast. But the fumes of the "brandy-wine" were too much for him. Every other minute he tripped on the rough ground and fell down. Neither drunken song nor tipsy cajolery would induce a "stor bock" to be captured. This mattered little, as we found no difficulty in approaching near enough for our purpose. The strange, heavy-headed, sleepy-looking beasts had no objection to us, and only evinced mild curiosity as to our proceedings. It will be noticed that the horns are still in velvet, which accounts for their unusually massive appearance. A few heads were almost clean, but it was still early in September, and another three weeks would have made a great difference in their appearance.

Too Particular.

"I don't see why you object to carrying my bundles," pouted the young wife. "Col. Lushleigh is as dignified a gentleman as exists, I'm sure, and yet he has no such notions."

"How do you make that out?" snorted the recalcitrant husband. "Lushleigh wouldn't be seen on the street with a bundle."

"Yes, he would, too. His wife tells me he comes home every night carrying quite a package."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Followed Her Instructions.

Mrs. N—— was giving instructions to her new servant: "Before removing the soup plates, Mary, always ask each person if he or she would like any more."

"Very good, madam."

Next day Mary, respectfully bowing to one of the guests, inquired: "Would the gentleman like some more soup?"

"Yes, please."

"There isn't any."—... Chicago Journal.

GROWTH OF ENGLISH FEET

Shoes of Old-Time Beauties Too Small for Modern Women to Wear.

That the race of women is growing taller, and that the small hands and feet on which our ancestresses prided themselves are disappearing in favor of large and useful extremities, was borne in upon me recently, says a writer in the London Graphic, when, visiting a museum, I observed in a glass case some shoes, relics of an earlier century.

There was the shoe of Catherine de Medici, somewhat clumsy, with a high heel fastened to a flat sole, and a narrow toe tapering to a square end, but yet small in dimension.

There was the black satin heelless slipper, marvellously straight and narrow, of the Empress Josephine, a little slipper absolutely suited to the dainty, languorous Creole, who reclined on a sofa and twisted her favorite cashmere shawls around her in picturesque and careless folds.

But the wonder of wonders to me was the tiny brocade shoe, a very Cinderella's slipper, high-heeled and gold-embroidered, of the Princesse de Lamballe, that innocent and lovely creature, whose charming head, dressed by a hairdresser pressed into service, was after death carried on a pike and held up to Queen Marie Antoinette's window by the ruthless mob.

Such a little shoe can hardly be conceived. It is no bigger than a child's, and I doubt if any woman of to-day could put it on.

FRESH SALT WATER ICE.

Lengthy Exposure to the Sun's Rays Makes Iceberg's Surface Fresh.

It is often asserted by mariners that the apex of the larger icebergs are entirely free from saline matter and that this is conclusive evidence that the berg originally forms on dry land, proving the existence of a great continent around the poles.

It may not be generally known, however, says the English Fish Trades Gazette, that salt water ice if exposed to heat—to the summer sun—is thereby freed from salt.

Dr. Hamer quotes the experience of arctic explorers—Nansen and the duke of the Abruzzi—who describe the mineral salts of sea water as being separated out like hoar frost upon the surface when the temperatures of from 30 degrees to 40 degree centigrade are recorded, and who note the almost complete freedom of saline taste of the water obtained from projecting ice shafts "which have been exposed to the rays of the sun during a summer, and are thus freed from the greater part of their salt."

LOBSTER MORTALITY HIGH.

Out of a Brood of 10,000 Rarely More Than One or Two Young Ones Reach Maturity.

A lobster lays thousands of eggs, most of which hatch, but few ever live to grow up. This, says an article on "Nature and Science" in St. Nicholas, is not the fault of the mother, for she carries them about with her for nearly a year, and with admirable instinct guards them as she does her own life. When the young are set free, her duty is done, for they must then shift for themselves. Though hardly larger than mosquitoes, being about one-third of an inch long, the little ones leave their parents on the bottom and swim toward the light—to the surface, where, from one to two months, if fortune favors them, they lead a free, roving life. The open sea is a poor nursery for such weaklings, which becomes the sport of every storm and the prey of numberless hungry mouths. Out of a brood of 10,000 it would be a rare chance for more than one or two lobsters to reach maturity, or finally to end their career in the kitchen or the chafing dish.

Wants Pay from the Czar.

Mr. Seddon, the premier of New Zealand, is being pestered by a constituent who wants him to collect a little debt of £20,000 from the czar, repeated applications to St. Petersburg having had no result. It seems that a couple of years ago the applicant solved to his own satisfaction the problem of the determination of sex, and communicated the secret to the czar. This fact and the recent birth of an heir to the Russian throne he regards as standing in the relation of cause and effect.—London Chronicle.

Woes of the Wreckers.

Looking over the storm-swept Pentland Firth, with its dangerous rocks and fierce currents, I remarked to the Orkney pilot: "This must be a great place for wrecks."

"Wracks, man," he shouted, "there's mony a braw farm in Orkney got oot o' wracks, but the Breetish government has put a leethoose here and a leethoose there, and you," pointing to the double lighthouse on the Skerries, "yon's twa—there is no chance of wracks for a puir fisher body noo."—Cornhill Magazine.

The Peary Meteorite.

After lying for seven years on the Cobb dock at the Brooklyn navy yard, the largest mass of native iron known to be in existence in the world has been transported to the American museum of natural history, and now is on exhibition there. This mass, which is more than 11 feet long, 7½ feet high and six feet thick, weighs about 37 tons, and consists of metallic iron alloyed with nearly eight per cent. of nickel and a little cobalt.—St. Nicholas.

Coins in South Africa.

Until recently, the smallest coin in circulation in South Africa had the value of six cents; now two-cent pieces have been introduced.

BESET BY WOLVES FOR THREE NIGHTS

AWFUL TRIP WITH CORPSE OVER ALASKAN TRAIL.

FIGHTS SLEEP AND BEASTS

Fire Alone Saves Man and Burden on Long and Desolate Journey—Almost Crazed by Lack of Rest.

Tacoma, Wash.—The story told by M. A. Mahoney, who brought the body of the late Mayor Humes, of Seattle, from Fairbanks, in the interior of Alaska, is a gruesome one. His experiences along the trail are worthy of the morbid pen of Poe or the imagination of Stevenson. Mahoney is frank enough to confess that could he have foretold the hardships that awaited him on that road of ice and snow, he would never have undertaken the journey.

He was scarcely two days out of Fairbanks when his worries began with the cries of wolves. Mahoney brought his dog team to a stop and listened. In a short time the wail was repeated. This time it was answered by another, coming from a point down the trail, but unmistakably nearer.

Mark Mahoney knew that a big pack of timber wolves had struck his trail, and that from that hour he must pit his brain against their hunger; match his wit and cunning against theirs. Unarmed, he stood and reflected. Barring accidents, he knew that three long days and nights lay before him before he could hope for human help. He had covered a vast stretch of territory that day, and was tired. As he listened to the walls of the hungry pack coming closer and closer he knew there was no sleep for him that night. And there was none.

There was only one thing for him to do, of course, and the fact that he brought the body through safely shows that he did it. He spoke to the leader of his dog team, and they, too, hearing and understanding the "call of the wild," wheeled quickly and made off for the woods in a direct right angle to the trail.

Once under the shelter of the pines and firs, Mahoney built a log fire and proceeded to get himself and his dogs a hasty supper. It was well that he acted quickly, for hardly had the evening meal been finished when the wolves arrived.

Mahoney placed the casket containing the remains of Mayor Humes as close to the fire as he dared, and then sat down. The dogs, from sheer weariness and fright, crept between the box and the crackling wood fire, and lay there, whining through the long watches of the night.

All night long that lonely camp, pitched upon one of the most desolate and solitary trails in all the frozen recesses of Alaska, was surrounded by a row of gleaming eyes. Mahoney sat there alone, the casket for his seat, and stared back into the eyes that gleamed so hungrily at him. Sleep? It was out of the question. Rest? Every nerve in the man's body was straining to a tension that bespoke a breaking.

There is an end to all things, how*ever, and after what seemed to be the* passing of an eternity the morning sun scattered the shadows and the wolves slunk away. Mahoney once more stepped out upon the trail.

All that day he pursued his way over mountains, through timber, across rivers and over plains, and not once did he see a sign or hear a sound from the pack that he knew too well were silently following his footsteps. But no sooner had the sun begun to dip toward the western horizon than he again heard the wail of the wolf—a long, unnatural, blood-curdling wail, and again he spoke to the leader of his dog team, and again the trail was left and Mahoney struck for the sheltering shadows of the wood.

If he were tired the night before, he was desperate now. After he had fed himself and his dogs he arranged the corpse as he had the night before. This time, however, he placed the coffin against the trunk of a tree, and leaned his back against it as he settled himself for another sleepless watch for the coming of another day.

His main fight that night was against sleep. As a consequence he gathered a quantity of pine knots and lighting one, he tied it to his right hand ... the ... of the flames, ... would burn him, and naturally cause him to be wide-awake. He would then get up, throw more wood on the fire, and return to the coffin. He kept this up all night long, and the wrist of his right arm bears evidence of how faithfully.

As on the day before, the wolves departed upon the coming of the dawn, although they followed him as relentlessly as they had done ever since the trail was struck, and the third and last night that Mahoney went without sleep, and almost without food, will be kept green in his memory as long as he lives.

As usual, Mahoney left the trail some little time before sundown, made his camp and gathered a large quantity of wood. He knew that if he could weather the night, his fight against sleep and beast would be ended, for the next day would find him at a roadhouse, and from then on it would be easy sailing.

Everything went well until three o'clock. From then on until morning it was not so much of a fight for the preservation of the remains of the late mayor as it was for the preservation of the life of Mahoney. The wolves, their hunger increasing, grew bolder, and despite the fact that the fire was burning as brightly as the fires of the previous night had done, the gray timber terrors crept closer and closer. Ever and anon one, overbold, would jump out of the shadow circle cast by the flames of the fire and snap viciously at the feet of the silent watcher.

All night long Mahoney fought these wolves. He would take a long piece of pine timber, and, with one end burning, would strike and smash at the glowing eyes and gleaming teeth, and in that way he not only kept himself awake, but he also drove back his foes.

When morning finally came, Mahoney, half-crazed through fear and loss of sleep, once more took the trail, and at noon that day he came to a roadhouse, where he was received, fed and put to bed. He slept until eight o'clock the next morning, when he at once took to the trail, and from that time until he reached Valdez he was not compelled to spend a single night alone, nor did he again hear from the unwelcome guests that had followed him for three days and nights.

There are white hairs on Mahoney's head to-day. They were absent when he left Fairbanks.

BEAR CAUSES PANIC AMONG CHORUS GIRLS.

Animal Rushes from Its Cage, Claws Actors, and Drives Performers Over Footlights.

New York.—During a rehearsal in the new Colonial theater the other day a bear escaped from his cage, rushed to the stage, attacked several of the performers, and before he was overcome had so severely bitten and clawed several of them that they had to be taken to their homes.

Miss Libby Blondell and Junie McCree were the most severely injured. As the bear rushed on to the stage he struck Miss Blondell and knocked her down. When she fell the bear rolled over her, and, enraged by her screams and attempts to free herself, struck out savagely at her.

McCree seized the brute and tried to drag it away from the actress, but his strength was not sufficient, and he, too, was bitten and deep gashes were cut in his arms and legs by the bear's claws.

So terrified were the chorus girls on the stage that many of them leaped over the footlights into the orchestra. Stage hands and men of the company secured rope and finally made a prisoner of the bear.

The bear was to be used in a wrestling act and was thought to be safely in his cage while the rehearsal was in progress. Owing to the injuries sustained by the principal members of the company the opening of the theater was postponed.

Dog Went 300 Miles Alone.

Kansas City.—The remarkable attachment for its home place is shown in the case of Carlo, a fine water spaniel belonging to James Dingman, who several weeks ago left Stroud, O. T., for Idaho. Carlo was tied in one of the cars with the stock. He stood the trip for 300 miles, but the desire to get back to the old home place evidently grew upon him. Mr. Dingman thought it was safe to untie the dog, but no sooner had the animal been loosed than it jumped out of the car and made a bee line for Stroud. It never stopped until it had traveled the whole 300 miles and reached home almost starved.

MATCHES IGNITED BY HORSEWHIPPING.

Young Man's Clothes Set on Fire While Doctor Punishes Him for Insulting Wife.

Chicago.—"The Horsewhipping of Stevens," or how Dr. Robert H. Harvey acted as dispenser of justice, incendiary, fireman and Good Samaritan, became a part of the Harrison street police library the other day. It was classified under "true stories stranger than fiction." Leroy Stevens, a young man, appeared at the Harvey home one evening and annoyed Mrs. Harvey. The physician came home, seized Stevens and applied the horsewhip several times. One of the strokes of the lash ignited matches in Stevens' vest pocket and set him on fire.

The fact that his victim's clothing was ablaze was not discovered at once by Dr. Harvey, who stood behind the man applying the lash. Then in his anxiety to save the culprit from being burned to death Dr. Harvey ran to a stable close by where a coachman was cleaning carriages and returning with a hose doused Stevens from head to foot with water.

It is alleged Stevens annoyed several persons and on several occasions it was charged he had insulted Mrs. Harvey. The man made his appearance as a general rule late in the afternoon. The fatal day he went to the rear of Dr. Harvey's residence and summoned Mrs. Harvey to the door.

Just at this point Dr. Harvey, returning from a visit to a patient, turned into the alley. He saw the man and, turning his horse about, stopped just out of view. Taking the whip from his buggy, he crawled along the wall leading into his yard.

All unaware of his danger, Stevens was talking to Mrs. Harvey. She saw her husband approach with the whip, but engaged the prospective victim's attention. Suddenly Stevens felt the lash across his neck. Again and again he was struck. Quaking with fear, his limbs failed him and he was unable to escape.

Dr. Harvey never even looked at his victim as he applied the lash until he saw smoke and a flame and heard Stevens' painful wail.

Efforts to extinguish the flames were unsuccessful until the physician ran to a near-by stable and seized a hose. Finally the fire was extinguished and Stevens, almost unconscious, was taken into the physician's home, where his burns were attended to. Then Stevens was held until a policeman was summoned. In court the prisoner, admitting his guilt, was sentenced to the bridewell for something like 203 days.

BURIED CHILD ALIVE.

Wisconsin Man and His Sister-in-Law Are Held on Awful Charge.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.—William Crawford and his sister-in-law, Frances Crawford, were bound over to the circuit court without bonds the other day on a charge of murder in the first degree. Crawford has a wife and five children, three of whom are young men, while the woman has an 18-year-old son and a husband who is in an insane asylum.

Several children are said to have been born to the accused and each time the offspring is said to have been disposed of without the knowledge of the authorities, the father threatening the lives of any member of the family who dared expose his acts.

On January 10 a baby girl was born to the woman in the two-room hut of the Crawfords, 12 miles above this city, which was occupied by nine persons, the three young men, Crawford, his wife, and two small children, the sister-in-law, and a grandfather.

After the birth of the child the father took it to the barnyard and buried it alive in a manure heap, where officers discovered it after his arrest.

In the hearing a son of Crawford and the son of the woman gave strong testimony. Crawford's wife refused to see him at the jail and wept bitterly as she reviewed her wretched condition during the last ten years.

It has developed that two years ago the body of a child was devoured by the hogs on the Crawford place.

Hitches Girls to His Sleigh.

Odessa.—Onlevski Viestnik, a young and wealthy noble of the Veletz district, drives a victoria or sleigh to which he hitches four peasant girls, the reins being tied to their arms. When he considers it necessary he whips them vigorously. His plows and harrows are also drawn by girls. The local authorities have refused to interfere and the peasants themselves are threatening violence.

STORE-WINDOW "MUSEUM."

Attractive and Instructive Display Which Draws Trade in the Drug Line.

Perhaps the most dignified method of luring crowds is the one invented by a firm of wholesale druggists that exhibits the various stages in the manufacture of well-known drugs, from the crude original mineral or the original plant down to the familiar final products, says Pearson's Magazine. There, for instance, is the quinine exhibit, neatly labeled and boxed, showing quinine in its various stages of manufacture up to the flaky, snowy powder, the taste of which is more bitter than gall. Copper ores are displayed, showing, step by step, how the metal is taken out of the mineral, and how, step by step, the manufacturer produces the beautiful sky-blue lumps of sulphate of copper, one of the rankest of poisons. Opium poppies are there, in full bloom and otherwise, and the different exhibits show, stage by stage, the different products that lead eventually to the finished product of this plant, the nerve-deadening opium. In short, scores of diverse drugs are shown in their successive stages of development and the exhibits are as neat and minute and perfect as if prepared for the drug exhibit at a world's fair.

PORCUPINES FOND OF SALT

Old Brine-Tub in Adirondack Camp Proves Strong Attraction to the Animals.

Some men who were camping in the Adirondacks several years ago, on breaking camp in the autumn, left an old tub which was saturated with salt brine. On returning to the same camp the next year, says St. Nicholas, they found that the tub had been gnawed until little of it was left. They were not long in finding out what animal had done the work, for the camp was overrun with Canadian porcupines. At night they became such a nuisance that the campers were obliged to kill them to protect their property. The handle of a paddle was gnawed half through.

The explanation of their presence in such numbers during that year, when they had not been noticeably abundant in the previous year, is that they had made a rendezvous of the camp, being attracted by the old brine-tub. On this they feasted all winter, and for that reason were greatly pleased with the locality.

An interesting query is this: Is the liking for salt an acquired or a natural taste? Were they ever able to gratify that taste to any extent before man gave them a chance to do so?

IMPROVED OPPORTUNITY.

Bridegroom Went on His Honeymoon While the Bride Went Back to Work.

A good story is told of a domestic in an East End family who had been a long time in her situation, and who "gave notice" because she was going to be married, relates the Duluth News-Tribune. The girl who was engaged to take her place sent word to her mistress to be that she would not be able to begin her duties for at least a fortnight after the date on which her predecessor was to be married. The maid was asked by her mistress whether she would agree to postpone the date of the wedding, but she declined to do so, bearing in mind the old adage: "Change the date, change the face." She said, however, that she didn't mind getting married and coming back for a time, until the other girl could assume her duties, and this was finally agreed upon, as the young man offered no objection. Half an hour after the ceremony the girl was performing her customary duties, and her mistress said to her, smiling:

"And I suppose your husband has gone back to his work, too, Matilda?"

"Oh, no, indeed, ma'am," replied the girl. "He bane gone on his honeymoon."

BANK SHOWS ITS MONEY.

Institution in Italian Quarter of Philadelphia Makes Display of Cash.

The banks of the Little Italy are among the most curious sights in that quarter of the town because of the kind of business they do and the various purposes they serve, as announced by the signs on them and by reason, too, of the displays they sometimes make in their show windows, says the Philadelphia Record. Perhaps the most unique in this respect is the establishment of Giovanni Recchione, at No. 721 Carpenter street, said to be the oldest Italian bank in the city. Mr. Recchione's display consists of real money of all denominations, paper and coin, and of about every government in the world.

The notes and pieces are spread out in such a way that the value of most of them may be seen from the street, and it is a particularly good advertisement because it convinces the depositor that Mr. Recchione has the goods. The display is separated from the street not only by the window glass, but also by a wire netting, and it is on view every day and night.

PROUD GRAND DUKES

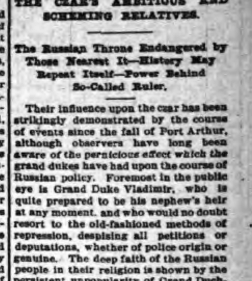
THE CZAR'S AMBITIOUS AND SCHEMING RELATIVES.

The Russian Throne Endangered by Those Nearest It—History May Repeat Itself—Power Behind So-Called Ruler.

Their influence upon the czar has been strikingly demonstrated by the course of events since the fall of Port Arthur, although observers have long been aware of the pernicious effect which the grand dukes have had upon the course of Russian policy. Foremost in the public eye is Grand Duke Vladimir, who is quite prepared to be his nephew's heir at any moment, and who would no doubt resort to the old-fashioned methods of repression, despising all petitions or deputations, whether of police origin or genuine. The deep faith of the Russian people in their religion is shown by the persistent unpopularity of Grand Duchess Vladimir; 31 years ago, when the grand duke married Duchess Marie of



GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.

Mecklenburg (she is the aunt of the prince consort of the Netherlands) the bride refused to follow the usual rule of becoming a member of the Orthodox Greek church, and she has ever since re*mained a Lutheran, though, of course,* her children are brought up in the Russian state religion. A year or so ago, she with her son, Grand Duke Cyril, was thrown out of a motor car whilst holiday-making in the Riviera. The occurrence horrified the peasants, who heard of it, not a little; but it was only what they expected from an infidel. Grand Duke Cyril has gained public sympathy by his romantic attachment to the grand duchess of Hesse, but apparently the obstacles to the marriage have not yet been removed.

What the czar has to fear is not so much the uprising of his people, but a palace revolution instituted by his august relatives when his actions do not command their approval. A century ago his ancestor was "removed" in a manner equaled only by the Servian tragedy of May 29, 1903, and curiously enough Count Pahlen, who was the leading spirit in the removal, is to-day represented on the czar's entourage by a direct descendant.

The unwillingness of the grand ducal faction to allow the czar to depart from Russia or even to consent to the czarina's absence just now (though she will, it is said, shortly visit Germany) is due to the fact that the people will submit to their acknowledged ruler's action, but would decline to allow a regency in name, though it apparently exists in fact.

The grand dukes have been singularly unfortunate in the creatures they have selected to carry out their plans. Alexieff, for whom they secured the appointment of viceroy of the far east, has plunged Russia into a war of which the end is not yet. And the procurator of the holy synod, M. Pobiedonostzeff, represents the most reactionary element in Russian affairs, though the recent addition of stripes to his parade trousers may be an indication of greater influence with the czar! All the czar's relatives share in the vast sum known as the Romanoff family fund, over which the czar is said to have absolute control.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, April 27, 1905.

One who has reason to hold his head in shame has the temerity to remark that the local newspapers have hurt the town by publishing the exact account of a disgraceful exhibition. Doesn't it occur to you that the culpable ones are those who participate in such affairs. Publicity is a pretty good police officer.

An evangelist says that every bachelor should be taxed until he is 30 and if unmarried then he should be put in the penitentiary. We will wager something that the evangelist is a married man. It is a good thing for some of us that he doesn't make the laws.—Elizabeth Times.

Aye, aye Brother Sauer. But don't say anything to Mr. Hillery.

A wise editor says: "A man told us the other day that we did not publish all the things that happened. We should say not. In the first place, there is somebody else depending on us for a living. If we printed all that happens we would soon be with the angels. In order to please the people we must print only the nice things said of them and leave the rest to gossip. Yet it's a fact we don't publish all the news. If we did wouldn't it make spicy reading? But it would be for one week only; the next week you would read our obituary. All the news is all right when it's about the other fellow."—Westfield Standard.

Having the same object though varying materially in its general scheme to the Tyler excise ordinance now in the Plainfield Common Council, a bill has been introduced in the Assembly of New York State which will confine the sale of liquor to the business sections of cities, towns and villages. The bill will come up for action this week and is is scheduled for passage. Assemblyman Wainwright, of Westchester, who is the father of the measure, says that those who have studied the question thoroughly believe that any residence section would vote to keep out saloons and his proposed law will give them the opportunity to do so. The residence section is defined in the bill to be any clearly described, contiguous, compact section or territory in a city or incorporated village bounded by street, corporation or other well recognized lines or boundaries and containing not fewer than 300 nor more than 5,000 qualified electors. "In the first place," said Mr. Wainwright, in referring to his bill, "it was my idea to do away with the isolated saloons in purelly residence blocks, and not to prohibit saloons along well recognized business thoroughfares no matter whether these business thoroughfares cut through residence districts or not. For that reason my bill contains a provision excepting business streets, which are defined as 'a portion of any street, between two cross streets, or 500 feet long, 75 per cent. of the abutting property on which is used for business purposes.' There is in the Wainwright bill the further provision that in the case of such a block both sides of the street shall be included in the exception. In other words, if one side of a street was used for business purposes and the other side for residences the business side was to control, so that one side of such a street couldn't be 'dry' and the other side 'wet.' A street coming within this description anywhere in a district laid out by request of 40 per cent. of the electors, confirmed by a vote of the resident electors as a district in which liquor was to be prohibited, would be excepted on account of its character as a business street. As the bill passed the Assembly, it also provided for exceptions in the case of hotels having fifty or more rooms and in the case of clubs. The whole purpose of this bill is to put the saloons where they belong. The only ones that would be put out of business are those isolated ones which you find here and there in a street given over to residences. It is true that through the operation of the law one side of a street might be restricted and the other not. These boundary streets would occur probably in the purely residence districts. Should it result in saloons cropping up on the 'wet' side of such streets there are plenty of ways by which this could be stopped by the inhabitants of the contiguous districts."

The measure now on second reading in the local Common Council is more drastic than the Wainwright bill for it establishes a saloon district, its limits being practically those of the business section, and settles the matter absolutely. It is copied after an ordinance in force in Minneapolis and other cities where it is claimed to work effectively. The majority of the city fathers favor Mr. Tyler's scheme and it will no doubt be put to a test before very long.

AMUSEMENTS.

Majestic Theatre, New York. How is Kellar's performance to be described? Is would be utterly impossible to point out its merits no matter what care might be used in elaborating details. About the only thing that can be asserted of him, in justice, is to say that he is the greatest in the world in his line. Kellar stands preeminent in the domain of mechanical appliances while the same may be said of him in the realm of mathematical sciences. His Levitation of Princess Karnac. His cabinet trick, growing of real roses of a pot of sand, Valadon's crystal ladder, his drum that can't be beaten and well I'm—!!! These latter are truly marvelous. Next week he will furnish the Majestic Theatre patrons an entirely new programme.

Art is assuredly the Belasco watchward, and Mrs. Leslie Carter at the Belasco Theatre, New York, is exemplifying its fullest meaning by her wonderful performance of "Adrea." In the impressive Belasco tragedy, vivid in its dramatic moments and sterling in its literary worth, she has scaled artistic heights that overshadow even the lasting memories of her Zaza and Du Barry. Triumphs all these have been, but of the widest difference in quality; and now that Mrs. Carter as Adrea has entered that most difficult field of artistic endeavor, classic tragedy, earning by virtue of her subtle graces and her magnetic powers the praises of the most conservative and exacting critics, she may well consider her present achievement the crowning effort of a career which, though compassed within so few years, has risen to eminence on the solid principles of true dramatic art. The critics themselves have set the example of speaking with enthusiasm of her great attainments and her stirring achievements, until she now stands alone among the great artists of the English-speaking stage. The public, quick to appreciate the mark of genius, continue to fill the Belasco Theatre with audiences that defy its capacity.

LITERARY.

There is a most attractive outdoor air about the May number of Scribner's Magazine. It has a charming colored cover; a drawing, "Flowers of May," by Sarah S. Stilwell, reproduced in colors; a description of Salvini's Tuscan farm in a wild region of Italy; "The Awakening of the Trees," written and illustrated by Frank French; a glimpse of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, by Benjamin Brooks, with a wonderful series of Elmendorf's pictures; "Breaking Trail," by Frank E. Schoonover, giving an account of a winter trip in Canada, with the author's pictures reproduced in tint, and Edward B. Child's description of the great marble quarries in Vermont, with a series of his own striking pictures. There are also outdoor poems—"To a Mountain Lake," by Martha G. D. Bianchi; "Amid the Orchards," by Mary Findlater; "When We Two Walked in Arcady," by Caroline Duer; and "The Desert," by Ingersoll Condert, with decorations by Haskell.

WESTFIELD AMATEURS SCORE AT Y. M. C. A. HALL

"BELSHAZZAR" SINGERS ASSIST IN ASSOCIATION ORCHESTRA CONCERT.

All the season's records for attendance were broken Monday at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, when the association orchestra held its nineteenth concert. The auditorium was filled.

The audience listened to one of the most attractive programmes that the popular musical organization has ever presented. Strength was added to the programme by the appearance of the "Belshazzar," singers who helped make a recent amateur production of the cantata "Belshazzar" a great success in Westfield.

The quartette was made up of Eva Wells, a twelve-year-old soprano of remarkable skill; Mrs. E. P. Waterbury, contralto; Mrs. A. B. Price, contralto; E. P. Wetmore, tenor. Miss Julia Fink was accompanist. They sang chorus parts from the cantata with unusual force and spirit. Miss Wells sang two solos.

The orchestral numbers were well chosen, and splendidly rendered. The range was good, and none of the pieces was too heavy for the enjoyment of the untrained ear. Mr. Bennett, the cornet soloist, scored an individual hit with a solo.

The orchestra played under the direction of C. Kenneth Shapp.

Mrs. Babcock's Talk on Travels.

The meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, to be held at the W. C. T. U. rooms, Madison avenue on Thursday afternoon, will be addressed by Mrs. Babcock, who will talk of her travels through Norway and Sweden. A silver offering for the work will be received.

SOCIETY EASTER DANCE

Annual Function Attended by Fashionable Folk.

CHARMING GOWNS

Handsome Decorations a Feature of the Affair at Casino—List of Those Participating.

Following the quiet season of Lent, society folk resumed their activity Monday at the assembly dance held at the Casino. It was the last of the series given through the winter and spring and was marked by the attendance of a large number of local and out-of-town guests, not a few Plainfielders entertaining a number of guests over Easter for the dance. The decorations were appropriate to the season, Easter lilies predominating in a huge bank of palms, ferns and flowering plants arranged about the stage. The orchestra was seated behind the floral decorations and discoursed one of its most popular programmes, nearly every number being encored.

The usual assembly crowd was present, and in addition there were about twenty-five guests from out-of-town. The social features of the affair were greatly enjoyed until a latte hour. From now on there will be many events to engage the attention of society, including several weddings, and altogether the season will be a busy one, until it is time for the annual migration to the seashore and mountain.

ONE STORY ONLY.

Trust Company Decides to Make This the Limit of New Building.

The plans for the Plainfield Trust Company's new building on Park avenue, are about complete and have been submitted to the building committee for approval. It has been definitely decided to build a one story structure and the interior has been decided upon. There is still one matter yet to be agreed upon and that is the amount of money to be expended upon exterior decorations. This will probably be settled within the coming week and then the matter of awarding contracts will be taken up. As soon as this is done, the actual work of construction will be started at once and pushed rapidly toward completion.

The company desires to occupy its new building by the last of the summer or early fall and all contracts will be given out with a time limit, with this object in view.

"NICHOLAS VEDDER" MOURNS "OLD RIP"

Edward Varey, of This Place, Supported Joseph Jefferson in Famous Play.

FRIEND OF EDWARDS

Casino's Manager Chats Interestingly on His Friendship With the Dean of American Actors.

While men and women throughout the country heard with regret of the death of Joseph Jefferson, the veteran actor, which occurred at West Palm Beach Sunday night, it came as a distinct personal loss to two friends in this city, Edwin Varey, himself one of the deans of the profession, and Maze Edwards, the genial manager of the Casino. To both he was a close acquaintance while the former was a member of his company for many years, playing "Nicholas Vedder" to Jefferson's "Rip VanWinkle." Failing health compelled him to quit the part and his retirement was commented upon in a reminiscent vein by many of America's best known critics.

Mr. Varrey has just passed through a long period of sickness and his weakened condition made it impossible for him to be interviewed yesterday, but Maze Edwards was prevailed upon to recall some interesting bits of Mr. Jefferson's life as he knew them. In his career as a theatrical manager, Mr. Edwards has been associated more or less with actors and actresses at the head of the profession and the impersonator of "Rip" was one of them.

"I first became acquainted with Jefferson," said Mr. Edwards, "when his home was at Hobokus, this State, but it was not until I was managing Edwin Booth's tour in 1881 that I saw a great deal of him. The great tragedian and he thought a lot of each other and they never lost an opportunity to meet while on the road. In that year it was our intention to spend some time with him at his plantation in Louisiana as we were going from Memphis to New Orleans but bad weather so delayed us we had to forego the pleasure. Jefferson and I continued to meet at intervals and we had many and many a pleasant chat. When I came to Plainfield I maintained a correspondence with him and at one time, just a short while ago, I all but secure his promise to visit this city and give a lecture or a reading.

"As an actor, Jefferson had few equals while personally, he was genial, whole-souled and a friend worth having. He served an arduous apprenticeship and gained an easy command of that technique which the training of the old school supplied, first becoming a popular actor, then an artist of consummate skill. Everybody knew him as "Rip," but his interpretation of "Golightly" in "Lend Me Five Shillings" and "Bob Acres" in "The Rivals" were impersonations that brought out his versatility. I heartily endorse all that has been said of him in respect to his lovable traits and he well deserved the title 'dean of the profession.'"

Jefferson's last appearance in Plainfield was in the early nineties when he presented "Rip VanWinkle" at Music Hall before an audience which packed the theatre to the doors. Edwin Varrey was with him then and both were accorded an ovation such as the auditorium seldom witnessed. Members of his family are also well known artistically in Plainfield, principally his sons, Thomas and Charles B. Jefferson. The former played here on the night of April 21, 1901, taking his father's part in "Rip VanWinkle," this attraction being the last but one in Music Hall, "Quo Vadis" a few nights later closing its career. Charles Jefferson and Mr. Edwards are close friends and when the former was managing Music Hall he frequently booked the younger Jefferson's attractions, among them "Shadows of a Great City" and "A Dark Secret," the first of the successful tank dramas.

NO CHANGE, PERHAPS.

Borough Board of Education Averse to Appointing New School Physician.

Though transacting no important business, the North Plainfield Board of Education, at a meeting Monday, received two applications for the appointment as school physician to succeed Dr. J. H. Buchanan. Both were referred, though not until the matter had been thoroughly discussed.

It was stated by one member of the board that Dr. Buchanan has proven satisfactory in every way and that there is a feeling against any change, notwithstanding that the physician was on the opposite side of the political fence. His term expired with the reorganization of the board last month.

NEW ENDEAVOR UNION

OFFICERS CHOSEN

Fred C. Lounsbury, Jr., Elected President—To Draft Constitution.

In response to an invitation from J. D. DeGraff, of Dunellen, president of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, the presidents of the local Endeavor Societies, together with other representatives, met at the Y. M. C. A. Monday, for the purpose of considering the advisability of organizing a local union comprising the societies in Plainfield and vicinity. There was a good representation from this city, Dunellen, New Market and South Plainfield.

After a discussion of the subject it was decided to organize a union, and these officers were elected: President, Fred. C. Lounsbury, Jr., of the First Presbyterian church; vice president, Miss Galloway, of Warren chapel; secretary, Miss Mildred Green, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; treasurer, Clarence LaRue, of the Congregational church.

The officers were authorized to draft a constitution and bylaws and to select the heads of the various committees. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and there is every indication that the union will be a success. The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the president.

FOREMAN WINS HIS SUIT

Max Kahn Gets a Verdict Against Herzig & Kapp.

IN CIRCUIT COURT

Defendants Set Up That They Only Wanted to Dispense With His Services as Designer.

The suit of Max Kahn against Herzig & Kapp was tried before Judge Heisley in the Circuit Court, Elizabeth, Monday, and the plaintiff was given a verdict for about $1,200. Charles A. Reed, Esq., of the firm of Reed & Coddington, representing the defendants, gave notice of an appeal today and the case will be taken up. Edward Nugent, Esq., represents the plaintiff.

Mr. Kahn was at one time engaged by Herzig & Kapp, skirt manufacturers, of Watchung avenue, as a designer. He was hired December 31, 1902, in the capacity of designer and foreman of the establishment, making a yearly contract. Three months later, he alleged, the firm told him that they no longer needed his services. He called attention to the contract, which he claims was ignored and he was discharged April 1, of the following year. He had been engaged at $50 a week, but received no pay after his discharge. On the strength of this he asked the court to reimburse him to the extent of $1,289.43.

In reply the defendants stated that they only wished to dispense with Mr. Kahn's services as designer, and not as foreman, as they had another designer who they thought had more ability. Mr. Kahn added that he had been been a designer for twenty years, and if he gave up his position only for a short time, he would be unable to resume if he left the Plainfield firm because of the fact that he had been foreman.

EASTER DAY IN THE CHURCHES

Splendid Music and Beautiful Decorations in All Church Edifices.

GORGEOUS DISPLAYS

Catholics and Protestants in City and Borough Observe the Great Feast in the Church Calendar.

In all the churches Sunday Easter Day was observed, rich programmes of music and special sermons on the risen Christ marking the beautiful services. In the Catholic and Episcopal churches the feast was commemorated by particularly elaborate services, St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Catholic churches and Grace, Holy Cross, Heavenly Rest and St. Stephen's Episcopal churches all having magnificent celebrations. The Crescent Avenue and First Presbyterian, the First Baptist and Trinity Reformed also had beautiful services, as did the other churches as well.

First Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. O. S. Harring occupied the pulpit at both morning and evening services in the First Presbyterian church and preached appropriate sermons on the subjects: "How Are the Dead Raised Up," and "God Speaking Through the Son." The musical programme was arranged by Organist Clifford Braider and the solos were given by members of the choir, Miss S. Etta Hayhert, soprano; Miss Edna Nicholl, contralto; Elmer D. Cutting, tenor, and R. Wilson Derby, baritone. The anthems and solos were splendidly rendered.

In the afternoon, the Sunday-school gave the usual Easter programme with former Superintendent E. M. Cave in charge. The scholars sang carols, six children from the primary department gave an exercise and there was an address by Rev. Dr. Green, of Cranford.

First Baptist.

The Easter services at the First Baptist church were largely attended and very interesting. The pulpit platform was covered with lilies, potted plants and flowers from the conservatory of C. W. McCutchen. The morning service included a prelude, violin and organ, Miss Florence Wohlfert and Howard Case, and anthems. There was also a sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Scarlett, the service concluding with an organ postlude.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school took part in a special service, the programme being as published on Saturday. Howard Case was at the organ and Miss Florence Wohlfert assisted on the violin. There was an offering for the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. George H. Batcheler, superintendent, was in charge of the programme. Besides a short address by Pastor Chamblin, which greatly interested all, F. Newton Drake, secretary of the school, presented his annual report.

This showed that fifteen members of the school had joined the church during the year. The membership of the main school is 285, of the junior department sixty-one, of the primary department sixty-eight, a total of 427. In addition there are 123 members of the Home Department and fifty-three on the cradle roll. The average attendance for the year was 256 and the largest attendance was on rally day, when 323 persons were present. The smallest attendance was eighty-seven. The receipts from the school for the year were $713.06.

First M. E.

Special music, including anthems by the quartette choir, under the direction of Miss Jessie Utter, organist, and an appropriate discourse by the pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, comprised the Easter service at the First M. E. church, Sunday morning. The floral display was very attractive, and included lilies, palms and potted plants. In the afternoon the Sunday-school joined in programme of carols and recitations. James R. Joy, superintendent, was in charge. There were recitations by the following:

Madeline Geier, Jubilee Bowley, Blanche McVoy, Manila Symons, Carol Dunavah, Cora Bender, Howard Hile, Ethel Lynn and Katherine Smincak. There were songs by Edward Orome and Misses Greenleaf, an exercise by Katherine Bingaman, Arthur Slade, Helen Carson and Roger Stewart, of the beginners' department and another exercise by Burnett Doane, Jean Dumont, Edna Mosher, Roy Love, Walter Kennedy, Lawrence Hertz, Nellie Crego, Amelia Geier, and a poem by Earl DeNise, Alice Joy, Cora Bender, Violet Sutton and Douglass Stewart. In addition there was a short address by the pastor. At the evening service there were several anthems by the choir and a sermon by the pastor.

Trinity Reformed Church.

The congregation of Trinity Reformed church was interested in three services during the day, the first of which was held at 6:30 in the morning. It was attended by sixty members and was in charge of Frederic H. Andrews, superintendent of Warren chapel Sunday school. He made an appropriate address and Horace J. Martin rendered an Easter solo.

At the regular morning service the attendance was very large and an elaborate programme was greatly enjoyed. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, preached an Easter sermon, "The Pledge of Our Resurrection As Proven by the Resurrection of Christ," and in the musical features, solo parts were rendered by Mrs. M. D. Young, of the choir. The music was exceptionally fine and reflected credits on A. L. Titsworth, the choirmaster and organist.

As is the annual custom at this church, the Sunday-school department had charge of the evening service, Superintendent F. K. Smith presiding. An exceptionally interesting programme had been prepared and it was heard by an audience that occupied every available seat, while many late-comers had to stand. Both departments of the Sunday-school, the junior, over which Mrs. L. M. Schofield presides, and the primary, Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent, took part. There were numerous recitations, exercises and carols, the following boys and girls taking part: Primary department, Beatrice Tier, Gretchen VanZandt, Anna Lee, Walter Fisher, Etta Enander, Lulu Trewin, Beatrice Sodine, Ruth Enander, Lily Schleif, Ella Forster, Pearl Drew, Margaret Hope, Adelaide Cole, Mildred Postner, Anna Vail, Helen Leitheusser and Pauline Blair; junior department, Annette Wilson, Ralph Martin, Sadie Duffey, Edith Richards, Helen Wooley, Arthur Martin, Rosamond Rogers, Marion Haffner, Madeline Strader, Clara Flemming and Helen Keberle. Miss Cornelia Miller sang "The Palms" very acceptably. Arthur Titsworth presided at the organ and Miss Lillian A. Force at the piano, while additional accompanying work was done by an orchestra composed of H. W. Barnes and Kenneth Smart, violins; Walter Sampson, flute, and M. D. Young, cornet. The spirited singing by the Sunday-school under the leadership of W. C. Leak was very much enjoyed. During the exercises, Superintendent F. K. Smith gave his annual report for the Sunday-school as follows: Total enrollment, not including the Home Department with 190, is 759, an increase of forty-five over last year; average attendance 325, an increase of sixteen; average attendance for twenty-three Sundays 330; on eight Sundays the attendance was over 400 and the largest of any was 438. The financial report was: Balance from previous year, $149 59; total collections, $550 98; missionary fund, $311.03; making a total from all sources of $1,010.90; disbursements for supplies, $496.15, for missions, $311.03, leaving a balance of $203 72.

The floral decorations about the pulpit were very pretty, being composed of palms, plants and flowers, arranged by Mrs. VanDyke and others.

Swedish Pilgrim Church.

The Easter services at the Swedish Pilgrim church were simple but were attended by a large congregation. Pastor Lindholm gave a sermon on the subject, "Proof of the Resurrection," and Mrs. Lindholm gave a solo. The singing was assisted by a chorus choir and instrumentalists.

Faith Chapel.

The Easter exercises at Faith chapel Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the Sunday-school, comprised the singing of carols and recitations by the infant class and the members of Miss Grace Adams' class, recitations by Willie Simons and Miss Marie Visbrock, reading of Scriptures and an address by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Mason, and a prayer by Frank Stewart. The chapel was decorated with palms and lilies. There was the regular service in the morning and evening with sermons by the pastor.

Crescent Avenue.

Large congregations were evident at both morning and evening services at the Crescent Avenue church and the musical programme was one of the best in years. Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie occupied the pulpit each time and his sermons were inspiring. William P. Dunn presided at the organ and the solo parts were taken by Miss Grace J. Davis, soprano; Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto; Rhys Thomas, tenor and Herman Greinert, bass. These compose the regular choir and they were assisted by a chorus of Plainfield and New York singers. The floral decorations were composed of lilies, palms and plants grouped before the pulpit and platform.

In the afternoon, the church was the scene of the annual Sunday-school rally, the home department and those of Hope, Warren and Bushel chapels taking part. Rev. Dr. Zelie was in charge and assisting in the exercises were Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Rev. F. D Tildon and Rev. L. R. Howard and Superintendents Henry Cochran, Henry G. Squires, A. W. Duxbury and F. H. Andrews. Dr. Zelie made an address and the scholars sang carols, with piano and organ accompaniment.

Park Avenue Baptist.

The Easter programme at the Park Avenue Baptist church was rendered as published on Saturday, there being several additions by the chorus choir under the leadership of Robert Lowry. Mrs. Adelbert VonBlarkom presided at the organ. The pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, preached sermons appropriate to the occasion, morning and evening.

At the Sunday-school session in the afternoon resolutions of regret at the accident, and thankfulness for his recovery, were adopted by the school concerning the recent accident to Joseph M. Hawkins, and George E. Hall took them in person to Mr. Hawkins who is at the hospital.

Last night the Sunday-school gave a special programme consisting of seven carols, an exercise by eighteen Juniors, recitations by Miss Arline Brown, Miss Anna Clark and Miss Florence Smalley sang a solo, the school joining in the chorus. Miss Cora Brokaw also gave a recitation.

The Easter offering for the floating indebtedness was received and to the gratification of all it amounted to $410. The balance to make up $500 will be received soon.

Other recitations were given by Miss Mary Hale, Miss Edith Lowry, Miss Louise Harral and Miss May Kelley. The pianist was Miss Mary Clark. The primary exercises were in charge of Miss Kimira Runyon, superintendent, assisted by Miss Charlotte Tennant. The Easter committee comprised Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Kimira Runyon, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Miss Nellie Mine, Miss May Clark, G. E. Hall and Aaron D. Thompson, Jr.

St. Joseph's R. C. Church.

With a chorus of forty voices, Stehle's prize mass was sung at the 8:30 o'clock mass celebration in St. Joseph's church Sunday morning. A procession and recessional were features of the musical programme. The service at 10:30 o'clock was the principal one of the day. A low celebration was held at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. A. E. LaPorte was at the organ and James Haily directed the singing. A Passionist father from the Hoboken retreat was the celebrant; Rev. Father Tyrrell, and Rev. Father Miller, rector of the church, assisted.

Congregational Church.

The musical programme of the morning service at the Congregational church included the following anthems: "He is Risen," Marso; "Hosanna," Grainer; "I Am He That Liveth," King; "Resurrection," Shelley. The quartette choir comprised Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano; Miss Jessie Haynes, contralto; J. H. Sanford, tenor, and F. S. Cutter, bass. Mrs. B. S. Barnes was at the organ. Rev. C. L. Goodrich preached.

The Sunday-school held exercises in the afternoon. The children sang Easter carols; Helena Curtis, of the primary department recited; Harold Nomer, a Williams College student, gave a reading; E. C. Martin sang a baritone solo; and Rev. Mr. Goodrich delivered a talk on the Resurrection.

St. Mary's R. C. Church.

Congregations of unusual size filled St. Mary's church at the masses Sunday morning. The full high celebration was a musical feast of striking beauty. Miss Anna Daley, soprano; Miss Elizabeth Day, alto; Albert Matthews, tenor, and Joseph O'Keefe, bass, rendered the quartette and solo parts with verve and finish. Miss Mary Smith directed the music from her place at the organ. Father Bogan, rector, delivered his first long sermon, on the resurrection.

St. Stephen's P. E. Church.

Three striking musical services marked the day's observance at St. Stephen's P. E. church. The solo parts in the anthems were taken by Miss Emily Lacey, soprano; Miss Christina Sorenson, contralto; and Alfred Lacey, bass. Rev. A. S. Peck, the rector, preached at all the services, his Easter topics. Rev. Robert Lemey, rector and canon of Clonfert Cathedral, Galway County, Ireland, was the celebrant at the full high communion service in the morning.

Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church.

Easter exercises were held at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, Sunday at the morning, afternoon and evening services. Each child in the Sunday-school received a present. Rev. H. C. Ashley, pastor, was in charge. M. B. Maynard, superintendent of the school, assisted and Alfred White presided at the organ.

Grace P. E. Church.

Traditional beauty marked the music at Grace P. E. church Sunday. As in other years, the morning, carol, and evening service were rich in choral effects. The solo work was divided between William Tallamy, tenor, and Harold Kamp, bass. Herman Finck and nine of the young women sang the solo parts in the Sunday-school service. Mrs. W. A. Frazee was at the organ. Rev. E. V. Stevenson, the rector, preached.

Holy Cross Church.

Easter music made the services at Holy Cross church notable to an unusual degree. Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis did the principal solo work. She sang the evening offertory. J. Edmund Stiff, organist and choirmaster, was at the organ.

Church of the Heavenly Rest.

Two elaborate musical services were held at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Sunday. G. T. Dunham, choirmaster and organist, directed the singing. Congregations of unusual size attended both services.

Christian Church.

The only service at the Christian church, on Grove street, Sunday, was held in the afternoon, when the pastor, Rev. Phil. Parsons, preached an Easter sermon from the text "I Am the Resurrection and the Life." The music was appropriate to the day.

Marcenaier Chapel.

At the regular service in Marcenaier chapel the members sang carols and Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., gave an address. The singing was in charge of Horace J. Martin and Miss Hazel Martin acted as accompanist.

Grace M. E.

Rev. Dr. Chas. Wesley Parsons occupied the pulpit morning and evening at Grace M. E. church. At the former he preached an appropriate sermon and in the evening the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed. At the Sunday-school session the pupils sang carols and gave recitations under the direction of Miss Mary Steiner, Miss Nettie Bauermeste and Miss Mabel Stevens. The decorative features were pretty and were arranged by Andrew Wilson.

At Y. M. C. A.

William Schoss, the blind pianist, played at the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday. E. C. Martin sang Shelley's Resurrection song. Frank Leyser played the violin. The address was delivered by Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The attendance was large.

SOCIETY ENJOYS HUNT CLUB CHASE

NEARLY THIRTY JOINED IN THE RUN 'CROSS COUNTRY.

The Watchung Hunt Club held an enjoyable chase on Saturday, starting at 3:30 o'clock from Washingtonville, with nearly thirty people in the saddle. The bounds were thrown in at the farm of A. D. Phillips and the run along the side of the mountain was a pretty one, displaying fine horsemanship as the difficult passes were made. The pace to Warrenville was rather slow owing to the soft condition of the roads. There was a check at Warrenville and the hounds were again thrown in at J. D. Bozzman's farm.

From there the pace was fast over a good country to Dealaman's farm where another check was made. The hounds were thrown in again at the Cooper farm and from that point to the Barrows farm near Pedeftons, the end of the run, the scent was very fast, but none of the riders were left behind.

After the hunt, the club was entertained at a hot breakfast by Mr. and Mrs. W. deLaH. Anderson's new home, "The Wilds."

The club expressed its appreciation of the uniform courtesies shown by the farmers in allowing the riders to travel over their farms. Another run will be held on Saturday, starting from the Plainfield Country Club.

Those who joined in the Saturday's chase were George P., Mallick, Mr. and Mrs. A. Cruikshank, Dr. E. VanD. Hedges, C. W. Ismay, C. C. Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. deLa H. Anderson, C. S. Bellows, R. A. Shebbeare, Dr. Knott, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Beaton, Miss Lelia Cruickshank, Miss Helen Martin, Miss Hele Martin, Miss Beaton, Miss Gertrude Noe, Miss Helen Cruickshank, Miss May Healy, of this city; Miss Mande M. Palmer, Miss Gwendolyn Charlesworth, Captain Perry, Duncan S. Brinley and C. B. Freeman, of New York; Leon H. Freeman, S. Harold Freeman and E. E. Schmidt, of Morristown; Mr. and Mrs. Karl Milliken, Chauncey Sayre and Richard Fulcher, of East Orange; Harry A. Bourne and George Gaynor, of Cranford.

Pastor's Reception.

The Scandinavian church, of Elizabeth, which he started two years ago, when he began his work in this city, tendered a reception to Rev. L. P. Lindholm, of the Swedish Pilgrim church, Saturday night. The affair was held at the home of one of the Elizabeth parishioners. Mr. Lindholm will shortly leave his pastorate here, and the congregation presented him with a purse of money as a parting gift. The congregation, starting with three members, now numbers twenty-five.

CONSTITUTION, HIS TOPIC

David P. Hall Addressed the Equal Suffrage League.

TOLD OF ITS ORIGIN

Intellectual Discussion of the Greatest Instrument Made by Man—At Troell Inn.

David Prescott Hall gave a lecture on "The Origin and Nature of the Federal Constitution at Troell Inn, Monday afternoon, before the Equal Suffrage League and their invited guests which showed deep study and a masterly grasp of the difficult questions involved. It was listened to with earnest attention and he was warmly congratulated at its close, on his clear and interesting presentation of the subject.

The lecturer began by describing the situation of affairs which confronted the delegates to the Constitutional Convention, in view of the opposing principles held by the descendants of the Round-Heads and the Cavaliers, laying stress upon the fact that the former were used to local self-government and to the settlement of constitutional questions by the courts, while among the latter, practically all authority emanated from State sources. Hence came their insistence upon a nation of a league between States, while the former derived a government which should act directly upon the individual citizen. He sketched briefly but graphically, the struggles in the convention between these opposing principles, and the greater struggle which ensued before the people, in the campaign for and against its ratification.

The Bill of Rights, by which our liberties were guaranteed, was briefly rehearsed, and the foundation shown in their sources, the Magna Carter, or the Great Charter, the Petition of Rights and the Bill of Rights. He called attention to the fact that the recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Baivery case and in another case rested upon the provisions in the Constitution which had their origin in Magna Carter extorted by the Barons from King John more than 700 years ago.

In conclusion, he sketched briefly the famous system of so-called "checks and balances" by which the equilibrium between the departments of the government has been preserved, adverted to the simplicity of the Constitution, its elasticity and capability of expansion to meet the growing needs of the nation.

He ended by quoting from Bryce's American Commonwealth "The Institution of the United States" are believed to disclose and display "the type of institutions toward which, as by a law of fate, the rest of mankind are forced to move, some with swifter, others with slower, but all with unresting feet." Mr. Hall also recalled his hearers that Gladstone spoke of the Constitution as "the greatest work ever struck off by the hands of man."

The annual meeting of the Equal Suffrage League, which preceded the lecture, showed a membership of forty-four, as against twenty-eight a year ago. The prosperous year of the society will close with the meeting on May 22, when plans for next year's study will be adopted.

The officers of the League are: President, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall; vice president and auditor, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel Huntington; corresponding secretary, Mrs. William L. Patten; recording secretary, Mrs. Harold Durar.

FELLOW BOARDERS AND COPS ARE AFTER JIMMY

POLE, TWO WATCHES AND A ROLL DISAPPEAR SIMULTANEOUSLY.

A Pole, known to the police and his associates only as "Jimmy," is wanted by the authorities. "Jimmy" disappeared from a Polish boarding house in Exchange alley yesterday morning, and, according to John Bularo, another boarder, a gold and a silver watch, and a roll of bills disappeared from his, Bularo's, room at about the same time. The police want to ask "Jimmy" if he knows anything about the watches and the cash. Bularo owned the silver timepiece and his room-mate, Frank Sikova, owned the gold one. The roll was their joint property.

"Jimmy" had been in the boarding house only a few weeks. He said he was a seaman of sorts, and from port, presumably to look for a berth every day. Yesterday he went to the Pond shop early in the morning. He came back in a short time. He said he had been unsuccessful in the hunt for a job.

A few minutes after that he left the house. Bularo says "Jimmy" was seen to enter the locked room a few minutes before he disappeared.

ADVS. COME TO LIFE

Fast two continued to carry out the advertising scheme, and each representation was well received. "Mrs. Mosberly" was portrayed by Miss Mabel Wilson; "Mahisco," by Miss Marion Blair and Miss Marguerite Barkalew; "Ceylon Tea," by Miss Evelyn Manley and Alfred Manley, who sang a pretty Japanese song. "Uneeda Biscuit" was represented by Bertram Leggett; "Franco-American," by Miss Madeline Blair, who sang a song. F. S. Cutter, representing the "Ralston Food" and carrying a child, Dorothy McVey, sang the praises of this product. Another amusing incident was enacted by Clarence Rittenhouse who rolled a barrel of what was supposed to be "Gold Medal Best" flour on the platform. When the barrel was righted, out jumped Arthur Martin, with blackened face and wearing a flour bag bearing the name "Gold Medal." He sang a song telling of this product. The last representation was that of "Postline," by Mrs. William Trimbath, assisted by the others who were taught that this washing powder was the best and only kind to use. The entertainment was concluded with a chorus of all the ads to the tune of "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

Miss Lillian A. Force was the accompanist of the evening, and she was assisted by Miss Leggett. The entertainment was a great success and too much praise cannot be given Mrs. Charles P. Leggett, president of the Circle, under whose auspices it was given, and all the members, for their earnest work. The Circle is one of the smallest in the city, yet one of the most active. In nearly every case the costumes worn were made by members of the Circle and faithfully carried out the various advertisements.

Engagements Announced.

The engagement of Miss Abbie E. Knight, of Summit avenue, and Joseph P. Gavin, of Columbia avenue, is announced. Announcements is made of the engagement of Miss E. G. Gillerist, of Brooklyn, and William G. Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Knight, of Summit avenue.

Change in Coal Co.

George O. Stevens has severed his connections with the Consumer's Coal Company and in the future he will conduct the coal business alone at his yards on West Front street, near Grant avenue. The other partners, W. D. Manning and Fred Harris will continue in business as the Consumers' Coal Company.

PUPILS CELEBRATE DAY

Easter Observed in Schools of City and Borough.

FORMAL EXERCISES

Irving School Children Have An Exceptional Programme—At High School.

Filled with the Easter spirit, all the schools in the city and borough celebrated the feast with more or less elaborate exercises, Friday. In many cases the assembly rooms were prettily decorated with greens and palms and appreciative audiences listened to the selections, consisting mostly of singing, which was enthusiastically entered into by the pupils.

At the city High School an appropriate programme was arranged by Principal Travell, consisting solely of music. Some difficult selections were rendered in excellent style by the pupils, who showed the results of careful and hard practice. "The Risen King," a lengthy cantata in four parts, was well received while among the other selections were "God Hath Appointed a Day," "At Easter Time," "Let the Earth be Joyful," "Break Forth into Joy," by Barnaby, and "See Now the Altar." Leonard Lewis renderdd "Blossoms in the Meadow," to which he was forced to respond. Four of the faculty, Messrs. Benedict and Cuming and Messrs. Lewis and Howe, sang "Mary Magdaline" very pleasingly.

The Easter exercises at the Bryant School were also held this morning with a number of the children's parents as an audience. The exercises were simple and every number on the programme was rendered by the pupils. The list of selections in detail are as follows:

Singing by school, "Jerualem;" scripture reading; singing by school, "Weep no More;" "Crown the Victor's Brow," Edward Ford, Russel Stewart, Arthur Lewis; singing by school, "Christ Has Risen;" "Blossoms in the Meadow," Lyle Smith, Leonard Lewis; singing by school, "They Chime in Silver Notes;" solo," Easter Day," Jesse Smith; singing by school, "Jesus, King of Heaven;" solo and chorus, "I Am Glad," Lavina Fulner; singing by school, "Hosanna;" duet, "Easter Lilies Fair," Arthur and Leonard Lewis; "Hark the Song," two part song, ten boys; singing by school, "He Arose."

Lack of a chapel in which to meet as a whole, made it necessary for the pupils of the Lincoln School to assemble in their several rooms where special programmes were rendreed under the directions of the teachers in charge.

Being adverse to rendering Easter exercises on Good Friday, Miss Noel Bullock, principal of the Franklin School, arranged her Easter programme for yesterday afternoon. Several solos were included in the list of selections. The programme rendered: "He Arose," school; "They Chime in Silver Notes," school; "I Am Glad," solo, Miss McCormick, chorus, school; "Hosanna," school; "Easter Day," solo, Master Ulrich, chorus, school; "Jesus, King of Heaven," school; "Jerusalem," school; "Hark the Song," ten pupils from older classes; "Christ Has Risen," school; "Crown the Victor's Brow," solo, Miss Mann, chorus, school; "Sing the Story," school; "Easter Lilies Fair," duet, Masters Titsworth and Martin, chorus, school; "Weep No More," school.

As was the way in most of the schools, Miss Humpstone made up an elaborate musical programme for her pupils in the Washington School. Several recitations were rendered by the pupils who thoroughly enjoyed the exercises.

As is usually the case, Miss Petrie arranged a most elaborate programme for the Irving School children. All the work was simple but interesting. The following songs were given: Opening chorus, "He Arose," given by the entire school; chorus, "Rejoice and Sing," by pupils of 6th grade; "Hosanna," chorus by the school; solo, "With All Nature Let Us Sing," by Helen Davenport; song, "Waken Vale and Hill," school; duet, "Easter Lilies," by Violet Jones and Mildred Lane, accompanied by Emma Grannatt, Valeria Oessens, Grace Squier and May Stafford; solo, "King of Kings," by Violet Jones, accompanied by pupils of 6th grade.

The singing was varied by most excellent and appropriate remarks by William D. Murray, superintendent of Crescent Avenue Sunday-school; Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel; Superintendent H. M. Maxson and Rev. George Mooney, pastor of Monroe Avenue M. E. church. Charles L. Lewis conducted the singing.

The pupils of the fifth grade presented their teacher, Miss Fletcher, with a beautiful fern. This was an Easter gift, and was in complete surprise. The though as well as the fern was highly appreciated.

FORM CEMENT BLOCK CO.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins Head of a $100,000 Mfg. Concern.

TO BUILD A PLANT

W. R. Codington, J. Worth Coddington, J. D. Loizeaux and Kitchen and Long Are Directors.

As a direct result of the increasing local demand for cement blocks for building purposes, well known Plainfield men yesterday formed a company which will manufacture them in the city. The organization is to be known as the Cement Block Company and its capital stock is placed at $100,000. Dr. O. L. Jenkins was made president and the following directors were named: W. R. Codington, J. Worth Coddington, Dr. Jenkins, J. D. Loizeaux and Messrs. Kitchen and Long.

The blocks are made from cement, machinery being used to cut them the proper sizes. This will necessitate a factory building and the company has already taken steps to have one erected. It will probably be located in the West End, two suitable sites now being considered. The number of hands to be employed will depend upon the demand for the blocks but there will be at least twenty-five at the start. This will include mixers, cutters and teamsters.

The blocks now coming into the city are made at Siegfried, Pa., and it is claimed that they reduce the cost of building, where brick is considered, about fifty per cent. They also save the cost of painting and from present indications will soon come into general use. The first time they were seen in the city was when they were brought into use in the erection of the Voorhees & VanZandt building, not yet completed, on Park avenue.

FORMAL OPENING OF COUNTRY CLUBHOUSE

GREENS READY APRIL 29 AND TEES ON MAY 6.

Many of the members of the Plainfield Country Club were present at the clubhouse opening for the season last Saturday. It is planned to have music on Saturday nights and on holidays throughout the season. The announcement as to dances will be made later. All applications for bed rooms may be made to the house clerk.

The Greens committee hope to have the summer greens ready for use on April 29, and the new tees by May 6. All players are directed to refrain from playing on tees and greens which are not in commission. The 13th, 14th and 15th holes are now opened for play, with temporary tees and greens. The complete list of officers and committees for the year are as follows:

President, George P. Mellick; vice presidents, Ernest R. Ackerman; secretary, Leighton Calkins; treasurer, Stuart H. Patterson; Greens committee, Elliot T. Barrows, chairman; Leighton Calkins; house committee, Lewis G. Timpson, chairman; L. E. Waring, T. D. Wilson, Mrs. T. M. Day, Jr., Miss Mary Holly, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, Miss Maude Van Boskerck; Golf committee, T. R. Van Boskerck, chairman; E. E. Iremonger, W. L. Glenney, Robert Abbott, C. B. Morgan, J. Whitney Baker; tennis committee, T. M. Day, Jr., chairman; Owen H. Fleming, A. D. Beers, F. W. Goddard, Miss Elsie Burke, Miss Sarah Schuyler and Miss Mary K. Whiton.

The large increase in the membership of the Plainfield Country Club is another sign for a promising and successful season. At a meeting of the executive board held Wednesday night these persons were elected, all but a very few being new members, the exceptions being transfers from one class of membership to another:

John Valiant, Leonard Waldo, J. W. Kirkner, Christie P. Hamilton, J. L. Watson, Charles A. Rice, William D. Riggs, Edwin S. Hooley, Charles B. Andrews, Frederic W. Butler, E. W. Bulkley, G. G. ## SPIDERS TRAINED TO CHEAT

Taught to Weave Webs Among Bottles and Sold to Corrupt Wine Dealers.

"This is my spiders' school," said the young woman, and with a little stick she brushed a few webs from the wall, says the Philadelphia Bulletin. "Not much to look at, is it? Only a dozen rows of wine bottles, a great many spiders and a great many webs. I make, nevertheless, a little money out of the school.

"Spiders' webs are in demand among surgeons and among the makers of certain astronomical instruments, the surgeons using them to stop hemorrhages with, and the instrument makers using them on certain very delicate instruments — instruments wherein, strange to say, a human hair would not take their place, because a hair is neither fine enough nor durable enough to serve the required purpose.

"Besides selling the webs, I also sell the spiders. A corrupt class of wine dealers buy the spiders. These men put them among bottles of new wine. I train the spiders to weave on bottles only—I tear down webs woven anywhere else—and it is amazing how quickly these well schooled pupils of mine will cover a case of port or claret with cobwebs, giving to the wine an appearance of great age.

"Six spiders in a week will add two years to the aspect of a dozen bottles of wine. Hence you will readily see how valuable the ugly little creatures are to wine merchants of a certain type."

GAVE A HOLY BAR ORDER.

Hotel Guest Compelled to Sleep in Chapel Had Drinks Charged to Pew 24.

A Philadelphian who recently returned from a trip to Florida, in narrating some of his experiences, says that it is almost impossible to conceive how great was the rush of visitors at the height of the season. Illustrative of the enormous crowd, says Lippincott's Magazine, he told the following anecdote:

"One day a man came to one of the big hotels and was told that there was no room for him in the house, but that a place to sleep could be made up in the memorial chapel on the hotel grounds if he desired. The visitor replied that he was satisfied. By bedtime he had partaken of all that he could stand in the way of unsolidified refreshments. When he woke up in the morning he looked around for a push button, and, finding none, wandered out into the vestibule. There he saw the bell rope, and he commenced tolling the bell with great gusto until a man opened the door and asked him what was the matter. 'Bring me a cocktail and a siphon of carbonic, and be quick about it,' answered the guest, 'and charge it to pew 24.'"

White Cross on Russian Standards.

There is a pretty story of the reason why the white cross on a blue field is the Russian naval standard. When Peter the Great was at a ship yard near Amsterdam, where he spent some months gaining a practical knowledge of shipbuilding, he became very intimate with a clever workman named Cruys. Before leaving he revealed his name and station to this comrade and prevailed upon him to return with him to Russia. The plans for the first ships for the Russian navy were drawn by Cruys, and Peter, to show his appreciation of this act, made him an admiral and ordered that the navy should thenceforth carry a special flag with a white cross upon it to perpetuate the memory of his humble friend. Cruys is the old Dutch word for cross.—N. Y. Herald.

Finances in Bogota.

Five dollars for a postage stamp to carry a letter from Bogota, United States of Colombia, to the United States of America! That is what it costs—in paper money—and all the necessities of life cost accordingly. The financial situation of the country is perilous in the extreme, and the new president, Gen. Reyes, will have a difficult task, it is feared, to place matters on a sound basis.—N. Y. World.

Currency of China.

Foreigners in China buy nearly everything on credit, giving signed "chits" for every purchase, the reason being their unwillingness to load themselves down with silver or native coin, while paper money fluctuates too much.

THE MOQUI PUEBLOS

INDIAN TRIBE THAT TRACES ANCESTRY TO JAPANESE.

Army Officer Tells of His Visit to This Picturesque and Interesting Race —Romance of Nee-ta and No-Ko-Mo.

The Moqui Pueblo Indians of Arizona are, perhaps, the only aboriginal inhabitants of our broad land who have retained unimpaired the customs and practices of their medieval ancestry. The origin of these strange people, it is claimed, can be traced through the Aztec tribes of Mexico, from which people they came as a colony centuries ago, back to involuntary emigrants borne to the western shores of America by drifting junks from the coast of Japan. If these tracings are true, as they seem to be, the ancient customs of the "Flowery Kingdom" may possibly be more faithfully preserved on the arid plains of America than within the home land itself.

Possibly a glimpse at some of these customs may not be without interest. At the request of the Moquis, an officer of the army visited them a few years ago to witness an issue of annuity goods, and while on that duty was the guest of the "governador" in his home on the summit of a great, flat-topped butte. Soon after the officer's arrival, Nee-ta, a little maiden daughter of the family, began to grind corn for the evening meal, crushing the grains between the stones of a metate, or house mill. When the meal was ground the mother placed it in a wooden bowl and moistened it with water. Then spreading a thin coat of dough upon a hot stone, she permitted it to bake, after which she twisted it into a roll, like a cigar. The good mother had her mouth full of water, and as the baking proceeded thinned the dough from time to time by ejecting a small stream into it from her mouth.

When sufficient meal for the baking had been ground, Nee-ta's task for the time was over, but she continued, nevertheless, to grind. The father and his host had come in meanwhile for the evening meal, but Nee-ta paid scant attention to their coming, and with downcast face busied herself with her grinding.

A little vessel containing a thin, sweet syrup, extracted from the roasted leaves of the mescal plant, was set on the floor in the middle of the room by the side of another vessel containing rolls of the corn just cooked. The "governador" and his guest seated themselves on the floor, and the host, bidding the officer follow his example, seized one of the rolls and, after dipping it in the syrup, threw his head far back and dropped the dripping mass into his open mouth.

In the meantime the mother had recalled that, in following the customs of her people, she herself had once ground after her task was done, as her daughter was now doing, to convey the information she was too bashful to give directly, that she was in love and had picked out the man she wanted for a husband. At last Nee-ta confided to her mother, who had sat down beside her, that her affection for No-ko-mo, a young Moqui who lived near by, had prompted her persistent grinding.

When the evening meal had been dispatched the kind mother hastened to the home of No-ko-mo's parents with a handful of the meal her daughter had ground. Nee-ta waited anxiously to learn how the gift would be received, knowing that if it was refused her grinding had been in vain. Fortunately the mother of the young man hastened to accept the gift, and with gracious words asserted that no such properly ground meal had ever before left a metate. A scant wedding ceremony soon followed, and No-ko-mo hastened home directly thereafter with his bride.

On the following morning Nee-ta, who, in common with other Moqui maidens, had previously worn her hair in immense coils, one on each side of her head, appeared with her dark tresses tied in a knot at the back of her head, to indicate that she was now a married woman.

No-ko-mo's father had built his home, according to the customs of his people, upon a first story of stone masonry, to serve as a fortress in case of need, with here and there a hole left, through which a spear might be thrust or an arrow discharged. A ladder rested against the wall, reaching to a broad landing on top, from which a doorway led into the family living room that had been erected upon the fortress. And now No-ko-mo quickly went to work to add still another story with a landing, on top of the room occupied by his father. In the end the building, like many others in the Pueblos, presented a terraced front towards the rising sun. In the third story of this building No-ko-mo and his bride eventually made their home.

FIRST-AID POLICEMEN.

City Guardians of Birmingham, England, Furnish Medical Aid to the Injured.

According to a report made to the state department by Consul Halstead at Birmingham, England, the residents of that city have the comfort of knowing that ere long every policeman there will be capable of rendering efficient first aid in time of need. That condition is the result of a thorough system of instruction in first aid to the injured. During the past two years 550 policemen of various grades have been awarded certificates for efficiency in that respect, and it is reported that out of a total strength of 860, 818 policemen have passed the first-aid classes. Since 1902 first aid has been given in over 2,000 cases by policemen who were thus enabled to save lives that otherwise might have been sacrificed for lack of immediate attention.

"It is no small advantage that in a populous center, where accidents, unfortunately, are of daily occurrence," says Consul Halstead, "there should be close upon a thousand stalwart and energetic men to whom a request for medical assistance may be confidently made. The police of Birmingham have already earned and received the thanks of the community for their exertions in various departments of social and philanthropic work, especially in connection with the association for the clothing of destitute children, and the new departure which the 'watch committee' has wisely inaugurated cannot but enhance the esteem in which they are publicly held. The police association for the clothing of destitute children serves efficiently not only for the purpose which its title indicates, but has the very important effect of establishing a good understanding between the police and the very poor of a great city, who are thus taught that the police can really be their best friends; besides, it must counteract in the police themselves the hardening tendency of their work."

DEVELOPS EDIBLE CACTUS.

Formerly Useless Plant Cultivated Up to Food Form by Scientific Work.

There are millions of acres of arid land upon the globe, much of it, even with the most persitent irrigation, yielding but scantily, and enormous reaches of it devoid of all growth but the cactus, a foe to man and beast; but Mr. Burbank resolved that he would reclaim it, not by irrigation, though welcoming its aid, but by means of the desert itself—the desert and its cactus, its heat and its sun. So for a period of over ten years, writes William S. Harwood, in "A Wonder-Worker of Science" in Century, he has worked with the utmost persistence and skill, until at last he has developed a cactus plant which will convert the desert into a garden. He has made the cactus thornless, taking from its leaves the hard, woody substance, the spicules, so dangerous to animal life. More than this, he has made it adaptable to any climate. It will thrive on the hot desert, but it will grow with marvelous fecundity when irrigated or when planted in a richer soil.

But this is not all the marvel. He has bred this dreaded scourge of the desert, this pariah among plants, until it has become the producer of a delightful, nutritious food for man and beast—until, in his estimate, considering the unused areas of the world where it will thrive, it will afford food for twice the people now upon the earth.

NAMES OF BUT ONE LETTER

Surnames and Geographical Designations Consisting of Only a Single Character.

It must be very convenient to possess a surname consisting of a single letter of the alphabet. The Paris papers mention the singular case of a certain Marie whose surname consists of the one letter B.

Many years ago there was a shop kept in the Rue de Louvain, in Brussels, by Theresa O, and there is a Mme. O living with her two children at Molenbeck, a suburb of the Belgian capital. In the Rue de l'Angle, in the same commune, lives a Mr. O (with a circumflex accent), who is no relative of Mme. O.

In 1866, among the Belgian recruits was a young man named O, who could not write, and signed his name with a cross; yet he could so easily have learned to write his own name! In the department of Somme there is a village called Y; in the Zuyder Zee there is a bay called Y, and Amsterdam has the river Y.

In China there is a large town of the same brief name. In the Chinese province of Honan there is a city called U, and in France there is a river, and in Sweden a town, rejoicing in the name of A.

Castor Oil for Mummies.

M. Berthelot, secretary of the Louvre museum, believes that he has discovered the secret of the agent used in embalming in ancient Egypt. After a laborious examination of the sarcophagi of the fifth and sixth dynasties, which date back as far as 3500 B. C., M. Berthelot has come to the decision that the oil employed was simply castor oil, such as is still used in Egypt, which has undergone some oxidation, but retained during the long period its preservative qualities.—London Telegraph.

Varieties of Mosquitoes.

Sir Henry A. Blake, governor of Ceylon, announced at a recent meeting of the Asiatic society that Singalese medical books of the sixth century described 67 varieties of mosquitoes and 424 kinds of malarial fever caused by mosquitoes.

A correspondent of the London Times calls attention to the fact that William Pitt said: "America, Canada and Louisiana are the three countries on the continent of North America."

GOLF CLUB RULES FOR COMING SEASON

POSTING OF SCORES AND SERVICES OF CADDIES.

In all stroke competitions, players must return attested score cards, whether the cards are complete or not, and whether or not the round is finished (unless a player is unexpectedly called away). Anyone who enters and plays but fails to deposit his attested card in the score-card box when he finishes, shall be ineligible to play in the next succeeding medal play event, or in any of them if there are several scheduled for the same day.

When players finish they may post their scores on the large score sheet; and except in the case of winners no public announcement will be made by the committee of scores not thus posted on the score sheet. The record, however, will be made up only from the attested score cards deposited in the box.

Balls found by a player or by his caddy shall belong to such player. Balls found on the club property by a caddy when not engaged in caddying, or by an employe, shall belong to the club and shall be delivered to the house clerk. Any caddy or employe who keeps or sells a golf ball found by him on the club property shall be discharged. Caddies must be engaged by card from the caddy master. Players will be preferred in the order in which their names are received by the caddy master. Under no circumstances shall caddies be reserved by players in advance, except that a player who has a caddy in the morning may reserve the same caddy for the afternoon. In all club events, whether at match play or at medal play, players must start at the first tee. Entries for all competitions must be made before starting.

GOES TO SUPREME COURT.

Justice Garretson Declines to Decide Somerset Case.

Through Judge Garretson declining to render a decision in the matter, an application made by property owners along the Neshanic road in Somerset County to have the appointment of the commissioners to assess benefits for the improvement of that highway, set aside, has been referred to the Supreme Court. Argument was made before Judge Garretson this week but he declared it was a question of too much importance in the State for him to consider and passed it to the higher body.

The grounds stated for the setting aside of those appointed were that the act of 1895, under which the petition for the improvement was filed with the Board of Freeholders, has been superseded by the act of 1903, which provides that all property owners who had applied for the improvement of public roads should not be required to pay the ten per cent. toward the construction of macadamized roads. The statute of 1903 requires that all roads in course of construction should be completed as near as possible under the provisions of that act.

New Jail for Somerset.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders has decided to build a new jail yet this season and plans are soon to be decided upon. It is hoped to have the preliminaries arranged and the work started so that the building may be ready in the fall. The complete plans for the new court house have not yet been completed and it is not now generally believed that any work will be done on it this year, although the contracts will be given out.

Coal Company Change.

George C. Stevens will shortly retire from the Consumers Coal Company to engage in the coal business as an independent dealer.

ALL NEW MARKET AT MRS. NELSON'S FUNERAL

PREACHER EULOGIZES HER CHARACTER —HER LAWYERS PRESENT.

Mrs. Hannah E. Nelson, of New Market, mother of the late Mrs. Charles L. Fair, and who came into notoriety through the fight for the Fair millions after the death of her daughter and son-in-law in an automobile accident in France, was buried Thursday afternoon. The funeral service was held at the home of her son, A. G. Nelson, in New Market, at 3 o'clock.

Very nearly the whole village attended the service. The funeral cortege was large, the family providing twenty coaches for the use of all the friends and neighbors who desired to follow the body to the graveside. There were elaborate floral tributes.

The service was conducted by Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the First Baptist church, New Market. He preached on the kindliness of the dead woman's character, her neighborliness, her womanly and Christian virtues.

The body was interred in the South Plainfield cemetery. The bearers were Frank Leonard, Caleb Leonard, Edward Leffler, Theodore Leffler, John Bunnell and George T. Whitley. The first five are grandsons, and Mr. Whitley is the husband of a granddaughter.

Charles Smith, of Boulder, Col., a son of Mrs. Nelson, was unable to attend the funeral on account of illness, but wired a message to the house.

Among those who attended were both members of the law firm of Chandler & Beekman, New York, who fought the celebrated will case for the Nelsons in the California and French courts. They will be in charge of the probation of Mrs. Nelson's will. It is expected that the instrument will be filed in ten days. The amount secured by the heirs of Mrs. Fair in the compromise that ended the will contest has been a matter of speculation and interest to the neighbors of Mrs. Nelson ever since the legal battle ended. They expect to have their curiosity partly satisfied when the Nelson will is probated, and the filing of the instrument is awaited with keen expectancy in New Market and Dunellen.

WILL TALK ON JAPANESE FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

MISS AVERILL TO EXPLAIN THE ART FOR LOCAL BENEFIT.

Miss Mary Averill, sister of J. Otis Averill, of this city, will give a demonstrated talk on Japanese flower arrangement at the residence of Mrs. Howard C. Tracy, 1331 Prospect avenue, Wednesday morning, May 10, at 10:30, and also at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. It will be for the benefit of the Woman's Exchange.

As a result of her work and study the Japanese government has conferred upon Miss Averill three degrees. No people equal the Japanese in their line composition and it is with great pride that the Japanese professor, the honorable Mrs. Kalobkusai, sends Miss Averill to the western countries to teach them something of the art which Japan has in the evolution of her civilization carried so very far beyond any other country.

FOURTEEN HOUSES TO BE ERECTED

BUILDING BOOM IN THE SOUTH END OF THE CITY.

There is a healthy boom in real estate in the vicinity of Marion avenue, between Moffett and South End avenues, which bids fair to result in plenty of building during the summer. W. H. Mahaffey, of 448 Broadway, New York, who sometime ago purchased considerable property in that section, has just sold fourteen lots on Marion avenue, between Moffett and South End avenues to Slayback Brothers, of Upper Montclair, who have had the same staked out and surveyed and will erect fourteen modern dwellings.

Mr. Mahaffey owns eight additional lots, including property on Florence avenue, and he proposes to build several houses. The dwellings will cost between $7,000 and $8,000 each.

CONVENTION OF DIOCESE

To be Held in This City on May 9 and 10.

PROGRAMME ARRANGED

Clerical and Lay Delegates of Episcopal Churches to be Entertained by Local Parishes.

The one hundred and seventh annual convention of the Diocese of New Jersey will be held in this city on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 9 and 10, with three sessions each day. It was through the efforts of Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector and the vestry of Grace church, as well as the other members of the Plainfield Clericus that the convention, which met in Elizabeth, last year, decided to come to Plainfield in May.

This being one of the oldest and most influential dioceses in the United States, the importance of the gathering is apparent. Bishop Doane, father of Rt. Rev. William Doane, of the diocese of Albany, and the late Monsignor Doane, of Newark, was at one time Bishop of this cure. Dr. John Scarborough now holds the office.

On Tuesday morning, May 9, there will be a service at Grace church, after which lunch will be served at the Casino. The business sessions of the convention will be held at the Casino Tuesday afternoon as well as on Wednesday, and the visiting delegates will be entertained there at dinner and supper.

The convention is expected to be the largest in the history of the diocese and there will be delegates from all of the churches, including many prominent clergymen.

The entertainment of the visiting clergy and laity will be shared by the people of the several Episcopal churches in the city and borough, including Grace church, the Church of the Holy Cross, St. Stephen's church, the Church of the Heavenly Rest and Grace church mission.

FORCE DECREASED BY GYMNASIUM EXERCISE

GERMAN HORSE TURNS ON COPS AND CRIPPLES ONE.

Some torn ligaments and a discontented frame of mind have come to Patrolman Dennis O'Keefe from the newly established gymnasium exercise through which the cops must go three times a week at the Y. M. C. A. Also an indefinite period of idleness.

O'Keefe crippled his left arm badly in doing a gymnastic stunt with the bluecoat class two weeks ago, and he hasn't been able to report for duty since.

It happened while the class was jumping the German horse. Until the cops came into the gym class the horse was quiet and well-behaved. It had never kicked, or jumped, or developed any malign tendencies, and the gymnasium leaders regarded it as thoroughly broken, and entirely safe for a lady to handle, if properly clad. When the cops began to use it, the long-suffering horse seemed to grow restive. Still, it stood everything they did with it, and Physical Director Henckel thought it would do more than grouch in sullen inactivity.

But there came an afternoon when the horse could stand it no longer. The cops did everything to which a German horse in a well-ordered gymnasium is unaccustomed. They shied away from him on the jump; they kicked him in going over; and did sundry other things not countenanced in Turn Vereins in either the Fatherland and the Step-Fatherland. When, to crown all its sufferings, Chief Kiely sat down on it, the horse rebelled. It was too much to bear.

Vanderweg it allowed to go over its back unassailed, but when O'Keefe, next in order, came at it the horse turned on him. Accounts of what happened thereafter differ.

O'Keefe says the horse bucked, kicked, and bit; immediately after which, he alleges, it jumped on him. The other men say the horse merely got in O'Keefe's way and tripped him up. Anyway, O'Keefe hit the hardwood floor, with his left arm doubled up under him.

The ligaments of the arm were pulled in all directions, and the officer hasn't been able to use it since and doesn't know when he will. The cops now go over the horse with ladders, and only after a committee on safety has inspected nine restraining ropes and chains.

SUMMARY OF SHOOT BETWEEN COS. K AND L

PLAINFELDERS MADE 55 POINTS IN THE CONTEST.

"The Signal-Enterprise" of Princeton and Hightstown has this to say about the recent shoot at Princeton between teams from Co. K, of this city, and Co. L, of Princeton: "The shoot between Co. K and Co. L, which was held on the Mergerum range, resulted in a decisive victory for the visitors, the Plainfield men succeeding in making a score of 693 points to the local company's 638, thus winning by 55 points. The good shooting of the visitors was evident on all the ranges, while the home boys lost most of their chances of winning on the 500 and 800 yards ranges. The fine marksmanship of Captain Martin, Littell and Hort, of Co. K, was the feature of the contest, as these men all succeeded in running up high scores. On the 800 yard range Captain Martin's expert marksmanship was clearly demonstrated, scoring forty-seven points of a possible fifty on that range." The following is the summary of the shoot:

| Co. K. | 200 yds | 500 yds | 800 yds | Totals |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Phillips | 34 | 45 | 31 | 110 |

Saturday, April 15, the members of the company entertained the visiting team in the armory in a very hospitable manner. During the festivities several solos and speeches were well rendered by members of both companies, and thus an enjoyable evening was spent.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 30.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Prayer for missions at home and abroad.—I Tim. ii, 1-4.

Prayer should have the supreme place in our religious lives. "Pray without ceasing" is the Scriptural injunction concerning prayer in our private lives, and when Paul was instructing Timothy how to conduct the public worship in the church at Ephesus he gave prayer the first place: "I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving thanks be made for all men." In the church, therefore, we are to pray for all men, and what can we more suitably pray for those who are without Christ than that they should have the opportunity of knowing and accepting Him? The supreme business of the church of Christ in this world is to evangelize it, and in this work we must have the power of God, and prayer is the means by which we have access to God. God has promised to answer our prayers.

Prayer as the supreme source of missionary power and success has always been recognized. The psalmist prayed, "God be merciful unto us and bless and cause His face to shine upon us, that Thy way may be known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations." Paul and Barnabas were set apart to the work of missionaries by prayer. "And when they had fasted and prayed and laid their hands on them they sent them away," and when the great apostle was engaged in his arduous toils and labors he was ever bearing those for whom he labored to God in prayer. "Without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers," he wrote to the Romans, and in his epistles we have the record of prayers offered in behalf of the churches.

The motto of John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, written at the end of his Indian grammar was, "Prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will do anything."

Prayer was put first, and his converted Indians became known as "praying bands" and "Indian praying towns." All successful missionaries and missionary workers have given prayer the first place in their labors, and we should follow their example. We may not have wealth to give, we may not be able to go to a foreign land to preach the gospel, but we can all pray, and the "effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Prayer for all men "is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour, who will have all men to be saved and to come unto the knowledge of the truth."

The reasonableness of prayer in connection with all missionary efforts is evident from the fact that there is but "one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus." The world has but one God and one Saviour; therefore we should earnestly and constantly pray to our God that He will bless us in our efforts to send the knowledge of this one mediator and Saviour to the world. Without Him we can do nothing. The world will never be won for Christ by human endeavor. "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." How truly these words may be applied to missions! All the human power in the world cannot convert one single soul to Christ, much less win the world for Him. But our God can do it, and He is more than willing to crown our missionary efforts with success. Do we want God to use us in this work? If so, let us ask Him to use us, for if we ask we shall receive. "Ask of Me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. ii, 8; xxii, 27-31; lxxii, 8-19; Dan. vii, 13, 14; Matt. vii, 7, 8; xxi, 22; Luke xviii, 1; John xvii, 20; Rom. x, 14, 15; Rev. xxii, 17.

Rural Family Endeavor.

Rural Family Endeavor is the "forward movement" in some of the districts of the states. The plan has largest value in the sparsely settled regions and is particularly workable during the winter months when snow blocked roads make regular church attendance almost impossible by large numbers of the country Endeavorers. The plan given in a word is this: The society in the little village church shall count the Rural Family Endeavor society as an affiliated one. The village society will appoint a rural committee, and this committee shall seek to form societies in the families outside the village who through any large portion of the year are unable to become attending members of the church society. Dr Clark's pledge for the Christian Endeavor home circle is used, and some member of the family is designated as the secretary of the family society. A monthly report is sent by each family secretary to the village society in time for the regular business meeting. These little reports serve as the "tie that binds." The family offering is also made to accompany the report. The organization is made as simple as possible, and yet there is enough of it to make it mean something more than ordinary. The pledge idea is emphasized strongly, and at least once a week the members of the family gather for a half hour in a service of prayer and testimony, where each keeps in spirit at least the regular Christian Endeavor pledge as it relates to the prayer meeting.—J. R. C. in Empire State Notes.

Christian Endeavor Gains.

The increase in Christian Endeavor societies during the past three months has been: United States, 424; Canada, 1; foreign, 140; total present enrollment is 63,144.

CAPTAIN SLEIGHT HAS TRAINED COW.

It Nudges Him to Promptness at Mealtime and Drags Boys' Sleds Up Steep Hills.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Mark Twain's educated frog and Pike county's hoop snakes are discounted by Capt. Ike Sleight's trained cow, which is attracting attention to and earning fame for Sleightsburg, a little hamlet near Kingston. The cow is Capt. Sleight's faithful companion and follows him through the village wherever he goes, from snowy morn to frosty eve. She would crowd through the door of the village store if the opening was wide enough.

When the captain takes a trip to the dock on the Hudson the faithful cow is sure to be close behind, and no gift of turnips or apples will tempt it to leave before he does. The cow can tell the time of day for the captain and he attributes his freedom from indigestion to the regularity with which the cow nudges him to promptness at meal times.

This intelligent cow's latest accomplishment has earned for the captain the favor of the whole juvenile population of Sleightsburg and clinched still further the cow's reputation for sagacity and cleverness. While following the captain up one of Sleightsburg's steep hills the cow noticed the weary children dragging their sleds up the slippery incline. She frisked and snorted and pranced around until she made the captain understand that she had a message for him, which, being translated, informed him that she would pull the children up if they would tie their sleds to her tail. The experiment was tried. The Pied Piper of Hamelin was not followed by a happier juvenile procession than that which trailed behind Capt. Ike Sleight and his trained cow. So successful was the scheme that if the sleighing does not soon wear out Capt. Ike fears that he will have to get a new tail for his cow.

ENDS LIFE IN THEATER.

Pathetic Ballad Picturing Scenes in Country Farmhouse Moves Young Man to Suicide.

Chicago.—Suicide in the balcony of a crowded theater was the method of death chosen by a young man, who shot and killed himself at the Chicago opera house during a vaudeville performance.

The young man shot himself in the head. Death was instantaneous and the body fell into the lap of a woman occupying an adjoining seat. She and several women fainted, but were quickly revived.

When the sound of the shot was heard many women screamed and left their seats, but ushers soon quieted the excitement. No one was allowed to leave the balcony. The orchestra struck up a lively tune and aided in averting a panic. The body was removed to the county morgue, nothing being found to indicate the identity of the suicide.

The man shot himself during the singing of a pathetic song picturing scenes in a country farmhouse. He had listened attentively and had applauded. At the third encore he stood up, hesitated a moment and then, quickly drawing a revolver, shot himself dead.

Refuses to Wear Clothes.

Menominee, Mich.—A pitiable and strange case is that of James Egan, for the past eight or nine years an inmate at the Menominee county poorhouse. Mentally deficient from birth, as he grew older it was impossible to keep clothes on him, he insisting in tearing them from his body. This trait still adheres to him, and because of it it is necessary to keep him in a small hut at the rear of the main building. Repeated attempts have been made to clothe him. On one occasion heavy canvas was securely sewed around his form, but he finally succeeded in making a small hole in it and tearing the canvas to shreds. He is aged about 50, and apparently will live for years. It is said that he has never been ill a day.

Man Barks Like a Dog.

Hammond, Ind.—Snapping and barking like a dog, Fred Reiger, of Hegewisch, is laboring under the delusion that he has hydrophobia. The sufferer imagines that he was bitten by a dog belonging to Fred Johnson, who died from rabies two months ago. Since the death of his friend Reiger has run from every dog that chanced to come near him. Several days ago he became violent, and would growl at anyone who approached him. Physicians declare that he will die of prostration unless his hallucination is dissipated.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 30: "Prayer For Missions and Missionaries"—John xvii, 18-21; Acts xiii, 1-3.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

"As thou didst send Me into the world, even so sent I them into the world."

If it be true that God so loved the world that He sent His only begotten Son into the world, that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish, but have everlasting life, then there is no way in which the love of Christ can be more clearly shown than to send his followers to tell their fellow men of His salvation.

It took some time for His most intimate friends to understand that this was His purpose, yet He had been giving them lessons in evangelization from their first association with Him. But it was one thing to go by twos through the villages of Galilee, where they were at home and known, and tell the people that the Great Prophet was coming soon to their town and an altogether different proposition after that same Great Prophet had been put to death by their rulers as one of the worst of criminals to go out into the world in the face of all opposition and persecution and proclaim Him as the Lord of life.

It took time for their dullness to comprehend the fact that salvation was really for all men. It took a vision to get Peter, the most progressive of the apostles, to even go to see the gentile Cornelius and a miraculous outpouring of the Holy Spirit before he would hesitatingly ask if any one could forbid baptism to these, who had as truly been accepted of God as any one of the apostles.

It was a hard task to get the gospel into the feet of men. About the last piece of the gospel armor which was put on was the sandals. It took long to get feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. But be patient; it will get feet in due time, winged feet, and every mountain shall know how beautiful are the feet of him that bringeth good things, that publisheth peace!

Stephen saw this missionary purpose of Jesus as no other one in the early church did. It was his bold declaration of this purpose of God that led to his death for blasphemy. He who undertakes to run the world into new channels will do so at the risk of his life. But into new changels it must be turned, for there has come the power of a new life which the old river beds cannot carry, and the men for the work will be found and will go. Who so well fitted to lead this movement as the man who was responsible for the death of Stephen? He prevented another doing it. He shall do it himself. And he did it after he had seen face to face the Master whom Stephen served.

This is the meaning of those meetings of the church in Antioch. Here were men from the islands of the Mediterranean, from the coasts of Africa and many regions. They were not bound by the narrow prejudices of those constantly under the influence of the temple worship in Jerusalem. They were men who had extensive knowledge of the world at large and of men of that world. They knew from the moral corruption of their own city and that of every great city of the empire that there was no hope for the world but in the religion of Jesus Christ. The whole world lay in wickedness. They held the truth able to make men wise unto salvation. The Spirit stirred within them and said, "Separate, Barnabas and Saul, for this work." They felt the impulse to world evangelism. They obeyed the impulse.

Long ages, with many changes, have intervened between that time and this, but in some respects there is considerable similarity in conditions then and now. Wealth and luxury had increased beyond all precedent. The arts and literature were at the highest point of development. All the ends of the earth were in close communication and intercourse. With the advance in material things there had been retrograde in all that pertains to moral and spiritual well being. Vice was rampant. Corruption and moral putridity infected society until virtue was well nigh nonexistent. In the Christian church alone lay the hope of renovation.

We are face to face with the needs of the great world of heathenism and have opportunity such as no other age since the time of the apostles has had to evangelize the nations. On our fidelity depends the character of the coming centuries.

This is the time to pray for our missions and missionaries indeed. We need to pray in the inner depths of the soul with all eager longing for the gospel to have effect in reaching all classes in all lands. This heart yearning must be backed up by prayer in the pocketbook and bank book. Money must talk. It must be made to shout and pray. Money can do this sort of thing and must be made to do it if the other kind of prayers are to get higher than our beads. Then there must be the great whole souled praying that says: "Lord, there is my boy, my girl. Please call them to this work and fit them for it." There must be Abrahams bearing God's call and taking their Isaacs by the hand and leading them to altars of sacrifice in lands of Moriah. There must be Sauls and Barnabases selected by the church and sent and, when they are in the work, returning to their Antioch homes from time to time to report and fire with zeal the hearts of the saints at home.

Know the great world parish. Know every land and keep in touch with the progress and needs of each land. Know the men and women at work. Pray in private and in the church services for them. Expect great things, plan for them and help make them possible. This is our opportunity.

Make every power of being pray and work!

"Thy kingdom come!"

REFORMED CHURCH CLASSIS SESSION

MEETING OF NEWARK CLASSIS AT BROOKDALE APRIL 19.

April 19, in the historic stone church at Brookdale, (formerly Stone House Plains) the Classis of Newark held its annual spring session. Rev. Dr. Vance, of Newark, was elected president. Much routine business was transacted at both the morning and afternoon sessions. The women of the church provided a substantial dinner in the Sunday-school room to which all did justice, and they were given a hearty vote of thanks for the excellent dinner provided. Rev. W. E. Bogardus is pastor of the church, which was erected in 1802.

Rev. Dr. Schenck and the people of Trinity Reformed church were congratulated on the fact that the church had recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. Dr. Bishop, as chairman of a committee presented resolutions eulogizing Dr. Schenck and commending his zeal and earnestness as a minister of the Gospel. Dr. Schenck fittingly replied, thanking Dr. Bishop and Classis for their congratulations and words of cheer. Rev. C. H. Schnesgas, pastor of the German Reformed church on Craig place, was elected a member of the Classis, resigning from the Presbytery of Long Island.

TROLLEY EXTENSION COMPLETED JUNE 1

STRAIGHT ROUTE TO THE PLAINFIELD DRIVING PARK.

It is the intention of the Public Service Corporation to extend the Arlington avenue trolley line from its present terminus to the Plainfield Driving Park by June 1 and to South Plainfield by July 1. The line will pass the Plainfield Country Club, something very much desired by the members, who have been obliged to walk a distance of half a mile from the end of the trolley line to the club house.

With the extension of the line there will be an improved service. Commencing May 1 the corporation will place a second car on the Arlington avenue line thus giving the patrons a fifteen minute service. This the residents along the line have been anxious for, as under the present schedule a person is able to walk the entire distance while waiting for a car.

With the attractions at Crescent Oval, the Plainfield Driving Park and Plainfield Country Club, the travel should be heavy on the Arlington avenue line this season, and it will be necessary for the company to use extra cars most of the time to comfortably carry the people.

Won't be Grand Marshal.

Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees has declined to be the grand marshal of the parade to be held at Elizabeth on Thursday, June 8, on which day the 125th anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown is to be celebrated. An effort will be made to induce him to reconsider his action. If this is unsuccessful another attempt will be made to obtain General J. Madison Drake for the position.

HANGED SELF FROM RAFTER.

David Amerman's Act Attributed to Insanity.

When Mrs. Carrie Kettering, a housekeeper for Rev. Frederick Koechli, entered a woodshed in the rear of the Koechli residence at Somerville at an early hour Thursday morning she almost ran against the dead body of a man hanging from a rafter. She ran screaming into the house and summoned Mr. Koechli, who found the dead man to be his neighbor, David Amerman, an old and respected citizen of the town.

Thoughts of Summer.

The Y. M. C. A. boys' State camp will again be conducted at Wawayanda his year. It will open on June 29, conducting two sections of two weeks each, and will close on July 27. Plainfield, as usual, will send a large delegation.

Enlarging His House.

Estimates are now being made from plans for the erection of an addition to the residence of A. H. Atterbury, on West Seventh street, to be used as a library.

Avoid all drying inhalants and use that which cleanses and heals the membrane. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and cures catarrh easily and pleasantly. Cold in the head vanishes quickly. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

VERDICT FOR BARRY LAD

Jury Awards $400 as Damages for Injuries Received.

ACCIDENT IN BOROUGH

Case Before Somerset County Court —Defendant Lives in Orange.

After remaining out two hours, a jury in the Somerset County Court Friday afternoon, awarded William Barry, of North Plainfield, a verdict for $400 in his suit against Frederick C. Hinni, Jr., of East Orange, in behalf of his son, Francis Barry, a minor. The plaintiff asked $10,000. The case began yesterday morning and was continued until noon today, both sides producing a large number of witnesses. The greater part of this morning's session was devoted to the summing up and counsel in each instance presented many arguments.

The case is the aftermath of an accident on Somerset street early last September, in which young Barry was knocked down and run over by Hinni's automobile. In his opening address to the court, Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the plaintiff, said that Hinni was in charge of it and that it was going at a high rate of speed. The boy was run over and had four ribs broken beside sustaining internal hurts. The machine was stopped and a man said to be Hinni, took the boy to a nearby house and left without giving his name. The borough police traced the auto to Orange and there learned the number of the auto and the owner's name.

STOCK TRANSFER BILL NOW A NEW YORK LAW

GOVERNOR HIGGINS HAS SIGNED MEASURE FOUGHT BY THE EXCHANGE.

Governor Higgins, at New York, signed the Stock Transfer Tax bill Wednesday evening, less than six hours before it would become a law unsigned. This measure has been bitterly opposed by the New York Consolidated Exchange, of which former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, of this city, is president and of which a number of Plainfielders are members. He also signed at the same time the companion bill intended to guard against the counterfeiting of the stamps necessary to be affixed to stock sales.

The bill imposes a stamp tax of 2 cents on each $100, our fraction thereof, par value of corporation stock securities, domestic or foreign, transferred within that State after June 1, 1905.

UNITED CONGREGATIONS MOURNED

Pastors and People Gathered Together to Observe Christ's Death on the Cross.

REMARKABLE SERVICE

Revs. Zelie, Stevenson, Schenck, Rodman, Herring, Neilson, McCrea, Mooney, Hamilton, Finn and Goodrich Take Part.

Many city churches united in a Good Friday service at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Friday night, according to the annual custom. The attendance was very large and the service an impressive one. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie was in charge of the programme, and led in the recital of the general confession, followed by the Lord's Prayer. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, conducted the responsive reading, ending with the Gloria and an anthem by the quartette choir. Rev. W. C. Neilson read the Scripture selection, which preceded the singing of a hymn, "Beneath the Cross of Jesus."

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church, was the first speaker on the meditations on the seven words from the cross, being assigned the first word, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." He spoke of Christ's compassion for the throng about Calvary, despite His intense suffering, and he urged all to learn the lesson of forgiveness. He said that by having a forgiving spirit all would be forgiven.

The second word, "Verily, I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in Paradise," was assigned to Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. He said that the thief was conscious of his need and that to become a Christian a person must be conscious of his sins. He referred to the heroism of the thief, he alone having the courage to call upon Christ for help. He was remembered and his prayer was quickly answered by being assurred that that very day he would be with Christ in Paradise.

Rev. George Mooney, of the Monroe Avenue church, spoke on the third word, "Behold thy son; behold thy mother." He said that the words exemplified the devout worship of the mother of God. When the heart is breaking and earth cannot satisfy that aching void, then is is Christ alone can satisfy. He told of the incident regarding the assassination of President Garfield, how his mother upon learning of the shooting exclaimed, "My God, who could have done this to my baby!" He used the illustration to show that while President Garfield was a full grown man his mother still retained that intense love of babyhood for him and thus it was with Christ's mother.

Rev. Dr. E. J. Hamilton, of this city, retired, spoke on the fourth word, "My God, My God, why has thou forsaken me?" He pictured the scenes of the ninth hour when earth was covered with darkness and for three hours Christ hung on the cross in silent agony. He said that Christ was lifted up that all might look to Him. He was expected to die for the sinful world, yet he could not understand the magnitude of the sacrifice. Yet in that awful darkness that was light and immortality that has never ceased to exist.

"I Thirst," the fifth word, was the subject upon which Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, spoke. He said that when Christ knew that all things were accomplished and His relations were fully established with His Father, he exclaimed those pathetic words which must have been the result of intense suffering. It was a verification of the words that Christ came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. Dr. Schenck said that the words "I thirst" showed that Christ was thoroughly human and yet entirely divine. He had sufferings and was subject to physical pain the same as others. He added that His followers may quench that thirst through care for the afflicted, helping the fallen and giving a cup of water in His name.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, spoke briefly on the sixth word, "It is finished," saying that Christ realized that His work given Him to do was completed. He said that while there is an end to suffering and pain from which all might learn the lesson. The end of the strain and overtaxed brain for that sweet rest which alone comes to the faithful ones.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, spoke earnestly on the seventh word, "Father into thy hands I commend my spirit," which he said had been referred to as the speech of death, though not in any sense one of extinction, but rather immortality. He referred to the perfect trust shown by Christ in God, adding that trusting and doing good is the same, for by doing one the other is possible.

Following silent prayer, Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church offered a short prayer. While the offering was being received for the Children's Home, the choir rendered an appropriate selection, and after the singing of "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Zelie.

MINSTRELSY SCORES AT PYTHIAN GATHERING

"ALL STAR" CAST APPLAUDED BY MEMBERS AND FRIENDS.

Black face amateur minstrelsy of the type that has been prevalent locally for several years, again scored a big "hit," Friday, when an "all star" troupe presented a show before the members and friends of Perseverance lodge, No. 74, K. of P. There were twelve men in the proverbial circle and the performance ran smoothly from start to finish, every member receiving one or more encores.

Alexander Muir acted as interlocutor and the chief fun-makers were Bertram C. Firstbrook, Leonce Texier, Harry Blumm and Thomas M. Muir, all of whom have appeared in other productions at Hope chapel and the Casino. Each one had a new crop of jokes and a song, both serving to uphold their reputations as end men. There were numerous other soloists, the complete number being as follows: "Mamma's Boy," Alexander Muir; "Sweet Adeline," Elmer D. Cutting; "Give My Regards to Broadway," B. C. Firstbrook; "Shame on You," George Pope; "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," Jack Todd; "Alexander," with buck and wing dancing, Tony Lusardi and Ira C. Bowers; "Tammany," Harry Blimm; "Yankee Doodle Boy," Thomas M. Muir; "In the Valley of the Shenandoah," Leonce Teixer. Edward Clark presided at the piano and made an excellent accompanist.

The show was arranged and directly in charge of B. C. Firstbrook and Thomas Muir, and is to be repeated at the Pythian demonstration in Knights of Columbus Hall next Thursday night.

The Show is Excepted.

"Cardinal Richard, Archbishop of Paris, has again laid the hand of discipline upon his clergy. His reproof took the form of a circular letter, telling the clergy that a priest on a bicycle was not fitting spectacle for the streets of Paris. Now the Catholic clergy are shut out from the theatre. The Archbishop forbade any priest in the diocese of Paris to leave his house without wearing his cassock. Then he says that any cleric appearing in a cassock at the theatre, even at a matinee, shall be liable to suspension. The circus is allowed. It is the theatre of childhood, and the priest goes there as the guide of children. Even the opera and the Comedie Francaise are forbidden things." The foregoing extract from the London correspondent of the New York Sun would seem to place the circus at the top of all reputable places of amusement, a place, by the way, that the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth has exclusively occupied for many years past. It is a fact beyond dispute that the proprietor of this show has been inflexible in his rule of providing special delights for children and which are nowhere else to be seen. What pleases and instructs the little folks is sure to command the interest of parents and guardians. The show is superb. There are nearly 100 acts of all kinds, among them six stupendous sensational surprises, each a death-defying feat, three herds of elephants are in three rings at one time, while as many as a dozen acts are going on simultaneously. There are three rings, three stages, a race track, an aerial enclave and a vaudeville entertainment in the menagerie pavilion where there are also scores of special performers in characteristic exhibitions. There are also two menageries, all the champion riders of the world, the best acrobats, aerialists, tumblers, leapers, etc. Jersey City, Monday, May 1; Newark, Tuesday, May 2; Elizabeth, Wednesday, May 3.

VanCamp & Franklin's carpet, matting and shade store at Front and Somerset streets, has been a Mecca for housewives this week. They have been attracted by the bargains in these goods that the firm is offering.

BANK ON FIRM BASIS

Milwaukee Institution Not Ruined by Defalcation.

MILLIONS IN DAY'S NEW DEPOSITS

Mayor Rose Marches Along the Street With $500,000 to Deposit—State and National Funds Not Withdrawn.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 26.—Confidence has again been restored in the banking institutions of Milwaukee, and the run on the First National bank and the Milwaukee Trust company, which was caused by the confession of a defalcation by Frank G. Bigelow, until Monday president of the First National bank and a director of the trust company, of over $1,000,000 is a thing of the past, and banking affairs in Milwaukee have resumed their normal condition.

Before the hour for opening the banks had arrived a meeting of the Milwaukee Clearing House association was held, and a committee of that institution, after examining the assets and collateral of the First National bank, issued a reassuring report that the bank was perfectly solvent.

On top of this came word from the board of directors of the Milwaukee chamber of commerce announcing its decision not to withdraw its current expense fund from the First National bank. All of these statements had a reassuring effect on depositors as to the stability of the bank.

Early in the day crowds of men and women in all walks of life gathered in line two and four abreast and took up positions in front of the two big banking institutions and awaited the opening of the doors at 10 o'clock. The line extended about half a square on East Water and Wisconsin streets from the main entrance of each institution.

One of the most spectacular happenings of the day was the action of [illegible] in walking down Wisconsin street in full view of the crowd [illegible] currency and gold in [illegible]. He was surrounded by policemen and detectives and walked into the bank with the treasure. This money was part of the shipment from Chicago banks and some from other Milwaukee banks.

Cashier Frank J. Kipp is authority for the statement that much more than $2,000,000 was received during the day by the bank. At noon the street assumed its normal appearance and the run was completely over.

The First National bank is depository for government departments in Milwaukee, the funds there including those of the internal revenue office and the offices in the department of justice. None will be withdrawn.

Frank G. Bigelow, the deposed president of the First National bank, walked down town during the day, but did not enter the bank building. He soon returned to his home, where he spent most of the day in seclusion. According to the federal procedure, a prisoner cannot plead guilty or not guilty until he has been indicted by the grand jury. The grand jury is called by the United States district judge. While the date has not been set, it is understood that it will be about the middle of May.

No trace has been found of Henry G. Goll, the deposed assistant cashier of the First National bank.

Funeral of Senator Platt.

WASHINGTON, Conn., April 26.—The funeral of United States Senator Orville H. Platt was held from the Congregational church in the afternoon, and fully a thousand persons attended it. The Episcopal service was used and was in keeping with the life and ideals of Senator Platt. As the church was not large enough to accommodate all who had come here the windows and doors were flung open so that the voices of the clergymen who officiated were easily heard a little distance away. Official life was represented by congressional and legislative delegations headed by Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks and Governor Henry Roberts, and the members after following the body from Senator Platt's home to the church were seated with the immediate family. After the service, which lasted but a few minutes, the entire funeral party walked to the open grave, where, with a prayer, the casket was lowered and the sod thrown upon it.

Rangers Guard Texas Town.

HEMPSTEAD, Tex., April 26.—As a result of the bloody battle here, when four men were killed and others were wounded, Hempstead is under the control of the Texas rangers. Martial law has not been declared, but Adjutant General Hulen has arrived with a number of rangers and assumed charge of affairs. No one is permitted to bear arms, and the excitement manifested throughout the day has quieted down. Rollan Brown, the son of one of the men killed at the Prohibition mass meeting Monday night, was placed under arrest on a charge of firing the shot which killed Representative John M. Pinckney.

A WAITING GAME?

Russian Officials Not Looking For Immediate Action.

ENGLISH WAR REPORTS NOT CREDITED

Admiralty Believe Japanese Admiral Will Try to Demoralize the Enemy and Avoid a Decisive *Battle at Sea.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 26.—Admiralty circles are coming to accept the view that there will be no great or general action between the fleets of Russia and Japan for some time, basing their belief on strategic and tactical reasons, which incline Admiral Togo to avoid a decisive action until he has made every effort to demoralize the Russian fleet by torpedo attacks and interference with transports by his cruiser division.

The admiralty last evening scouted the reports that engagements have already occurred, pointing out the great distance separating the places where the dispatches originated, and a naval staff captain declared that reports from English sources should not only be doubted, but even mistrusted.

The probability of a sortie by the Vladivostok squadron in an attempt to join Admiral Rojestvensky is discussed by the Razvedchik, a military weekly paper, which confirms the report that the three cruisers Gromoboi, Rossia and Bogatyr have been repaired and that Vladivostok harbor is free from ice and comments on this accession of strength to Rojestvensky. The paper also intimates that there is a possibility that Vice Admiral Nebogatoff may await a second re-enforcing squadron and expresses the opinion that Rojestvensky will now proceed as rapidly as possible to Vladivostok.

The government has reiterated its notice to the zemstvoists that the proposed conference will not be allowed either in St. Petersburg or Moscow.

The peasants of Saratov province have petitioned Emperor Nicholas for legislation in their favor and especially for educational measures and the establishment of a representative assembly.

Russian Cruisers Off Saigon.

SAIGON, Cochin China, April 26.—It is reported that four Russian cruisers are lying off the coast. The statements that the crew of the Russian protected cruiser Diana joined Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron are again pronounced to be absolutely unfounded. Advices just received from Kamranh bay say that twenty Japanese warships passed the bay between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening of April 23. Two ships loaded with rice from Saigon and bound for Japan have been captured by ships belonging to the Russian squadron.

German Money For Russia.

BERLIN, April 26.—The Frankfurter Zeitung says that the Berlin banking house of Mendelssohn & Co. has arranged to advance Russia $50,000,000 for nine months upon treasury notes bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum, the issue to be distributed among the syndicate of bankers who bought the Russian loan placed in Germany last January.

Plates For Philippine Stamps.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The bureau of insular affairs of the war department is having prepared for the Philippine government plates for a series of postage stamps, equivalent in denominations to those of the United States. These stamps are to bear the vignettes of Rizal, a Filipino patriot; McKinley, Magellan, the discoverer of the Philippine Islands; Legaspi, discoverer and explorer who followed in the footsteps of Magellan, implanting government in the various localities and establishing friendly relations with the natives; Lawton, Lincoln, Sampson, Washington, Carriedo, a Spanish philanthropist who on his death devised certain large estates to establish a water supply for Manila, and Franklin. Those stamps of the denomination of one peso and over are to bear the coat of arms of the Philippine Islands.

Pennsylvania Republicans Meet.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 26.—The Republican state convention, which meets in this city today, will nominate Representative J. Lee Plummer of Hollidaysburg for state treasurer and renominate President Judge Charles E. Rice of Wilkesbarre and Judge George B. Orlady of Huntingdon and Judge James A. Beaver of Bellefonte for superior court judges. There is no opposition to any of these candidates, and it is conceded that all will be nominated by acclamation.

Fraternal Mystic Circle Meets.

AWAITING THE FACTS

Attorney General Discusses Senator Brackett's Petition.

SUIT AGAINST EQUITABLE IN ORDER

Mr. Mayer Sees No Reason Why Action of Mary S. Young May Not Be Brought at Once, but Desires *Report of Investigation.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 26.—Attorney General Julius N. Mayer sent a letter to Senator Edgar T. Brackett referring to the petition filed recently by the latter in behalf of Mary S. Young of Saratoga asking the attorney general's consent under section 56 of the insurance law to the bringing of an action against certain directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of America "to recover funds wasted by them, to remove such directors, to adjudge them disqualified to hold office in any insurance company and for general relief."

The attorney general points out to Senator Brackett that his client as a stockholder in the Equitable society can without the consent or participation of the attorney general bring an action in equity as a stockholder to compel the officials of the company to account for any funds unlawfully diverted by them if, as the senator claims, the corporation is powerless to bring such an action by reason of the control of the directors whom he accuses. The attorney general points out further the powers of the superintendent of insurance and that the law provides that the sworn report of examination by the superintendent is presumptive evidence in court of the facts found by him.

The attorney general declares that he himself must be prepared to prove the facts in court before he can sustain the kind of action which Senator Brackett asks him to bring. He does not decline to bring the action nor to act on Senator Brackett's petition, but states that he will finally determine the course to be pursued when all the facts are properly before him.

"In an action brought by your client the judgment of a court that any director was guilty of misconduct, whether in violation of section 56 of the insurance law or of any duty, would necessarily be followed by an action brought by the attorney general to remove the delinquent officials from office and to declare them forever disqualified from thereafter holding any such office in any insurance corporation.

"As you know, it is provided in section 1808 of the code of civil procedure that 'where the attorney general has good reason to believe that an action can be maintained in behalf of the people of the state' in such a case he must bring the action accordingly or apply to a competent court for leave to bring an action, as the case requires.'

"All the facts are now being ascertained by the superintendent of insurance, the officer charged by law with that duty. The power of the superintendent of insurance in such respect is full and comprehensive. He can examine or cause to be examined under oath every officer and agent of an insurance corporation as well as the books or papers relating to its business affairs. The examiners appointed by the superintendent of insurance are required by law to make a full and true report of their examination, verified by their oath. Such report is of unusual importance because the law makes it presumptive evidence in any action or proceeding in the name of the people against the corporation, its officers or agents of the facts stated therein.

"I think I have called your attention sufficiently to the situation so that you will realize that I cannot dispose of your petition at this time.

"The responsibility for beginning an action in the name of the people of the state is upon me, and if you are unwilling to wait until I finally determine the course to be pursued, when all the facts are before me, then I know of no reason to prevent you, in the name of your client, from bringing proceedings for almost every purpose which you seek to accomplish by your petition."

NEW YORK, April 26.—A letter has been received by a director of the Equitable society from the New England Policy Holders' association urging that General Nelson A. County Receives $146,511.20—How it is Divided Among the Various Districts.

The amount apportioned by the State Board of Education to Union County this year is $146,511.20, and of this sum $25,615.79 goes to Plainfield. It is made up of the following items: Amount apportioned to Union County from State appropriation of $200,000, $10,128.02; amount apportioned to Union County from State appropriation of $1,015,802.81, $47,735.86; amount apportioned to Union County from ninety per cent. of State school tax, $79,787.19; amount apportioned to Union County from reserve fund by State Board of Education, $8,865.23; totoal amount apportioned from State school tax, $88,652.32.

The following is the apportionment for next year: Clark, $811.55; Cranford, $7,322.91; Elizabeth, $59,181.47; Fanwood, $2,496.80; Garwood, $653.07; Linden, $3,111.35; Mountainside, $533.35; New Providence Township, $979.02; Plainfield, $25,615.79; Rahway, $13,599.01; Roselle, $4,288.57; Roselle Park, $4,200.58; Springfield, $3,458.46; Summit, $7,849.66; Union, $4,687.35; Westfield, $9,406.77.

Elizabeth will receive $2,613.68 more than was received last year. The sum of $8,865.23 is the reserve fund, which the State Board of Education may take from Union County and give to any other county. Through the efforts of B. F. Campbell, who is a member of the State Board of Education from this district, Union County has secured the whole reserve fund. But for this, the city and county would have to raise $8,865.23 more than they do.

Mrs. Charles F. Odell, who has been engaged to succeed J. Besides being an accomplished organist and choir-director, she is talented as a vocal trainer of boy voices, having had remarkable success at Tarrytown. She will assume her position at the church the first Sunday in May, but in the meantime she will be busy organising a choir, made necessary by the fact that Mr. Skiff has arranged to take the present choir to the First M. E. church, where, beginning May 1, he will be the organist and choirmaster.

DAABSTERS DEFEAT COUNTY SEAT TEAM

Plainfield Bats Out a Victory in Contest With the Elizabeth Stars.

IT WAS TEN TO FOUR

Game on Crescent Oval Witnessed by 1,000 Fans—Linderman Put the Lid On—Other Games in the Vicinity.

After twinkling brightly for five innings at the Plainfield Baseball Association field Saturday afternoon, those changing Stars of Elizabeth faded away to a thin, pale glimmer very suddenly. Thereafter the darkness on the Elizabeth bench increased so rapidly that Frank Burke lit a bicycle lantern to keep track of his players as they slid down the toboggan. They hit the bottom fractically clutching the attenuated end of 10 to 4. About 1,000 fanatics enjoyed the disaster.

Bingles and bungles contributed jointly to the jolt that jounced the agile combination of Sabbath-breakers into the jumping-off place on the score board. The Plainfield leather-pushers got at Mr. Long with some proper biffs and dumped the ball in inaccessible places when such proceedings were strictly in order for the good of the Plainfield service. Just about that stage little Stars in the infield flickered fitfully and went out, and the bewildered athletes groped haltingly for the ball in the darkness while the enemy skipped lightly from bag to bag, occasionally and anon denting the gutta percha. Those doused glims made a total of five errors, all rank and all costly.

None of the tallies was made by the sweat of the athletes' bats. Every count was nailed up at the expense of somebody's fielding average. Long, who is the star boxman for the New Londons when he tears holes in his own proper atmosphere, had the Daabsters punching at nothing, chopping punky little swipes, or lifting high ones, until the sixth. Only seven biffs were wrenched from his delivery. Beisel had his first session in the box, and did the proper thing. The Stars got four runs in six innings, but errors were responsible for all the tallies. Two scratch hits and a clean single were the sum total of the damage done to his delivery in that period. In the seventh Daab took the junior twirler out and put Linderman in, but that was simply managerial canniness. Plainfield gouged the lead out of Elizabeth's grip in the sixth, and Herr Daab, who is not noted for taking any unnecessary chances, planted "Lindey" on the lid. He nailed it down; only one hit leaked out.

Up to that sixth inning, which is getting a lot of notoriety this trip, the Stars were all there, and doing about as well as Nurse Burke expected. Plainfield took her chance at the bat with the score 4 to 1 against her. Connelly, first up, scratched his way to first. Duke mishandled Oregan's dirt cutter, and both of them loped a step nearer home on Kiernan's walk down the alley. Leonard banged a single into right field, and Connolly and Oregan beat the ball to the plate. Driscoll plunked one at Duke, and the shortstop gentleman, to be sure rather than sorry, nailed him at first. In the meanwhile Kiernan, from third, and Leonard from second, rippled in. Lamar fanned, and Beisel was nailed, Long to Stallings.

In the next session Oldring singled after Cosgrove was nailed at first, went to second on a pass and scored on Connolly's single; Connolly reached second. Oregan hot an easy one to centerfield. Kiernan, at first, made a bold bluff at trying for second, and Long threw to kill the audacious athlete. Connolly, from a purloined station at third, jumped for home. Stallings threw the ball three miles over Poole's head, and Kiernan followed his playmate in. Leonard died early, Duke to Stallings.

The thing was becoming monotonous, but habit is hard to break and the home athletes counted two more in the next inning on a wierd toss by Flynn. It was hard on the latter because the fling followed a red hot stop, and should have been a double. The counts came with two out; Linderman hit safe, and Cosgrove banged the trouble-maker at Flynn imme*diately thereafter.*

DIOCESAN CONVENTION HAS ENDED

Much Important Business Transacted at Casino Yesterday and Today.

THE ANNUAL ADDRESS

Rt. Rev. Dr. Scarborough Tells of the Lack of Candidates for the Ministry—Encouraging Sunday-School Report.

Aside from the action on the increase of the bishop's salary, there was only one feature to the afternoon session of the Episcopal diocesan convention yesterday. That was the Bishop's thirty-first annual address on the state and activities of the diocese during the preceding twelvemonth.

In opening, Bishop Scarborough referred to the changes that have taken place in the diocese and in diocesan workers since he was chosen head of the episcopate thirty years ago.

"We have grown old," he said, "but there has been no slackening of effort, no lessening of the work. The church of God is endowed with perpetual youth."

He said the laity were a tower of strength, and referred, in feeling tributes, to those who died during the year. Among these whose loss was felt, he mentioned the late Assemblyman-elect G. H. Embree, of Westfield, who had been one of Westfield's most prominent Episcopalians.

Touching on the general church life of the diocese, the bishop was highly optimistic. He said the work was growing more successful, and the diocese stronger. The chief growth during the past year, he said, was seen in parish betterments and the larger use of the parish houses, rather than in the multiplication of churches. He referred, among other works of enlargement or improvements through the diocese, to the erection of a new parish house by Grace church. He commented with marked pleasure upon the establishment of the Grace mission for colored people, and urged a spread of the work among the negroes.

He referred to the falling off in mission contributions during the past decade, and to the lack of candidates for the ministry. The latter condition, he said, compels the church to recognize the fact that there are other avenues of life that present attractions to young men. He intimated that the money question had much to do with the conditions referred to.

"As a class, the clergy are ill-paid. In large cities you will find that the average salary for ministers is between $600 and $1,000. In the smaller cities the latter sum represents the maximum remuneration. And while the cost of living has gone up, the salaries of the clergy have remained unchanged."

Still, there was no sign that the church, as a force, was losing ground. He quoted the figures on the Episcopal membership and confirmations during the past year to demonstrate that the faith is growing vigorously.

In closing, Dr. Scarborough expressed his thankfulness over the number of years granted him.

"I am thankful for the long span allotted to me, and for the vigor that permits me to do each day's work with undiminished vigor."

Most of the session was taken up with routine and the presentation of statistical reports. Among the latter was one that aroused the only applause, excepting the remarkable tribute to the Bishop, to which the convention was moved.

That report was the one submitted by the committee on Sunday-schools, a special body appointed last year to investigate the problems involved in the religious education of the young. The report was a lengthy and interesting analysis of the Sunday-school question, in which were embodied a number of suggestions regarding Sabbath-school work.

These interesting figures formed part of the report:

"In the seventy-one Sunday-schools reporting are 8,488 males and 4,338 females. The males, therefore, constitute .4351 per cent. and the females, .5649 per cent. of the total enrollment. For comparison, we note that in the public day schools of this State the corresponding percentages are: Males, .5005, and females, .4995 respectively. We find regarding our own Sunday-schools that in eight, boys are more numerous than girls, while in thirty-one, the numerical differences between the sexes does not exceed ten. In fifteen parishes the relative proportion of girls to boys is very great. These parishes are almost all large cities or manufacturing towns, where special Sunday amusement draw boys and young men away. We believe that up to the age of fourteen about as many boys as girls attend Sunday-school.

"In twenty schools, at least ninety per cent. of the children are from church families. In thirty-one schools the percentage varies from fifty to ninety per cent. In eleven it is less than 50 per cent.

"Thirty-seven schools have three or more departments; twenty have two; in six there is no division. Fifteen report that the classes are carefully graded; twenty-seven more make some attempt at grading."

The report was greeted with a spontaneous burst of handclapping, and the bishop, after expressing his pleasure over the general mark of appreciation, thanked the committee, of which Dr. H. H. Oberly, of Elizabeth, is chairman, for its work, in the name of the convention. The Sunday-school commission will be made a permanent diocesan body.

One new parish was admitted to membership in the convention—St. Stephen's Memorial, of Riverside. One change was made in the officers of the diocese. Rev. M. B. Nash, of Trenton, was made registrar, upon the suggestion of his predecessor, Rev. J. McA. Harding, of the same city, who retired because he found the distance between his residence and the diocesan house too great.

The convention adjourned for the day at 5:30 o'clock. The delegates were entertained at supper and over-night at the homes of Grace church parishioners.

During the session Morris Timpson, James Fleming, Arthur Wills and Elliott Rowland acted as convention pages.

At Grace church, in the evening, a missionary service was held for the benefit of the missions of the diocese. It was largely attended and a liberal offering was made. The money will be divided between the two conventions of the dioceses.

Two addresses were made. Rev. W. H. Burkhart, of Haddonfield, spoke on "The Practical Side of Missions" and Rev. Charles Fisk, of Somerville, spoke on "The Motive for Missions." Bishop Scarborough introduced the speakers, and said the closing prayers. Rev. H. E. Thompson, of Freehold, read the evening prayer service.

A. A. Devoe, treasurer, presented Dean Alfred B. Baker's report on the Convocation of New Brunswick, in which the churches of Plainfield and North Plainfield are included. In part, the report was as follows:

"There are a number of parishes in the diocese which the associate mission has prepared for independence and self-support, and the last of these is St. Stephen's, Metuchen, the charge of which was given to the mission after it had fallen into a very low and languishing condition. The mission sent the Rev. Mr. Peck to recover, if possible, its lost prosperity, and through his efforts its scattered flock was soon gathered together, and new life was thrown into all branches of the work. Quite naturally the Rev. Mr. Peck has been chosen as the rector. At the Bishop's visitation fifteen were confirmed.

"At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Plainfield, there has been very gratifying progress. Finances have improved, the attendance has increased, and a number of parochial organizations have been put in operation. The Rev. Mr. Nash, formerly in charge here, has now become rector of Grace church, Linden, which severed its connection with the associate mission on March 1st.

"At Holy Innocents', Dunellen, the attendance has been much increased, but the financial conditions have steadily improved.

"At All Saints', Scotch Plains, interior improvements have been made, which add to the comfort of the growing congregation."

The treasurer's report showed that the receipts were $4,089.94, and the disbursements, $3,393.08.

The convention reassembled at the Casino at 10 o'clock this morning after a service at Grace church, conducted by Rev. Samuel Joh, of Cranbrook, and Rev. J. G. Lord, of Navesink.

BISHOP TO GET $5,000

Amid Enthusiasm, Diocesan Convention Votes Increase.

TRIBUTE TO SERVICE

Rt. Rev. Dr. Scarborough Agreeably Surprised by Action of the Delegates.

There was a tribute for Bishop Scarborough in the afternoon session of the Diocesan Convention of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey at the Casino yesterday. His salary was raised from $4,500 a year to $5,000.

This action came as a very great surprise to Dr. Scarborough. John N. Carpender, a prominent layman of New Brunswick, who fathered the motion, gave no intimation to the Bishop of his intended action. The announcement of the vote in favor of it was followed by a remarkable spontaneous tribute of affection for the venerable head of the diocese.

Mr. Carpender introduced his resolution toward the close of the convention session, when the delegates had begun to grow restless under the strain of routine business.

The Bishop was not present when the resolution was introduced. Mr. Carpender, after securing recognition from the right reverend president, informed him that the resolution he was about to put referred to him. the Bishop, personally, and he suggested that the president might prefer to place the gavel in another's hands while it was being considered.

The Bishop looked surprised—almost startled. He explained that look later, when he was voicing his thanks for the convention's action.

He called Rev. E. M. Hodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church to the chair, and stepped down from the platform. He paused for the merest fraction of a second as the feet, with bowed head. Then he turned in the direction of a side door.

"I think I will go out entirely," he said in a low tone, as if speaking to himself, and left the room.

Then Mr. Carpender put the resolution on the increase. It was seconded with marked enthusiasm. One of the seconders, in an earnest speech, said that he had brought a similar resolution in his pocket and would have presented it had not Mr. Carpender forestalled him.

"It is time that we did something of this kind," said the speaker earnestly. "A salary of $4,500 bears no adequate relation to the services the bishop of this diocese does. His work and his expenses have increased.

For thirty years he has worked, and labored and built up this diocese, and it is time we did something. Let us cease from handing bouquets and verbal nothings, and do something substantial to show our appreciation. And I think this vote should be a rising one."

When Mr. Redman put the question the convention rose to its feet with a bound, and a storm of handclapping broke out.

Mr. Carpender hurried to the hall outside and brought the Bishop back.

As the Bishop reappeared the handclapping broke out with increased force. As he faced the applauding body, the prelate's face cleared and a smile that had something wistful in it formed slowly about his mouth and gentle eyes.

He mounted the steps of the platform with a tread that was springier than that which marked his descent. At the top step he stumbled, and fell heavily to his knees. A gasp that sounded like a sudden sob came from the delegates.

Dean Hodman, Secretary Smith and a half a dozen of the clergymen on the floor sprang to the Bishop's side and lifted him up. He was a little shaken as a bit breathless, but was himself again.

Mr. Hodman broke the tension of the nervousness that had swept over the assemblage by announcing the act of the convention to the Bishop.

Secretary Smith sprang to the edge

GIRL DIDN'T WANT TO PRESS THE CHARGE

ROSA PULOCH SLIPS AWAY FROM COURT—LOUCH FREED.

John Louch, the Pole accused of attempting to assault Rosa Puloch and her father, Marino Puloch, was freed yesterday afternoon. Then the lawyers and Rosa herself helped to bring about the termination of the case.

Louch was to have been heard before Justice Mosher Monday afternoon. He failed to keep his parole, and the case was laid over until yesterday morning. The police caught him later in the afternoon, and the case was called on time in the morning. Then it was found that Rosa, who had been in the court a few minutes before, had disappeared. So had a brother of the prisoner, who sat with her. Rosa's father sent out to hunt her up. Having waited in vain for a half an hour, F. J. Blatz, W. S. Augleman and William Newcorn, all of whom Louch had retained to defend him, agreed with John P. Owens, counsel for the State, to put the hearing off until afternoon.

A few minutes before the case was called for the third time, Counselor Newcorn came into court and reported to his colleagues that Rosa's father was inducing Rosa, with parental arguments, to come to court. The discipline was being administered on North avenue. The prisoner's brother was hovering on the edge of the storm, coaxing Rosa to stay away from court. The father prevailed, and Rosa went with him.

Just before the justice called the case Rosa's father allowed his eyes to wander from the girl. When she call came Rosa had disappeared again.

Rosa was ruled out of the case, and Louch was arraigned under the father's charge. His three lawyers had no trouble in knocking that out.

Louch pers, when last seen, was hunting for Rosa and the brother.

REDMOND AND MURRAY PLEASED THE CROWD

POPULAR SINGERS THE HEADLINERS AT BAND CONCERT VAUDEVILLE.

The popularity of summer band concert benefits was again attested to last night, when a full house greeted Billy Redmond's vaudeville show at Saengerbund Hall. The popular singer brought out a galaxy of stars in the "continuous" world and the programme proved acceptable. Redmond and "Billy" Murray, the popular singers, scored big hits, the former giving "We'll Be Together When the Clouds Roll by" and "The Man With the Chesapeake Voice;" while Murray gave "Yankee Doodle Boy," "Give My Regards to Broadway" and "Wouldn't That Make You Hungry." Redmond furnished the entire show music.

Following the programme, dancing was taken up and continued until an early hour this morning. Ben La-Vere, Edward F. T. Smith and F. M. Slater, Jr., acted as floor managers.

H. P. H. S. Seniors' Reception.

The reception to be given by the juniors to the seniors of the North Plainfield High School takes place Monday evening, May 15, at the Casino. Miss Mary Robley is chairman of the committee and the others are Miss Mary Clark, Miss Marion Overton, Stanley Fisher and Lee Keasey.

Stillman Prize Examinations.

Examinations for the Stillman mathematic prize will commence this afternoon in the Plainfield High School building. This year two days will be devoted to the examinations instead of one as has formerly been the case. Interest is keen in the competition as there is a money prize at stake.

WESTFIELD GAMES OFF?

No Series Likely Unless Denman Changes His Mind.

WALLER, THE HITCH

"Red" Will Not Be Allowed to Pitch and Westfield is Afraid Without Him.

Reliable report says there will be no games with Westfield this season according to the present situation of baseball affairs. The hitch is over "Red" Waller and the series will be most likely called off unless Manager Phil Daab, of the Plainfields, and President Denman, of the Westfields, can come to some agreement.

Jim O'Rourke, manager of the Bridgeports, declares that "Red" Waller will be fined heavily if he is in the box for Westfield, Waller having been signed by the former team. Denman mouthed Daab today, it is said, that under no circumstance will there be any series unless his star pitcher is in the box for his team.

Daab is in the city this afternoon talking over the situation with baseball fans.

CHESTER H. BRIGGS, SCHOOLBOY CHAMPION

PLAINFIELDER WON TILE ON COURTS OF THE WEST SIDE LAWN TENNIS CLUB.

C. H. Briggs, of the Plainfield High School, won the interscholastic lawn tennis championship yesterday in the Columbia University tournament on dirt courts of the West Side Lawn Tennis Club, Amsterdam avenue and One Hundred and Seventeenth street, New York. Briggs defeated C. E. Van Vleck, Jr., of the Montclair High School, in straight sets by the score by 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

As the winner of the tournament Briggs is privileged to enter the national championship tournament at Newport, in August, and meet the winners at the Yale, Harvard, Princeton and other collegiate tournaments for the national intercholastic title and honors won last year by Niles, of Harvard.

MISS M'GEE HURT.

Thrown From Her Horse By Its Plunging and Is Then Trampled Upon.

Losing her balance through the animal's sudden intractability, Miss Elizabeth McGee, of Rockview avenue, a daughter of Walter McGee, was thrown from her horse on Arlington avenue near Ninth street yesterday afternoon, and received severe temporary injuries. She fell directly in front of her mount and was struck several times by its hoofs. She was unconscious when friends and witnesses to the accident reached her side.

They carried her to a nearby residence and Dr. R. vanH. Hedges was summoned by telephone. He found the young woman suffering from numerous cuts and bruises, particularly about the head, and several severe sprains, though fortunately no bones were broken. She soon recovered sufficiently to be taken to her home in a cab.

Working for Trolley Extension.

The officers of the Plainfield Country Club are still working with the Public Service Corporation in the hope that the Arlington avenue trolley line may be extended to the clubhouse as soon as possible. They say that the increased patronage that would surely come to the company would more than pay for the expense of the improvement.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zimmer have moved from Manning avenue to Brooklyn.

Miss Fordham, the trained nurse, operated upon a few days ago for appendicitis, is convalescing.

EXPERT TENNIS PLAY

Champion and Former Champion Contest on Local Courts.

GALLERY OF 400

Malcolm D. Whitman and Holcombe Ward the Clever Exponents of the Game.

In the presence of a gallery of nearly four hundred enthusiasts the formal opening of the tennis season at the Plainfield Country Club yesterday was marked by the appearance of Malcolm D. Whitman, the former tennis champion and Holcombe Ward, the present champion of the United States in singles. The unusual privilege of having these noted tennis players here was through the courtesy of Miss Harxridge and Miss Ward, the latter a sister of Mr. Ward.

Three sets were played and Mr. Whitman won them all by the scores of 13-10, 6-4 and 6-3. The first set was hotly contested from first to last and the play throughout was brilliant, despite a high wind, which somewhat interfered with the best work of the contestants. An unusual feature was that two games went to deuce six times. The players were well matched and several times they were all even.

At first Whitman did not show up quite as strong as his opponent, the latter having just returned from Norfolk, where he has been in training for his approaching play in England, but as the play progressed he exhibited his old form and sustained his reputation as former champion of the world. The generous applause given the contestants was about evenly divided, although it was noticed at times that Whitman had slightly the best of the popular sentiment.

Unusual interest was manifested on the part of the spectators in the original swiss service used by Mr. Ward which was sent to the best advantage in his return of the ball to his opponent. Quick as a flash and with all the ease and grace possible, the clever player returned his opponent's service and his style of play won round after round of applause. On the other hand Mr. Whitman demonstrated his ability by a number of brilliant plays which aroused the enthusiasm of the spectators. While the women were in the majority, there was a good attendance of men, many of whom are well-up in the game. Not only from this city but from nearly every town between here and Elizabeth, as well as New York, were to be found guests, showing that the opportunity was fully appreciated.

As referee of the match, T. M. Day, Jr., gave entire satisfaction. After the exhibition, the contestants were entertained at dinner by Miss Harxridge at the clubhouse. Covers were laid for sixteen.

PASTOR AND WIFE AS THEIR GUESTS

REV. AND MRS. GEORGE MOONEY ENTERTAINED BY CONGREGATION.

Marking the return of the pastor for another year, the congregation to the Monroe Avenue church gave Rev. George Mooney and his wife a reception, last night. The affair was largely attended by members of the church and congregation and everyone thoroughly enjoyed it. The church was decorated with the season's flowers, including apple blossoms and lilies.

E. H. Beekman was in charge of the programme which included short addresses by Rev. Dr. Whitney, Rev. Dr. Parsons, Rev. A. C. McCrea, while Mr. Mooney responded to the happy words spoken by his brother pastors.

The programme was followed by a social hour and the serving of refreshments by members of the Epworth League and Ladies' Aid Society. It was gratifying to Mr. Mooney to know that his first year at this church was a successful one and that the new year has promise of being equally so.

Reformed's Missionary Work.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Board of the Reformed church of America, was held in Rev. Dr. Burrill's church, Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street, New York. The representatives present from Trinity Reformed church were as follows: Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Miss Caroline Sobenck, Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff, Mrs. H. F. Crawford, Mrs. Daniel Bapalje, Miss Bapalje, Mrs. A. L. Force, Miss Lillian A. Force and Mrs. J. W. Sobenck.

—Bernhard Davies, of West Fifth street, has entered the employ of a large East Orange concern.

COUNCIL SELLS BONDS

New School Issue of $63,000 Awarded Last Night.

HIGHEST BID $104.17

Amendment Offered to Park Avenue Widening Ordinance and Public Hearing Set.

For the purpose of offering at private sale Plainfield's $63,000 additional school bonds with which to complete the new High School now in course of construction, a special meeting of the Common Council was held last night. It was previously decided to offer the bonds at public sale, but later a change was made and last night the former action was rescinded by resolution, so that the Common Council could receive and act upon bids presented.

Mr. Tolles stated that he had received three bids for the bonds, but one of these was not accompanied by the stipulated $1,000 certified check. They were all received, however, and afterward referred to the finance committee. Then a lengthy recess was taken to consider this matter and that of a proposed amendment to the ordinance to widen Park avenue, between Second street and the railroad.

The bids for the bonds were received from Kountze Brothers, M. L. Crawford & Co., and N. W. Halsey & Co., all of New York. The bids of Kountze Brothers was $103.70, that of H. L. Crawford & Co., $104.014 and N. W. Halsey & Co., $103.50. The last named was not accompanied by a check for $1,000, although the firm said it would furnish such check if the city decided to give them the bonds. All the bids specified accrued interest.

After the recess the Common Council through a resolution offered by Mr. Tolles accepted the bid of H. L. Crawford & Co., represented here by George S. Ring. This firm's bid was the highest and the bonds were awarded to them upon the conditions specified.

According to these conditions, $5,000 of the bonds mature June 1, 1924 and $6,000 each year from 1925 to 1933 and the remaining $3,000 in 1934.

After Mr. Tolles offered a motion returning to the unsuccessful bidders their certified checks, Mr. Wilcox offered an amendment to the ordinance to widen Park avenue. The ordinance as amended provides that the building line shall be established 41.63 feet from the centre of the street. This will widen the street between Second street and the railroad ten feet and the building line is five feet back of that. The ordinance was amended specially for the purpose of explicitly interpreting it for the benefit of the Plainfield Trust Company, it having been previously understood that the company would give the extra five feet for a sidewalk when it intended to use the space for the ornamentation of its own building. The ordinance now clearly defines the matter, stating just what space is to be devoted to the highway and that to be used by the trust company or anyone else who may build on that avenue. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings, ordered advertised and Monday night, June 5, as the time when the ordinance in a public hearing will be granted those interested for or against. All voted for the amendment except Mr. Bullock and Mr. Murphy.

Getting Ready for New Directory.

J. R. Wand, the local directory man, was in town today making preliminary arrangements for the coming season's edition. The book is no longer issued by the Wand Directory Company as Mr. Wand has full control of the business and will make several improvements that have hitherto been impossible. It will be ready for distribution about August 1 and a feature will be the indices of white and black residents.

Italian Colony's Fight.

There was a general cutting affray among the Italians at the house of Luigi Franco, on North street, Westfield, Sunday. No one seemed to know just what the fight was about, but when it was over Nick Jurenti had cut Tony Mazzo from the wrist to elbow and had laid open John Mark's cheek, cutting a gash. Jurenti got safely away from the police.

Chauffeur Skipped.

Louis Strong, a schoolboy, son of Rev. Charles R. Strong, of 770 Belvidere avenue, was knocked from his bicycle by an automobile runabout at Second street and Park avenue at 8:30 o'clock this morning. The auto driver went on without pausing, and the police are anxious to learn his identity. The boy was unhurt.

Women Wise And Foolish

The Husband Exalter. Good Talkers—Strenuous Entertainers

It's funny how some women enjoy rattling their matrimonial chains so that every one can take notice. It is as if they cried, "Behold me, the slave who enjoys it!"

The fun of the thing is that half the time the supposed lord and master is a mild little man, incapable of dictating to a mosquito, instead of the terrible "he who must be obeyed" they represent him to be.

"I'd like to, yes, very much, but Charlie wouldn't let me!" one often hears these self made slaves remark, whereas the truth is that Charlie wouldn't care a hang either way.

But sometimes a man really is a tyrant.

Usually, however, the woman has herself to blame for that.

A friend of mine, a great big stunning girl, married a little bit of a man with a nasty, critical way about him, as small men often have, and a very exaggerated idea of his own importance and opinions. Before her marriage she was independence personified, but since then she doesn't breathe without his permission. He criticises everybody and everything, and she simply has no will of her own. It is almost ridiculous for this great, splendid, clever woman to see life only through the eyes of this wizened up specimen of manhood who has not the broad outlook of an ordinary man even. He tells her exactly what she shall do and exactly what she shall wear. He even goes over the list of her lifelong friends and weeds out those he does not fancy. And she calmly acquiesces regardless of past favors and ties.

It is just as if she realized his smallness and meanness and wanted to give him more than the ordinary amount of respect and all that sort of thing in order to exalt him in her own eyes and in those of her friends.

But the really strong man doesn't care for that sort of slavishness on his wife's part, and he doesn't need it.

Bright Conversationists.

I know of several girls who are invited around merely because their conversation is cheerful and not personal.

When you come right down to it the number of women who can really talk well is woefully small. Why will women dwell on themselves, their troubles and difficulties? Men don't do that, and men have their share of the world's knocks—yes, indeed! Yet how many men would be invited out if they did nothing but talk shop and wonder whether Jones was going to close that deal tomorrow or if the tailor would make that coat collar fit better in the back?

Perhaps—who knows?—it is this very ability to throw off cares which allows men to accomplish so much more than women.

As a rule, it is hard work that pulls a man down, while it is almost invariably worry that gives a woman nervous prostration.

Too Much Hostess.

"There is such a thing as entertaining one's guests to death," remarked the popular woman. "Nothing makes me so nervous as a visit to a house where every day has been planned out beforehand. I feel as if an invisible arm were pushing me all the time, and I want to sit down, figuratively speaking, in my tracks like a balking horse.

"That sort of thing is all right for a children's party, where complications are apt to arise if the children's attention is not kept distracted all the time, but the average adult wants some blanks in her day that she can fill to suit her own fancy. She is even glad of a chance to lounge around a bit, to read a book or merely to have a heart to heart talk and become better acquainted. Try taking it easier when you have people at the house, and, believe me, they will enjoy their visit much more. MAUD ROBINSON.

LESS EATING IN PUBLIC.

Actively Advocated Theory Is Having Marked Effect on the Business Lunches.

*A man who is in touch with the wholesale business of supplying hotels and restaurants with food says the actively advocated theory that Americans eat too much is having a marked effect on the habits of city people. This theory states the Philadelphia Record, is urged in lectures, in newspaper articles, and in many private ways to an extent that is scarcely realized by anyone who does not watch closely, and the result is a noticeable falling off in the amount of food eaten by those whose business compels them to eat in public places. The movement explains, indeed, the growing popularity of the quick-lunch cafe, but not a few people are now reducing other meals, breakfasts particularly, so that the hearty, full breakfast of other days is growing more and more obsolete. This applies, however, only to the city, according to the experience of the observer quoted. In the country the ancient practice of eating three square meals a day seems to flourish in its original vigor unimpaired. Whether the new theory has become sufficiently universal even in the city to make any appreciable difference in the health of the citizens is a question concerning which there is as yet no testimony.

WHEN PEOPLE LOSE TASTE

Loss of Smell Nearly Always Ensues, Yet They Retain Old Likes and Dislikes.

"When people lose their taste," said a physician, according to the Baltimore Herald, "they retain their old likes and dislikes, just the same. Miss Smith, for instance, can't tell a slice of roast beef from a fried onion, but she disliked onions before her taste went, and therefore she won't eat them now.

"People lose their taste through severe illnesses, and with the loss of taste the loss of smell nearly always goes. Hence queer, cruel practical jokes. I know a woman without smell to whom a pint of onion juice was sent in a cologne bottle. She deluged herself with this onion juice and appeared in a crowded, heated ballroom.

"To a man without taste or smell all cheeses must be alike, yet old Brownlow won't touch limburger. He says it would make him ill, and probably it would. It is very odd to hear these deficient people praising and condemning food and drink. They do it, though. They do it as heartily as you or I.

"I have seen old Brownlow send away in disgust a glass of white wine, claiming it was corked, while at the same time he ate calmly an addled egg."

GUILTY BUT FELT HURT.

'Twas Not a Cow, But a "Blamed Old Jackass" He Had Stolen.

"I was governor of my state for two terms," said a well-known western politician, relates the Chicago News, "and I made up my mind as soon as I was sworn in the first time to right any wrong which I might find in the two state prisons. I had somehow got the idea that many innocent men were sent there."

"And did you find it so?" I asked.

"I did. There were over a thousand convicts in all, and I investigated 350 cases before I stopped. According to his own story, every one was an innocent man and the victim of injustice. There was just one exception. He had been sent to prison for stealing a cow, and he lied to me for a long time. At length, one day, after I had gone over the case with him for the fifth time and showed him that he must be guilty, he said:

"It's no use to deceive you, governor. I'll admit that I did the stealing, but what hurts my feelings is the mistake they made. It wasn't a cow at all, but a blamed old jackass, and the jury convicted me because it was sworn to that he gave 12 quarts of milk a day."

CURIOUS TROPICAL PLANT.

Vine That Possesses Power of Respiration and Is Given to Coughing.

An interesting vine, known as the coughing bean, is a respiratory plant which is a native of moist, tropical regions. By accidental transportation of its seeds it has gradually spread to much less congenial spots, especially railroad embankments, where it endures drought very well, though its growth is stunted. But there is one thing it cannot endure, and that is dust. When the breathing pores become choked by dust the gases accumulate within the leaf for a time and then are forcibly ejected in an audible paroxysm of coughing and sneezing, which makes the leaf tremble violently. At the same time the whole plant becomes red owing to the subsiding of the green chlorophyll grains and the appearance of particles of red coloring matter on the surface. This odd vine is sometimes cultivated as a house plant. Sweeping the carpet of the room in which it lives is very apt to set the plant to coughing, much to the astonishment of persons unfamiliar with its peculiarities.

NOTABLE DISCOVERY.

REMARKABLE STEP OF PROF. LOEB IN LIFE CREATION.

Eminent Scientist Perfects Artificial Reproduction of Sea Urchins—May Yet Reach Field of Man.

San Francisco.—Prof. Jacques Loeb, of the University of California, perhaps the greatest living biologist and physiologist, whose former researches in the realms of biology have resulted in wonderful discoveries, at last has perfected his amazing experiments begun at the University of Chicago several years ago. He claims that he is just at the threshold of his daring goal—the creation of life itself. Dr. Loeb has announced that by artificial means he has produced the sexual fertilization of the eggs of sea urchins. This achievement, according to other scientists, opens the way for further work that will bring science near to the innermost secrets of life and the nature of the vital force.

It is believed that Dr. Loeb's "cross-fertilization" success is the most important development along physiological and biological lines of recent times and is a big step toward the cherished goal of Dr. Loeb—the creation of human life by purely physical and chemical means.

What strange monster, Caliban or Frankenstein, the first man created by this means might be, if it is possible so to create man, only can be conjectured. Would such a creation be lacking in essentially human traits? To judge from Dr. Loeb's experiments with the lower form of animal life, that of the sea urchin, the answer would seem to be: No. For the parthogenetic larvae, or larvae developed artificially, have all the resemblance to the larvae produced by normal fertilization, and the same vitality.

Dr. Loeb, while a professor in the University of Chicago, succeeded in fertilizing the eggs of the sea urchins, but he could not get them to hatch. Now he has succeeded in hatching them out and producing lively, active sea urchins, indistinguishable from the normal, even by their new "papa." Several years ago the professor said, in a scientific journal, that he was convinced from his experiments with sea urchins that immaculate conception through subtle changes in the "ions," or chemical and physical forces, in the blood is a possibility. In the previous experiments Dr. Loeb had succeeded in producing embryonic life by immersing the eggs of the sea urchin and other marine animals in water, the density of which had been increased by certain salts. He has achieved his complete success by the addition of a chemical known as "thylacetate" to the former solutions.

PROF. JACQUES LOEB.
(Eminent Scientist Who Has Made Notable Discovery in Science of Life.)

It occurred to the doctor that the spermatozoon, or male principle, might carry into the egg not one, but several substances or conditions, each of which was responsible for only a part of the specific features of sexual fertilization, and that, in order completely to imitate the action of the spermatozoon, it might be necessary to combine two methods of artificial parthenogenesis, each of which imitates the process of sexual fertilization, only in part. This idea proved correct far beyond the doctor's expectations, and he was rewarded by seeing the first artificially made sea urchin "chip its shell" and wriggle grotesquely about in the water. Where formerly he succeeded in producing embryonic life in but a fraction of one per cent. of the eggs used, now Dr. Loeb has the satisfaction of producing perfectly healthy baby urchins from more than 90 per cent. of the eggs.

Prof. Loeb sums up his results in the following words: "We are now able to imitate the natural process of fertilization in the egg of the sea urchin completely by physical and chemical means. The fact that the parthenogenetic larvae (animals developed artificially) produced by the new method have the same vitality as the larvae produced by normal fertilization arouses the hope that it will be possible to undertake the solution of the problems to which the raising of parthenogenetic larvae in large numbers is preliminary."

Prof. Loeb has long been known as a leader in the application of new chemistry to the science of life. At the close of the year 1902 he went to the University of California from the University of Chicago, where for ten years he had performed wonderful research work. Prof. Loeb is an M. D. from the University of Strasburg, but studied in other foreign schools. As a physiologist he takes high rank. He was born in Germany April 7, 1859. It is said of him that often in the classroom he will stop in the midst of a lecture and spend several minutes in deep thought.

Lawyers Have Their Opinion of Women Clients

A man lawyer has been giving his opinion of the woman client, and it is not flattering. On the other hand, the woman who has been through the mill of having business transactions with members of the legal profession has also her opinion of the man lawyer, and it is even less flattering to him than his judgment is to her. Experiences of suing to recover money due one and having the attorney claim half, two-thirds, in some cases even the whole of the amount recovered, and being brought into actual debt to the lawyer besides, is rather calculated to sour either man or woman against the legal profession and to induce the resolve in future to avoid lawsuits at whatever cost. It is only fair, however, to hear the man lawyer's side of the case too. To do him justice, he admits that an experienced business woman makes as reasonable and sensible a client as a man, but when it comes to the emotional, gushy, ignorant, clinging vine sort of female—excuse him. He never knows what she is going to do next. Emotional affairs are apt to prompt this sort of woman to lawsuits. She will visit the attorney and weep and implore him to help her in some matrimonial or love squabble. She manufactures tears so effectively that to get rid of her the lawyer frequently takes her case and brings about the result she desires. Then the fair client is apt to find herself not a bit happier or better satisfied than she was before, and, with the inconsequentialness of the old style woman or an idiot, she immediately 'bout faces and blames the lawyer bitterly for bringing all this misery into her life! So says the man lawyer.

"The czar's mother is forced to do all the cooking for the imperial family for fear poison may be introduced into their food." Let us hope the czar's mother herself will not poison the imperial family with her poor cooking.

May the old style of emotional, cowardly, irresponsible woman speedily disappear! It matters not how she vanishes, whether she is evolved out, drops out or evaporates. Just let her go, the sooner the better, and farewell forever to her!

"Thousands of letters have been received by the land commissioner of Boneset, S. D., from men who wish to marry the young women that drew farming homesteads in the recent opening of government lands on the Rosebud reservation." Just so! What a miserable, mercenary creature woman is to marry for a home! Isn't she?

"No; bonnet strings are not worn, except by old women," says the fashion editor. I have looked for weeks to see a pair of bonnet strings, and ne'er a string have I found, except on Salvation Army feminine folk. Evidently there are no old women any more.

And now Queensland, of the Australian federation, has granted full suffrage to women.

If Marie Feodorovna, dowager empress of all the Russias, had not sat upon the lid of reform for her own sex and set herself in all ways to keep them down and in ignorance and subjection, she would not now be in danger every moment of having that lid blown off by dynamite and herself and her family seat to kingdom come with all their sins upon their heads. The gifted, intelligent women of Russia would have gone over to her side instead of to the revolutionist terrorists. At least one or two loyal women would have relieved her of the necessity of going into the kitchen and perspiring over the imperial cooking, which not a human being could be trusted to do.

There are others than women who loathe tobacco. "I do not belong to a club of any kind," says John Burroughs, America's naturalist. "I would like to join a few good clubs of men if it wasn't for their infernal tobacco."

Honesty, decency, courage and common sense—these four go to the making of character, according to President Roosevelt. But often one finds that common sense is the scarcest of the four.

As usual, somebody is sneering at Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in America. Now she is derided because she lives at the rate of $900 a year, dwelling in a flat for which she pays only $18 a month rent. Well, why shouldn't she? Has this republic, supposed to be a free country, come to that pass where a woman must live as other people demand she shall rather than in the way she desires for herself? Mrs. Green's tastes are altogether for the simple life we hear so landed. She turns from the monkeyish circus in which public opinion would have her perform and lives her own life, as she has a perfect right to do, without interference from anybody. If more women lived their own lives instead of that laid down for them by fashion, this would be a nobler country.

WIVES WHO ARE CHUMS.

They Never Ask the Editor of the Woman's Page For Advice.

Why are so many marriages failures?

Because the bride and groom have no tastes in common.

A man marries a girl because she is pretty; a girl marries a man because he has a good income or a good appearance. After they settle down together what remains? He likes to read; she wants to go out all the time. He is interested in athletics, she in poetry. She loves opera, and he won't go inside a theater unless to hear a comedy, and very often he has a sense of humor and she has none at all.

This last is positively a tragedy.

If men would realize how necessary a sense of humor is in a woman they would certainly look for it more carefully before committing themselves. The trouble with most men is that they make too many allowances for the differences between men and women. They think because a girl can't understand it is because she is a woman. It is not. It is because she is the wrong woman. There is a right kind of woman for every man, and she will have the same tastes as he has; she will laugh at the same things and cry at the same things.

That is being a real chum, and it is the married chums who lead happy lives.

Most women have no idea of the meaning of being chums. A husband tries to tell his wife things, and he gives up in despair because he thinks that, being a woman, she can't understand (which is a libel on womanhood), or she makes a scene when things don't go her way instead of stating her objections quietly and giving him good advice.

The papers are full of lovelorn wives asking for advice, and the advice is very simple. It is the same for all:

"Be his chum; be sunny and cheerful; forget your petticoats occasionally and your narrow prejudices; be a friend to him as his men friends are; share his trouble and, above all, his point of view; like the things he likes and take pleasure in the things which amuse him, and I am almost willing to wager everything I have that he will like your things and think everything you do is just about right in the end.

SUMMER DINING ROOM.

How to Furnish It Inexpensively and Yet Artistically.

Dining room furniture is expensive, and the furnishing of the summer house is apt to be a heavy consideration.

Why not adopt the following plan? Buy some neatly shaped pine chairs and a table and stain them a soft Flemish green. In the center of the table have an old rose jardiniere holding a fern. The floor may be covered with a green art square, and the woodwork of the room may likewise be stained the same tone of green.

Notice the room in the picture. How artistic and yet how simple it is! The fireplace is a good thing in the dining room of a summer house on account of chilly mornings and evenings. Bits of green and white china will add to the decorative effect. The casement window is the making of the room, and it is hung very simply with dimity curtains. Any woman might have a dining room like this for a very small sum.

MAY FASHIONS.

Gossip Concerning Materials and Colors Which Will Be Popular.

Voile is so soft and pretty that it is no wonder it is so well liked. It now bids fair to be among the very best fabrics of the season, though, to be sure, it is not altogether new. But women are learning that it is better to hold on to some things which have been found desirable than to be always seeking something entirely new. The voiles are presented in all the season's colorings and in white and black. This gives them a wide range of usefulness and adapts the material to almost any requirement and any kind of trimming. I have seen some voile gowns with velvet garnitures, others with lace, more with set pieces of fancy braid and still more with no ornamentation save tucks or shirrs or some other kind of hand work. There seems to be nothing not adapted to this semidiaphanous material. It is generally made over a skirt of taffeta either of the same or of a contrasting color.

But voile is a difficult material to manage, as it is so flexible, and the amateur dressmaker is bound to bedew it with tears before it is done. I think lace is the natural complement of this pretty stuff, and the illustration shows how it may be effectively applied. The sleeves are short to the elbows, and then comes a fall of three ruffles of lace hanging down well over the wrist. The waist is in the form of a short bolero, and along the front and around the neck is a notched band of fine white linen batiste, with tiny white linen buttons in the notches. It makes quite a dainty trimming.

Lace Much Used For Trimmings.

Laces for trimming of gowns and the short capes and coats may be any kind, but bruges, galloons, bretons and heavy carrickmacross, duchess, Irish crochet, cluny and several fancies in muslin and lace combination are the best except for the very thin lawns and batistes. For these valenciennes is the proper kind, for none of the rest is fine enough. Nearly all these are so made that there is an insertion to match. The new fancy for chemisettes creates an added demand for lace, and these are very dressy. They reach up quite as high as the stocks and are made in two styles. Some are only to be pinned on outside the dress, and thus they simulate a chemisette, while the others are so fashioned as to fill in the square or V shaped point in the waist. I saw some that were almost as bad as the guimpes of detested memory, but these are intended to fill in square necked waists. Many of the prettiest dresses are cut square in the neck and are to be filled in with the chemisette in the earlier part of the season and left open when it shall grow warm enough.

Hand embroidered dresses of batiste, lawn, white broadcloth, crepe de chine and the old-new radium silks are among the newest of the dainty and incidentally costly dresses for summer, which is now so very near to us. Besides the expensive hand wrought embroidered gowns there is an endless list of machine embroidered ones. In some the pattern is all over and in others only along the flounces and other portions intended for trimming.

Some Novel Shapes in Hats.

I have left myself but a small space to speak of hats. The subject requires a volume with a sequel, so I will say but a few words about the latest styles. This year women have so much latitude that every one can wear what she likes and still be in fashion. The funny but becoming little Tommy Atkins hat, sometimes called a pill box, is one of the nattiest. The continental comes next, followed by any number of toques, turbans, chic sailors made of milan braid, chip or silk braid plateau shapes, which set us wondering how they hold on, and no end of tip tilted, side elevated and bent brims, with so many flowers that the wearers look overloaded. Roses in bunches, in wreaths and in every conceivable manner are seen, and they are marked by wonderful perfection. There are plateaux of lace straw in single and also mixed colors, and all are pretty. The turbans seem rather better adapted to elderly faces than to the young.

The novelties shown in mohair dress goods pass belief, so many there are, and all of them excellent for wear and appearance. They are in stripes and checks as well as all black.

Mme. Carlier Wears the Cross of the Legion of Honor

The first Napoleon established the decoration of the cross of the Legion of Honor. It was to be bestowed on those who achieved noble and heroic deeds. Bonaparte scarcely thought a woman would ever receive the prize he intended specially for soldiers, yet this coveted decoration was given by the French republic to Mme. Emilie Carlier for bravery and heroism as conspicuous as were ever displayed on a battlefield. Several women have received the red ribbon of the Legion of

MME. EMILIE CARLIER.

Honor, but Mme. Carlier is the only one of her sex to whom the cross has been awarded.

Her husband was French consul at Siwas, Asiatic Turkey, among the Armenians. His young wife had accompanied him to the consulate, though both knew the danger in case of a clash between Turks and Armenians. The clash came. Maddened Turks began to slay, cut, kill, maim and drown Christian Armenians in the manner approved by the fanatical among followers of the prophet. The hunted Armenians took refuge in the French consulate. The Carliers prepared to defend both themselves and the refugees. In anticipation of an attack on the consulate by a Turkish mob Mme. Carlier had filled bags with sand, enough of them to barricade her windows. Under the direction of a faithful old servant she also learned to shoot, becoming an expert.

The mob came, thundering at the doors, howling and hurling stones and sticks. Mme. Carlier left her infant son with a nurse and took charge of the main entrance. Her husband guarded the side and rear of the house. The sand bags kept the windows. The front door was strong and had chains across. It was opened just sufficiently to admit the passage of the nose of rifle or revolver. Behind that door as the thrilling moments passed stood the hero woman with her death spouting weapons, picking off every Turk that came in range. At length the mob retired, and Mme. Carlier went at once to her baby. She found the baby had cut his first tooth.

For her brave work Mme. Emilie Carlier wears the cross of the Legion of Honor.

Woman Trader In a Mining Camp.

In 1898 Mrs. R. S. Hutcheon of Chicago learned that there was need of such small necessities as pins, needles and thread in the mining towns of Alaska. They were worth almost their weight in gold and scarcely to be had at that.

Mrs. Hutcheon has the commercial talent. She selected a small stock of goods adapted to the exigency and went with them to Dawson over the perilous route by land and down the Yukon river. It was a bad trip for hardship, and Mrs. Hutcheon was obliged to do much mental sciencing of herself to keep her courage up. But she sold her goods at gold dust prices, catching the mining town exactly on the boom.

The enterprising woman merchant came back for more goods and sold them too. Her first store in Dawson was a tent. She next built a frame house and established in it the principal dry goods and millinery house in Dawson. Her pluck and shrewdness have been amply rewarded. She expects to open a branch establishment in the Tanana district. She follows the mining booms.

The Daughter of Old John Brown.

Quietly, aloof from the world, all alone in a cottage at the foot of the mountains in Santa Clara county, Cal., lives Miss Sarah Brown, the daughter of John Brown of Ossawattomie. Of John Brown's twenty-one children she is the seventeenth. In 1874 Mrs. Brown and six children traveled across the plains from Kansas to California. They finally settled on some land in Santa Clara county and planted orchards.

One by one the brothers and sisters married and dropped away, leaving Sarah and her mother to take care of the farm, which they did, Mrs. Brown attending to the house, Sarah doing the farm work. Then Mrs. Brown died, too, and the lonely daughter, approaching middle age, was left all alone. She plows, prunes the trees and attends to the chickens. Yet with all her toil she has never yet become rich enough to buy the little fruit farm, but rents it from year to year.

WOULD END ALL WAR

PRACTICAL PLAN OF FAMOUS NORWEGIAN AUTHOR.

Bjoernstjerne Bjoernson Says Prohibiting Loans to Belligerents Is the Only Way to Insure Universal Peace.

Paris.—Many are the plans which well-meaning people have conceived to put an end to all wars and establish universal peace, but of all these none seems more plausible or practical than one which M. Bjoernstjerne Bjoernson, the famous Norwegian author and playwright, mentioned the other day when visited in his home in this city.

"I do not see why we waste so much time devising means to abolish war," said M. Bjoernson, "when the only way in which we may accomplish our purpose is evident to all. Let the world declare that loans made to belligerents are contraband of war, and wars will stop.

"It seems plain that if arms, ammunition, coal and provisions from neutral powers to belligerents are contraband loans of millions which are openly declared to be made to prolong war certainly ought to be considered in the same class. To give to this truth the power of an international law we cannot afford to wait for another conference at The Hague.

"Powers like Russia, which cannot even pay the interest on their national debt without taking up new loans in foreign countries, much less carry on a war without financial assistance from others, would never consent to have war loans declared contraband, as this would forever prevent them from carrying on war.

"But as public opinion all over the whole civilized world demands this, the legislatures of all civilized countries ought to pass just such a law to be in force in their own states, punishing with heavy fines or imprisonment anyone who gave financial assistance to a belligerent power.

"Exceptions, I think, should be made in favor of a nation which is depending on its independence or its native soil. I do not think that I am wrong when I say that a law passed by all the parliaments of the world, making it a punishable offense to supply money to a foreign power for the purpose of carrying on war, would make war impossible.

"I have been reading a letter from Norway from a business man who was exceedingly happy because a steamer owned by him and loaded with ammunition and coal had succeeded in reaching Vladivostok. Every honest government ought to punish an open breach of neutrality. What good does it do that the various governments declare the neutrality of the countries they represent when they do not even make an attempt of punishing those of their subjects who openly boast of having helped one or the other of the belligerent powers?

"Scores of steamers leave England every month loaded with coal for Japan or Russia, a great German steamship company is openly entering into contracts to supply the Baltic squadrons with coal, but neither the kaiser's nor King Edward's government takes any steps to prevent this. I think that public opinion would back up the government that first punished offenders of this kind. Here is a great task for the men in the parliaments of the world who favor universal peace. If they could force through laws to this effect they would render an invaluable service to humanity."

M. Bjoernson declared that in the very near future he would appeal to the members in favor of universal peace in the parliaments of all countries to consider his plan.

Valuable White Sapphire.

The largest white sapphire ever discovered has been taken to Berlin by M. Heppmer, a German engineer, who has resided for many years in Brazil, where he possesses several mines. Before cutting, the stone weighed 1,250 carats, but a flaw caused the cleavage of a piece weighing 400 carats. This piece will produce a cut stone of 100 carats. That cut from the larger piece weighs 418 carats, is two inches in length, and one inch and a half wide and thick. The owner values the stone at 300,000 crowns.

An unwonted addition to his makeup was seen in the shape of two huge diamond studs. It has been hinted that the boots and the gems do not exactly harmonize.

WRITING OF "BEN HUR."

Interesting Facts Concerning the Story Recalled by Death of Its Author.

The death of Gen. "Lew" Wallace calls renewed attention to the many interesting facts connected with his writing of "Ben Hur," the novel which published in 1880, is still selling in as great numbers 25 years after its publication as in the year following its first appearance. The book has never been issued in a cheaper edition than the one in which it was first published, while, on the other hand, 14 luxurious editions of it have been brought out. Translations have been made in language after language. It seems most remarkable that when Gen. Wallace wrote the book he had never been to the Holy Land, but worked out the minute topography of the country as it is presented in the story entirely from maps and reading. The author, once said to his publisher that when eventually he did visit Palestine he was himself surprised at the absolute accuracy of his descriptions, which tallied exactly with the actual conditions, and he was fond of telling how he found the very stone which he had imagined as a resting place for Ben Hur at a certain point in the story. The book was written in all sorts of strange places—on boats, railroads, in carriages, wherever the author found opportunity, afterward revising and correcting with great patience and care.

PEOPLE BLIND TO CHANCES

Some So Sightless to Opportunities They Wouldn't See One If It Hit Them.

It is a dangerous thing to wait for opportunities until it becomes a habit. Energy and inclination for hard work ooze out in the waiting. Opportunity *becomes invisible to those who are do*ing nothing, or looking somewhere else for it. It is the great worker, the man who is alert for chances that sees them, writes Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine.

Some people become so opportunity-blind that they cannot see chances anywhere—they would pass through a gold mine without noticing anything precious—while others will find opportunities in the most barren and out-of-the-way places. Bunyan found opportunity in Bedford jail to write the greatest allegory in the world on the untwisted paper that had been used to cork his bottles of milk. A Theodore Parker or a Lucy Stone sees an opportunity to go to college in a chance to pick berries. One boy sees an opening to his ambition in a chance to chop wood, wait on table, or run errands, where another sees no chance at all. One sees an opportunity to get an education in the odds and ends of time, evenings and half-holidays, which another throws away.

SUPERSEDES CHLOROFORM.

Electrifying the Brain a New Discovery in the Field of Surgery.

As the result of some electrical experiments carried on by a French physician, it is confidently predicted that a new era of painless surgery is at hand, says a London exchange.

The experimenters have discovered that sleep, and insensibility to pain, may be produced by electrifying the brain. The original tests were carried out with animals, and as soon as definite results were obtained the French physician referred to had the experiments performed upon himself. The first result of the electrification of his brain was inability to speak or move. Then, finally complete unconsciousness was established.

The value of the discovery lies chiefly in the harmless nature of electricity as an anesthetic. It is far preferable to ether or chloroform, as having no bad effect on the heart.

Navy and Press.

The table talk of gallant and distinguished admirals and commanders-in-chief at our naval ports is treasured in the retentive memory of civilians whose pleasant duty it is to discourse on the navy in the press. The relations of the admiralty with the press area nsatisfactory, in some cases unfair, and in others dangerous to the nation. It is time that the relation of the admiralty to the press should be placed upon a proper footing. —London Vanity Fair.

Procurator General of Russian Orthodox Church Whose Assassination Has Been Decreed.

St. Petersburg.—Constantine Petrovitch Pobiedonostzeff, procurator general of the Orthodox Greek church, of Russia, is among those whose assassination has been decreed by the revolutionary party. He is a dreamer, a fanatic. He hates Roman Catholics and Jews alike, and has persecuted them on all possible occasions. To be a Pole and a Roman Catholic is said to be, in the eyes of Pobiedonostzeff, an enemy of God and the czar.

destined to be the ruling race of the world. He hopes to see the doctrines of the Greek Orthodox church the only allowable form of the Christian reli*gion. He casts envious eyes on Austria as a future Russian province.

The young man had a brilliant university career and left Kieff to study law in St. Petersburg. Owing to his exceptional ability, he was summoned, at an early age, to be professor of law at Moscow university, and a year or two later he was selected to be tutor to several grand dukes of the imperial family, including the one who afterwards became Czar Alexander III. His duties brought him into contact with the reigning czar, Alexander II., and he contrived to secure his high favor, while gradually tightening his grip on the mind and intellect of the future czar. He rose to be a privy councillor and senator, and on the accession to the throne of Alexander III., following the assassination of Czar Alexander II., was made procurator of the holy synod. His influence over the present czar is apparent.

Some of the acts that have made Pobiedonostzeff unpopular, besides his anti-Semitism and anti-Catholicism, are: Trying to dragoon the Armenians into becoming Muscovite slaves, through the appointment of the brutal Prince Galitzin as governor general of the Caucasian provinces; coercing the Finns and maintaining at Sousdal, an old monastery in the province of Vladimir, a prison for religious offenders.

Senator Allison has served 32 years continuously in the senate, having taken his seat March 4, 1873, and had previously served eight years in the house of representatives—40 years in all. Senator Morrill of Vermont, who previously held the record, died on December 28, 1898. Had he lived two months and one week longer, he would have been a senator 32 years continuously. Senator Allison was born in Ohio March 2, 1829, and is hale and hearty at 76 years. He has four more years of his present term to serve.

HISTORIC COIN IS LOST.

One of Thirty Pieces of Silver Paid for Betrayal of Christ Disappears from Collection.

New York.—"The mysterious fifth shekel" has again disappeared. The shekel is said to be one of the 30 pieces which were paid by the high priests of the synagogue of Jerusalem to Judas Iscariot for the betrayal of Christ.

The coin came into the possession of Marx Fischer, of this city, many years ago, and it was his prize possession.

OLD HEBREW SHEKEL.
(Illustration Showing What the Coin of Christ's Time Looked Like.)

With the discharge of Margaret Wallner from custody on a charge of stealing ancient coins from Fischer to the value of $60,000 the oft-disappearing shekel has again been lost trace of.

Fischer was negotiating with Mrs. Wallner to do housework with him, and after one of her visits he missed his box of coins. He had the woman arrested, but as her trunks and personal belongings were searched, and no evidence could be found, she was discharged.

It was ascertained during the first crusade that but five shekels of the ancient Hebrew currency were in existence, and they were reputed to be part of the payment to Judas.

All the other shekels have presumably been melted over centuries ago. Four of the existing shekels are owned by the British Museum, the National Museum of Paris, the Museum of Munich, and the Imperial Museum of Vienna.

The shekel which Fischer has just lost was once owned, it is said, by God*frey*, of Jerusalem, and was lost for centuries. Louis XI. of France was among its alleged owners. It was many times lost and stolen.

Fischer asserts that he refused some years ago $22,000 for the shekel, offered by one of the London Rothschilds.

An ancient Greek coin called "Adam and Eve," bearing representations of Jupiter and Venus, was part of the collection which has disappeared.

St. Louis.—The only Russian building at the St. Louis exposition has been torn down, but will be rebuilt on the country estate of R. T. Crane, at Lake Geneva, Wis. It stood in the Transportation building and was part of an exhibit from St. Petersburg. By students of Russian affairs it is considered a splendid example of Russian art and craftsmanship. Mr. Crane, whose business interest has taken him to Russia on several occasions, believes the structure a type of the best in Russian architecture, and for that reason he will preserve it. The building was constructed by peasant builders in the Possade Sargiewo, near Moscow, after designs by the native architect, Baarnowsky, who has done important work in St. Petersburg.

terior of Russia, on a less elaborate plan, for small homes and pavilions, the style of construction is quite primitive, the exterior being that of a forest log cabin. The logs are neatly hewn, however, and notched together so closely that no open joints remain to be plastered. The fantastic taste of the peasants is indicated in the curiously sawn eaves, gables and cornices, which are elaborately ornamented and painted in the gayest colors. The material used throughout is a white pine from the forests around Moscow, effectively stained in the case of the carved furniture, all the interior decoration having been designed by Durnowo, whose works have been highly appreciated in the Russian buildings at many international expositions.

HISTORY OF THE KOHINOOR

Famous Diamond Passed Through the Hands of a Number of the Shahs.

The Kohinoor was originally dug from the mines of Golconda. It passed to successive sovereigns of central India, and in the early part of the fourteenth century was added to the treasures of Delhi. It remained in the possession of the reigning family until the invasion, in the eighteenth century, of Nadir Shah, who, seeing it in the turban of the vanquished Mohammed, proposed to him an exchange of head-dresses, and the polite offer be*ing perforce accepted*, bore away with him the priceless jewel. After the assassination of the Nadir Shah, the "Mountain of Light" passed through the hands of Ahmed Shah of Cabul to Shah Soojah, who gave it as the price of his liberty to Ranjeet Singh, ruler of the Punjaub. On the annexation of the Punjaub, in 1849, it was stipulated that the Kohinoor should be surrendered to the queen of England, who received it from the East India company in 1850. At the great exhibition of 1851 this famous diamond was found inferior to its glass model, and it was necessary to submit it to a strong gas light in order to bring out its colors.

MISUNDERSTANDING AROSE.

Music Teacher Asked Question Which Aroused the Ire of a Pupil's Mother.

A principal in one of the primary grades of a school in South San Francisco tells a story which illustrates the readiness of the Hibernians to find and resent an insult.

"One afternoon," he said, "a daughter of the Emerald Isle rushed into my office and said that one of the teachers had insulted her child by asking it foolish questions. I asked her the nature of the question and she said the teacher had asked the child to tell how many carrots there were in a bushel. I told the excited mother to accompany me to the classroom and we would question the teacher.

"After considerable reflection the teacher could not recall having asked the child any such question. We were about to leave the room with the anger of the parent still unsatisfied when the teacher said: 'I think I know now what Mrs. McCann means. Yesterday, while teach*ing the class the rudiments* of music, I did ask as a general question: "How many beats are there in a measure?"'"

COURT MILKED THE COW.

Practical-Minded Iowa Judge Satisfied Himself as to the Animal's Condition.

"The court will proceed to milk this cow and take judicial notice of those facts which to him as an expert milker will tend to determine whether she has been fresh for a long or short time."

So announced Judge John F. Oliver the other day from the bench after hearing witnesses dispute for an hour concerning the identity of a Jersey cow, relates a correspondent of the St. Paul Dispatch. Both sides claimed her. But one side contended that she had been fresh only three months, while the other alleged that she had not been fresh for nearly a year.

The court adjourned to a stable near by, where his honor proceeded to milk the cow in true farmer fashion.

"The verdict of the court is that the cow has not been fresh over three months, therefore she goes to the plaintiff," was the announcement from the bench, after the court had solemnly led the procession back to the courthouse.

To Make Stones Grow.

The fact that many natural stones swell slightly when passing from a dry to a wet condition at the same temperature, and shrink correspondingly when the process is reversed, has also been recognized in numerous tests at the Watertown arsenal. In the report for 1890 it is stated that a very decided swelling of the stones was observed in most cases after soaking them for a time in water, and that this effect seemed to increase as the temperature rose.—Municipal Journal.

IF RUSSIA INVADED INDIA.

Would Meet with Vigorous Opposition at the Hands of the Afghans.

Much has been heard of late regarding the possibility of a Russian invasion of India, and, as most people know, this is a matter in which Afghanistan would play a very prominent part, says a London paper.

The Afghans would, of course, strongly resist any attempt to invade India through their country; not so much perhaps out of friendship for Great Britain as from a fixed determination not to submit to the domination of any other race.

Fierce and numerous as they are, the Afghans have been twice conquered by the British, but the task of holding the country was so great that our government found it a wise policy to leave the Afghans independent, merely entering into an agreement with the ameer that he should have no treaties with any power but the government of India. In return, a large annual subsidy has been paid him, every penny of which, it is said, has been spent on equipping the Afghan army, which now numbers over 200,000 men, armed with all the latest rifles and artillery.

A knowledge of this fact naturally cools the ardor of the most bellicose Russians, especially when they have so much on their hands elsewhere.

GREW TREE FOR HIS COFFIN

Missouri Man of Eighty-Seven Carefully Preserves a Walnut for That Purpose.

Probably the oldest living settler in Jackson county is Ember Mason, whose farm and home lie on the Big Blue river between Independence and Kansas City. He was born in 1817 and was brought to Independence when a child of five years and has lived in the county ever since, reports the Jackson (Mo.) Examiner.

When he cleared up the place on which he now lives he left in the middle of one field a small walnut tree. The tree was then about two inches in diameter, but perfectly straight and symmetrical. Often in the years which followed he was asked why he left that tree to shade valuable land, and his invariable answer was that he intended to live until that tree was big enough to make into boards for his coffin.

About a year ago Mr. Mason had the walnut tree, then an enormous and handsome tree, cut down and sawed into planks. It showed a beautiful grain and the boards were perfect. These boards are now carefully put away in a dry place and are seasoning, and from them Mr. Mason says his coffin is to be made. He is now 87 years of age, but is not yet ready to send the boards to the cabinet-maker.

BISHOP WAS A FREEMASON

How the Pope Trapped a French Priest Who Belonged to the Order in Rome.

France has produced a freemason bishop. Such a thing had never been seen before, and it remained for that country to produce such a phenomenon, M. de Nordez, bishop of Dijon, was unquestionably affiliated with this famous society. It is not known by what means Bishop le Nordez' membership in this fraternity came to be known, but what I have learned from the lips of one of the most prominent cardinals in Rome is the manner in which the pope got the bishop to confess. When the bishop was summoned before the pope he began by protesting against what he termed the calumnies which were directed against him. "Calumnies! Are you quite sure?" said Pope Pius X., and, quietly opening a drawer, he produced the very act of membership signed by the bishop's hand. Tableau! The prelate, finding himself caught, admitted that the document had, indeed, been signed by him. However, as the vatican was willing, in order to avoid scandal, to keep him in the fold, and as a bishop's appointments are not to be disdained, M. le Nordez promptly sent in his resignation to his lodge.

NEGRO BOY'S QUICK WIT.

He Couldn't Spell Trousers, But Knew How to Spell Pants, All Right.

Mr. W. H. Poole, of Sykesville, Md., sends the following story to the Baltimore Sun:

"There is in our household a small colored boy in whom I am greatly interested. He is only six years old, and has not long been a sharer in our public school advantages. But he is an enthusiastic student and makes use of all his opportunities. He never fails to make a trial.

"The other day I was endeavoring to find out what progress he was making in his studies, so I put him through an examination in spelling. 'Cat,' 'dog,' etc., were passed with an average of 100. I resolved to make the test a little more difficult. 'Sylvester,' said I, 'can you spell coat?'

"'C-o-a-t' came the ready response.

"'Now,' I continued, 'can you spell trousers?'

"'Can't spell dat, but I can spell pants.'

"I wish more of us were as quick to substitute the next best thing to that which we consider impossible."

LIFE ON SAGHALIEN.

ISLAND WHERE RUSSIAN CRIMINALS ARE BANISHED.

Better Known Among Natives as "Isle of the Lost," as No Person Sent There Ever Returns—Some Are Kept in Irons.

London.—Seventeen cents a day is said to be the cost of Maxim Gorki, the Russian novelist, to the Russian government for his complicity in the outbreak of the people. He is luxuriously fed in comparison with the Russian political prisoners and criminals on the Island of Saghalien. The allowance for these is seven and one-half cents for the same period.

Saghalien is an attenuated island lying off the eastern coast of Siberia, in the Sea of Okhotsk. Russia has used it as a penal colony since 1869. Among the people of Russia it is called the Isle of the Lost. It is well named by them. No person who is sent to this island ever returns. The government apparently desires to add to this impression of hopelessness by preventing, as far as possible, any description of the life lived there from reaching the people. It would have an atmosphere of gloom hang over the island. It would have exile to this forsaken spot mean the crossing of a yawning gulf into a world from which no word can return. There a false passport is not worth the trouble of writing it. Passport or no passport, it makes no difference.

A few foreigners have been able to spend a short time on the island in recent years. It has usually been difficult to secure pictures of the life there.

Only those who are sentenced to penal service for life because of some great crime, personal or political, are sent to Saghalien. The prisons are not great stone dungeons, such as those to which the American is accustomed. They resemble barracks, or great wooden warehouses. The stockades around the portion devoted to the incarceration of the most violent of the criminals if constructed around an orchard would only add to the fun of stealing the apples for an American boy. Leaving the prison, however, is like jumping from the fry*ing pan into the fire, so the tempta*tion to do so is not great. The main

A SAGHALIEN CONVICT.
(Desperate Political Prisoners and Criminals Are Compelled to Wear "Irons.") prison is divided into three parts. One is for the privileged convicts. The workshops and cells for the best-behaved prisoners are here. The good conduct prisoners, who are permitted to go outside in the day to labor, occupy the middle part. The northern quadrangle is surrounded by a strong stockade and overlooked by a watch tower. There are kept the most desperate criminals, who wear "irons" weighing 14 pounds. All the prisoners are kept there through the first year of their incarceration.

As capital punishment is not a part of Russia's criminal code, many of the prisoners are murderers who have been sent there to remain for life. All the servants of the officers are criminals.

A visitor to the place says: "It is uncomfortable to know that the surly-faced woman who enters your room in the morning with a light breakfast is a murderess. It does not add to your comfort to learn, when part of your beard has been removed, that the barber is also a murderer. You are glad to have a revolver under your pillow when you go to bed. You readily obey the injunction not to leave the house after the six o'clock curfew has been rung."

Women are privileged inhabitants on the island. They are relatively so few that they are at a premium. When a male convict has earned the right to live outside the prison walls in a small house of his own, he often invites one of the women to live with him. She may be a murderess, but that makes no difference. She may have murdered two men who occupied the same relation to her that he does. This fact, apparently, is no deterrent. A knouting and solitary confinement are the only two punishments which can be inflicted. The women are so few that they are not in much danger of being knouted.

Popular American Peeresses.

At a voting contest held at an Irish fair in London the marchioness of Ava received the greatest number of votes. Her husband, who was Lord Terence Blackwood, is Irish by descent. The marchioness was Miss Flora Davis, of New York. She was voted "the prettiest, the nicest and the smartest." At a young contest held at a bazar given for the benefit of the French sisters the popular prize was awarded to the countess of Essex, whose husband is the earl of Essex. The countess was Adele Grant, of New York. She was called the "smartest" lady present.

TROLLEY LOOP FIGHT SETS DUNELLEN AGOG

BELIEVED THAT CHESTNUT STREET WILL BE THE TERMINUS.

Anxious to use the new "single-end" cars on the main line as soon as possible, the P. S. C. has, according to statements from a source regarded as impeachable, decided to meet the demand for the location of the trolley loop in Dunellen at Gallagher's corner half way. There is every reason to believe that the loop will be placed at Chestnut street, which is considerably beyond the present terminus in the center of the borough, although not as far as the west enders would have liked. This arrangement, however, is satisfactory to Howard K. Bird and the other leaders in the movement for a terminus shift, and opposition to the loop will cease from that quarter if the company plans to install it at that point.

To the merchants and the residents of the borough's center the proposed compromise is as distasteful as the original proposition to put the loop at Gallagher's corner.

Councilmanic permission is necessary before the corporation can put its loop anywhere in the borough and a warm discussion will probably mark the meeting at which the question comes up, as those who want the loop in the center of the borough are understood to have made their minds up to fight any other plan on the floor of the Council.

Unless the two warring factions of boroughites get together, the borough may lose the terminus altogether. It is not improbable that the Council, torn between the arguments and threats of the opposing camps, may seek to avoid arousing enmity by refusing to grant the company permission to lay loop tracks over the sidewalk anywhere in the borough. Col. Hine, the chief of the P. S. C. traffic department, is reported to have said that if the borough refuses the company permission to cross the walk, the terminus will be shifted to the Hock avenue switch. In the event of such a change the disciplinary effect on the boroughites would be very great. The Bound Brook cars, on which the Dunellen patrons would then have to depend for transfer from Plainfield into the borough, run only at half-hourly intervals. The annoyance they would suffer is easy to be seen.

Col. Hine and Superintendent Brown, head of the Plainfield division, talked over the loop matter with Mr. Bird last week. It is believed that Col. Hine's compromise plan would be accepted by the "center-of-towners," who now demand "a loop at Apgar's hall or nowhere," if the Colonel could present it to them as clearly as he did to Mr. Bird. Probably the Colonel will take occasion to speak on it at the Council meeting at which the question of a franchise is broached.

AMUSEMENTS.

George Ade, the author of "The College Widow" and other Savage successes, after a short visit to the Orient, returned to San Francisco last week. He is under contract to write two comedies this summer, but says he will do no more in the way of comic opera, as he finds work like "The County Chairman" less exacting and more satisfactory. He will return East after a brief stay in California.

It is worth the price of admission to see Col. Gaston Bordeverry, the French rifle shot, do his hair raising and breath holding feats at the Hippodrome, which justifies the name, National Theatre. Thompson & Dundy, the originators of the present day entertainments for both masses and classes, have filled the programme at the Hippodrome with a symposium of acts marvellous to behold and almost too startling to believe. "The Circus on Mars" and "The Raiders" introduce a variety of entertainment unparalleled in this or any other country. Bishop Potter and other prelates, statesmen and captains of the industrial, financial and literary world who have witnessed the performance give it their heartiest approval. It's on Sixth avenue, 43d and 44th streets.

The best claim to first place among comedies this season is given to "The Heir to the Hoorah," which is showing at the Hudson Theatre. It gives the happy smile as a constant feature of your face throughout the performance and causes outbursts of applause every minute. Evenings at 8:30. 44th street, near Broadway.

Marie Tempest, direct from the Criterion, London, in the "Freedom of Suzanne" is the offering at the Empire Theatre. Critics say that she rises superior in this play to any part she has ever taken, which is saying a good deal. At the Lyceum Theatre, Ethel Barrymore is to be seen in "A Doll's House." Evenings at 8:30. Matinees Thursdays and Saturdays.

LITERARY.

The Booklovers Magazine for May gives its readers a forecaste of the charms of outdoor sights and sounds in an unusually attractive number. The illustrated paper by Waldemar B. Kaempffert, on "The Protective Mimicry of Insects," as a striking and popular presentation of some phases of the struggle for existence which goes on ceaselessly throughout the whole animate world, and will be a source of pleasure and profit to nature lovers who wish to study the subject for themselves. Joseph Conrad, master of sea-craft, contributes a delightful dissertation on "Sailing as a Fine Art," wherein he expounds the philosophy of yachting seamanship in its relation to the development of character and conduct.

Ringling Bros.' Excursions.

Special excursion rates on all lines of travel have been arranged for by the management of Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows, and those who wish to go to Newark, where this great circus exhibits on Wednesday, May 24, can do so at very little expense. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the show will exhibit this season, and no one should miss the opportunity to witness it. Ringling Brothers' circus has been the leading arenic exhibition of America for years, but the show has never been permitted to rest upon its reputation. Although it long ago passed the point of competition, every season sees a greater and grander show. This year's performance is entirely new, and entails the combined efforts of 375 wonderful artists in the equestrian, gymnastic, equilibristic, acrobatic and aerial line, together with fifty famous clowns and hundreds of lesser lights. Six hundred and fifty horses are used and a marvelous trained animal department is presented. The circus this season is greatly enlarged by the spectacular production of The Field of the Cloth of Gold, a pantomimic presentation of the well known and beautiful historical meeting between the young Kings of England and France. The vast menagerie has among hundreds of features the only living pair of giraffes, the first baby elephant successfully bred and reared in America, and the only rhinoceros in captivity. There is a georgeous revival of the Roman hippodrome races, and many other stupendous features in this great circus. Circus day opens with a brilliant street parade three miles in length. Don't fail to see it.

Benefit Society's Officers.

These officers have been elected at the annual meeting of the German Beneficial Society: President, Augustus Melcher; vice president, Rudolph Wargler; secretary, Joseph Haurand; financial secretary, A. Wolf; treasurer, William Gartner. A resolution was adopted deciding to hold the meetings hereafter in Saengerbund Hall and it was also decided to hold the summer festival at New Market on Sunday, June 4.

PLASTERERS IN A WAR

Object to Lathers Handling the New Plaster Boards.

UP TO THE MASONS

Labor Troubles Which Bother Local Unions—Move Checkmated.

After a war of words and threats, over the field of work in which the plaster board, which is used as a fireproof substitute for lathing, belongs, the lathers have been forced in a position where, apparently, they must defer to the masons—which means that the plasterers will put up the plaster board, and the lathers, by the rules of unionism, must not lay hands on it to earn money.

Plaster boards have come into wide use in the city in the past year or two and the use of them is becoming commoner, so that the settlement of the dispute between the two bodies of organized labor regarding the handling of it has assumed more than a little importance. To make the nature of the dispute between the bodies plain it is necessary to explain that the plaster board is nailed directly to the studding, obviating lathes. A thin coat of plaster is laid over it. It was held by the lathers that the board is, in its nature and application, a kind of lathe and belonged to their line. The plasterers held that it was plaster, and wholly of the nature of plaster work, and that this new-fangled plaster did away with lathing was a matter which the lathers, if dissatisfied, ought to settle with the inventor or the builder who used the invention, and not to seek to encroach on their, the plasterers', field.

The plasterers assumed control over the plaster-board work, and, by dint of persistence, made themselves recognized as the mechanics for that department of building. The lathers would not rest under what they termed the unwarranted presumption of the plasterers and finally, at a recent meeting, they framed a formal notice to the masons to the effect that they would not work on any building where the plasterers were allowed to put up the plaster-board.

The lathers thought they had the masons where they couldn't escape when they fired that shot, and smiled grimly after it was delivered. But the masons, after calm deliberation, returned a bolt that has just about knocked every pin from under the lathers in this particular dispute. This was the shot: "If you attempt to put your threat into execution, we will refuse to work on any building where lathers are allowed to put on plaster-boards."

Builders and others familiar with construction work agree that the return shot puts the lathers where they must grin and bear the present state of affairs. Plasterers are always a necessity on buildings, while the use of plaster-board on both walls and ceiling would obviate the need for lathers.

Speaking of the masons' union and it victory over the lathers, an old builder said yesterday that the organization has always been the foxiest and best-managed among the labor bodies. It is the oldest in the country, barring the glass-blowers' union, and has always kept itself free and clear of trade alliances. It fights its own battles, and refuses to be drawn into the troubles of other unions.

CHURCH CLUB DINES AT THE CASINO

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH AMONG THE FORTY GUESTS—INFORMAL TALKS.

The Church Club, of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, held its quarterly dinner at the Casino Monday. While not officially or even intentionally so, the dinner was preliminary, in the nature of the gathering, at least, to the Diocesan Convention that opened in Grace church this morning. Bishop Scarborough was among the guests, and other well-known clergy, besides active and prominent laymen of the diocese, were present. Covers were laid for forty.

John N. Carpender, of New Brunswick, president of the club, was at the head of the table. There were no set speeches, but brief talks were delivered by the Bishop, President Carpender, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, and George S. Clay, of this city.

The Plainfielders present were Revs. E. V. Stevenson and E. M. Rodman, Hugh F. Fox, S. Seabury Guion, J. Paul Nelting, R. H. Depew, Howard Fleming and G. S. Clay. The club is only a year old.

COLUMBIA LOSES

In Team Match With Country Club 'Varsity Men Are Easily Defeated —Weekly Competitions.

In its first team match of the season, Saturday afternoon, the Plainfield Country Club defeated Columbia University by the score of 13 to 6. Stevens was the only member of the 'Varsity team that scored, while W. L. Glenney, of the home team, also a Columbia man, defeated his opponent 8 to 0. Dudley H. Barrows and Willard Wadsworth each scored against their opponents. The visiting team was outclassed in many respects by the home team and did not show up as strong as the Plainfielders.

The summary:

Plainfield Country Club—J. Whitney Baker, 0; W. L. Glenney, 8; H. D. Hibbard, 0; Dudley H. Barrows, 3; Willard Wadsworth, 2. Total, 13.

Columbia University—A. B. Palmer, 0; C. H. Blake, Jr., 0; O. E. Stevens, 6; F. V. Farrelly, 0; B. D. Bogue, 0. Total, 6.

The weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup attracted the largest field of the season and indicates that this event will be one of the best on the schedule. The entry list was large and the scores were unusually good for this time of the year, the majority playing in mid-summer form. E. B. Shoemaker won the first three points with a net score of 72, while Dr. B. vanD. Hedges and E. A. Cruikshank divided the other three points, each receiving a point and a half.

These scores were returned for the Golf Committee cup:

E. B. Shoemaker, 80, 8—72; Dr. B. vanD. Hedges, 83, 8—75; E. A. Cruikshank, 93, 18—75; C. B. Morgan, 83, 6—76; S. D. Lounsbery, 84, 8—76; Charles A. Stever, 93, 15—78; Arthur Murphy, 87, 8—79; Willard Wadsworth, 79, 0—79; H. D. Hibbard, 86, 6—80; W. L. Glenney, 78, plus 2—80; G. W. Taylor, 95, 14—81; H. F. Fox, 94, 13—81; E. P. Goodwin, 91, 10—81; S. H. Patterson, 103, 20—83; G. T. VanBoskerck, 92, 10—82; J. Whitney Baker, 83, plus 1—84; A. L. Otterson, 106, 14—92; W. F. Merrill, 112, 19—93.

Another event of interest was the Women's Clock Golf contest. Mrs. E. E. Iremonger won first honors with a score of 23, while Mrs. Marvin Rae with a score of 24 finished second and Miss Elsie Burke with a score of 25 finished third.

In the competition for the Walter Gaston cup, on Thursday, Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers scored three points.

The event of interest at the Park Golf Club on Saturday was the weekly competition for the President's and Park Golf Club trophies. Honors were pretty well divided. Charles B. Morse won the first three points for the handicap cup and two points for the scratch trophy, while Charles A. Reed won three points for the scratch cup and two points for the other trophy. Rev. C. L. Goodrich and J. L. Watson divided the one remaining point for the President's cup and J. H. Howell got the other point in the scratch event.

These scores were returned for the two trophies:

Charles B. Morse, 102, 17—85; Charles A. Reed, 101, 15—86; Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, 106, 19—87; John L. Watson, 117, 30—87; Raymond B. Carroll, 91, 4—87; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 106, 18—88; J. H. The chief event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday was the qualifying round for the June handicap cups, Classes A and B. These contestants qualified in Class A: W. J. Bogert, 93, 4—89; C. E. Halsted, 92; E. R. Perkins, 98, 5—93; G. E. Cruse, 98, 5—93; H. E. Knight, 99, 5—94; R. I. Townley, 100, 4—96; R. K. Taylor, 107, 9—98; E. D. Floyd, 108, 4—104. Those who qualified in Class B were as follows: R. L. VanDyke, 103, 5—98; S. B. Simpson, 110, 8—102; W. H. Gladwin, 117, 6—111; E. H. Fankiner, 117, 2—115.

BOARD DEMANDS AN EXPLANATION

Asks Superintendent Wightman to Make Satisfactory an Interview.

PASSES RESOLUTION

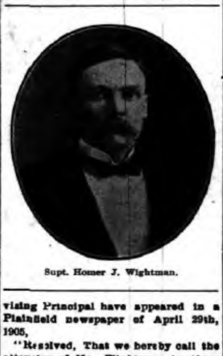
Head of Schools is Called Upon to Appear and Tell Why He Should Make Certain Statements.

As the result of an article published by The Daily Press in the issue of Saturday April 30, the North Plainfield Board of Education in executive session, Monday, adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, It is manifestly improper for the Supervising Principal to publish criticism of the Board of Education, and

"Whereas, Certain statements reflecting on the Board of Education and attributed to the present Supervising Principal have appeared in a Plainfield newspaper of April 29th, 1905,

"Resolved, That we hereby call the attention of Mr. Wightman to these statements and require a personal explanation at the next meeting of this Board."



Supt. Homer J. Wightman.

The statement to which the Board takes exception was simply a confirmation by Mr. Wightman of certain stories regarding the resignation of teachers. He was interviewed by a Daily Press reporter and when pressed for an explanation for so many teachers leaving, gave as his opinion that one of the reasons was the dismissal of Robert Sanders, of the manual training department, without any apparent cause. He is popular with the teachers, Mr. Wightman said, and it led to them resigning. He also declared the closeness of the board in granting supplies to be another reason why several of the teachers refused re-appointment.

Mr. Wightman has made no denial of the statement as published and will in all probability give the board the explanation it desires.

Class Day Committee.

To arrange for the class day exercises the Plainfield High School seniors have appointed these as a committee: Anna Runyon, chairman; Annie Conant, Inez Tolles, Walter Rugen and Theodore Gavett.

WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNEY

Plainfield Country Club Members in Metropolitan's Contest.

SERIES ARRANGED

Schedule of Matches is Announced —Some Events Scheduled for Local Links.

The Women's Metropolitan Golf Association has arranged the most important schedule in its history for this season, and the women of the Plainfield Country Club are to make an effort to capture the honors. The plan tried last year has been adopted again, of dividing the team schedule into districts, to avoid long journeys in keeping the dates, and the winning teams of the two districts will meet on a neutral course on October 31, the course to be determined by the two captains. This is the schedule of matches:

First District.

Wednesday, May 24—Brooklyn vs. Richmond County, at Bridgeport; Nassau vs. Englewood, at Nassau.

Friday, June 2—Englewood vs. Richmond County, at Dongan Hills; Nassau vs. Apawamis, at Dyker Meadow.

Friday, Sept. 22—Brooklawn vs. Apawamis, at Bridgeport; Nassau vs. Richmond County, at Dyker Meadow.

Friday, Sept. 29—Brooklawn vs. Englewood, at Apawamis; Richmond County vs. Apawamis, at Apawamis.

Tuesday, Oct. 24—Brooklawn vs. Nassau, at Nassau; Englewood vs. Apawamis, at Englewood.

Second District.

Wednesday, May 24—Plainfield vs. Baltusrol, at Plainfield; Essex County vs. Morris County, at Morristown.

Friday, Sept. 29—Morris County vs. Plainfield, at Morristown; Essex County vs. Baltusrol, at Short Hills.

October—Morris County vs. Baltusrol, at Short Hills; Plainfield vs. Essex County, at Orange.

Accessibility and mutual convenience have caused the selection of the Dyker Meadow course for two of the matches, and both matches of September 29 will for the same reasons be on the one course, Apawamas. Baltusrol, which dropped out last year after winning the team championship three times, is again in the fold, and the Plainfield Country Club is a newcomer. The Powleton Club, of Newburg, and Wee Burn, of Stamford, will not have teams this year, but with the women of the Dyker Meadow, Lakewood and other clubs in membership, they have the right of representation at the tournaments.

One day tournaments, a new plan, have been arranged by the women of the Metropolitan Golf Association for May 19, at the Richmond County Country Club, May 26, at the Apawamis Club, May 29, at the Plainfield Country Club, and for June 6 at the Englewood Golf Club. The Women's Metropolitan Golf Association championship will follow on June 13 to 17 at the Baltusrol Golf Club, and the one-day tournaments will be resumed in October, on dates to be fixed, at the Wee Burn and Hillandale links, both at Stamford and at Essex County. Should the one-day tournaments prove a go, other clubs are willing to be called on to act as hosts for more of them.

ONE YEAR FOR FRANK CLARKSON

Letter-Carrier Who Pleaded Guilty to Rifling Mail, Sentenced by Court.

MINIMUM PENALTY

Nelson Runyon, of This City, Makes a Strong Plea for the Defendant—Term Begins.

One year in the Essex County penitentiary was the sentence pronounced Monday upon Frank Clarkson, the former letter-carrier attached to the local postoffice who pleaded guilty to abstracting $15 from a registered letter consigned to Dr. George W. Endicott.

The sentence was imposed by Judge Cross in the United States District Court at Trenton who informed the prisoner that it was the least he could give him, as his readiness to confess the charge and save the government the cost and trouble of a trial had been taken into consideration. His term will commence today and with good behavior will be lessened to about nine months.

Clarkson was represented by Nelson Runyon, whose strong plea for clemency also had something to do with the lightness of the sentence.

The fallen letter-carrier was looked upon as one of the best men in the local service until the Endicott complaint came in. An investigation then showed that he had received the letter but instead of delivering it, had signed for it himself and appropriated the money. It was an incomprehensible act on his part as there was no attempt at concealment and when he signed he knew that it was certain detection as soon as the missing letter would be reported.

Clarkson ascribed his act to heavy debts and the hope that the money would be enough to release him from some of his most pressing creditors.

The maximum penalty for the crime is five years to which may be added a heavy fine. Mr. Runyon represents his son, City Judge W. N. Runyon, who is Clarkson's counsel.

INVENTOR OF TOY BALLOON IN WANT

PETER HENRY CHEVANTIER A STREET CLEANER.

Peter Henry Chevantier, who invented the rubber gas toy balloon, which has delighted countless children, is today so poor that he is compelled to live in a one-room hut on the outskirts of Westfield.

Chevantier is too proud to beg and has been known to go without food several days in cold weather. He is sixty-eight years old, and is at present working in the Street Cleaning Department of the town.

Chevantier was born in Paris. He made money out of the balloons and once had ten men selling them in New York. He fell from a train and when he recovered from his injuries his head was affected.

At one time he gave lessons in French and was an expert checker, pool and billiard player.

Salvation Brass Band Here.

The National Staff Band of the Salvation Army, under the direction of Major Sheppard, of Newark, a musical entertainment was given at Reform Hall Saturday night. An open air meeting was held Sunday morning in front of the Hotel Kensington and at 11 o'clock services were held at Reform Hall. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock the band assisted in the services at the Y. M. C. A., and the last service was held at 8 o'clock Sunday night in Reform Hall.

Oil Man's Will.

The will of Theodore F. VanHorn, the oil man, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's court at Somerville Saturday, by William Newcorn, counsel for the estate. The will mentions only the personal property, which is valued in the neighborhood of $8,000. His son, his daughter, and Mrs. Patience Manchester, who nursed him during his last illness, are among the legatees.

Nurse to be Graduated.

Miss Maye Osborne, of Watchung avenue, will be graduated from the training school for nurses at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. She is now caring for her mother, who is ill with pneumonia.

"Frenzied Finance" is told of in Everybody's Magazine. It is sold at Harper's Park avenue stationery store where all magazines and periodicals are to be had.

JUSTICE MOFFETT DEAD

End Came Sunday After Many Weeks Illness.

A RESPECTED CITIZEN

Was Civil War Veteran, a Former Assistant County Clerk and An Ex-Councilman.

Elmere Drake Moffett, justice of the peace and widely known in the city and county, died at his home on Orchard place shortly before noon Sunday. For many years he had been afflicted with diabetes and this combined with an affection of the foot brought about through the use of a patent preparation to ease inflammation from a corn, was the cause of death. He had been confined to his home for the past month and early last week began sinking slowly despite the efforts of his physicians.

Elmere D. Moffett was born at Round Brook in 1840 but came to Plainfield soon after his marriage and had resided here ever since. He opened a grocery store on West Front street where Levy Brothers store now is and remained there until the building was destroyed by fire. He then entered the employ of the late Elias H. Pope, who had a grocery at Front and Somerset streets, which he afterward bought. Later on he formed a partnership with William Gardner and the firm had varying success until it sold out to the late George Rockefellow and Mr. Moffett went with him as book-keeper.

The sudden death of an attache in the office secured for Mr. Moffett the appointment as assistant county clerk under James Voeseller in 1882, which he retained for fourteen years. In this capacity he became acquainted in every part of Union County and his advice and judgment were frequently sought by office-holders at the county seat. He retired during County Clerk Heward's first year and has since been a local justice of the peace, his last office being at Second street and Central Avenue where he conducted a grocery in connection with his legal business.

While a very busy man, Mr. Moffett took a decided interest in local affairs and in 1890 was elected to the Common Council on the Democratic ticket. He served two years, one of them as president, and was wielding the gavel when the so-called "Big Six" came into prominence. He was a veteran of the Civil War having served with distinction in Company G, Thirty-second New York Vols. On making his home in Plainfield, he joined Major Anderson Post, G. A. R., and was a past commander when it was merged with Winfield Scott Post. He was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 39, F. and A. M., and also the First Baptist church where he was a regular attendant. Personally, the "judge," as he was always called, was genial and whole-hearted and in his quiet, unassuming way had the happy faculty of making a friend of everyone with whom he came in contact.

Surviving him are a widow, who was Miss Dailing, one daughter, Mrs. Ella Pame, of Trenton and one son, William Moffett, of this city.

The funeral services were held from his late home yesterday afternoon at 2:30, and by his own request, from the First Baptist church at 3 o'clock. The interment was made at Hillside Cemetery.

TWO MORE MEN TO BE ADDED TO POLICE FORCE

BOARD ISSUES NOTICE OF EXAMINATION—APPLICATIONS WELCOMED.

An addition of two men is to be made to the police force. By order of the police board an official notice that an examination of candidates is to be held was issued at police headquarters this morning.

The addition will bring the total number of men on regular duty to twenty-one.

No date has been set for the examination, but it is understood that it will be held next week. The board is anxious to secure the pick of the young men in the city who are fitted for police duty, and applications from these desiring to become members of the force will be welcomed. The applicants may file their names at police headquarters, and notice of the date of the examination will be sent to them.

Young men of good health and grounded in the essentials of a common school education can pass the examination without trouble. Merit is the only thing that will figure in the appointments, and every one of the applicants will stand as good a chance of securing a position as the others.

DR. BUCHANAN CHOSEN

Re-Elected School Physician by Borough Board.

NEED $4,000 NOW

People of North Plainfield to Vote on Suggested Appropriation on Tuesday, May 23.

By a vote of five to four at an adjourned meeting of the borough Board of Education, Monday, Dr. J. Harvey Buchanan was re-elected school physician for another term. The name of one other candidate, Dr. Fred Hughes, was presented by Samuel Townsend, but though there were two aspirants, practically no discussion was held previous to action.

A few remarks were made by Mr. Valiant who declared that during his term, Dr. Buchanan had always proven his efficiency and so far as he could see nothing would be gained by making a change. The vote showed Messrs. Valiant, Needham, Cooley, Jay and McKelvey in favor of Dr. Buchanan and Townsend, Laing Woodruff and Lowe for Dr. Hughes.

Several other matters of importance

were transacted, one of which was the fixing of Tuesday night, May 23, for a special meeting, during which the residents of the borough will be called upon to vote on a proposition authorizing the board to borrow and expend $4,000 for furnishing and making additional improvements to the new building. The clerk was instructed to post the notices as is customary.

The matter of cross walks at Watchung and Mountain avenues, which has been in dispute, was again brought up by Mr. Townsend and it was mentioned that the borough Council be requested to lay them without delay because of their need for school children attending the Watchung building. The Councilmen were asked to do this some time ago but they declared it was a matter the Board of Freeholders should attend to, Mountain avenue being under county supervision, and it was so referred. The freeholders promptly declared it out of their jurisdiction and nothing has been done. The Board is anxious that the walks be laid and will continue the agitation.

On a motion made by Mr. Cooley, Architect A. L. O. Marsh was authorized to instruct D. J. Galbraith to install the heating system in the new building, the same to cost $700. Mr. Cooley also motioned that $335 be appropriated for the purpose of enlarging and improving the laboratory of the scientific department in the present building, the members voting favorably.

Mr. Townsend made a motion that the postoffice authorities be asked to locate a mail box at Watchung and Mountain avenues and also reported that the truants were rapidly being dealt with. He has been giving the matter his personal attention for several months and through drastic measures in several instances has all but broken up the practice.

AMUSEMENTS.

One of the most notable and interesting of theatrical revivals is the production of "Trilby," with the original cast, now at the New American Theatre, New York. There have been so many revivals of old plays with "all star casts" that it is refreshing to record a revival of a great and vastly interesting play in which several stars merge their distinction for the purpose of giving a great performance. One of the notable things about recent "all star casts" has been that so many of the members of these coteries have never been stars at all. Manager William A. Brady has brought together the original cast of "Trilby," headed, of course, by Wilson Lackaye, whose creation of Svengali can always be counted among the classics, while Virginia Harned will be seen as Trilby, and other distinguished members of the company will be Louis Mann, Barr McIntosh, Martinetti and all the rest.

T. W. Morris, Jr., and family, of the borough, have gone to Long Island for the summer.

BISHOP TO GET $5,000

of the platform. "Three cheers for the Bishop!" he cried, and the whole convention, staid and dignified clergy, staid and elderly laymen joining with all the power of their voices, responded. It was a most unusual tribute of personal popularity.

The Bishop was forced to clear his throat once or twice before he could speak.

"This is a great surprise," he said, "and a delightful one. I have never asked for an increase of salary, and did not expect one. I have spent all the money I received, and found that it went very easily, but I have gotten along on my salary, and thanked God that I received it. I have never gone into debt and, thank God, I owe no man, but this action makes me grateful. Not for myself so much, although I want you to believe that I am deeply grateful for it personally, but for the diocese—for my successor, because I have but a little while in which to enjoy it. It is hard on the bishop of this diocese to meet the demands of his establishment and of his work on the old salary.

"It is a great relief, too, to learn what that resolution of Mr. Carpender's was. When he intimated that it might lead to discussion, after telling me point blank that it referred to me, I thought it might have something to do with telling me that I had been here long enough. I thought perhaps you might be asked to consider that I had been in the same place thirty years, and would arrange to put me out, or something like that."

There was a twinkle in the Bishop's eye as he spoke, and his quick, characteristic smile marked the end of his speech.

After the convention adjourned laymen and clergy crowded about the bishop to congratulate him. To these who approached him he frankly expressed his pleasure over the convention's action.

The Bishop and Mrs. Scarborough are being entertained by Mr. Stevenson at the Grace church rectory.

CONVENTION HAS ENDED

the session of the Episcopal diocesan clergy and lay delegates at the Casino this morning.

The trouble came through a clerical effort to break up a long string of re-elections to the standing committee, which is made up of eight members, four clergy and four laymen. At yesterday afternoon's session nominations for all committees and offices to be filled at the convention. Election always takes place at the session following nominations. In addition to the usual four clergy, six others were put in.

After the convention yesterday the clergymen who favored a change had a special ballot prepared bearing the names of Rev. Mr. Stevenson and the Rev. Mr. Schuyler, in place of Rev. Mr. Moore and Dr. Oberly.

After the ballots had been deposited this morning, R. F. H. Shreve, a Camden lawyer and ex-chancellor of the diocese, arose to question the right of the special ballot.

Capt. James Parker, a prominent Perth Amboy churchman, warmly denied Mr. Shreve's right to question the presence of the ballot. "Any delegate or set of delegates has the right to prepare such a ballot," he said. Applause followed his remarks.

Bishop Scarborough looked gravely over the convention.

"It may be lawful to prepare such a ticket," he said, "but I am sorry to see a political trick in this convention. Very sorry."

Rev. John Atkinson immediately took the floor.

"I do not see, sir, why the preparation of this ballot is characterized as a trick. Those who prepared it believed they were acting within their rights, and I, for one, have no hesitancy in acknowledging myself as one of them. It was not a trick, sir."

"I withdraw the terms," said the Bishop, "but I have my opinion of the matter. I am surprised at the action. It is the first time in my thirty years of service that such a thing has been done at this convention."

Mr. Stevenson hastened to align himself with Mr. Atkinson at the firing line. The discussion became general. The debate was choked off and the end found the teller's report from peace-lovers.

This is the standing committee: Rev. A. R. Baker, Rev. R. G. Moses, Rev. H. H. Oberly, Rev. C. M. Perkins, D. G. Baird, Francis Collingwood, Howard Richards and J. R. Woodward.

The convention will meet next year in Atlantic City.

To Talk to Men's Club.

The Men's Club of Grace church will meet on Monday night, May 15, at the Y. M. C. A., and listen to an interesting talk on "Panama," by Andrew McLane Parker, of New York.

Frances Martin, of Wilmington, Del., is spending some time at the home of his parents on Hillside avenue.

INDIA'S NEED OF THE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE

MISSIONARY FROM CHITTOOR TELLS OF IT AT TRINITY CHURCH.

Rev. James A. Beattie, who for eleven years has been a missionary at Chittoor, India, of the Arcot mission, delivered a talk on his work in the field and the conditions, spiritual and physical, that surround it, before the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity church, last Friday. Mr Beattie is on a vacation trip, but he is spending most of his time in carrying messages from the field to the churches.

In describing the social condition of India, Mr. Beattie declared that the custom of child-marriage was responsible for a high death rate among the girls. Twenty-five per cent. of the girl-wives die in girlhood. The custom would be stamped out, he said, if Christianity was paramount in the nation's religious thought.

"Christianized nations give woman her proper rank," said the speaker. "In un-Christian nations she has a place below that of the morality of its men is, as is the morality of a nation; even its intellectual rank, I am inclined to believe, is fixed by the intellectual developement of the women. So India sorely needs to be permeated with the Gospel of God."

Mr. Beattie held the lively interest of his auditors with descriptions of his home life. He caused the young women present to shudder by hem-pictures that included countless crawling things on the walls and floor, frogs and lizards behind pictures and doors, and frequent visits from deadly cobras.

"We have killed cobras in every room in our bungalow," he said. The girls gasped audibly.

After the talk, Miss Lillian Force, president of the society, expressed the organization's appreciation of the address.

Mrs. H. F. Crawford was secretary of the meeting. Miss Edith Major played the accompaniment to the singing. Miss Bodine and Miss Dubois took up the offering.

WHITNEY ALTERNATE TO NAVAL ACADEMY

GETS SECOND HONORS IN COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

As a result of the competitive examination, held by Congressman Charles N. Fowler, at Elizabeth, in Saturday, April 29, for the purpose of selecting a midshipman at the Annapolis Naval Academy, from the Fifth Congressional District, of New Jersey, Arthur R. Whitney, son of Henry C. Whitney, of West Fourth street, receives the appointment of first alternate to Ward Smith, of Springfield, who will get the appointment.

Whitney is a member of the Junior Class at the Plainfield High School and stands high in his studies. For a long time he has been ambitious to take the competitive examination. Plainfield is now represented at the Naval Academy by Fred VanAuken, who is making excellent progress in his studies.

Walter McI. Wolfe, of Chatham and Robert F. Gray, of Summit, finished third and fourth in the competitive examination. Mr. Smith will be nominated as midshipman and the others as alternates in the order named.

"DAILY LEADER" DIES.

Its Owner, General Drake, Will Start a Sunday Newspaper on June 4.

With the publication of Monday's issue, the Elizabeth Daily Leader, Elizabeth's first penny paper, passed out of existence. The cause for its suspension is financial embarrassment and a steady loss of money.

The Daily Leader went first issued in July, 1889, by General J. Madison Drake and for many years was a successful publication. It had gradually been losing ground and circulation, however, during the last two years owing to the advent into the journalistic field of a vigorously conducted rival one-cent Democratic newspaper, The Evening Times, published by Nelson M. Barton, formerly of Binghamton, N. Y.

The Leader's politics were sometimes Democratic and sometimes Republican. It was originally organized by a stock company, but General Drake gradually absorbed the shares of the other stockholders, and with his son, J. Madison Drake, Jr., finally acquired complete control of the newspaper, which also had attached to it a job printing plant.

General Drake says he now intends publishing a Sunday paper, the first issue of which will come out June 4. Before starting The Daily Leader the general, for several years, printed a weekly entitled the Elizabeth Sunday Leader.

ENTERTAIN MEN'S CLUBS

Kindred Organizations Guests of the First Baptists.

LARGE GATHERING

Presbyterian, Methodist Congregational, Baptist and Reformed Church Men at Meeting.

The Men's Club, of the First Baptist church, is holding its final meeting for the season, Monday, entertained the various men's clubs of the city and its women friends. The Sunday-school room of the church was filled to over-flowing with members and guests and a programme of unusual excellence was presented. Among the clubs of the city represented were those from the First M. E., Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, First Presbyterian, Congregational, Warren chapel, Monroe Avenue, Seventh-Day Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist and Trinity Reformed, in nearly every case the pastor of these churches also being present.

The programme consisted of numerous selections and recitations by Walter David, and vocal selections by the Empire State Quartette, all of New York. Mr. David is an impersonator of much ability and he kept the audience laughing continually. The selections by the quartette were of a high order and were well rendered and the vocalists were recalled many times. In addition to the quartette selections there were solos by F. P. Balcom and Mr. Cornwell, the former tenor, and the latter bass. They were generously applauded. Miss Edith Carlton accompanied Mr. Balcom on the piano.

Following the programme which lasted for over an hour, there was a social time and refreshments were served, under the direction of the refreshment committee, of which Kenneth Robbie is chairman.

Dr. Norman H. Pronsoe, as president of the club, was in charge of the programme and welcomed the visitors in a brief address. The club will not meet again until October, when the annual election will be held. Although the youngest church club in the city, it is one of the largest in point of membership and very enthusiastic.

PRISON LEAGUE WORK

Mrs. Ballington Booth Tells of Her Effort to Save Souls.

"CHERRY HILL" BLOT

Compares Philadelphia Penitentiary With Those in Other States —Has Accomplished Much.

Before an audience that almost filled the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Thursday, Mrs. Ballington Booth, leader of the Volunteers of America, and the organizer of what is known as the Volunteer Prison League, which is doing so much good for convicts in the various prisons in this country, gave an intensely interesting address. With a charming personality, so well-known to thousands of her friends, Mrs. Booth related incident after incident to prove that the great work she has been doing for the past nine years among the prisons is bearing fruit.

She said that there are now about 84,000 men in the prisons in this country and to use her own words she "lifted the curtain to give those present a glimpse of the sorrow and sunshine to be seen there." She referred to the past nine years as the happiest in her life, although when she entered upon her work she was told that she never could accomplish much good, that the ex-convicts would soon drift back to the paths of sin. This she said had not been so and she had never seen a field so white with harvest. She had found that when men reach their extremity they were then ready to listen and cling to any rope thrown to them for help. She had found the hunger of the human soul not satisfied and in her humble way was endeavoring to teach these men of Christ and the better life. In this way she had been privileged to see them come out into the sunshine of faith like little children.

Continuing Mrs. Booth said in part: "I wish I could give you a peep into the prison chapels, to see the earnest faces, so responsive to all that is said to them. Some of the most unruly prisoners, those least trusted, are now living lives so sincere that no human effort could do what the divine has done. I have visited Sing Sing, Dannemora, Auburn, Trenton, Joliet and other prisons, but the one known as "Cherry Hill" in Philadelphia is the only one where the solitary confinement system is adopted. There a prisoner remains in his cell, and when for any reason he is obliged to leave it, his face is masked. He has little or no exercise and I found that the system is not scientifically carried out. There was no worship, no chaplain and I was told that it would do not good to visit that prison.

"In the course of time I received an invitation to go there. I spoke eight different times in order that all the prisoners might hear me, yet I did not see a face. However, the influence was for good and when I left there were many exclamations of 'Come again, Little Mother.' Recently, I was permitted to address an open letter to each prisoner there and a voluntary prison league of Volunteers is now established."

Mrs. Booth stated that there are now 30,000 members of this league among the ex-convicts, and convicts, all wearing the familiar button of the order. She related many thrilling experiences in connection with her visits to the prisons. In California, where there are 165 life-men imprisoned and where insurrections are common, over one thousand prisoners listened to her with close attention. There were many touching incidents related showing the sympathy and help extended among the prisoners and to their families and how she had been enabled to help families of those who are paying penalties. She cited one instance where a man is serving a life term through the bungling work of his counsel. The district attorney afterward said that the man should not have received over six years. Mrs. Booth said that she is particular to impress upon the prisoners the necessity of accepting Christ while in confinement and not waiting until the completion of their term. In conclusion she related a pathetic story of a prisoner who gave up his supply of tobacco and oil for his lamp for three months in exchange with another prisoner for a caged bird which he afterward released. It was his desire to give the bird his freedom, something which he could not have himself.

In the absence of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, who could not attend, F. H. Andrews presided at the meeting and a sister member of the Volunteers sang a solo. As a result of the meeting assurances of considerable support were given by interested ones.

—The police officers will probably end their recently established gymnasium work this month. It is deemed best to discontinue it in warm weather and the cops will most likely be released from compulsory exercise after the first of June.

KO-KO'S SHY AT COUNCIL

Original Verses in Mikado Show Bring Hearty Applause.

JUDGE RUNYON'S HITS

Jollies the Councilmen Over Street Sprinkling and Saloon District Measure—Carnival and the Bout.

The second performance of Mikado at the Casino, Friday, under the direction of William Holmes, was even more successful than on the first night. That the efforts of those in the production was appreciated was attested by the enthusiastic applause given. Mrs. Florence Bennett-Young received bouquets of carnations and roses and Mrs. F. M. Ward a bouquet of carnations, the gift of friends.

William N. Runyon, as Ko-Ko, Lord High Executioner and R. Wilson Derby, as Pooh-Bah, Lord High Everything Else, divided honors in their mirth-provoking parts. Mr. Runyon added these new verses to his topical song:

The Plainfield Common Council has some notions really dear
 Upon their little list, upon their little list.
Imagination ne'er conceived such things as now appear
 Upon their little list, upon their little list.
They want to centralize the booze and bring it all uptown;
And when they see a lumber yard
 they want to tear it down;
And when it comes to watering-carts
 they raise this glad refrain:
"Jack Keely's too expensive; brothers, let us pray for rain."
If ere they tire of labor and on private life insist
Just think how they'd be missed!

The carnival for Muhlenberg will be a corking show;
Go put it on your list, go put it on your list.
And tell your friends and neighbors
 all, no matter where you go,
 To put it on their list, to put it on their list.
They need the money badly I'm sure you will agree;
They're quite unlike the churchmen
 who shied at Johnny D.,
They like it tainted just as well, so,
 prithee, don't recoil,
Nor fear to spend it just because it comes from Standard Oil.
The dollars spent for Muhlenberg, I solemnly insist,
They never will be missed!

The gentlemen who went across the brook to see the fight
 I've got 'em on the list, I've got
 'em on the list.
They all united saying it was such a pleasant night
 They never would have missed,
 they never would have missed.
It's funny now they claimed at first the kid was fairly whipped
Then turned and said the knockout came because he merely slipped
And that they only went to bear the music anyway.
They thought it was a concert—not a brutal low affray.
When the Somerset Grand Jury started sending out its list
There were several faces missed, there were several faces missed.

ELIZABETH TO CELEBRATE.

Will Mark the Battle of Elizabethtown With a Water Carnival.

A water carnival, in which at least 200 vessels, including one of the vessels of the United States navy, will take part, will be held on Staten Island Sound, from the Singer factory to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad bridge, on the night of June 8, when Elizabeth celebrates the 125th anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown.

Captain John Dooley and Michael Bogian have interested themselves in this matter and already they have secured the consents of fifty local boat owners to take part with their decorated boats in the aquatic event.

Will Place Two Brick Stores.

Dr. Albert Pittis has filed plans with Building Inspector Deane for the alterations he is to make to the MacDonald property on East Front street, recently acquired by him. By them it is shown that he intends putting two brick stores in the front part of the present residential structure, taking out the ground floor in order to do it. The remainder of the building will be improved in various ways.

No Canoe Club.

It is not probable that the Y. M. C. A. Canoe Club, which was formed last year for the first time, will be reorganized this summer. Interest in the club was never very lively.

THE RETORT UNEXPECTED.

Rich Wife's Taunt Meets with a Simple But Cutting Response.

Capt. Ingersoll, of the naval war college, was talking about the disaster that came near destroying the battleship Connecticut at her launching, relates the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"What do you think about that business, sir?" a reporter said.

"It was unexpected," said Capt. Ingersoll. "That is all I can say—that it was unexpected. As unexpected, in fact"—and Capt. Ingersoll smiled—"as the retort that the poor man made to his rich wife.

"The poor man, being handsome, chose an elderly and plain heiress for his bride. He was on the verge of ruin at the time, living in a four-dollar boarding house, and behindhand in his payments even there. Nevertheless, the heiress married him, and soon he was driving a four-in-hand and winning races with a motor boat.

"But he was ungrateful. Husbands like him nearly always are ungrateful. And on account of his ingratitude there were a good many quarrels between his rich wife and himself.

"One day, enraged beyond measure, she said, bitterly:

"'What would you be now if it wasn't for my money?'

"The man laughed.

"'A bachelor,' he replied."

AN ANIMALS' CREMATORY.

Sanitary Method of Disposing of Carcasses on a Model Farm.

There was a crematory on the model farm—a crematory of red brick, built in a secluded valley.

"Here," said the overseer, "we cremate every animal that dies on the estate a natural death; every cow, every horse, every pig, every chicken.

"Most farmers bury such animals. Then over the dead bodies they plant their crops of cereals. What is the result? The result, sir, is that if an animal has died of anthrax and you plant grain over its body, the cow that eats of that grain is apt to contract anthrax itself.

"It has been demonstrated by experiment that the disease germs in a corpse enter into the vegetation flourishing in that corpse's neighborhood. It has been demonstrated that corpses pollute the soil as horribly as they would pollute wells if they were thrown into them.

"Hence our crematory, where fire consumes our various victims of anthrax, of hog cholera, of tuberculosis, of cowpox, of glanders, and so on. And hence the marvelously good health of the animals on our farm."

PAYS FOR HIS TRICKERY.

Telegrapher Obtained Money Dishonestly, But Paid It All Back.

"We have a regular fund, called the 'conscience fund,'" said a man who sits at a highly polished desk in one of the local railroad general offices, reports the Louisville Courier-Journal. "It is peculiar how the fund grows, and it shows the strange workings of the conscience of man.

"Recently we had an extraordinary case. A young fellow down in Kentucky cut the telegraph wires and, being an operator, he connected an instrument and sent a message to the nearest station, ordering the agent to give him a ticket to Chicago and advance him $40. He closed the message with the name of one of the high officials of the road. Half an hour later he walked into the station and asked if there was a ticket for him. The agent gave it to him and also paid him the cash. He took the first train and was never heard of again until a few days ago, when we received a check for the full amount. The wires were cut three years ago."

"Sick Sisters of the South."

Paraguay should be rich and prosperous; its territory is twice the size of Uruguay, and it has many natural sources of wealth, as in its immense forests, its mate plantations, tobacco and orange estates and its vast cattle ranges. The country has iron, copper, kaolin and marble. But it is afflicted with the professional politician, as is also Uruguay, where there are mutterings of another revolution. Argentina will not have rest till some way is found to abolish the power of its provincial caciques, whose only conception of government is plunder, and who often defy the central administration at Buenos Ayres. The provinces owe prodigious sums abroad, largely in England, and show no signs of ever meeting their obligations. And, moreover, many municipalities are head over heels in debt. These are the sick sisters of the south. —Mexican Herald.

The "Jinke Janko."

Next to the Liberian hippopotamus the Derbian eland of West Africa, which the Mandingoes call "Jinke janko," is to-day the least known of all rare and strange animals. Even though Great Britain and France and Liberia own practically the whole of the Northwest Africa coast, no specimen of the Derbian eland has thus far reached Europe or this country, and next to the okapi it is indeed the least known of all game animals.—Outing.

Corrosion of Cables.

Wire cables will often rust and break down in the interior when there is no manifestation of this on the exterior. Sometimes the defect can be detected by a certain slackness and yielding to pressure at the point infected. Corrosive water and fumes may be responsible for this hidden decay. —London Engineer.

KEARNS FLAYS MORMONS.

Utah Senator Declares They Have Built Up an Unscrupulous Monarchy—How He Won Wealth.

Washington. — Thomas Kearns, United States senator from Utah, who recently flayed the Mormon church on the floor of the senate, declaring the leaders had broken their pledge to the nation and had built up a monarchical institution within the republic, feels that the Mormon church is a blemish upon the good name of his state, from which he literally dug his fortune with a pick.

Kearns, who was born near Woodstock, Ont., in 1862, came to the

THOMAS KEARNS.
(Utah Senator Who Bitterly Assailed Operations of Mormons.)

United States with his brother. He went to work as a farm hand in Nebraska as soon as he was big enough. Then he got the mining fever and migrated to the Black Hills, prospecting. He did not find things to his liking there and went to Salt Lake City in search of employment. He was then 21. But he soon learned that his fortune did not lie in "the City of the Saints," and journeyed on to Park City, where he began to swing a pick in the Ontario mine at $3.50 a day. He was a good, steady workman, popular with "the boys," and handy in a fight.

In 1889 came the young man's opportunity. The Mayflower mine was to let and Kearns, with several others, took a lease. So well did things turn out that, in a year, he was married and fully started on the highway of success. In '92 he became one of the incorporators of the Silver King Mining company. This venture made Kearns wealthy and his stock in the mine was estimated to be worth $4,000,000.

From carrying a little tin dinner pail he became a political force. But he did not "put on airs," and did not forget his old companions. His election to the United States senate was brought about in 1901. But as he became wealthier, he still found it hard to change his simple style of living and came to adopt luxurious habits but slowly. He is blunt as ever, has but little polish, is full of energy, and fond of horses.

FOUNDATION TO BE SECURE

Builders of New Campanile at Venice Hope to Avert Another Disaster.

New York.—The downfall of that architectural glory of Venice, the Campanile, caused such dismay throughout the archaeological and artistic world that the engineers and experts charged with the rebuilding of the tower are determined to avert the recurrence of such a catastrophe, and their work, though slow, is certainly thorough.

According to the Illustrazione Italiana, while the demolition of the old tower's ruins was still going on Sig. Giacomo Boni found that structural weaknesses in the upper part, coupled with geological changes, had laid the Campanile low. The actual foundations themselves had not subsided relatively in any marked degree.

NEW CAMPANILE FOUNDATION.
(Is Being Made Secure to Prevent Another Collapse.)

It has therefore been necessary to minutely study the subsidence of the bed of the lagoon and the subsoil of the island as compared with the mainland, as well as the exact dimensions of the strata of sand, peat and clay through which the piles pass.

Previous examination has proved that these latter have retained their perpendicular position, and besides the clearing of all the lower outlying work at the base of the tower and solidly repairing any fissure or weakness that may menace the main structure, a square mass of hewn stone will be built above the actual foundations with a view of distributing the whole mass of the new edifice over a larger area.

Bloodiest Battle.

The most sanguinary of modern battles was probably that of the Moskowa in 1812, when, of the 130,000 French, 30,000 were lost, and of the 140,000 Russians, 60,000.

HOW DOES A ROBIN KNOW?

When Mrs. Redbreast Goes After a Grub She Invariably Gets It.

I recently observed a robin boring for grubs in a country dooryard. It is a common enough sight to witness one seize an angle worm and drag it from its burrow in the turf, but I am not sure that I ever before saw one drill for grubs and bring the big white morsel to the surface, writes John Burroughs, in Outing. The robin I am speaking of had a nest of young in a maple near by, and she worked the neighborhood very industriously for food. She would run along over the short grass after the manner of robins, stopping every few feet, her form stiff and erect. Now and then she would suddenly bend her head toward the ground and bring eye or ear for a moment to bear intently upon it. Then she would spring to boring the turf vigorously with her bill, changing her attitude at each stroke, alert and watchful, throwing up the grass roots and little jets of soil, jabbing deeper and deeper, growing every moment more and more excited, till finally a fat grub was seized and brought forth. Time after time, during several days, I saw her mine for grubs in this way and drag them forth. How did she know where to drill? The insect was in every case below the surface. Did she hear it gnawing the roots of the grasses, or did she see a movement in the turf beneath which the grub was at work? I know not. I only know that she struck her game unerringly each time. Only twice did I see her make a few thrusts and then desist, as if she had been for the moment deceived.

CONSENT BY TELEPHONE.

Young Couple Receive Father's Sanction to Their Marriage by Wire.

Every day or two in Nebraska the telephone furnishes additional proof of its unquestionable right to pose as a benefactor of the west. Horse thieves have been traced and caught by its aid. Lives have been saved by the prompt visit of the physician that it made possible. And only the other day it saved a wedding party from ignominious failure, says the Nebraska State Journal.

A young couple of Oconto, Custer county, made the journey to Broken Bow one day recently to get a marriage license and to get married. Late in the afternoon they appeared at the office of the county judge in search of the necessary papers. When the necessary statistics came to be recorded the bride was found to be only 16 years old, and of course the judge refused to go on with the affair. Cupid was for once apparently thwarted. But the old saying that love will find a way was not to be discredited yet.

There were telephones in Oconto, and the judge finally agreed to take the consent of the father of the bride to her early marriage over the 'phone. By dint of two hour's effort the parent was reached, his verbal consent obtained, and the contract sealed. All credit for which is due, of course, to the telephone.

RUSSIAN PEASANT'S INCOME

The Average Earnings of Agricultural Laborers Only Ten Dollars a Year.

A Russian correspondent of the London Statist, vouched for by that journal as "in a position to have the very best information," asserts "that the average revenue of a peasant in Russia is only $10 a year, of which sum he has to pay $4.50 for the needs of the government." As the Statist remarks, that "may well appear incredible to the ordinary reader." How a man can live on less than three cents a day in Russia or in any other cold climate is not capable of explanation. The strikers in Warsaw, the correspondent says, work 69 hours a week, and weavers there earn only $3.06, while other workers get less. They are not allowed to form unions, a very necessary restriction when the pay is so meager. Agricultural laborers receive very much less pay. But the czar receives $12,000,000 annually, with free palaces and other things, and the grand dukes, etc., are paid in proportion. Russia will never have what may be called a settled government under such conditions.

Rays Instead of Shots.

Attention was drawn some time ago by the Army and Navy Gazette to a method of representing artillery fire by deflecting light upon the object aimed at, at which was tried in France last year. A similar system is being experimented with in Austria, the solar rays being reflected upon the object. These rays are visible to the troops and to their leaders, as well as to the umpires, whose decisions are said thus to be facilitated. The apparatus is used from about 2,000 to 3,000 yards.

What He'd Do.

"Say, doc," insinuated the man who was trying to get a little free medical advice, "supposing you had a case of chronic dyspepsia, now; what'd you consider the best course to pursue?"

"Well, sir, if I had such a case, I should treat it according to my professional ability, and then charge what I believed a fair fee. Do I make myself plain?"—Cleveland Leader.

Ingenuity of Japs.

Japanese soldiers along the Sha river have shown their ingenuity in the utilization of an oversupply of rats. The rodents became a pest and the soldiers set to work to destroy them. Though destroyed, the rats were not wasted. The soldiers cured the rat skins and used them for ear-flaps, with the tails tied beneath the wearers' chins.

WANT STREETS VACATED

Ends of Fairview and Summit Aves. to be Improved.

PUBLIC HEARING SET

Remainder of Business at Regular Monthly Meeting of Borough Council of Routine Nature.

Preliminary action toward the vacating of the easterly ends of Fairview and Summit avenues, beyond Westervelt avenue, was taken at Friday's meeting of the borough Council. Application to have an ordinance drawn up to this effect was made by Frank DeL. Hyde who, as the head of the Union County Investment Company, has announced that extensive improvements are to be made on the concern's property in that section and that a new street called DeLacy avenue is to be cut through between Westervelt and Franklin avenues to Mountain avenue.

Fairview and Summit avenues, as originally laid out on the borough map, extend through to Franklin avenue but the part east of Westervelt avenue has never been built and would hardly be known but for the stakes. There are no houses abutting and in order to properly improve the tract, the investment company finds it will be imperative to have the two streets end at Westervelt avenue. The ordinance was prepared and passed on its first reading to go into effect July 1. It is thought there will be no objections but it was designated that a public hearing be given in the Council chambers, Friday night, June 2.

The remainder of the business transacted during the meeting was of a routine nature, Mr. Arnold presiding in the absence of Mayor Smalley. The residents of Manning avenue petitioned for the establishment of a building line and residents of Franklin avenue asked for the grade to be established. Another petition presented by W. J. Battfield, asking that storm sewers be laid in West End avenue and that it be macadamized, the property owners to pay sixty per cent. of the cost. All were referred to the proper committee.

On motion of Mr. VanArsdale, contracts were awarded J. Y. Wilson for furnishing crushed stone, and J. W. Manhattan for all flagging and curbing as follows: Stone, two and a half inch, eighty-five cents per ton; one and a half inch, ninety-five cents per ton; one inch, $1.10 per ton; dust, $1.10 per ton, these prices being five cents higher than last year; flagging, four feet wide and one and a half inches thick, fifty-we cents per lineal foot; four by six inch curb, fifty-two cents per lineal foot; four by four inch crossing, $1 per lineal foot; four by three, eighty cents; two by four, fifty cents; two by three, forty cents.

On motion of Mr. Krewson it was voted that $1,000 be borrowed for general purposes and an invitation from Winfield Scott Post for the Council to attend the Grand Army Decoration Day exercises was referred. The street committee reported spending $380.70 for repair work during the month and the following report was given by Mr. Arnold for the police: Arrests for the month, 13; sentence suspended, 3; committed, 1; fines collected, $53.

CHURCH TRUSTEES.

Park Avenue Baptist Church Officers Are Chosen.

The trustees of the Park Avenue Baptist church, has organized by electing these officers: President, Roland O. Treadwell; secretary, John H. Deane; treasurer, L. R. Schofield.

The treasurer was authorized to pay off the floating indebtedness on the church from the fund received through the self-denial contributions. This amounted to about $500. The church is now in the best of condition spiritually and financially and through the earnest efforts of Pastor Finn is doing good work.

Third Dividend in Eighteen Months.

The Investors' Realty Company at a meeting held Thursday declared a dividend of 10 per cent. This is the third dividend the Company has declared since its incorporation 18 month ago; in consequence of which the shares are now selling for a good price. The Company deals wholly in unimproved free and clear land. Its officers are Samuel H. Craig, President, Alonzo W. Wessman, Vice-President, William Jeffery, Secretary and Treasurer.

Disposed of Hotel Interests.

Wallace V. Miller, formerly proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, when it was known as the Hotel Grenada, and who has been in the same business at Perth Amboy for some time past, has disposed of his interests there and with his family has come to Plainfield, where they will remain for the present with Mrs. Miller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. D. TenEyck, of West Front street.

SAFE WRECKER BAFFLED

With Nito-Glycerine William Clark Breaks All But One.

INTERESTING TESTS

Manganese the Only Safe That Withstands the Experiment—Bankers Witness the Exhibition.

In order to demonstrate the superiority of manganese steel over ordinary steel in the construction of safes and vaults, officials of the Manganese Steel Safe Company conducted at the Mobus stone quarry off the upper end of Somerset street, Thursday afternoon, one of the most complete and expensive tests its product has ever been given. For the especial benefit of a large gathering of bank officials from Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Hoboken and Jersey City, and residents of Metuchen who are organizing a savings institution, the methods employed by safe crackers were shown in half-a-dozen different ways, the idea being to make plain how easy it is for the ordinary vault to be robbed. The tests were satisfactory in every way and made a deep impression on the distinguished gathering.

William O. Clark, of Pittsburg, an expert in the use of explosives, conducted the demonstration, assisted by Acting Manager William Taylor and Superintendent Gesswein, of the local plant; secretary, Sidney L. Smith, of New York, and Salesmen James Sullivan and William Lundgren. A heavy section of ordinary steel plating, made by bolting five pieces together, was first taken. A small quantity of nitroglycerine was poured in one of the cracks that can be opened up and it was discharged by an electric battery.

The plates were torn apart instantly and one of them was hurled 100 feet away. The same experiment was tried a second time and the top plate shot high in the air.

Following this a small bank safe made by a New York company, was drilled into and two and one-half ounces of nitro-glycerine were applied. When it was discharged, the safe door was blown off and went whirling through the woods, landing in a cleared spot fully 300 feet from the starting point. The remainder of the safe was toppled over, either weakened or torn apart in every joint. It took Mr. Clark just fourteen minutes to do the drilling, apply the explosive and discharge it.

For the sake of comparison, a big plate of manganese steel, which is always made of one piece, was placed upright and six ounces of nitro-glycerine were poured into a putty pocket in the center. When it was discharged the shock was terrific but the plate was not a bit affected beyond a slight discoloration of the surface. It was again taken and two pounds of dynamite were exploded directly in the same place and with the same result.

Burglars are frequently baffled by the impossibility of drilling into tempered steel but in recent years many of the experts have learned to use thermit to take out the temper and how it is done was shown by Mr. Clark. A small quantity of thermit was set off on a steel plate and it was rendered like ordinary iron in a few seconds, 5,200 degrees of heat being generated. The same amount was applied to a manganese plate but it had no effect as it has no temper to be removed. Several minor tests were made and in conclusion Mr. Clark declared that in a given time he could open any safe on the market, outside of those made by the Manganese company.

The safe and materials used in the tests weighed in all 9,160 pounds and were carried to the quarry by the Manganese Company's own team in charge of Michael Colvin and Isaac Steenson. There is a steep grade leading to it and according to Proprietor Mobus it is the heaviest load that was ever taken up, yet was accomplished with apparent ease by the handsome greys that do all the firm's hauling.

Vacation for Teacher.

Miss Phoebe Lovell, of the High School faculty, has been granted a vacation for the benefit of her health. Miss Lovell left just before the Easter vacation, intending to return within a week or two after school began, but she has decided to discontinue her work until after the long vacation.

For a West Seventh Street House.

Architect Fred Lancaster has made plans for an attractive dwelling house on West Seventh street, near Monroe avenue, for Miss Elizabeth Smalley, of Craig place, and carpenters and masons are now figuring the cost of construction, which will be between $5,000 and $6,000.

Crescents' Annual Fair.

The third annual fair of the North Plainfield Crescents will be held on the grounds at Somerset street and Fairview avenue, Friday afternoon, May 19, at 3:30. The proceeds are to be for the benefit of the Crescents' baseball team, one of the strongest juvenile nines in the borough.

Attraction at Casino Superb—Wm. N. Runyon as Ko-Ko Immense.

Increased success attended the third Gilbert & Sullivan revival by William Holmes, at the Casino Thursday. The amateur cast he trained to present "The Mikado" did full justice to every line of the libretto, to every bit of dialogue, and brought out all the melody of the ever-delightful score. The production was warmly received by an audience that filled the house.

The opera was staged in a way that precludes criticism. The scenic effects of the two acts were charming and real, and the costuming was rich and complete to the last detail. The performance went with a smoothness quite beyond the amateur class.

Etta Randolph, Cornelia O. Sampson, Nora B. Schenck, Mary Smith, Lizzie W. Stafford, E. Nellie Tabb, Abbie VanCleef, Ada Van Doren; Clifford A. Braider, Sidney K. Craig, F. T. Dickerson, Joseph S. Dunham, B. Hanrahan, S. B. Howe, Jr., R. E. Humpston, Joseph C. Martin, Albert E. Mathews, Willard M. Miner, Harry J. Northrop, William O'Keefe, P. A. Parsons, W. C. Rosencrantz, Walter M. Sampson, Theodore J. Shirley, B. F. Tallamy, L. V. Tallamy, Charles B. Titsworth, William Vivers, H. B. Weatherwax, Harry D. Williams, Edmund D. Young.

William N. Runyon scored his usual success. He took stellar rank with his initial appearance, and shone as the star all through the performance. His voice was strong and more resonant than it sometimes is, and the touch of raucousness that more than once has spoiled his singing in public was entirely lacking. He was persistently encored, and had a hard time ending his solos. His humor was of the characteristic kind; and he interpolated local lines that sent the audience into constantly recurring laughter.

In introducing "Yum-Yum," "Pitti-Sing" and "Peep-Bo" to "Pooh-Bah" Judge Runyon said, with a bland gesture in the direction of a seat in the left aisle, where City Clerk J. T. MacMurray sat:

"These are my three wards: First ward, Second ward, Third ward. Andy McArdell wouldn't let the Fourth ward out. The middle one is my bride-elect." The last sentence is in the lines, but it happens that the judge is responsible for the Second at election time. The audience appreciated the point.

R. Wilson Derby's "Pooh-Bah" was a delightfully humorous conception. His attitude of aristocratic dignity and portentious solemnity never slackened. Howard T. Lewis was funny even without his lines, and his stage "business" was matched by the oddities of Elmer D. Cutting as he chased his agile lord about the stage. Mrs. Ward and the other supporting members of the cast were quite as clever in their roles.

All the singing was admirable. The chorus was splendidly effective, and its performance, more than anything else, demonstrated the skill of Mr. Holmes as a vocal instructor.

Mr. Holmes conducted the music himself, and the baton was wielded very well indeed.

The conductor was his own stage manager, but in this department of the production he was assisted by F. J. Pope and F. T. Dickerson.

GEN. SCHWENK REBUKED

Forced to Resign as Grand Marshal for Memoral Day.

SOLDIERS SCORN HIM

Regulars and Militiamen Refuse to March Behind Former Oak Tree Man Because He Was Cashiered.

Through the stigma attaching to an old disgrace, General Samuel K. Schwenk, who, until a few years ago, was a resident of Park avenue, in Oak Tree, and well known in this city, has been forced to resign as grand marshal of the Memorial Day parade in New York city, a position to which he was elected recently by the Grand Army of the Republic.

General Schwenk performed gallant service as a volunteer officer during the Civil War, and for that received the brevet of brigadier general of volunteers. *After the war he was ap*pointed an officer in the regular army, and was retired as a captain in 1876. He was dismissed from the army after a trial by court martial on March 20, 1901. The General was a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and some of his friends, who thought his dismissal had been practically forgoten, managed to elect him grand marshal.

In this position he would have marched at the head of the regular and National Guard forces in the column, but when his appointment was announced officially a few days ago there was a great wave of protest. It was asserted that unless he resigned there would be no escort of regular or National Guard troops. General Schwenk was informed of the feeling against him and was told that his resignation was imperative.

General Schwenk was tried before a general court martial in New York *city, charged with conduct unbecom*ing an officer and gentleman and with making and causing to be presented a false and fraudulent claim against the United States. The specifications alleged that he duplicated his pay account. The court found General Schwenk guilty of all the charges.

General Schwenk said last night that his difficulties in the army were due to his efforts to aid a friend who was in trouble.

During his residence in this vicinity General Schwenk was well-liked. His wife was superintendent of Marconnier chapel Sunday-school.

Tribute to Senator Childs.

In The Herald's Sunday edition there was a list of State Senators whose terms expire this year. The writer thus referred to Senator Childs: "Samuel S. Childs, of Somerset, is as upright and intelligent a lawmaker as occupies a seat in either house. He is known as a man of undoubted integrity who devotes serious-minded consideration to the work before the Legislature, who studies with quiet but keen-eyed intelligence everything that is going on, who estimates men and measures at their true value, and who cannot be swerved from the paths of honorable duty by any influence or considerations whatsoever. It is a great thing for a county to be represented by such a man."

Improving Water Co.'s Grounds.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company is making several big improvements in the grounds about the Netherwood pumping station. The whole plot has been plowed up and graded, flower beds have been placed in convenient places and sodded borders will set them off until the new grass is fully grown. A stone wall with an imposing gateway entrance is to be built along North avenue and pretty walks will wind about from the superintendent's home, the standpipe and the engine room.

Cop Shoots Many Dogs.

For the past two weeks Roundsman John Flynn has been busy shooting dogs found roaming in the West End. Hardly a day has gone by without two or three appeals for an official ballet from residents annoyed by stray or vicious dogs. The roundsman has proved himself such an adept at potting dogs that "Carrie Nation" Higgins, of the ready gun, is scarcely missed any more on the Boulevard and the surrounding section.

Beautifying Station Grounds.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has begun to beautifiy the Elizabethport Station. A neglected spot of land between the tracks and the shops of the Company is being improved into a lawn, upon which flowers will be set, and the name of the station revealed in flowers. Improvements of a similar sort, but on a smaller scale are going on at the Elizabeth Avenue station.

After Stillman Prize.

In the course of the coming week, examinations for the annual Dr. C. H. Stillman prize in Mathematics, offered by W. M. Stillman, will be given to the pupils of the Plainfield High School. As this is a prize in gold, the interest as former years promises to be keen.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 14.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Spirit filled Christians.—Acts ii, 1-4, 41-47.

The Acts of the Apostles is the first history of the Christian church, and with special emphasis it sets forth the fact that the power of the Holy Ghost is absolutely necessary for successful Christian work. To do the work of God the early church needed the Holy Ghost. The Christians of that day, as well as today, were weak and needed divine strength; they, too, were engaged in conflicts where divine grace and power were absolutely necessary if they were to win the victory; hence Christ instructed them to tarry at Jerusalem until the promise of the Father that they should receive the Holy Ghost should be fulfilled. Then, filled with the Spirit, they were to go forward, *overcoming their own sin and selfish*ness and winning the world for Christ. And only as we are Spirit filled can we win personal victories over sin and lead others to Christ as their Saviour. Let us therefore be thankful that God is willing to give his Spirit to those that ask Him, and let us ever ask that we may be filled with God's Spirit and used in His service.

The conditions under which the Spirit was given were faith, patience and prayer. God promised the Spirit, and the disciples believed His promise. *Christ commanded them to wait at Je*rusalem for the promise of the Father, and they waited. And as they waited they prayed, for the Master had also said that the Father was willing to give the Spirit "to them that ask Him." Then on the day of Pentecost the Spirit was given. They had fulfilled all conditions, and God kept His promise. "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Would we be Spirit filled? Let us believe, let us wait God's time, and as we tarry let us pray, and there will come a Pentecost in our lives, and we also shall be filled with the Holy Ghost.

The results of the coming of the Holy Ghost were most marked. The disciples "began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." In reply to the criticisms of onlookers Peter preached the gospel with such power that 3,000 were converted. The Christian church was organized, and its activities were wonderfully blessed of God. Believers persevered in doctrine, in the ordinances, in fellowship and in prayers. Joy was abundant, God was praised, and converts were daily made. And these manifestations are possible today if, feeling our need of the Holy Ghost, we will pray unto God for Him. To be Spirit filled Christians should be our most earnest desire. We should not be satisfied with the work of the Spirit at regeneration, but we should earnestly desire and pray for the Spirit's baptism for service. It is not only His office work to regenerate the human soul, but from Him alone can come spiritual power that will enable us to serve God acceptably and to win men for the kingdom of God. God is willing to use us. Are we willing to be used?

BIBLE READINGS.

II Kings ii, 1-14; Ps. ii, 10-19; Isa. lxi, 1-4; Ezek. xxxvi, 22-38; Acts i, 1-5; ii, 16-21; x, 30-44; Luke xi, 9-13; John xiv, 16, 17; Rev. xii, 1, 2.

The Christian Endeavor Pledge.

Rev. F. B. Meyer of Christ church, London, writing on this theme in a recent issue of the Christian Endeavor World, used these apt words:

"Objections have been lodged against taking the pledge at all. In my judgment they will not hold water. They might equally well be alleged against the soldier's pledge to his sovereign, against the lover's pledge to the woman of his choice, against the mutual promises of husband and wife at the marriage altar and against the determination to give to the cause of God a fixed proportion of one's income.

"Such pledges are always taken with the understanding that they are binding and obligatory only under certain conditions or while life may last. If the soldier is maimed he cannot serve on the battlefield; if the lover is stricken by mortal illness he cannot carry out his promise; if the husband or the wife dies within a few months of marriage or if the property which was to have been tithed is swept away by irreparable loss it stands to reason that the pledge, however honestly taken, cannot be maintained. These pledges are also taken with the tacit acknowledgment that reason must hold its place and that God by His faithfulness and help may enable us to perform the promise. The pledge, therefore, is our ideal. It crystallizes what otherwise might float in dreamy solution. It puts into definite shape, to which we can refer in after time, the high and noble purpose with which we were animated when we stood upon the hilltop with the morning light shining upon our faces."

A Decision Day Prayer.

The following prayer, written by Dr. Clark and intended for use in connection with Christian Endeavor day, is very appropriate for any decision day period:

"O Christ, our Master, open all our hearts to receive the blessing Thou art waiting to bestow. May the Holy Spirit show us our great opportunities during these winter months of Christian work. Bless the increase campaign here and everywhere that it may result in larger numbers and better work for Thee in every society. May all our plans be Thy plans. Give us Thine own strength to carry out these plans and may our Decision day result in bringing many of our companions to a knowledge of Thyself. In Thine own name we offer our prayer. Amen."

God expects us to prove that Christian Endeavor has a growing power.

BATTLE WITH BEARS IN DEN

ADVENTURE OF TWO HUNTERS IN MOUNTAIN CAVE.

DOG IS TORN TO PIECES.

Men Are Lost in Wilderness and Take Refuge in Home of Animals—Four Bruins Killed in Desperate Fight.

Chichesterville, N. Y.—An experience abounding in danger recently befell Frank Bliss and Jake Van Thomson on West Kill mountain, and this is their story of the adventure:

Accompanied by two hounds, they had struck bear tracks early in the day, and followed them until toward evening, when it began snowing. They gave up the chase, and in trying to retrace their steps discovered that they were lost, not only in a mountain wilderness, but in a raging snowstorm as well.

Coming to a halt, they looked around and sighted a hollow in the rocks that, on closer inspection, revealed a cave that would furnish a refuge for the night. They immediately began gathering wood, and quickly had a huge heap of it, sufficient to last them until morning. They soon had a cheerful fire blazing, and as the firelight flooded the cave one of their dogs rose and, glaring toward the back of the cave, bared his teeth and began to bay loudly. Springing to their feet, the men looked in that direction and saw four pairs of eyes shining in the darkness.

"Catamounts!" exclaimed Van Thomson, and both hunters threw open the breeches of their guns and slipped in cartridges loaded with heavy buckshot. Simultaneously the eyes disappeared and the dogs bounded into the darkness of the cave. Grabbing up a blazing pine-knot, the hunters, with their guns in hand and hatchets in belts, followed.

At an angle in a wall they found a narrow passage leading into another cave, and their flaming pine knots brought a retreating bear into view. They were in a bear's den, probably the *home of the one that they had been fol*lowing all day. Urging on their dogs, they entered the second cave, and there saw four bears. One of them, a big male, was facing them, showing his teeth and growling threateningly at the dogs, which were springing at him. Behind him was the mother bear and two cubs, probably five or six months old.

Calling off the dogs for a clear aim, the men each let go one barrel of their buckshot at the bear's head. He rose on his hind legs and sprang upon the nearest dog and tore it to pieces, but while he was doing so the hunters killed the brave brute with their hatchets. A single shot killed the mother bear, and as her young tried to escape they, too, were finished and the carnage, which lasted not to exceed five minutes, ended with four dead bears and one dead dog, and it had all taken place by the light of the burning pine-knot, which had been dropped to the floor of the cave when they saw the bear.

After a thorough search as a matter of precaution, the hunters returned to the outer chamber of the cave and went to sleep by the fire.

On the following morning they got their bearings and went away, but returned in the afternoon and secured the carcasses of the bears, which they shipped down the Delaware and Ulster road to New York. The station scales showed that the largest of the bears weighed more than 300 pounds.

Her Ashes Buried in Workbasket.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—In accordance with a clause in the will of Mrs. Constance Miller, an aged and wealthy widow, her ashes were deposited in a work basket she had used for years and buried in a grave alongside the resting place of her husband, John B. Miller, in Woodlawn cemetery. Mrs. Miller always had a fear that she might be buried alive. To prevent that she left a stipulation in her will that her body be cremated. The undertaker placed the ashes in a glass jar which was tied into the basket.

Father Kept in Alcohol.

Paris.—At Viverols, in the Puy de Dome, Hector Granat, a former notary, has his father's body preserved in alcohol. Granat, Sr., has been dead 15 years. The body is in a zinc-lined receptacle, with a glass front, and the notary is always delighted to exhibit his father's body to visitors.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

May 14: "Epworth League Anniversary Day"—Matt. vii, 24-27; I Cor. iii, 11-15; Eph. ii, 19-22.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

How have we builded during this league year?

Even in those chapters where the special programme for the league anniversary is used there should be at some time careful consideration given to the work which the local chapter has undertaken during the year past and such a summing up of results that it may be clearly seen what departments need strengthening and in what lines the work is most successful.

It is to be feared that in too many cases only that which is comparatively easy is undertaken and that kind of work for which less taste has been acquired is given scanty or no recognition. This is a serious mistake to make. Some communities have a strong tendency to cultivate the social nature, and in such localities the social department of the league finds no difficulty in absorbing nearly all the energy of the members. The officers of that department get great credit for success, and those in other departments have a hard time to make anything go. This kind of success is ruinous to any chapter. It is one sided, when the development should be well rounded to be of most value.

So far as it may be possible all departments should be equipped and working. Harmonious growth in Christian life and practice is far better than the extension of any one section out of proportion to the others. This is so obvious a fact in all other lines of practical effort that it is surprising that so little regard has been paid to it in our church work. The time has come when we can no longer afford to allow any one department to absorb strength and effort which should be distributed through all.

The first in order of importance is the spiritual work. Every member should be enlisted in this heartily and regularly. It may take time and much effort. Better pay the price and get the result. If this is not obtained there will be no solid success, no matter what numbers may be enrolled nor how enthusiastic the sociables and literary meetings may appear. The cultivation of the religious life must never be lost sight of as the prime object for which the league exists. Forget this, and you have forgotten all that is of value.

There is no chapter, however small or remote from centers of culture, but can and should give some care to the literary work. This ought not to be an occasional entertainment, with some speaking and reading, nor should it stop with the reading aloud at some meeting of some selections from a selected author. Real honest work ought to be undertaken, with a definite course laid out and as many as possible enlisted to read the books designated, and then follow the reading by discus*sions and reviews, and, where possible,* have some lectures on matters of value and not for the purpose of raising funds or entertainment.

There is no community where there are not some sick and poor who should be visited and helped by the league. One of the most cheering sights ever seen by the writer was when two bright faced, happy young ladies of his league were ushered into the room where he was calling on an aged man confined to the bed for weary weeks with a broken hip. They were not a committee sent by anybody. No one had prompted them to the act; no one would have expected it from those two. In the high school they were known as full of fun and life, and few would have thought of selecting them to make a call on an old sick man. They thought of it. They got some flowers with their own scant spending money. They sang and filled that sick chamber with cheer. The old man cried tears of joy at sight of their sweet faces and their words of loving regard for him. Who shall say it did not have somewhat to do with his recovery to health? The girls got more out of it than he did, for they often afterward spoke of that visit with great satisfaction as having opened their eyes to the blessedness of such work. One of them finally turned her attention to hospital work and found her life work in caring for the sick.

One of the ministrations which are now receiving more thought than in times gone by and to which it is hardly likely that there will be any too much attention given is that of carrying flowers to the sick and shut-ins. It is an excellent arrangement for the chapter to furnish flowers for the pulpit for the preaching service and then at the close of the service to distribute them to the absent, aged and sick of the parish.

The study of missions must not be forgotten. This is fascinating in the extreme. In times past it has been thought that about the dullest meeting that could be devised was a missionary meeting. All this has changed now. There is no topic more inspiring and fascinating than the story of the missionary struggle in our own land and in the lands beyond the seas. Do not let your committee fail to do its work well. Get the books from the headquarters and lay out the plan for study, and you will not only increase knowledge and zeal—you will quicken the life of the local league in spiritual matters as can be done in no other manner.

Look over the work of the year. Wherein you have done well try to do better; where you have not done so well give more care; where you have done nothing begin to do something. Enlarge and strengthen and deepen all the work and put more vigor and thought and prayer into it. It is all for Christ, whom we serve and whose we are.

GRADE CROSSING EVIL

Board of Trade Objects to Dangerous Condition at Rock Ave

TO NOTIFY RAILROAD

The Matter Was Called to the Attention of the Board by J. V. E. Vanderhoef.

The only railroad crossing in Plainfield, located on Rock avenue, just off West Front street, was the cause of wide discussion at Thursday's regular meeting of the Board of Trade. The tracks of the New Jersey Central at that point dip downward into Dunellen, having been left that way when *the local elevating work was accom*plished thirty years ago. Recently the property in that section has become built up and a great deal of traffic passes over the crossing which is not guarded by a flagman or even gates. In addition the crews of freight and coal trains often stop them on the grade and block the road for twenty minutes or half an hour, which is a direct violation of the State law.

The matter was called to the attention of the Board by J. V. E. Vanderhoef, who has property in that section and who uses the crossing a great deal. His action was approved by other members who knew what danger exists, it being almost impossible to see trains approaching from either direction because of buildings. The question was discussed thoroughly and in conclusion a motion was passed, authorizing the secretary to call the attention of the railroad authorities to the complaints and ask that steps be taken to remedy the evils.

POLICE PENSIONS IN FORCE ERE LONG

CHAIRMAN OF POLICE BOARD FAVORS THE SCHEME.

Being impressed with the advantages to be derived from a well regulated pension system in the police department, Councilman W. S. Tyler, as chairman of the police board, hopes to be able to secure the adoption of such a system here before a great while. It will be remembered that he incidentally spoke of the matter at one of the early meetings of the Common Council, adding that it was his intention to bring it up later, for a free and full discussion.

While the force is now comprised chiefly of young men, Mr. Tyler recognizes the fact that it will be only a question of time when their places will have to be filled by others owing to advanced age. An instance of this is now to be seen in the department in the case of Thomas McCue, who has served the best years of his life there. At present it is not possible for the city to provide for him in his old age and unless some pension is adopted, he will have to be retired later on without receiving any compensation for his years of service.

According to Mr. Tyler's ideas, it is proposed to deduct a certain small percentage from each regular man's salary and thereby establish a fund which will be large enough in time to pay a pension when a man is to be retired. No doubt the city will contribute to some extent to this fund, provided the State laws will permit it. Mr. Tyler is greatly interested in this subject and he will undoubtedly present it to the Common Council within a short time. He believes that if properly started the system would be approved by a majority of the members as well as the citizens in general.

Lunch Wagon Wrecked.

The lunch wagon maintained at Albany and Neilson streets, New Brunswick, kept by Ben Silverstein, who formerly conducted the one at Second street and Park avenue, in this city, was almost completely demolished by three men Wednesday night. They became boisterous in the vehicle and were ejected by Silverstein, whose prowess in this line is known by many Plainfielders. All three were arrested and lodged in jail.

Use Our Street Names.

William Jeffery, the promotor of Berkeley Heights real estate, has named all the streets out through the tract he is exploiting after Plainfield thoroughfares. The signs have been printed and will be placed in position as soon as possible. Mr. Jeffery says he chose Plainfield street names because they are "pretty good" and the city directory furnished a handy list from which to copy.

Boat Club to Hold Dinner.

The Wanamassa Boat Club, which has a large membership in this city, *has arranged to hold an informal din*ner at the Hotel Churchill, Broadway and Fourteenth street, New York, Saturday evening, May 20. G. Harold Whitney and Fred A. Martin are members of the committee which has the plans in charge.

ITALIAN PROTESTANTISM

Crescent Ave. Church Hears of Work of the Waldensians.

CONTRIBUTE TO IT

Answer Eloquent Plea for Support of the Oldest Evangelical Church From Rev. Francesco Rostand.

Support of the Waldensian church, the fountain head of evangelistic propoganda, and the representative of the Presbyterian church in Italy, was eloquently urged upon the members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, May 3, by Rev. Francesco Rostand, a prominent Waldensian minister who is touring the country in behalf of his church.

Dating four centuries or more before the Reformation, the Waldensian church, which began in Waldensia, Piedmont, Northern Italy, is the oldest Protestant church. It kept the Protestant spirit alive in Italy through all sorts of persecutions at the hands of the dukes of Piedmont, and ever since religious liberty was granted to the Italian people in 1848 it has sought to spread the doctrine of the open gospel throughout the entire nation.

The speaker cited some interesting figures to prove that his church is playing an important part in the evangelization of the world, and that it is engaged in a work that touches America directly.

There are only 19,600 people in Waldensia, but from this population the Waldensian church has drawn a membership of 13,510, and has sent out 160 pastors into present-day work. It has forty-nine churches in the mission field, and fifteen in Waldensia. It supports sixty-six preaching stations.

In supporting the Waldensian church, Rev. Mr. Rostand pointed out, the people of the American Presbyterian church will provide for the spread of the gospel in their own country. There are fifteen pastors of the church at work among the Italians in America, and, moreover, the workers at home were spreading the propoganda among the future emigrants.

Of the religious state of the Italian people under the influence of the Catholic church the clergyman spoke sadly. The Italian people, he said, were getting farther and farther away from religion, and there was acute need for the work in which the Waldensians have engaged.

The speaker attributed the decadent state of religion to the allegation that Papal heads had always given more attention to the political side of their organization than to the religious side. Religious knowledge was at so low an ebb in Italy, he said, that university students attracted to a service in his church, were seen to look helplessly for the Book of Revelations in the neighborhood of Genesis during the reading of the scriptures. He said that Catholic church authorities frequently perverted scriptural quotations to suit their own ends in placing inscriptions over places of worship.

After the talk a collection was taken for the benefit of the Waldensian work. The good-sized audience contributed generously either in cash or by pledges.

EXEMPTS TO DO THE HONORS.

Will Play Hosts at State Convention of Firemen in Trenton.

Elaborate preparations have been *made by the Trenton Exempt Fire*men's Association for the reception of delegates to the firemen's convention, which will be held in Turner Hall, in that city, May 17. Among the important business is some action to secure from the State compensation for the service rendered by the firemen in the old volunteer days.

There will be sixty companies represented from different parts of the State, each sending four or five delegates. It has been decided to hold no street parade, as the business before the convention will occupy the greater part of the day.

They Like Physical Exercise.

W. S. Tyler, chairman of the police board, reports that the policemen are much pleased with the opportunity to secure physical exercise at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium and that those who at first were opposed to the plan, are now among the first to appear for exercise and the last to leave. A little later in the season Mr. Tyler hopes to have more time to devote to the police and he may decide to take regular exercise with the policemen in the gymnasium, believing that it will be of great benefit to him. Mr. Tyler also has other plans which he hopes to have adopted during the year will tend to increase the efficiency of the department.

Appointed Census Supervisor.

The secretary of state has appointed J. J. Stahl, of Somerset street, supervisor for North Plainfield in the state census to be taken next month. Two assistants to make personal canvass will be named later.

PUBLIC LIBRARY GIFTS

Ex-Councilman Brown Presents Historical Collection.

NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS

Letters and a Map as Well as Some Old Books of Much Value Received.

The Public Library has recently received a very valuable acquisition to its local historical collection, the gift of J. B. Brown, of Park avenue. An old map of Plainfield dated 1853 is one of the items. This map was made when Plainfield was part of Essex County, and when the present Park avenue was called Cherry street and extended only to Seventh street, and what is now Madison avenue was called Mechanic street. The present city park, just back of the Library is noted as Stillman Park. It also has a view of Stephen Vail's house, Webster & Marsh's clothing warehouse, with a number of other landmarks which would doubtless be familiar to the older members of the community.

Mr. Brown was a member of the first Common Council of Plainfield, and had clipped from the local papers the proceedings of that body from time to time. These he has also turned over to the Library. Some letters which were written to him while a member of the committee appointed to look after the families of Company I, Third New Jersey Volunteers, he has also contributed. Doubtless the red, white and blue paper on which these were written would look familiar to the Civil War veterans. These letters mentioned members of old and well-known families of Plainfield and give a side of the history of the period not to be found in the published history. A subscription paper carried by Mr. Brown, by which the subscribers promised to pay to James Leonard, treasurer of the committee, the sums opposite their names for the benefit of the families of the Volunteers, "leaving their homes to defend the Constitution and Union." Among these names are Abraham Runyon, Wallace Vail, Elston Marsh, James L. Spencer, Dr. C. Stillman, Dr. Lewis Craig, J. S. Denman and others. A copy of the first and other early city charters are given.

All this matter is to be preserved, the clippings having already been mounted in the book begun by Mr. Brown and form a history of the work of the Common Council from May 15, 1871 to January 4, 1879. All this matter is valuable, and is just the sort of thing the Library wants to secure. As years go on, its value increases and it is greatly to be desired that all who have such matter in their possession should turn it over to the Public Library and thus secure its preservation. Two old books published in New Brunswick by Abraham Blauvelt in 1797 and 1801 and one in Elizabethtown in 1819 are among the lot. Though these are quaint and interesting in themselves, their chief value is owing to their bearing a local imprint.

Another old book bears the interesting title "Devout exercises of the heart in meditation and soliloquy by the late pious and ingenious Mrs. Elizabeth Row, 1798." One other book of value, though not for its local interest, is "California illustrated, including a description of the Panama and Nicaragua routes, by a returned Californian, 1852." This being an account of a trip to California is soon after the gold fever of 1849 is a book of much curious historical interest, which interest is further enhanced by its abundant stone engravings.

TEA IN DAUGHTER'S HONOR.

Given by Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph for Mrs. Parfitt.

The first of a series of teas and receptions for Saturdays in May was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Charles D. Parfitt, of Canada, who is visiting her for the first time in a year. The home was attractively decorated with apple blossoms and flowering plants.

Mrs. Randolph was assisted in receiving by her five daughters, Mrs. Lee Ashley Grace, of New York; Mrs. Charles D. Parfitt, of Canada; Miss Marion Randolph, Miss Josephine Randolph and Miss Blossom Randolph. Assisting in the dining room were Miss Peckman, of Westfield, Miss Halloway and Miss di Verega, of this city.

There was a large attendance at the tea, although many were detained on account of the affair held for Grace church. Other opportunities will be given Mrs. Parfitt's friends to meet on the succeeding Saturdays in this month.

Its Last Run.

The Watchung Hunt Club held its last run of the season Saturday afternoon. Eighteen riders turned out at the meet, which was held at the Netherwood Hotel.

May Dances in Afternoon—Music a Feature at Night—Those in Charge of Affair.

A sale and entertainment for the benefit of the heating plant of the new parish house was held by the Lenten Sewing Class of Grace P. E. church at the Casino Saturday afternoon and evening. The affair was conducted as a "Dutch fete," and was very largely attended. Over $800 was realized.

The Casino auditorium was arranged as a "Dutch" garden, with booths and sale tables about the walls, and serving tables scattered over the floor. The decorations were of an elaborate nature, and the auditorium was festal and flowery to a striking degree. The women and girls at the booths and tables were in Dutch costumes.

The afternoon was for the children. At 3 o'clock a series of May dances, around a regulation pole, were begun and at 5 o'clock the King and Queen of the May were crowned. Mollie Timpson was queen and Marion Ackerman king. Between the dances the "famous Peek Sisters" sang. The "sisters" were Helen Timpson, Caroline Martin, Florence Stewart, Louise Saunders, Catherine Titus, Mollie Perkins, Mabel Heeley, Louise Booth, Marjory Howard, Ethel Mest and Marion Hall; they were led by Miss Watts, of New York.

Among the attractions of the afternoon was Charles Hyde's automobile, which was used for the occasion as a "Seeing-Plainfield" affair.

Cook and George S. Ring took part. William E. MacClymont was the accompanist.

Roosevelt Speeds Across Nebraska to Chicago.

COMMENTS ON PANAMA CANAL WORK

"Many Disagree With Me on the Panama Canal Question," President Said; "I Did Not Intend Uncle Sam Should Be Held Up."

CHICAGO, May 10.—With only four stops for speeches the trip of the presidential special from Denver to this city was uneventful. United States Senator Burkett and Edward Rosewater, publisher of the Omaha Bee, were taken on board as the president's guests as far as Omaha. The speeches were all brief and were devoted almost entirely to the discussion of the country through which the president passed. The president spoke at North Platte, Neb., where he said:

"This is the third time in recent years I have been in North Platte, and it is a peculiar pleasure to be with you once again. This neighborhood is one of the pioneer spots of the west in irrigation. It was your good fortune to lead in showing just what could be done by means of irrigation for the prosperity of this country. Nothing will count more in the next half century in building up the United States than what is done in irrigation. I am particularly glad to see all of you here, but especially the children. I heartily believe in you people, and I am glad that the stock is kept up. Although I congratulate Nebraska on many crops, the best crop of all is the crop of citizens. What counts in any nation more than anything in the end is the average of the citizenship. Here, as everywhere else in the west, I see men who wear the button that shows that they fought in the great civil war. In the civil war the winning or the losing of that fight depended upon the average quality of the average soldier. We saved the nation because the average man was of the right stamp. So it is in civil life."

President Roosevelt, speaking at Denver, made some comments on the Panama canal project, saying:

"It was perhaps unnecessary for me to say that I am perfectly aware that many most admirable gentlemen disagreed with me in my action toward the Panama canal, but I am in an unrepentent frame of mind. The ethical conception upon which I acted was that I did not intend that Uncle Sam should be held up. But without regard to that when the canal comes into operation I think it will have a very important regulatory effect in connection with the transcontinental commerce of the republic. I think when such is the case these great railroads will have to revise their way of looking at the interests of certain inland cities.

"As I say, gentlemen, don't misunderstand me. I understand thoroughly the argument from their standpoint and see that they can in all sincerity hold the position, and while I do not think that anything I can say could have any effect in making them alter that position I have considerable hopes for the effect upon the Panama canal. Let me repeat. I have told you my views as to what I regard to be the most important matter of international legislation that in the immediate future will be before this people.

"I wish to say again that important though that legislation is it is nothing like as important as the spirit in which we approach it. If we approach it in the spirit of demagoguery, if we permit ourselves as a people to be deluded into the belief that permanent good will come to us as a mass, if we attack unjustly the proper rights of others because they are wealthy, we shall do ourselves just as much damage as if we permitted an attack upon those who are poor because they are poor. In times past republic after republic has existed in this world and has gone down to destruction, sometimes because the public was turned into a government of the poor who plundered the rich, sometimes because it was turned into a government of the rich who exploited the poor. It made no difference whatever to the fate of the republic which form its fall took. That fall was just as certain in one case as in the other."

STOPPED ON TRACK

Major Fisk's Chauffeur Seized With a Panic.

FAST TRAIN HIT TOURING CAR.

Automobile and Occupants Hurled Thirty Feet—Mrs. Fisk's Left Arm and Left Leg Broken—Others Had Narrow Escape.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Willard C. Fisk, major of the Seventh regiment, New York national guard, and a millionaire lawyer, with his wife and son, Clinton E. Fisk, and George E. Blakeslee, all of Jersey City, had a narrow escape from death when the engine of a fast train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Iselin, near Meteuchen, struck the new automobile in which they were riding from Philadelphia to Jersey City and threw it against a freight car which was on a siding.

Mrs. Fisk was hurled fifteen feet, breaking her left arm and left leg. Mr. Blakeslee, who was acting as chauffeur, was bruised about the arms, body and legs. Although seriously hurt, Mrs. Fisk retained consciousness. She was carried to a farmhouse, where the fractures were set.

The Fisks and Chauffeur Blakeslee went to Philadelphia and started for home with the new motor car. It is a high power car, just purchased, and the party had made good time, stopping at New Brunswick to breakfast. Major Fisk and the chauffeur were seated in the front seat, Mr. Fisk taking lessons in how to operate the machine. Mrs. Fisk and her son were in the tonneau.

As the touring car sped toward the Iselin crossing Major Fisk put his hand on the chauffeur's arm and said to be careful.

"There doesn't seem to be any train coming," responded Blakeslee. "If there was the flagman would be out."

The machine was almost upon the tracks when the quick ear of Mr. Fisk caught the dull rumble of a heavy train.

"There's a train right down on us!" he cried. "For God's sake, stop!"

There was a bare six feet in which to halt the car. The chauffeur, however, seemed seized with panic and ran the machine directly on to the track, stopping with the full body of the auto across the rails.

The train was not a hundred yards away when the automobile stopped. In a moment Major Fisk had cried to his wife and son to jump and himself vaulted clear of the track. Young Fisk also leaped safely to a ditch, but his mother swooned and fell upon the floor of the tonneau.

When the train hit the car Mr. Fisk was struggling frantically to pull the heavy automobile off the tracks and the chauffeur had climbed back into the tonneau in an effort to rescue the unconscious Mrs. Fisk. Just what happened in the next second or two no one can tell.

Major Fisk says all he saw was the body of his wife as it shot into the air and in the direction of a ditch. He was thrown to the ground under a heap of debris. Blakeslee was hurled fully thirty feet, but had no bones broken. When Mrs. Fisk was picked up it was found her left leg and left arm were broken and she was also injured internally.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 10.—Arthur Haserot a Yale senior, living in Cleveland, O., was found shot to death in his room in Welch hall, one of the Yale campus dormitories, and an investigation into the case is being conducted.

The case is being kept very quiet, and further than the fact that the young man was found dead nothing official has been given out. A revolver was found near Haserot's side and a bullet wound in his head.

FURIOUS TORNADO

Central Kansas Storm Swept. Twenty-six Dead.

SECTION OF MARQUETTE WIPED OUT

Blast Came at Midnight After Downpour of Rain—Terrible Havoc Is Wrought In Five Minutes. Entire Families Killed.

MARQUETTE, Kan., May 10.—Twenty-six persons are known to have been killed and over forty-four were injured in a tornado, the most disastrous in the history of central Kansas, which swept over this portion of the state at midnight.

Of the injured thirty-five were seriously hurt, and some of them may die. During the day Carl Warnquist and Mrs. J. A. Carlson died of their injuries. Several of the others are suffering from broken limbs and internal injuries.

One large section of Marquette, where the principal loss of life occurred, was entirely wiped out. Reports from the surrounding country show that destruction to life and property was widespread, and the list of dead and injured is growing constantly.

A storeroom belonging to Olaf Olson, a furniture dealer, has been converted into a temporary morgue, and twenty-four dead bodies lie there.

When daylight broke over the town it found the entire population in a state of panic. Business was suspended, and every one that escaped injury turned his attention toward aiding the wounded.

The tornado seems to have formed three miles south of Marquette, and it did not spend its force until it had passed many miles north of the town. In Marquette the residence portion, west of the main street, suffered the principal damage. The houses in the course of the tornado were, with two or three exceptions, completely wrecked.

In this section there were a number of modern residences, of which only one, the home of R. A. Thompson, was left standing. The Swedish Lutheran and Methodist churches were among the first buildings struck, and they, together with the parsonage adjoining the Methodist church, were demolished.

After a hot and oppressive day a terrific rainstorm broke over the town. The rain continued to fall in torrents until midnight, when the tornado struck. Within less than five minutes it had wrought its terrible work and passed on. Telegraph and telephone wires were carried down, and it was several hours before the outside world could be apprised of the plight of the city.

In several cases entire families have been killed. A man named Switzer, a night watchman at the railroad yards, lost his three children. N. P. Nelson, with his wife and three children, were found dead. Two other children were not at home and escaped injury. Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Ellvin were carried on their bed a distance of 500 feet and set down without being seriously injured.

QUARRELED OVER A WOMAN.

Paterson Man, Coming From Hospital, Shot a Third Time.

PATERSON, N. J., May 10.—Gustav Kapp went to a hospital twice to receive treatment for bullet wounds alleged to have been inflicted by Henry Meisen. The last time he remained in the institution with three bullet holes in his body, but his condition is not regarded as dangerous. Meisen has not been captured.

The men had quarreled over a woman at the boarding house where both lived when, Kapp says, Meisen drew a revolver and shot him twice in the arm. He hurried to a hospital and after having his wounds dressed started to walk home.

On the way he met Meisen and, seizing him, called for a policeman to take him into custody. Meisen had no intention of giving up without a struggle, however, and again drawing the revolver he fired two shots at Kapp from a distance of only a few feet. One ball went wide, but the other lodged in Kapp's chest, and those who rushed up at the sound of the shots were obliged to assist the wounded man to the hospital. Meisen disappeared during the confusion.

AFTER WATER COMPANY

Committee Says P. W. C. Made Misrepresentations.

MAY PASS REPEALER

If Concessions Are Not Made Lawmakers Will Kill Ordinance Recently Obtained by Corporation.

After a second thought on the matter, the members of the Piscataway Township Committee have become doubtful of the benefits to be derived from the ordinance they passed recently for the Piscataway Water Company. It is charged nowthat the company obtained the ordinance through misrepresentation, and the committee has taken steps to force concessions from the corporation.

So warm has the feeling of resentment against the company become that at the last meeting of the committee an ordinance repealing the privileges extended to the water company was discussed at great length, and came very close to passing. After a careful review of the steps that led to the passing of the original ordinance, and an informal discussion as to what the committee understood the company's aims to be at the time, it was finally decided to put off definite and drastic action for at least two weeks, to enable the company to lay its side of the case before the committee.

In the interim the township officers will put the matter right up to the corporation, in language that will admit of no misunderstanding. If concessions can be agreed upon everything will be satisfactory from the township standpoint. Should the company antagonize the committee, or refuse to concede enough to meet the body's idea of what is right and just, punitive action will be taken very promptly by the lawmakers.

MRS. NELSON'S ESTATE IS OVERESTIMATED

SHE DIDN'T GET HALF OF REPORTED AMOUNT ON FAIR SETTLEMENT.

That the late Mrs. Hannah E. Nelson received $500,000 from the Fair estate when the suit over the disputed millions was settled is denied by a person very close to the heirs of the late Mrs. Charles L. Fair. The reports that her estate is valued at half a million is laughed at by this person, who says it is doubtful if it is worth much more than $150,000. It is claimed that there is good reason to believe that Mrs. Nelson did not receive even half of the sum reported to have been her share.

When the inventory of the Nelson estate is filed at New Brunswick the exact amount left by the dead woman will be made known.

Frank Smith, the brother of whom the other Fair heirs had lost track, and who was located in Topeka only after the death of his mother, has instructed his own lawyer, regardless of Chandler & Beekman, the Nelson counsel, to demand individual settlement with the Fair heirs. He claims he is entitled to one-seventh of his sister's estate, and will fight for that amount.

THEY WANT "HOME RULE"

South Plainfield Residents Anxious to be Boroughites.

A PUBLIC MEETING

Question is Discussed by Property Owners and Active Steps Taken Toward Incorporation.

Chafing under the county rule imposed upon them at present, the residents of South Plainfield held a second meeting, in Temperance Hall, last Friday, to consider ways and means of incorporating the village as a borough. The attendance was very large and from the determined spirit evinced the place will soon be enjoying "home rule."

An open discussion followed the calling of order and lengthy arguments on the subject of borough incorporation were made by William E. Smith, Samuel Manning, Peter J. McDonough, John Geary and Archie Steengrafe, all of whom are property owners and who have the best interests of the place at heart. They brought out many good points in favor of the project and showed by the manner in which they replied to questions that they have given the subject considerable thought.

Particular stress was laid on the school facilities afforded South Plainfield at present and which has caused more contention in the township than anything else in recent years. The residents have to send their children to New Market for the Ninth and Tenth grades when they could be easily accommodated at the South Plainfield school. There are other points in the school question that the residents believe they are capable and better able to determine for themselves and with the establishment of a borough it would give them the needed privilege.

Residents of Clinton avenue near Samptown asked that they be allowed to come within the proposed borough line and Samuel Manning and Archie Steengrafe were appointed a committee to learn the aggregate assessable property in the district. A further committee composed of J. F. Ten-Eyck, William Smith, Steile Randolph, Samuel Manning, Thomas Brantingham, Peter McDonough and John Geary were commissioned to fix the boundary line and if necessary, to employ counsel.

Both committees were instructed to have reports ready on May 23 when the next public meeting will be held. William Hamilton was elected permanent chairman of the borough committee and H. J. Manning secretary.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP EXPLAINED BY ADVOCATE

James E. Martine Says Plainfield Should Own Water and Gas Works.

AUDIENCE ENTHUSED

Contrasts Conditions of Public and Private Ownership of Utilities—Goes into Facts and Figures.

The mere announcement that James E. Martine, the "farmer orator," would speak in Hope chapel, was sufficient to draw an audience from the West End that filled the Sunday-school room last night. His subject was "Municipal Ownership" and he presented it in such a manner that many of his hearers became enthused at the close and remained to discuss it with him. Mr. Martine was introduced by Rev. L. M. Howard and in part spoke as follows:

"The whole idea of government is that it shall be for the people's interest. When this is not accomplished it fails in its purpose. We are entitled to 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness,' with a strict and true Democracy. These blessings would be the portion of every citizen however humble. When the spirit of true Democracy is set aside the people become the objects of tyranny, the degree of which is only gauged by the selfishness of man. The diffusion of public education through public schools and newspapers tends to promote culture and also a desire for labor-saving devices and the public conveniences, finally the water, light and transportation. Mankind is a social creature, hence gregarious in habit. The tendency of population is to the cities. In 1790 in this country, one thirtieth of the people lived in cities. In 1900 over one-third live in cities. Hence the problem of the city is the problem of the time.

"With concentration of population goes concentration of wealth. A hundred years ago wealth was quite evenly divided. Today half our people practically own nothing. Diffusion is the ideal civilization. Concentration is tyranny. Hence, a wise policy is to get as near to people as possible. When a man buys a piece of property he buys both a franchise right and a private right and no authority can take either of these rights from him without compensation and then only for the public good. The people have been slow to appreciate the value of franchises. The evidence of the value of these monopolistic privileges is demonstrated by the efforts and struggle before congresses, legislatures and common councils even through stooping to corruption and bribery to secure these privileges.

"Water, a prime necessity for mankind in my judgment, was never designed by the all-wise Creator to be placed in private hands and dispensed for profit for the selfishness and profit of man or combination of men. In this, Plainfield is specially blessed with a supply close at hand and easily secured at small cost that should add to our wealth and gratify our blessings and should be owned and controlled by the people to lighten their burdens and advance their well-being.

"The city of New York under public ownership of water turns into its public treasury in the neighborhood of a million and seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars annually. Were this great privilege owned and controlled by a Pierpont Morgan, Rockefeller, Gould or a Ramapo Hall, no profits would come to the people and cost to consumer would be enhanced.

"An instance closer by is the town of Madison, in Morris County, twenty miles from here, owning and controlling its own plant, turning a profit to the city and at the same time giving rates to consumers at a third less than our own city. Tiontou, since 1850, has owned its plant, not a cent has been stolen or squandered and water rates are half that of other cities in New Jersey similarly situated, and rates are still going down. And the history of these that I have quoted is but the history of every other city municipally owned and controlled in the United States. The people of Plainfield are as intelligent and as honest as the citizens of any other city and can accomplish equally as good results in this direction.

"As to the great utility gas, for which we pay $1.50 per thousand, it has been plainly demonstrated

A reception followed the ceremony. The groom is one of the managers of Schoner's local store. Mr. and Mrs. Schloss have gone south on a wedding trip and will return to Plainfield to make their home.

CENTRAL RAILROAD WILL USE ELECTRIC ENGINES

CONSIDERING CHANGE OF MOTIVE POWER ON LONG BRANCH LINE.

Electricity is to displace steam as the traction power of the Central Railroad of New Jersey on the Long Branch road. A high representative of the road has admitted that the steam locomotives are to be abolished in favor of electric engines, and sets the time within which the revolutionary change will be accomplished at five years.

That the Central has had the matter of changing its motive power under consideration on the shore branch is well known. A representative of the road, when asked about it, was *very reticent, but practically ad*mitted that the trotting locomotives on the New York and Long Branch railroad were marked for abandonment.

He said the electric locomotive was not fully developed, but that the New York Central railroad was making rapid strides in perfecting the revolution of motive power.

P. H. S. BATTERS WON FROM CRANFORD HIGH

IN TWO INNINGS ONLY DID LOCAL TEAM FAIL TO SCORE.

Failure to connect with Burt's twisters was the cause of Cranford High School's defeat by Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon on Crescent Oval. The score, 11 to 4, tells the tale. With men on bases, Burt was at his best. He displayed good headwork and struck out eleven Cranfordites.

The local boys had their batting eyes with them and hammered Smith, of Cranford, hard when hits were needed. Conway, of the Plainfield High School team, played a fine game accepting five out of six difficult fielding chances and pounding out three hits, one a two bagger. Cranford scored all of its runs in the sixth inning, aided by a base on balls, a clean hit and a couple of errors, while the local team scored as will in most of the innings.

Score by innings:

Cranford..... 0 0 0 0 0 4 0 0 0— 4
P. H. S..... 1 0 2 2 0 3 1 2 x—11

Lineup—P. H. S.: Burt, p; Davis, c; Deane, 1b; Thompson, 2b; Craig, ss; Conway, 3b; S. Freeman, lf; Brakeley, cf; Hagen and H. Freeman, rf.

P. H. S. A. A. Meeting.

A meeting of the Boys' A. A. of the Plainfield High School has been set for Friday morning. At this time a number of amendments to the constitution, which have been proposed, will be voted upon.

EULOGIZED MR. VALIANT

Six Ministers Pay Tribute to His Worth at the Obsequies.

THRONG AT FUNERAL

Members of Produce Exchange, Officials of Borough and Other Prominent Men at Service.

Attended by a gathering of relatives and friends that more than filled his *late home on Myrtle avenue, the fu*neral service over the body of John Valiant was held yesterday afternoon. Though simple in character, six clergymen took part, each one of whom had been associated with Mr. Valiant in life and who paid high tribute to his memory. They were Rev. Dr. Morgan, of Newark; Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons, pastor of Grace M. E. church; Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church; Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of Perth Amboy, its former pastor, Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll and Rev. Herbert Randolph, of Hoboken.

The principal address at the service was made by Dr. Parsons in which he referred to the earnest Christian in*tegrity of Mr. Valiant and the de*voted way in which he applied himself to religious work. He had known him but a short time, the clergyman said, but it was not necessary to be long associated with him in order to discern his true worth and to be aided and uplifted by the unselfishness of his whole being. He had worked for the Master, he said, and had ascended the Christian ladder step by step until he had quietly gone to his reward. He afterward gave a short sketch of his life, tracing his career as a successful business man and as a useful citizen.

Dr. Carroll spoke as a friend of longer standing but in the main his tribute was in accord with the preced*ing one. Prayer was offered by Dr.* Snodgrass and Dr. Morgan and Dr. McCrea spoke briefly. During the service, two solos, "Lead, Kindly Light" and "The Christian's Good Night," were sung by Miss Grace Carroll.

The floral tributes were magnificent and so numerous as to take up the greater part of the room wherein the casket was placed. They included many large set pieces from the Produce Exchange, the North Plainfield Council, the Board of Education, the Y. M. C. A., the various societies in the local Methodist churches and his business associates.

Following the service the body was placed in the receiving vault at Hill*side cemetery, the place of interment* not having been decided upon as yet. The pall bearers were selected from among his associates in business, municipal and church life and were as follows: James F. Parker, from the Produce Exchange; James R. Joy, North Plainfield Board of Education; Joseph W. Gavett, the local Y. M. C. A.; William Kemp, a business partner; James W. Jackson, First M. E. church, and Elmer E. Winckler, trustee of Grace M. E. church.

The attendance included Mayor Smalley and the North Plainfield Council and a large delegation from the Produce Exchange.

BLIND MUSICIAN AT P. H. S.

G. G. O'Dwyer to Talk and Play Before Pupils.

At the Plainfield High School on Friday morning, the pupils will hear G. G. O'Dwyer, the blind musician of Yonkers, N. Y., who will lecture and play. The subject of his talk will be: "Powers of Concentration of the Mind and Education of the Blind."

His address will include an explanation of Laura Bridgman's "Education of the Druids" and also the methods of education of Helen Keller. Mr. O'Dwyer visited the school yesterday, and the pupils heard him play and whistle a few selections.

Their Twenty-Fifth Anniversary.

In celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. William Whitehead entertained a large gathering of friends at their home, Saturday night. Several hours were spent enjoyably with vocal and instrumental music and in dancing. The celebrants were the recipients of many hearty congratulations and numerous presents of an appropriate nature.

Want a Game for Saturday.

Because of the disbanding of the South Orange High School team, the game arranged between it and the Plainfield High School team for Saturday has been necessarily cancelled. Arrangements have been pending for a game on that date with the Lawrenceville School nine but nothing has as yet been concluded.

WOMAN GETS $5,000 FOR HUSBAND'S DEATH

MRS. JOHN STEIN SECURES A VERDICT AGAINST THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

In her $20,000 suit against the New Jersey Central to recover for the death of her husband, John Stein, killed at Dunellen on Christmas morning, 1903, which has occupied the attention of the Supreme Court during the past few days, Mrs. Stein was awarded $5,000 by the jury yesterday afternoon.

G. W. V. Moy, Esq., represented the plaintiff.

BANK CLERK MADE MISTAKE IN AN ENTRY

INSTITUTION HAS TO SUE DEPOSITOR TO RECOVER AMOUNT.

E. A. Geers, a depositor of the First National Bank, was sued by the bank before Justice Mosher and a jury yesterday afternoon for the recovery of $65, alleged to have been credited to his account by mistake. Geers contented that there was no mistake in the accounting. The bank won.

On July 15, last year, a depositor named Geary banked $65. F. R. Haines, one of the bookkeepers, through the similarity in names, it is claimed, credited the deposit to Geers. Later, when the bank discovered the alleged mistake, Geers was asked to refund the amount. He refused, claiming that he made the disputed deposit. The bank then brought suit, through Counsellor W. H. Caddington.

Counsellor George Ball, for Geers, in summing up argued that a verdict for the bank would establish a highly dangerous precedent, because the only receipt a depositor has to show for money banked is the entry in the pass book.

The jury was out two hours before a verdict was reached and then reported that they hopelessly disagreed. Justice Mosher sent them back, and finally agreed on a verdict for the bank.

NO ANSWER FOR BOSSES.

Hod-Carriers' Union Takes No Action on Proposition.

While it is known that several union hod-carriers have returned to work at the old scale of $2.50 per day, the union has not yet settled its differences with the non-union men, that is it has not yet decided to admit the non-union men as members of the organization. Today is the time when the answer is to be given the Master Masons' Association, but it is not likely that anything will be done for the present.

This morning it was said that the Hod-Carriers' Union will not hold a regular meeting in a week or two and that there was no disposition to call a special meeting to act on the resolution which provides that the non-union men be admitted as members. It is also said that a majority of the non-union men are not particularly anxious to join, so long as the bosses take care of them. At present not a master mason is handicapped by the situation, each having a sufficient number of men to carry on his work.

Bicyclist's Head Gashed.

In turning out for a trolley car at Watchung avenue and Third street, yesterday afternoon, Harold Blackford, a boy residing on North avenue, was thrown from his wheel against an abutment of the Third street bridge. A bad gash was inflicted in his head that required three stitches to close, placed by Dr. Pittis.

P. S. C. Trolleys' New Route.

Commencing today the Public Service Corporation began operating its through line cars between Dunellen and Newark, through Lyons Farms and over the trestle bridge which was completed a few days ago. This route will not shorten the time of the trip any.

Seeing Plainfield.

A party of thirteen King's Daughters from Bayonne, are in Plainfield today enjoying an outing. They came here by trolley and stopped at the Hotel Kensington for dinner and then visited Washington Rock this afternoon.

—The annual inspection of Co. K will be held on Monday night, June 5.

—John H. Ohse, of this city, has been awarded the contract for the slating and tin work on the new Garwood school now being erected.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD AWAKE

Citizens Determined to Keep Borough Agitation Alive.

ARRANGE MEETINGS

Public Gatherings to be Held Twice Monthly—Village Valuations One-Third of Township.

Until their desire for the establishment of a borough government is *realized, the citizens of South Plain*field and vicinity are going to have two public meetings every month for the agitation of the project. A permanent ways and means committee, which is to work continually for the advancement of the proposition, will keep the citizens advised as to the progress of the movement and the methods to be followed in bringing it to fruition.

This line of action was decided upon at a meeting of the citizens held in Temperance Hall, South Plainfield, last night. The meeting was marked by an enthusiastic interest in the borough project and in general public affairs connected with the district. The citizens manifested a firm deter*mination to bring about the* incorporation of a borough, and the ways and means committee was empowered to act exactly as it saw fit, with full authority to advance the movement. Committees appointed at a previous meeting reported on the boundaries of the proposed borough and the amount of taxable property therein. The borough limits were published in The Daily Press recently. William Hamilton was chairman of the meeting and H. J. Manning was secretary.

The committee on taxable property, of which A. Steengraff is chairman, reported that in the entire township the taxable property amounts to $1,848,549. In the prescribed borough there is $697,955, or about one-third of the township valuation.

The taxes collected in the township last year were $31,063.57, of which $13,940.61 went to the county and the State received $2,957.78, leaving a balance, together with other appropriations from State and otherwise, $19,000. The cost of the proposed borough schools would be, approximately, $5,500.

The amount of taxes receivable in the borough limits would be about $7,500. After deducting $5,500 for school there would be a balance of about $4,000 for general purposes, which is a much larger amount than the districts receives at present, so that more improvements could be carried on or taxes reduced.

A vote of thanks was extended to those who were instrumental in securing the ninth and tenth grades in the South Plainfield schools.

LOST, BUT UNWORRIED.

Very Small Girl Who Enjoys Wandering Into Strange Places.

Margaret Callahan's mother didn't watch her very closely yesterday morning and Margaret went for a walk. Margaret is four years old, and has strong ideas. She dislikes supervision and has a penchant for seeing strange places.

It was somewhere around 9 o'clock that Margaret disappeared from the familiar places in search of unexplored territory, wearing, among other things, a pretty pair of tan shoes and tan stockings. At about 10 o'clock she appeared before police headquarters, carrying her tan shoe under her arm, with one stocking tucked nearly inside a shoe. The bedraggled bottoms of unmentionables showed over a pair of grimy little feet.

Sergeant Fredericksen called Margaret inside. She was affable and entertaining, and quite willing to stay. She claimed to know her name and tried to tell it, but the effort was not successful. The absence of anybody she knew was a circumstance that affected her not at all. When the sergeant, not knowing Margaret well, sent out for candy to keep her quiet she enjoyed a most delightful time.

Mrs. Callahan appeared at head-*quarters an hour later and took Mar*garet away. Margaret was amiable but bored as she started for home. The street looked too familiar.

"That kid is a wonder," said the sergeant gazing after her admiringly. "I think she'd be happy camping by herself."

Pupils' Annual Recital.

The pupils of Miss Minnie Scudder Marsh will give their annual piano recital at her home, 915 Madison avenue, this afternoon. They will be assisted by Mrs. George Stuart Bing, also, and Miss Sarah Mae Howell, a former pupil.

PARISH HOUSE NEEDED AT ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

RECTOR HAS STARTED A FUND FOR BUILDING'S ERECTION.

Rev. A. S. Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church, has made a start toward securing a parish house. In the June number of the Messenger, the church paper, just issued, Mr. Peck says that some have thought St. Ste*phen's church too poor to own such a* house, but he adds that if this is true, St. Stephen's is also too poor for corporate existence and to do the work it is now doing.

The work at St. Stephen's church is hampered by the lack of facilities, a place being needed where the guild can meet and where other meetings can be held, also socials and entertainments. The rector has made an appeal for the donation of a desirable piece of land and assistance from all interested in the parish.

The first donations consisting of $5, has been deposited in the City National Bank.

NOT INTERESTED IN SCHOOL APPROPRIATION

ONLY TWENTY-SIX BOROUGHITES VOTE ON $4,000 EXPENDITURE.

Borough residents evinced but little interest in the special meeting of the Board of Education, last night, when the question of a $4,000 appropriation for furnishing the new school was brought up. Mr. Townsend offered a resolution that four bonds of $1,000 denomination each be issued to meet such an expenditure and it was carried by an unanimous vote of twenty-six. Joseph O. Osgood was chairman, James J. Arnold secretary and Albert Steiner and Leyi Klein tellers.

The money is needed to properly equip the class room of the building now all but completed and to install a clock system of signal bells to apprise pupils of the various periods during the day. In addition a clock will be installed in the tower on the front of the building. The bonds are to become due on January 1, 1931, and are to bear five per cent. interest.

During the meeting, President James R. Joy offered resolutions deploring the death of John Valiant, a member of the board, which were adopted and ordered engrossed and spread on the minutes.

THIS COP TO WALK THE PLANK 'TIS SAID

REPORT THAT PATROLMAN HAMILTON WILL BE DROPPED.

Patrolman Peter Hamilton, appointed eighteen months ago as a probationer and never placed permanently on the force, is, according to a report that is regarded as perfectly reliable, to be dropped from the department next month for the good of the service. It is understood that Chief Kiely, in whom rests the power to reject the officers on trial, has made it plan to Hamilton that his services will not be required after next month.

Hamilton, as far as can be discovered, has not been formally dismissed yet. Chief Kiely is out of town on business.

Lumber Yard Permit Granted.

It has been learned that the fire and building committee of the Common Council has considered the plans submitted by Boice, Runyon & Co., for the erection of additional sheds near the West Second street entrance to the firm's yards and that a permit has been given them to make the improvement. The sheds will be used for the storage of a fine grade of lumber. It is also understood that the committee has decided not to take any action which would tend to prevent the former DeWitt C. Irving' yard on Watchung avenue being used as a lumber and coal yard should there be a desire to do so.

Baptized Seven.

The ordinance of baptism was administered by Rev. J. W. Munson, pastor of Faith chapel, to seven persons in the baptistery of the First Baptist church last night. There was a large congregation present.

—The Plainfield accounts are progressing favorably with Stutz annual work. Time for they had smooth sailing with very few kicks.

200 YEARS A CHURCH

New Market Seventh - Day Baptists to Observe Event.

OLDEST IN AMERICA

History of the Parish From its Beginning in 1705—List of Ministers to Present Date.

The two hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at New Market, is to be celebrated on Sunday in connection with the conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist Eastern Association, which opens its sessions with that church, tomorrow. Sunday will be occupied wholly with commemorative services.

The first Seventh-Day Baptist church in America was organized at Newport, R. I., in 1671. This resulted from immigration of Seventh-Day Baptist from England. Seventh-Day Baptists were also organized at an early date in Philadelphia, through immigration from England, but the organization of the church at New Market, which is now the oldest church in America, the original church at Newport having been broken up by emigration westward, came about from wholly different circumstances.

The First-Day Baptist church of Piscataway was organized in 1689, and had been in existence only about twelve years when one of its members, Hezekiah Bonham, having lost confidence in the moral character of Sunday as a Sabbath, commenced working on that day. Edmund Dunham, a deacon in the same church, finding his brother engaged in servile labor, reproved him. Mr. Bonham promptly challenged the deacon to prove from the Scriptures that Sunday was the Sabbath. Deacon Dunham, taken somewhat by surprise, and not having any suitable proof in mind, commenced searching the Scriptures for the proof which he supposed could be easily found. To his great surprise he was unable to find such proof and appealed to his brethren and spiritual advisers for assistance. Finding no help from any source, and having taken the word of God as his rule of faith and practice, he was compelled to admit his defeat and accept the views and practice of the brother whom he had reproved.

The investigation continued and became quite general in the church until several members withdrew and began to meet for worship on the Seventh-Day. In 1705 they decided to organize themselves into a church, and seventeen persons united in church covenant under the name of the Piscataway Seventh-Day Baptist church. Upon the organization of the church, Deacon Edmund Dunham was called to ordination and to the pastoral care of this pioneer band of conscientious Sabbath-keeping Christians.

Mr. Dunham was ordained in Rhode Island on October 11, 1705, and assumed charge of the church, which position he faithfully maintained for twenty-nine years, when, March 1784, at the age of seventy-three years, he was taken home to rest from his labors.

The pastors who have ministered to the church in New Market have occupied that office for comparatively long periods. Edmund Dunham was pastor from 1705 to 1734; Jonathan Dunham succeeded him, serving from 1734 to 1777; Nathan Rogers, called from Connecticut, was the third pastor, whose service extended from 1787 to 1797, the fourth pastorate that of Elder Henry McLafferty, extended from 1797 to 1811; Elder Gideon Wooden was pastor from 1813 to 1830; the sixth pastor was the Rev. William B. Maxson, D. D., father of W. B. Maxson, deceased, former mayor of Plainfield, whose services continued from 1833 to 1859; Walter E. Gillette served from 1859 to 1863; Elder Henry S. Baker from 1863 to 1868; Lester C. Rogers from 1868 to 1868; Lewis A. Platts from 1868 to 1876; Leander K. Livermore from 1877 to 1883; E. F. Saunders from 1883 to 1884; Judson G. Burdick from 1884 to 1887; Leander K. Livermore served his second term as pastor from 1888 to 1893; Frank E. Peterson from 1893 to 1899; Martin Sindall from 1899 to 1900; Leander K. Livermore for the third time, from 1900 to 1904; Henry N. Jordan succeeded Rev. L. K. Livermore and is the present pastor.

Mr. Sander Plans European Trip.

Robert Sander, manual training teacher in the borough schools, will sail for Europe at the close of the present term. He will spend the summer in Norway, Sweden and Denmark, studying manual training methods, and will return to America early in September.

Comments on People and Things From the Woman's Side

"There," said the manager, "there's a text for you. A girl in a factory sees a blazing newspaper. Of course she screeches, 'Fire!' and goes into hysterics. Then the 300 other girls in the factory get crazy with terror and tumble over one another in a frenzied heap, all squealing and howling. Of course scores of them get badly hurt. If that isn't like a woman! Now, I tell my wife never to lose her head whatever happens, but just to keep cool and think instantly what is to be done." I took the paper. Plainly the manager had read only the headlines. These always announce that women go into hysterics at a fire. The exact truth as stated in the item was this: A newspaper caught fire from an electric wire in the factory. One of the workmen—a man, mark you—saw the blazing paper and yelled, "Fire! Fire! Fire!" as though the very lord of fire were after him. The man "became hysterical." The girls were frightened, but the men workers were frightened still worse. They were crazy as loons. They fought like wild beasts, their superior strength enabling them to bruise, trample and crush back the poor girls, who, like themselves, sought the exit. The strong brutes knocked the girls senseless with their fists, and one even struck them with an ax. For the credit of our country, it may be mentioned that the men were foreigners. Numbers of the girls had to be taken to hospitals. Meantime—now note particularly—one woman, a woman, mind you, not a man, walked up to the burning newspaper with a woolen cloth in her hand, threw the woolen cloth over the flames and extinguished them in half a minute. And that is the true story of the "panicky women."

The first movement for the higher education of the feminine sex in this country was made by two women teachers, Mary Lyon of Holyoke, Mass., and Mrs. Emma Willard of Troy, N. Y. We should never forget this, neither that the noble hymn, "Rocked In the Cradle of the Deep," was written by Mrs. Willard.

The most successful singing voice trainers of the present are undoubtedly women. New York city has a thriving school of opera conducted by a woman, Mrs. Ogden Crane. She not only develops the voices but also the stage action of her pupils. Lately her school gave a notable performance of "The Chimes of Normandy." Some sixty young people were in the cast, every one of whom Mrs. Ogden Crane herself trained.

In New York city are six widows who pay taxes on an aggregate of $3,000,000. If the property of one-third of the average voters in New York city were summed up it would not amount all told to $3,000,000. Besides contributing through taxation so largely to the city's support, the widows are all highly intelligent, belonging to the best class of citizens. Yet not one of them has a vote. What do you think of the justice of this?

In case of the crown prince of Germany and his bride, Duchess Cecilia, it will at least not be the young husband's mother-in-law who tries to run things, though it may be some one else.

Probably the best paid, best satisfied factory girls in the world are those in the collar and cuff shops of Troy. These young women earn from $15 to $25 a week, heads of departments even receiving $5 a day. No men in the establishment are paid so much. As a consequence it is found that few of the collar and cuff girls care to marry.

"The trouble is," said Rider Haggard during his recent trip to America, "we all need more humor in our work and our lives." Amen!

Sergeant Frank Mayne, a Pennsylvania soldier of the civil war who was killed in battle, was a woman, Frances Day. Another northern woman soldier in the same war was Frank Thompson of the Second Michigan. On the Confederate side Mrs. L. M. Blaylock wore the gray and went through the war beside her husband in the Twenty-sixth North Carolina regiment.

Note.—At Mansfield, O., the co-operative kitchen started three years ago has proved successful in every way, even commercially. Perhaps that is partly because a man, Mr. Grimes, aided his wife to establish it. Any co-operative kitchen can succeed if its managers learn to furnish good meals for less cost than these can be cooked at home. This the Mansfield kitchen has done. Excellent meals are sent to homes in covered vessels kept hot by soapstone bottoms. Bills of fare are distributed beforehand, so each family can choose what it wants. This beats "home cookin'" all to pieces.

In the German reichstag recently Dr. Spahn, leader of the Center party, became so excited that in the midst of a speech he just toppled over in a faint. Now, if it had been a woman!

HOUSE FURNISHINGS.

Selecting Furniture, Cleaning Floors and Renovating Carpets.

Sunlight, ventilation and cheerfulness are the first points to be considered in thinking out the furnishings of a home, and whatever interferes with these is always avoided by the wise homemaker. Dust destroys the purity of air, therefore an overamount of draping and trivial bric-a-brac must be ruled out.

Heavy, cumbersome furniture and uncomfortable chairs are also to be rigidly ruled out. In America especially "nothing is permanent but change." We move about so much, usually for business reasons, that it is not worth while to count on remaining in any one house. Consequently it is best to purchase the lightweight, pretty furniture that can easily be taken from place to place. Such furniture of course includes metal beds, brass and enameled iron. These have the additional recommendation of affording less of a harbor for vermin.

Then there are the attractive, artistic chairs, settees and couches of bamboo, rush, prairie grass and split reed. They are so light in weight that a child may move them, yet strong enough to hold the very fat man. They can be made as soft and luxurious with cushions as one desires. The cushions can be taken into the sun and beaten and thoroughly cleansed, as stuffed and padded chairs never can be. Perhaps almost the only heavy articles in a house should be the piano and dining table. Wooden furniture is now often so badly made and of such badly seasoned wood that it is to be avoided.

Linen and Drapery.

The heavy white hand embroidered linen now used for best bedspreads and tablecloths is a delight to the artistic sense. Women who can embroider can decorate their own spreads and tablecloths.

It is to be hoped the present floral patterns of wall paper, curtains and chair and cushion covers will long remain in vogue. The light background, with designs of roses and other blossoms stamped over it, is a perpetual incentive to cheerfulness.

Cleansing and Staining Floors.

After a floor has been scrubbed if a little turpentine is added to the rinsing water it will leave a delightfully fresh and fragrant odor in the room. Floor stains may be made at home. For oak mix together a pint of boiled linseed oil, a gill and a half of turpentine, three tablespoonfuls of raw umber and three tablespoonfuls of whitening. For mahogany mix together one pint of boiled oil, a gill and a half of turpentine, three tablespoonfuls of burned sienna, three tablespoonfuls of whitening, half a tablespoonful of yellow ocher, half a tablespoonful of Bismarck brown and half a tablespoonful of aniline black. It is advisable to try the stain on a little piece of board before staining the floor. The color may be deepened or lessened by increasing or diminishing the coloring matter. The stain should be rubbed into the floor with a brush, and after a day or two, when it is quite dry, the floor should be rubbed hard with a soft cloth. When washing waxed or polished floors a little petroleum added to the water will greatly improve the appearance. An excellent polish is made by well mixing together equal parts of boiled linseed oil, turpentine, vinegar and spirits of wine. Apply the polish thinly with a piece of flannel and finally rub with a soft cloth. When washing polished floors the cloth should be wrung out as dry as possible, the floor being then rubbed with a dry cloth.

Renovating Carpets.

After a carpet has been well shaken and beaten it may be washed with carpet soap, its improved appearance well repaying the trouble. A faded carpet can be brightened after it has been shaken by rubbing it with a cloth wrung out of ammonia and water in the proportion of a teaspoonful of ammonia to a gallon of water, turning and rinsing the cloth as it gets soiled. The water will need frequent changing. To remove blacklead stains cover them with a paste made of fuller's earth and water to which a little ammonia has been added. Leave till dry and then brush off. If necessary make a second application. Grease may be removed from the carpet by spreading thick brown paper over the spot and ironing with a hot iron.

A Girl Librettist.

A very young lady, Miss Doris Francklyn of New York city, has written an operetta of fairies. Its successful first performance was a flattering tribute to the talent of a girl scarcely past sixteen. The young author is yet near enough to the age when we believe in fairies to represent them in a living, real way, and perhaps that is why her operetta was so successful. Will Miss Francklyn later be the American woman who is to write a great opera, and is this a beginning?

THE OVERAMBITIOUS WOMAN

She Has Not the Patience to Wait For Things.

There are plenty of foolish people in the world, but among the most foolish must be counted those women who, to use a vulgar expression, "bite off more than they can chew."

You see them on every hand. There is little Mrs. Poorman—she married Poorman with her eyes open. She knew he had a tiny income. Now, why on earth does she stretch that income beyond all powers of endurance by trying to float along with the Richly set? She belongs to a dinner club, for instance, and has to give a swell banquet when she has only one maid, who doesn't even know enough not to pass plates in front of the guests. And she worries herself very nearly into the grave in the effort to "keep up appearances."

Then there is Mrs. Vanity. She lives for clothes and stays awake during the wee small hours planning whether she really can scrape enough from the household money to have that extra dress of pale blue eolienne. The result is that she becomes sallow and wrinkled fretting about it all, and the pale blue eolienne, when she gets it, doesn't help her appearance much.

And there is Mrs. Proudmother. She sends little Gladys to a fashionable school, which she can no more afford than she can afford to keep a horse and carriage. And why? In order that little Gladys may have a chance to learn more? No. She will learn less in the fashionable school, but she will make fashionable friends, associate with little girls who are worth twice as much money as she is and consequently imbibe ideas of discontent and of living beyond her means.

Of course it is a good thing that in America we have no limitations of rank, but it is also a bad thing because it breeds discontent. Every woman in the land, regardless of her own or her husband's limitations, wants to do the same things that the most wealthy women in her town do.

BALCONY EFFECT.

A Very Good Idea For a Large Hall or Reception Room.

Very often there is a large entrance hall or a square unlovely room in an old country house which will not admit of artistic furnishing. The picture suggests a balcony treatment, which is attractive, particularly for entrance halls.

The woodwork of this room is white, giving it a light, cheerful appearance. There is a large window composed of five smaller ones, and across the top of this there is the balcony, just wide enough to accommodate a few plants or musicians in the event of a dance. An oriental rug hangs over the railing and with its deep red and green tones gives a touch of color to the room. The window seat is upholstered in green, and the window draperies are of the same tint. A round table or two and some easy chairs are furnishings sufficient for this sort of a room, together, if desired, with a piano which is placed with its back to the room.

The general effect is simple, without small rugs or many pictures to break up the walls and without any bric-a-brac whatever.

R. DE LA BAUME.

FICKLE DAME FASHION.

"Everything Goes" Appears to Be the Present Modistic Watchword.

It would be a wise fashion writer who could say with authority that this or that will be the vogue for the season now so close at hand, for everything worn from the days of the fig leaf to this hour is seen, modified, of course, to meet the cultivated taste of the woman of today, who is nothing if not eclectic. "Everything goes," and we see things properly belonging to widely different epochs mingled into one harmonious whole and that whole looking as if it had borrowed nothing from the brave days of old.

The full circular skirt is seen on the figures in the best stores side by side with the skirt which fits as closely by means of its tucks and shirrings as the habit skirt of a few seasons ago. Some look best in one kind and some in the other, and it is a wise woman who knows her own shortcomings and skillfully hides them by the skirt she wears.

All the lovely soft stuffs are in strong evidence, from the filmy silk chiffon to the flexible and beautiful voiles of all wool, of half wool and half silk. The liberty silks and satins make up into exceedingly pretty gowns for all sorts of occasions. The quantities of lace put upon them passes belief, and the flounces and ruffles are legion and fully as graceful and dainty as they are numerous. I saw some very beautiful dresses destined for summer wear. They were of the softest and most elegant light pastel shades—green, pale and frosty; champagne, drab, beige, cadet blue, and others where there were two colors so interwoven that the fabric became iridescent, one in particular, a dove color shading from purple to metallic blue. These gowns are all made with drop skirts, and the underskirt always is arranged with a view to carrying out the general color scheme.

Shirring Galore.

Much shirring and many yards of lace are put on these dresses, nearly all of which have elbow sleeves. The edges are finished off with several lace ruffles. With these sleeves are worn the long gloves, which are now coming forward after a long period of obscurity. A few have the sleeves of the material short, but have long, snug forearm pieces which reach quite to the back of the hand, and these are always of lace, generally the heavy Irish crochet, which has obtained a new lease of life. The majority of sleeves on the newest costumes, even those of cloth, are very ornamental and very clumsy, especially those intended for street wear. They are full and have deep cuffs, very much shirred and trimmed with fancy braids, in addition to which there is some lace.

The cloth suits nearly all now have some form of a vest front. This is handsomely garnished with all the fine and rich material one can get on. Most of the lighter materials are made up with much drapery across the front, sometimes in surplice style and again in cross gathers and folds. While the drooping blouse effect has not entirely gone from our gaze like an unpleasant dream, the waists of that style do not hang down so far and often are drawn quite close to the figure. The girdles and fancy belts help to give the pointed effect without the shapeless fullness.

Heavily raised embroidery is considered the height of style for wash waists, though many are made with the old fashioned eyelet embroidery. Among the accessories shown me recently were yoke capes and berthas of silk, mull, batiste and fine linen all with eyelet work. Incidentally I might mention some beautiful small capes of black net entirely covered with black spangles and some with black and steel ones. These are to wear over the pretty thin gowns and are certainly beautiful. Parasols are things of delicate beauty, of soft silks and chiffons, dainty and light, and trimmed with bows of ribbon and in some cases flowers and ruffles.

Silks will be the great rage for outdoor dresses and suits, generally in a fine and close quality of taffeta, sometimes slightly changeable. They are overwhelmed with lace and flounces. Coats long, short and half length will be worn to match.

Coats of every kind of pongee are already seen. A very stylish one had the skirt made circular and reaching just below the knees, while the waist was bloused in slightly. The sleeves had plaited caps about half way to the elbows and below a monstrously full bishop shape with deep shirred cuff. The coat itself was neat and comfortable, but the sleeves destroyed its beauty. Still all the women admired it greatly. It was a failure.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Ribbon Suspenders Smarten Up Simple Summer Gowns—Pongee Coats.

Nothing is prettier to freshen up a young girl's white tub frock than bretelle suspenders made of dainty pompadour ribbon. The suspenders cross back and front and fasten with smart bows to a girdle of the same ribbon.

Suspender frocks are decidedly youthful, but this summer are worn by maid and matron alike in voile, cloth and taffeta silk. These gowns are not exclusive style, but in some instances are very pretty when the suspender idea is a little hidden with shirrings and indented bretelle-like pieces. Worn over soft lingerie waists the effect is very good. The gown itself is made in princess lines—that is, the skirt and girdle are cut in one. With these frocks goes a tiny bolero jacket, which is put on for appearance more than protection.

A nice present for the girl who is graduating this June is a three-quarter length pongee coat to wear over the organdie frock. The plain character of this coat is completely changed with a bit of embroidery about the collar and cuffs. Some of the smartest of these pongee coats have trimmings of bright red silk braided in black and silver. This ornamentation gives an oriental effect at slight expense.

Skirts on gowns not designed for dressy occasions are much shorter than they started out to be at the beginning of the season. Indeed, some women are wearing walking skirts as short as the average schoolgirls.

The frock pictured is of finest pale blue batiste. The skirt is trimmed with lace, ruched top and bottom with frills of ribbon. This lace runs up the skirt in graduated points trimmed with bows of velvet ribbon. The bodice has a deep pointed yoke and a bolero effect of batiste edged with lace.

CHIC STYLES.

Matinee Jackets of Crape and Silk. Point d'Esprit Net the Vogue.

Very attractive is a matinee jacket of crepon or liberty silk elaborately tucked. These jackets are worn over lawn skirts trimmed with deep lace ruffles headed with beading run with colored ribbon.

Point d'esprit net and dotted swiss dresses will be very much worn this summer. There is a simple way of making these gowns quite distinguished by working around the dots daisy petals in mercerized cotton or forming designs with the dot as a central motif in catstitches. This embroidery is used for yokes and insertions.

Linen frocks are made up in all sorts of ways, severely tailored with short skirt and long half tight fitting coats or with plaited skirts and Eton jackets.

A smart walking hat is of fine green braid turned up in colonial style and simply trimmed with a green quill.

The blouse illustrated is of china silk. The yoke is formed of lozenge shaped pieces of broderie anglaise arranged with motifs of filet lace. Below the yoke the blouse is laid in double box plaits back and front. Deep cuffs of the mingled lace and broderie meet the full sleeve puff of silk.

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

Silk Covered Cords a Pretty Trimming—New Foulard Called Radium.

An attractive trimming for taffeta dress is cord covered with the silk and knotted and twisted into all sorts of figures.

Parasols are smartly severe or elab*orately ornate. The severe examples* have wonderfully fanciful handles, among them being birds' heads of the most exquisitely tinted woods, with jeweled eyes.

HAT OF OPALESCENT STRAW.

Separate white linen or lawn waists will be worn with cotton skirts this summer, as they have been all winter with cloth skirts.

For wear under the very sheer lingerie blouses are white nainsook corset covers. A pink taffeta waist demands a pink corset cover, blue under blue, and so on down the color scheme.

Foulard dresses will be very much worn this summer, only they will masquerade under the new name of radium. The flowered foulards are not popular. The new designs taking their place are strips in hair lines and tiny checks.

A charming novelty of the summer will be flower boas and muffs made of large roses of most delicate colors. The boas are about half a yard long, the foundation of chiffon being dotted with the satin ribbon roses. Long ends of chiffon finish the boas.

The ribbon muffs are made in the shape of the winter ones on a thin stiffening, with just enough wadding to give them softness. This foundation is then covered with china silk and covered with the ribbon roses. The ends have double ruffles of chiffon.

The hat pictured is of opalescent straw in tones of pearl and rose. The brim is straight in front and rolls high at the sides and back in pretty convolutions. Around the crown is a wreath of ribbon roses in deep red, mingled with artificial foliage.

SARTORIAL ITEMS.

Embroidered Linen Much Used as a Trimming—Belts and Girdles.

Embroidered linen is an effective trimming on taffeta gowns.

The new belts in many instances have a V shaped buckle, which gives the much liked tapering effect to the waist. A pretty belt to wear with a shirt waist suit is of violet leather and violet silk in alternate strips. It is shaped in a dip at the front, fastening with a strap.

Cloth of gold and silver makes very effective belts for evening wear. Smart tailored costumes have belts made of the gown material fastened with a leather buckle of the same shade as the cloth.

Belts embroidered in Chinese designs are stunning. A bright red one has a design of Chinese temples, and a yellow dragon belt is equally attractive. The buckles on these belts are very elaborate and usually of gold or jewels.

A stunning hat from Paris is of silver gauze stretched over pink on a low frame. The effect of color is very good, as the silver throws a white light upon the pink. The trimming is nothing but a twist of crimson velvet tied in a small bow at the edge of the brim.

The waist illustrated is of lilac messaline silk. The surpliced fronts are almost entirely formed of bands of Irish crochet lace laid over a fold of purple velvet. The chemisette and choker are of mauve mousseline de soie overlaid with lace. Points of lace are placed over the short sleeve. The girdle is of purple velvet ribbon and ties in front in three pompadour bows.

Notable Women

Plucky Explorers and Travelers of the Feminine Sex

Miss Martha Craig, a brilliant and brave young woman, has made remarkable explorations in lands of which little is known. Two years ago she returned from a journey of 500 miles in a canoe in Canada. She made the journey alone with two Indian guides, whom she trusted perfectly and who, perhaps for that reason, were as faithful as two guardian angels.

Miss Craig penetrated far into the Canadian wilderness, where few white persons ever venture. She was rewarded by a series of thrilling adventures and intensely interesting information in regard to Indians yet uncontaminated by the influence of the white man. She declares she found these "savages" in some respects better real Christians than the average civilized man is. Investigations among the Ojibways show that they, too, have traditions of a great deliverer and redeemer who descended from heaven as a man to save the earth's people from being destroyed by their own wickedness. The Indian savior had, however, a wife, the divine woman, who came from heaven with him. His name was Mitchiwabun.

Last summer Miss Craig went to Labrador, obtaining many photographs and taking notes of the wild scenery and sparse life there. Returning, she came near going down in a shipwreck. This plucky and gifted woman has some original ideas. For one thing, she says the masculine sex is stupefying itself with tobacco and meat.

Jessie Ackerman.

The champion woman traveler of the world is Miss Jessie Ackerman, missionary, explorer and lecturer. She has been all around the globe six times, has lived among cannibals and visited the king of the Ainos, the aborigines of Japan.

The little Ainos interested the woman traveler as much as any people she saw. Specimens of this strange race were on exhibition at the St. Louis fair. Their bodies are covered with a growth of hair like that on an animal, which gives the small people an uncanny look. The women have blue mustaches tattooed upon their upper lips. When an Aino girl is married a bar is tattooed across her forehead and another around her wrist, perhaps so she can never pass herself off for single.

Fifty Years a Teacher.

There lately retired from public school No. 21, Brooklyn, its principal, Miss Kate E. McWilliams, after fifty years' active service as a teacher. She had been a principal forty-eight years, which is said to be the lengthiest record of any American at least in such capacity.

Miss McWilliams has a rare, sweet face which bears little mark of age. A teacher who has been acquainted with her many years says of her: "She was the loveliest woman I have ever known. Miss McWilliams had a remarkable power of discipline and maintaining order in a school, that, too, by her simple word and presence."

She retires on a pension of $1,250 a year, half her salary as principal.

Miss Gill's Opinion.

Miss Laura Drake Gill, A. M., is dean of Barnard college, the woman's branch of Columbia university. Besides being an American college graduate she also studied at the universities of Leipsic and Geneva and at the Sorbonne, Paris. Dean Gill in a recent address declared it is not college women who seek divorce from their husbands. Thoroughly disciplined mentally, the college bred girl looks on marriage as a "serious chance for service." At the same time college women demand a high standard in man. "The world needs a propaganda of work," says Dean Gill.

Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley.

The editor in chief of the Chicago woman's daily, the Review, has had ample newspaper training and has, besides, ideas original with herself. For one thing Mrs. Ella Hamilton Durley declares herself unalterably opposed to making a newspaper a criminal calendar. She is for printing "all the news that is good news." Mrs. Durley went from Iowa to Chicago. She was formerly editor of a department on a Des Moines paper.

OCEAN YACHT RACE

VARIOUS CRAFT ENGAGED IN CONTEST FOR KAISER'S CUP.

GOTHAM'S MANY INTERESTS

Polish Artists in America—New York an All-Night City—Gas Trust Lies Heavy Upon Tammany's Shoulders.

NEW YORK.—The German emperor's yacht race rushes the season, which for such sports usually begins on Decoration day. The kaiser is never caught napping behind the procession.

There has been intense interest in the yachts that are to compete—almost as much as in the question whether Nan Patterson did or did not kill Caesar Young. All the sharps agree that the kaiser has devised a contest of real interest, free from flummery and red tape. Free, too, from the exclusive management of the New York Yacht club, which has to some extent "queered" recent contests for the America's cup.

It is an ocean race; that lets out the mug-hunting racing machines. Nothing is likely to cross the water that is not fairly fit to cross. The six yachts upon which interest has centered are cruisers, "wholesome" boats. The fact that most of them are auxiliaries is significant of the rapid advance of the age of machinery. Any schooner may compete. All that is required is that an auxiliary shall leave her screw ashore. She can carry coal and make steam on the voyage, if she will; but the steam must be used only for setting sail; for winches, not propulsion. Without mechanical aid it would take a crew of perhaps 60 crack sailors to handle the enormous sails of the racers. Even then a storm might be very dangerous, with a mass of canvas to be brought in. Winches make lighter labor. Compare that with the cup-racing craft. Years ago it was required that the challenger for the America's cup should come over under her own sail. Of late both contestants have been mere shells, vast and cavernous within their unfinished hulls. They were not boats at all. The contesting schooners are ships of speed, but of comfort, also.

A long race is perhaps a less valuable test of speed than of seamanlike qualities. The schooners may be out of sight of each other most of the way and meet quite different weather conditions. But it is one task of a good captain to hunt his own weather.

The "German" Visitor.

THE race is not so very "international." The one German craft contesting, the "Hamburg," was built in Glasgow, and is entered by the Hamburgischer Verein Seefahrt of 200 members. The "Verein" is a hastily formed body of men, each of whom puts up a small subscription in the interest of sport and patriotism. The earl of Crawford enters the "Valhalla." He has the asthma a good deal and gets relief by cruising. You might think it odd to go to the damp sea to shake off asthma; but it works, if you sleep on deck. There is no dust. The Valhalla is a beautiful yacht, stiff and storm-loving. The earl has 60 sailors who have sailed five years with him. Then there is the "Sunbeam," the most famous name an English yacht can bear. Lord and Lady Brassey have always had a Sunbeam, though it has not always been the same boat; and Lady Brassey has written the "Log of the Sunbeam" to the glory of yachting and the pleasure of lovers of the sea.

When the first race for the America's cup took place 50 years ago off the Isle of Wight there was every sort of craft, including tiny sloops and one three-master schooner. There is a three-master in this race, too, the "America," of this city. Now it has not generally been supposed that multiplying masts increases speed. A sloop is faster than a schooner of her inches. What the extra masts do is to make setting sail easier. An eight-masted schooner need carry a crew of only 14 men to handle 5,000 tons of coal from Baltimore to Boston. There is much curiosity as to the performance of the America. Will her three masts advantage or handicap her? She is a huge craft, 189 feet long. I do not suppose that a sloop of such dimensions is workable. Her sail would have to be half an inch thick and almost beyond human power to stretch. The Thistle is another creditable American production.

The Modjeska Benefit.

THE witchery of the Polish character shines in Modjeska, who was the recipient of a rarely equaled benefit performance of stage people. I well remember her first ... [illegible]

... gene Field wrote for her "Modjeska as Cameel." Admiring her acting, he also printed in the Denver Tribune that beautiful poem of the shell upon the mountain height singing of the sea—a poem fit to be named with Dr. Holmes' "Chambered Nautilus"—with Modjeska's signature. That was his modest conception of a joke, to sign another's name to verses Keats would have been glad to write. Modjeska's Rosalind was captivating. That with her never perfect English accent she could so impersonate the heroines of the great English dramatist was proof enough of the fervor of her art.

The farm experiments in California of M. Bozenta Chlapowski, her husband, turned out badly. There they hoped to found a kind of Brook Farm for Polish exiles. Sienkewicz, author of "Quo Vadis," worked there for a little time just as Paderewski played for the Modjeska's when he was an unknown lad and was by them encouraged to persevere. Paderewski was to have played his soul out at the benefit, and was sorrow-smitten that his tour was interrupted. They say that what wrecked his nerves was a performance in Kansas City, when the piano was interrupted by a chimney falling down just outside, by a baby crying in the upper gallery, by a mother spanking her boy near by and a few other untoward interruptions.

Mme. Janauschek was ten years Modjeska's predecessor. They were very different. Modjeska is charm; Janauschek was power.

The "All-Night Bank."

THE "All-Night bank" is not a joke or an invention of out-of-town correspondents. There is to be such a bank, the first in the world, I imagine. The plans for the building have been drawn and filed with the building department, and it is to cost $350,000. The official title is to be "The First Day and Night State Bank" of New York.

The bank will stand at the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street. A rather notable neighborhood it is to one who knows the local geography. Across the avenue to the west is Sherry's fashionable restaurant. Across the street, north, is Delmonico's ditto. Diagonally across is a new hotel. A little farther up is the St. Regis. Just east of Delmonico's is Canfield's gaming house of fame, now closed. Opposite Sherry's are the New York Yacht club and a half dozen other famous clubs. Forty-fourth is the most notable of all the cross streets.

But what does it need of an all-night bank? Curiously, the need is mainly one of legitimate business. A man whose check is not good next morning can hardly get into the gambling games thereabouts, either in the "hells" or in the "private parlors" of some of the hotels. But a vast amount of money is taken after three o'clock in the hotels, theaters and restaurants within two minutes' walk of the corner; and it will be a convenience to be able to put that money in the bank at once. Small tradesmen, also, will make use of it. That is not to say that it will not meet a "long felt want" among gamesters, also. But not among them alone.

The Gas Situation.

THERE is big politics in the gas fight. Until now the Standard Oil combination that controls gas and electricity in this city has been the chief standby of Tammany Hall. The "Hall" has protected it, profited by it and taken stock market tips from it, not always successfully. When Tammany and republican legislators passed in Albany last winter an immensely valuable bill for the gas trust, Tammany men freely bought gas stock in the market on the "tip" that both the mayor and the governor would sign the bill. The mayor did; the governor did not, and some of the stock gamblers got their fingers pinched.

This year the republicans followed up their advantage by mercilessly exposing through an investigation the stock watering sins of the trust and the fact that most of the franchises under which it works have expired. As the trust's capital is about six times the value of its works, and as the stock has to be "supported" at about 200, that is rather disquieting. But there is a considerable republican element that favors the gas people. It may be put roughly that the Platt republicans side with the Tammany democrats in favor of the gas trust, which is making 60 per cent. a year profit upon the actual investment and "soaking" customers in the familiar fashion. The Odell republicans oppose the trust, Gov. Higgins acting with them. Their plan was to pass a bill reducing the price of gas to 75 cents and name a state gas commission, like the excellent one in Massachusetts. The trustees' first line of defense is the legislature; the second is the lobby; the third is the courts, where they can tie up matters for some years by litigation. The magnitude of the problem may be imagined from the fact that the market valuation of the gas securities is greater than the entire public debt of the city.

In many other respects Tammany just now occupies rather a favorable political position. Its mayor is personally clean, able and popular. But the gas trust is an old-man-of-the-sea upon its shoulders.

WASHINGTON LETTER

EX-SENATOR CHANDLER A WAGGISH STATESMAN.

ROOSEVELTS LIVE IN OPEN

Late Senator Hanna Originated the Al Fresco Breakfast—McKinley Fond of Taking Morning Meal on Veranda.

WASHINGTON.—There are few public men who get more fun out of life as they go along than does ex-Senator "Bill" Chandler of New Hampshire, for some years past the head of the Spanish Claims Commission. No public question of any kind arises that does not interest Chandler, and on which he does not have his say in one form or another, and to which he does not usually contribute illuminating thoughts and good advice. On the other hand, there is hardly a popular subject which does not afford Chandler a vehicle for his well known wit and satire.

The ex-Senator has been having a lot of fun recently with candidates for the presidential nomination in 1908. He first sat down and wrote a letter to Vice President Fairbanks in which he praised the latter's ability as a statesman, expressed admiration for his conservatism, predicted great popularity for him as a candidate, and wound up by saying that he, Fairbanks, was the ideal candidate for the presidency in 1908. In a minute hand Chandler added a postscript to the effect that he had written a similar letter to Secretary Taft, Secretary Shaw, Postmaster-General Cortelyou and Senator Foraker. Mr. Fairbanks did not at first notice this postscript, and he sat down and wrote a very appreciative reply to Mr. Chandler, thanking him for the expressions of confidence he had uttered, and saying that there was no warrant for the public use of his name in connection with the presidential nomination, but he was very grateful to Mr. Chandler for the latter's proferred support.

The waggish stateman did write similar letters to all the other candidates, but attached the qualifying postscript, and they all appreciated the humor, as did Mr. Fairbanks when his attention was called to the little joker. Secretary Shaw cut the postscript off his letter and sent word to Chandler he was going to use the latter in his campaign, and exploit the New Hampshire man as the original Shaw man.

Senator Chandler Kept Things Lively.

IT is said there is a prospect that Mr. Chandler may again be senator from New Hampshire. He would be welcomed back in the senate, where he was one of the liveliest members of that rather sombre body. He was a good deal like a wasp, stinging this one and that, and raising a commotion generally. Mr. Chandler wearied sometimes of the dullness of the senate, and he would purposely start a turmoil, in order to liven things up. On a particularly dull day, Chandler would nervously twist about in his chair, glance up at the press gallery, and, if he noticed some of his newspaper friends there, would give them a glance, as much as to say, "look out for some fun."

Then the Senator would inject himself into the debate, no matter what it was, and he was invariably able to stir up the opposition and precipitate a vitriolic controversy. It did not matter what subject was under discussion, Chandler could always use it as an excuse for saying something that would stir up the democrats. When Senator "Ben" Tillman first came to the senate he was Chandler's particular victim. Tillman did not understand Chandler, and looked upon the latter as possessing all the narrowness and partisanship that the southerners had been led to believe characterized New Englanders. It was the rule, therefore, when Chandler prodded the democrats that Tillman would respond and get quite excited. The South Carolinian would get red in the face, and denounce various policies that Chandler and northerners stood for, and before the excitement was over half a dozen senators would be mixed up, and some pretty tart repartee would be indulged.

After getting things moving along to his satisfaction and having set a number of his colleagues by the ears, Chandler would quietly slip from the chamber, chuckling over the row he had precipitated.

Out Door Breakfasts at White House.

NOW that the warm, balmy spring weather has set in, the president and his family are enjoying their meals al fresco. As a rule, they take their breakfast in the open air, and unless entertaining a large number of friends, their other meals are partaken of in the same manner. The large, commodious portico on the south side of the white house is admirably adapted for these open air meals. Awnings protect the table from the glare of the sun, but the breezes blow across the portico while the songs of the birds in the trees that shade the mansion and the scent of the flowers from the white house lawn add to the pleasure of the repast.

The president and Mrs. Roosevelt often have a number of friends to breakfast on the south portico of the white house. Occasionally luncheon is served completely out of doors, but that is purely a family affair, and is largely in the nature of a picnic on the green lawn. The president is also very fond, after a tiresome day's work in the executive offices, and a vigorous ride or walk through the suburbs, of sitting down to dinner on this broad porch, where the breezes, sweeping up the Potomac, make the atmosphere delicious and cool, while the picture stretches of the white house grounds before him, framed by the green hills of Maryland and Virginia, with the placid Potomac and the green and the Mall immediately in front of him, affords him the deepest pleasure. These out-of-door dinners are lingered over with great satisfaction, and the guests often sit there smoking and chatting until the twilight fades into the night.

Mrs. Roosevelt often has 5 o'clock tea served on this veranda, a custom that has come down from the time of Dolly Madison.

Informality at the Capital.

THE late Senator Hanna, of Ohio, was the originator of the al fresco breakfast. During the latter days of the McKinley regime, the Ohio senator occupied the Don Cameron house, diagonally across Lafayette square from the white house, attached to which is a spacious garden filled with flowers and shade trees. It was Senator Hanna's custom to have his breakfast table set on a veranda just off this garden, a spot embowered with wisteria, honeysuckles and climbing roses. President McKinley and a number of Senator Hanna's friends in the cabinet and in the senate had standing invitations to come over to his house and take breakfast. The senator had an old colored cook in his employ who was a veritable queen of the kitchen. She made a corn beef hash that became famous throughout official and diplomatic circles. Nothing like this toothsome dish had ever appeared on a Washington table. Its fame spread far and wide, and Senator Hanna never lacked for guests.

Two or three times a week President McKinley would walk over to Hanna's house, and in the bracing spring air, amid the flowers, listening to the music of the birds and reveling in the celebrated hash, the late president would throw off the cares of office and thoroughly enjoy himself. President Roosevelt also tasted this celebrated dish, and insisted on obtaining the recipe from Senator Hanna, and since then cornbeef hash, a la Hanna, has been a standard breakfast dish at the white house. Mr. Roosevelt is a hearty eater, and desires plain, substantial food. In the spring of the year he wants fresh garden vegetables, and is very fond of the fresh Potomac shad, which he has broiled with a little of the roe. With the fish he eats a salad of water cress, fresh picked, which he dresses himself with a sprinkling of white pepper, a touch of salt and some oil and vinegar. At breakfast he drinks a generous cup of coffee, which the white house chef makes to perfection.

To Extend American Trade.

FROM the number of reports written upon the subject, one would suppose that American exporters long ere this had learned the lesson of how to extend their trade, and how best to show off their goods in a foreign market. For years past American consuls abroad have written reports and given advice upon this subject, and warned American shippers to foreign ports that they must conform to the business methods of the countries where they expect to sell their goods. All this agitation, however, has not made the American shipper as wise as he should be.

In a recent report from United States Consul McNally, in Belgium, some very appropriate hints are given as to how to increase American foreign trade. He says that American manufacturers contemplating an entrance into foreign markets must show their products possess the merit claimed for them, and must meet the traditional trade customs, especially in the all important matter of credit. Buyers abroad desire to see the goods before paying for them, and as this right is freely accorded them by the manufacturers of other countries, they cannot understand why American manufacturers do not follow the same policy. In many cities of Europe the retail dealer extends to his customers a credit of six months or a year, and manufacturers of the larger European countries sell goods on any terms to suit the retail buyer. The consul expresses the opinion that when American manufacturers meet those of other countries in open competition, both in the quality of the goods and in the terms of credit, the markets will be theirs.

TURNING TO SOUTH

IMMIGRANTS ON WHOLE ARE OF STURDY CHARACTER.

HOW THEY INVEST MONEY

The Pathetic Dumb Irishman Figure of Past — Steerage Conditions Much Better To-Day—Living in New York.

NEW YORK.—It was left for a southern state to establish the most up-to-date office in New York to attract white immigration. South Carolina follows her enterprising Charleston world's fair with a bustling employment agency in the metropolis. While waiting to get hold of the immigrants the agent has tried his hand upon older residents of the city. He has already sent 1,000 people south. Within a short distance of Charleston is a colony five years old which is already beginning to pull immigrants thither by the fame of its prosperity. The colonists are Italians.

The Italians are among the best farmers of Europe, and they are no strangers to a hot climate. From everywhere in the south that they have gone comes the same story: They raise more cotton on a small piece of ground than negroes can; they make better use of the small allotments of garden soil about their little houses. Half an acre is a good deal of land to a man who has been accustomed to make a living off a few benches of rich soil propped up on a Sorrento side hill by a succession of wall terraces.

The South Carolina experiment is confined by law to immigrants of the "Saxon race." As nobody knows what the Saxon race is—it assuredly does not mean the inhabitants of modern Saxony only—Col. Watson, the director of the new office, feels justified in sending down Hebrew mill operatives and mixed races from the poorer part of the city.

South Carolina undertakes to find agricultural immigrants homes, land and a fair start. It is only one of a number of agencies that take the immigrant in hand.

I believe the time is coming when the different states will all have their agents at Ellis Island and compete for the liest looking immigrants. It will be no more than South Carolina and the Canadian Pacific railway are doing at the very opposite ends of the map.

12,000 a Day.

THERE was a day recently which might be marked with a red stone—or perhaps a stone striped red and white like a barber's pole; for I'm not sure that its altogether good luck when 12,636 immigrants reach New York in one day. And perhaps even that record is beaten by this time. But for a little time at least it stood, and the people in Ellis island worked 48 hours to get rid of them.

No business was ever more systematized than this letting people into the country. They pass slowly along between long railings in single file. The eye-doctor looks for half a second under each uplifted eyelid for traces of sarcoma. The general inspection for vaccination marks and against disease has already been undergone twice, and in some cases three times. A wave of the hand turns an applicant aside into the detention "pen," to be decided upon later, and perhaps sent home at the cost of the steamship company. Fewer are sent back than you might think. The money test is not conclusive. A feeble person with money is looked upon less favorably than a strong young fellow with three dollars by way of worldly wealth.

After all that is said about the admission of undesirables, most of the newcomers are pretty good people. This is the unanimous testimony of those that deal with them. Italians are making our railroads; Hungarians are digging most of our coal; Slovaks, near by at least, are doing much of our farm work. The average ship-load is composed of healthy looking people whose fresh complexions put to shame the city-mured folk that jeer at them.

In reading the late F. L. Olmstead's account of the border slave state, written before the war, I came upon an expression I had not heard for years: 'Dumb Irishman." It meant an immigrant Irishman fresh from off the ship, who had not yet yearned to talk English, and who—this part was pathetic—was yet weak and tremulous from the confinement and privations of the voyage, and could not work well until heartened by food.

What the Immigrants Do.

THE immigrants that herd in New York so persistently—two-thirds of them hive within 200 miles of the city—have many peculiarities. The least of these is the striking tendency of the Italians to become railroad laborers and the Hebrews to become garment makers. If you add that the Greeks are monopolizing the sale of candy and peanuts and the Armenians go to peddling "Turkish" rugs, you complete the common but inaccurate picture of the newcomers' pursuits. Formerly the masons were largely Irish or Scottish by birth, the carpenters German and native American. Nowadays the Hebrew carpenter and the Italian mason are very common. The native American in the building trades is in a small minority. Consider the case of a recent immigrant, not yet a citizen, who is drawing as a skilled mason 70 cents an hour, or $5.60 a short day—and that is the new scale for the new year—let him write to his old neighbors of this fact, and some of them are pretty apt to come and look him up—if they can believe his story!

One natural result is that both the Italian and the Hebrew get to owning city real estate, the most profitable kind of property just at present. They begin in a small way, subletting part of a tenement. Then comes a chance in the division of an estate to buy a tenement with a little ready money, giving heavy second mortgage. Prodigies of thrift pay this off in part and enable the owner to take on another. He lives in one of the tenements and has his watchful eye upon the whole.

The Hebrew has another reason for buying land. He is an intense individualist. As Dr. Blaustein has explained, he wouldn't dream of buying stock in a corporation. He wants something he can see. As a result, he didn't get caught in Steel common in 1903, but bought land; and land went up. Of late a flood of 200,000 Jews has poured over into Brooklyn. In the parts they occupy the price of land has risen threefold. They are themselves the buyers. For years the old owners of land at the Brooklyn end of the new Williamsburg bridge have been selling out, afraid of the "deterioration of the district." Now that the East Siders can see the bridge actually finished, they have arrested the downward tendency of prices and shot them up again. "If I'd simply held on I'd have been $6,000 richer," mournfully said to me the former owner of a rather modest little home in this forlorn but now booming region.

Building Extraordinary.

WITH masons' wages 70 cents an hour, the amount of building going forward is the greatest in the history of the metropolis. For two years a disastrous war in the building trades has kept down building and driven up rents until they are almost unendurable. The result of the prospect of peace in the building trades was to start plans for $50,000,000 worth of buildings all at once. I have sometimes alluded jocularly to the poor men's apartment houses, such as "Charley" Schwab and "Alf" Vanderbilt live in, where by a little judicious search you can find a few plain rooms renting at only $16,000 a year. But it is no joke to the man who is really poor or merely well-to-do. The old New York rule was that a man might spend one-quarter of his income for rent. That was bad enough in all conscience, but many now spend one-third or more.

Why? Ask the man, and he will tell you he has to do it. Perhaps he is right. The first necessity to him is room to live among cultured people and in surroundings not unhealthful. If he is fairly prosperous he may wish sunshine to fall upon his rooms once a day. These things cost money. His food, his clothing, need cost little if any more than in the smallest village. His rent, if he be an educated man in professional life, or moving among professional people, will not cost less than $1,000 a year. He cannot on Manhattan island find a place to live among his kind for less money. This is the literal truth. What may seem in the description like profligacy is really the result of careful weighing of necessities.

Considerably less than $1,000 a year, either in rent or in carrying charges as an owner, will provide a home in Brooklyn, or in near-by New Jersey. Add the vast clearing of great spaces upon Manhattan island, the conquest of residence districts by trade, and is it a wonder that the suburbs grow; and that within 50 miles of New York's city hall in three states are living 6,000,000 people?

With such wages as I have quoted building is expensive, but—it's cheaper than living in Manhattan!

Tennis the Proper Game.

SOCIETY has suddenly decided that it is pretty lonesome business tramping about a great field chasing a golf ball. At any rate, the recent signs of the revival of tennis as the fashionable game continue.

The most fashionable place of games in New York is the St. Nicholas rink, where real ice skating has been popular during the winter, and where one of the most recherche tennis tournaments of recent years has been this spring in progress. I don't know that the scores were anything remarkable, probably not, but it makes all the difference in the world who makes them.

The endurance of the game must have something to do with the American nervous temperament. Young women of the day like to have "something doing." The rapid return of the tennis ball close to the net is something like a real game. Ping-pong was very well; but it was played indoors. Tennis—well, see a game played at the Newport casino, with the watching throng of fashionables, with the bright but kindly sun of a never fierce seaside August upon the scene, and with the fresh air from the ocean rolling in—golf isn't like that.

PARIS ENJOYS DEATH-DEFYING THRILLER.

Gale's Daring Cycle Feat, "Looping the Gyroscope," Stirs Her Excitement-Loving Blood.

Paris.—Paris has a new thriller.

"Looping the Loop," "The Circle of Death," "The Human Arrow" no longer stirs its blood, wearied by so many excitements.

So, in one of the music halls, Yale, the world's champion trick bicyclist, is "Looping the Gyroscope," riding within a great wheel, which, as he circles it, itself revolves and bodily moves around and up and down. This "danger" sensation evokes much applause, none louder than from expectant undertakers in the audience.

The ingenious device consists, essentially, of a metal wheel about 13 feet in diameter, which has spokes like a bi- cycle wheel, and which is supported by ball bearings on a firm, solid, iron column. A counterweight of about 550 pounds balances the wheel, which, thanks to the ball bearings, easily turns at the same time in both a horizontal and a vertical plane. A slatted track is firmly fixed around the felloes of the big wheel.

The death-defying Yale, who uses a small bicycle, heavier than the ordinary machines, takes position at the bottom and inside the big wheel, which is then motionless. As he pedals more and more rapidly he imparts opposite motion to the gyroscope, just as a captive squirrel turns its cage. So by suddenly checking his bicycle Yale is carried toward the top of the big wheel. At a certain height the force that carries him up becomes nil. Then he begins to pedal faster and faster, and so imparts increased speed to the track wheel.

By repeating this several times a speed so tremendous is attained at last that the rider can completely circle the track wheel some seven or eight times.

The feat requires a sure eye, great nerve and skill, nice balancing, else Yale would surely be shot off into space.

CHILD'S SPIRIT PLAYMATE.

Little Boy Often Holds Conversation and Frolics with His Unseen Friend.

McKenzie, Tenn.—McKenzie has a strange psychic phenomenon in the person of Willis Miller, six-year-old son of Capt. W. B. Miller. Willis has a spirit playmate with whom he converses and "plays," as he calls it, every day.

Willis calls his spirit friend Raymond, and can be heard often saying, "All right, Raymond, I will be there directly," and immediately he will go out of the family room into the hall or the yard under some large shade trees, where he will converse with Raymond sometimes for an hour. The conversation does not resemble childish prattle, but rather that of persons of mature years, and to those who do not see the spirit talker it sounds like talk over a telephone.

Willis was very much distressed Christmas morning because Raymond did not get any presents, and carried some of his into the hall for him, and there they talked and played for some time.

Raymond has never entered the family room, but Willis says he will come to see them all some day. He says Raymond told him not to let any of the other members of the family go with him to their meeting place at present.

The family noticed the conduct of Wil*lis about a year ago, but thought it only* child's play.

The child is a favorite in the town, and of a very precocious nature. He is very nervous. He never forgets a name or face, and while walking around with his father he is asking questions far beyond his years.

Recovers Lost Eyesight.

Appleton, Wis.—Miss Sadie Clark, a high-school student, of Neenah, Wis., has recovered her sight quite as suddenly and mysteriously as she lost it two weeks ago. She had never had any trouble with her eyes until she awoke on the morning of February 6 stone blind. The other day while on a train en route to Milwaukee to undergo an operation her sight returned, unimpaired.

Coughs Up Prussian Bullet.

Paris.—In the Franco-Prussian war M. Barbier of Hericourt received a bullet in the shoulder, and the surgeons were unable to extract it. Recently he suffered from violent pains in his head, which puzzled the doctors. A few days later he spat out the bullet, after a coughing fit.

The "Stand-pat" crowd is alarmed because President Roosevelt, who is good enough for all honest people whether they be Republicans or Democrats, wants to buy materials for the Canal in the open market. "They are frightened," says an exchange, "because of the object lesson in tariff results which they fear it will give." If the present tariff system is as honest as Roosevelt, no harm will be done by this decision for fair play and no favors. If not, President Roosevelt's crowning act as chief executive will be to expose the fallacy of this theory of economics.

Public opinion appears to be much divided on the question whether Counsellor Swackhamer used good judgment in accepting the offer of the prosecution and allowing his client, George H. Wood, to plead guilty of murder in the second degree. Some members of the bar who have expressed themselves say that under similar conditions they would have refused the offer and gone to the jury on the plea of "not guilty" as charged. But it is very easy for a man to say what he would do under certain conditions which do not confront him at the time. If placed in Mr. Swackhamer's position and bearing the grave responsibility that he did at the moment, we are inclined to believe that one would follow the same course identically. The offer was laid before the client and the latter's wife, and their decision was final and should be under such a serious situation. Swackhamer represented Wood in fighting against conviction of the crime charged. In other words he was his spokesman and, under the circumstances presented, his advice to accept the offer was good, although it seemed hardly possible that the murderer could have been convicted. The weakness of the prosecution's case as the trial went on became apparent. Swackhamer had built up and maintained a defense that was truly marvelous. He showed masterly legal qualities in the way he conducted the defense. Some may say, and many of his fellow members of the bar do say, that he lost a great opportunity for making a name as a criminal lawyer in permitting his client to enter the plea of murder in the second degree. But therein did he truly display his good judgment and prove his worth as a lawyer for he sacrified self-glory for the best interests of his client.

The death of John Valiant is a distinct loss to the borough in which he lived. His civic virtues were as pronounced as his domestic and business and he will be remembered as a resident who had the deepest interest of the community at heart. As a member of the Council and of the Board of Education he never swerved from performing his full duty and it did not remain until his death for the taxpayers and citizens generally to appreciate his worth. To be brief, he was the type of man to be emulated.

It is now quite certain that Muhlenberg Hospital will be benefitted to the extent of $5,000, at least, as a result of the ten days' carnival. The enthusiastic support given Charles J. Fisk's public spirited enterprise surpassed all expectations and it taught a lesson of what can be accomplished in a community for public good when all work together in the cause. Notwithstanding the fact that there were several rainy nights it is conservatively estimated that the attendance was not short of 70,000. The size of the receipts astonished even Manager Miller, who has been engaged in the show business for eighteen consecutive years, going far beyond those of any similar undertaking with which he has been identified. Of course the $5,000, or thereabouts, that will go to the hospital represents but a percentage of the total receipts, but we believe it is vastly more than any other community of the size has made by any show of the kind. We congratulate Mr. Fisk and all who assisted him, which is saying that we congratulate all the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Series of Special Sermons.

Rev. A. H. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, began on Sunday morning a series of sermons on "The Model Prayer." The subjects for succeeding Sunday mornings will be as follows: "The Believer's Reverent Spirit," "The Believer's Benevolent Spirit," "The Believer's Spirit of Submission," "The Believer's Source of Sustenance," "The Limitations of Forgiveness," "The Believer's Conscious Wakeness," "The Deliverance of the Believer," and "The Believer's Acknowledgment of Divine Supremacy."

AMUSEMENTS.

While the summer season is prolific in the growth of dramatic stock companies in the smaller cities, it is worthy of note that in Greater New York Mr. Proctor's stock theatres alone are able profitably to remain with open doors during the heated months. Mr. Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, for instance, has never closed its doors, summer or winter, week days or Sundays, since he first assumed control of that historic playhouse five years ago. The summer campaign will, if possible, be even more brilliant than any of its recent predecessors, for the dramatic stock company is to be increased in strength by the engagement of half dozen players famous for artistic work. The repertoire will naturally tend somewhat more to light comedies than during the winter months, but the works will all be from the pens of noted play-wrights, so that, all in all, there is every assurance of an interesting and prosperous summer term.

Though the theatrical season is on the wane, "The Rollicking Girl" shows forth at the Herald Square to amazingly large audiences. Sam Bernard, who added to his great reputation, with Hattie Williams, in the "Girl From Kay's," is even better, if such a thing is possible, in this laughable production. The chorus is by far the best and prettiest that has been presented in the Metropolis this season. The one best show—"The Rollicking Girl" at the Herald Square, Thirty-fifth and Broadway. Evenings at 8:15. Matinee Saturdays.

Luna Park, Coney Island, is open and is doing its usual big business. In addition to the principal shows last season there are a number of marvelous productions that astonish and bewilder the crowds. Port Arthur is substituted for the Durbar and many other new attractions are offered. The esplanade has been widened and there is ample room for the masses which throng that walk by day and night. Don't neglect to patronize the restaurant. It's the finest on the Island.

LITERARY.

The Race-track Trust receives a solar plexus blow by Alfred Henry Lewis in Success Magazine for May. In his strong, forcible style Mr. Lewis lays bare the method by which the best tracks in the East are operated, showing the amount of money taken in—money that is wrung from the public in the very face of a law that makes betting illegal. After reading Mr. Lewis's crusade against this octopus and the great harm it is doing to men and women all over the United States, one marvels that it is permitted to exist.

The old Chateau Langeais in France is the subject of the leading article in the May Architectural Record Magazine. Frederic Lees makes a charming descriptive story of the old castle, which has recently been restored and given to the French Institute. Upon a background of fifteenth century life in old Touraine, Mr. Lees draws word pictures of every interesting feature of this ancient pile, valuable and informing because thoroughly intelligible.

There is much to stimulate thought, as well as attract the eye, in the May issue of Good Housekeeping. The magazine opens with an outspoken paper on "A Girl's Reading," by Elizabeth Knight Tompkins, illustrated with beautiful photographs by F. Colburn Clarke. Dr. John D. Quackenbos, professor emeritus of Columbia University, writes of "Psychic Influence in the Home," and Malcolm McGregor Jamieson, Jr., of "The Punishment of Children," this essay having won a first prize in a contest. Astonishing facts concerning "Poisonous Plants of Our Fields and Gardens" are set forth by Alice Morse Earle.

The Popular Science Monthly for May includes the following articles: "Present Problems in Radioactivity," by Professor Ernest Rutherford; "The Harvard Medical School," by Dr. Frank Waldo; "Alpheus Spring Packard," by Professor A. D. Mead; "Organization in Scientific Research," by Professor William E. Ritter; "The Origin of Species Through Selection Contrasted With Their Origin Through the Appearance of Definite Variations," by Professor T. H. Morgan.

HUSBAND MISSING.

George Rowley May Have Been Killed in Railroad Wreck.

Mrs. E. Rowley, of Watchung avenue, was in Harrisburg on Saturday searching for information regarding her husband, George Rowley, who was on the express train which was wrecked on the Pennsylvania Railroad near that city, and who has not been heard of since he left New York.

One woman, a Swede, in the Harrisburg Hospital, recognized a photograph which Mrs. Rowley had. The woman said that the man was sitting in the seat opposite her in a Pullman car when the crash occurred.

PRINCETON'S TEAM LOST

Plainfield Country Club Golfers Won on the Links.

SCORE WAS 15 TO 12

Result of Play for Cups on the Local Courses Saturday.

The Plainfield Country Club team won its second match of the season on Saturday by defeating a team from Princeton University by a score of 15 to 12. The match was very close throughout and at one time it looked as though the local players would lose. It was an ideal day for the game, with the exception of a heavy wind which swept the course during the early part of the day. Notwithstanding this there was a large field of golfers out to take part in the various events, and many remained in the evening for the dance at the club-house. This was the first of the series of dances to be held Saturday nights and they are sure to be popular among the members.

This was the result of the team match:

Plainfield Country Club—W. L. Glenney, 4; J. Whitney Baker, 5; Morris J. Dumont, 0; Henry D. Hibbard, 0; S. D. Lounsbery, 0; H. H. Stockton, 6. Total, 15.

Princeton—Dudley H. Barrows, 0; W. T. West, 0; Dumont, 3; Howard Gee, 3; Ralph Peters, 6; L. L. Tweedy, 0. Total, 12.
